Filmed in just 29 days with a paltry $15 million budget, Wag the Dog is a hysterical look into the American dream. Its fast-paced direction and witty script allows everything to seem spontaneous, fun and upbeat. Meanwhile, you have the sinking feeling that everything the movie says is completely on-target. "Why does a dog wag its tail?" the opening titles ask. Because a dog is smarter than its tail, otherwise the tail would wag the dog. In this film, Washington is the metaphorical tail, with a little help from Hollywood. The dog is us. It's disturbing, but then black comedies always are. And as a black comedy, Wag the Dog is simply one of the best.

When it's discovered that the president was romantically involved with a young girl scout with only 11 days to go until the election, a presidential spin-doctor (De Niro) and the president's advisor (Anne Hecht) desperately need a story to divert the public's attention. De Niro smartly begins inventing the idea of a bombing crisis, but he needs a bit more than that. So he goes to a Hollywood producer (Hoffman), who is the perfect person for the job. After all, as Hoffman says, he can get things done, including producing a war. As the screenplay, co-written by famous cynic and playwright David Mamet, points out a war only needs a theme song and a few images to attract the people's attention.

The way Hoffman produces the fake war is amazingly clever and deliciously funny — his character is a chaotic blend of excitement, self-obsession and child-like need. It's his best role since Rain Man and his funniest since Tootsie. Hoffman calls upon his associates to get the job done — among them a young actress (Kirsten Dunst), an old songwriter (Willie Nelson), the "fad king" (Dennis Leary) and a psychotic soldier (Woody Harrelson). All of these fun cameos are top-notch.

As for our original question, it seems a presidential advisor is, after all, a bit different from the producer. Yes, they both run campaigns full of special effects and manipulation. But the government has a bit more power. They can play with real guns.

If Wag the Dog has a flaw, it's in the side effects of the fast pace and over-the-top performances. For all it's commentary, you can never take it seriously. Maybe that would be too disturbing. But while it's unfolding, you can't help but sit back and enjoy some guilty laughter. As Hoffman says, "When it cooks, it cooks." And Wag the Dog frequently sizzles. A-

AMISTAD
Directed by Steven Spielberg with Djimon Hounsou, Matthew McConaughey, Anthony Hopkins

Steven Spielberg's historical epic about a slave mutiny in the 1800's, and the fight to free the slaves, is a solid addition to the director's portfolio. More importantly, it's a history lesson the textbooks seem to have passed over. For years, Spielberg was our primary entertainer, now he seems to be our primary educator. And there are some moments in Amistad when you know the wunderkind director is at the top of his visual game.

The movie begins with a terrifying surrealistic mutiny where no bloody detail is spared, and continues, later, with heart-wrenching flashback that depicts the slaves' nightmare journey.

That first scene introduces the leader of the Africans, Cinque, who later is proclaimed by a wonderfully touching and comic Anthony Hopkins (John Quincy Adams) as the greatest of heroes. As Cinque, amazing newcomer Djimon Hounsou somehow manages to convey confusion, rage, hurt and love while using nary an English word. That kind of storytelling needs greater emphasis, and unfortunately Spielberg concentrates a bit too much on the talky efforts of the bland Matthew McConaghy and an underwritten Morgan Freeman.

What I took away from Amistad, though, in addition to its moving story, where the powerful visual moments — Cinque learning the Bible by the pictures and comparing it to his life (a metaphor for the movies themselves), and Cinque seeing the African flower in John Quincy Adams' greenhouse and remembering his home. A-

SCREAM 2
Directed by Wes Craven
with Neve Campbell, Courtney Cox, David Arquette

Only Wes Craven and Kevin Williamson have the guts to make fun of themselves. The director and

Turn to FILMS, page A4

COURTESY PARAMOUNT

Leonardo DiCaprio and Kate Winslet flind fatalistic love in Titanic.

AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Lifecycle • Nautilus • Stairmaster • Aerobics • Karate • Tae Kwon Do • Kickboxing • Yoga • Pilates • Aerobic Dance • Kids Programs • Free Parking
www.amherstathletic.com
S. Amherst 256-0968

Right Here Right Now!
Begin a career in our corporate office.
We're Ames. One of the dominant discount store chains in America, with more than $2 billion in sales and 300 stores in 14 states across the Northeast. Currently, we're looking for dynamic, creative, success-oriented graduates with excellent communication, analytical, and planning skills!
Assistant Buyer Training Program
Because discount retailing has developed into a complex, dynamic field where farsightedness and strategic planning are essential for success, we've created a formal, 10-week training program for you that couples comprehensive classroom seminars and on-the-job training with a successful Buyer.
Upon successful completion of the 10-week program, you will become an Assistant Buyer. Then, you'll work alongside a Buyer, assisting in the management of a $20 to $100 million business! As an Assistant Buyer, you will continue to participate in ongoing developmental seminars, Business Analysis Group Workshops, and other training support programs...all designed to ultimately prepare you for a career in Buying.
Finance Executive Trainees
As a Finance Executive Trainee, you will participate in our 10-week training program, designed to provide you with an understanding of the fundamentals of retail and orient you with Ames. On-the-job training in our Finance Division is coupled with seminars and classes taught by senior management.
Upon successful completion of the 10-week training program, rotational on-the-job training continues as you work within the various departments of our Finance Division, such as Planning & Analysis, Internal Audit, Accounting, and Accounts Payable.
We're looking for dynamic, creative, success-oriented graduates with excellent communication, analytical, and planning skills.
If that's you, please come talk to us!
We'll be at the University of Massachusetts on the following days:
School of Management Information Session
Campus Center, Room 905
Thursday, February 19th
7:00pm - 8:30pm
Campus Career Network Information Session
Campus Center, Room 903
Thursday, February 26th
7:00pm - 8:30pm
Sign up for an on-campus interview at your Career Placement Office today!
Contact your Career Placement Office to schedule an interview or for more detailed information.
Ames
Department Stores, Inc., Rocky Hill, CT
Ames is an equal opportunity employer M/F/D/V

THESE RULE.
HARD'GRRS
LATE ON LETTERMAN
WARNER BROS
NEW
13.99 CD Ea.
9.99 Cass.
MOONSHINE
THE CHEMICAL BROTHERS
Dig Your Own Hole
ASTRALWERKS
13.99 CD ONLY
EMPEROR
Anthems To The Welkin At Dusk
CENTURY MEDIA
12.99 CD ONLY
GRATEFUL DEAD
ARISTA
NEW
11.99 CD ONLY
11.99 CD
9.99 Cass.
ELEKTRA
ALANA DAVIS
Blame It On Me
METROPOLIS
FRONTLINE ASSEMBLY
Flavour Of The Weak
8.99 CD ONLY
DSC
FLUORESCEIN
High Contrast Camodown
Sale dates: January 16-31
MUSIC • SOFTWARE MOVIES • BOOKS
MEDIA PLAY
MORE CHOICE. LESS PRICE. EVERY DAY.
Hampshire Mall 341 Russell St Hadley (413) 582-0410
Crossroads Buckland Hills (Corner of Hale and Slater) Manchester (860) 648-5871
Stateline Plaza 136 Elm St Enfield (860) 253-4777
Newington Commons Plaza 172 Kitts Lane (Berlin Turnpike) Newington (860) 594-7272
01-0040-018

■ films

continued from page A3

screenwriter of Scream and its hilarious sequel also know horror movies, sequels, teenagers and pop culture better than anyone. Perhaps the best example of that knowledge is in Scream 2's over-the-top opening scene, when Jada Pinkett and Omar Epps get a disturbing treatment from a psycho trying to create a sequel to the Woodsboro murders. This movie-in- movie allows for some great comedic fun, but Craven and Williamson are just getting started.

A sequel means more gore and more elaborate death scenes, and that's what Scream 2 offers. There are some spectacular set pieces — the use of the telephone as a suspense device is used even better than in the original — and more culture and film references than in the original. And we can especially appreciate the treatment the film gives to sorority sisters. Oh and that cast — Neve Campbell, Courtney Cox, David Arquette, Sarah Michelle Gellar, and more — is a who's who of young Hollywood, and they always make things fun to watch. Despite a far-fetched, convoluted ending, Scream 2 surprises more with its wit than it does with its horror. And, "No, I really mean that." B+

AS GOOD AS IT GETS
Directed by James L. Brooks with Jack Nicholson, Helen Hunt, Greg Kinnear

It's always intriguing when a film can blend just the right amount of comedy and drama. Recent movies Good Will Hunting and Jerry Maguire have been two of a select number of movies that can boast this achievement. Looking back over the last two decades, though, one film maker has been able to make this combination work and work again — James L. Brooks.

Brooks is probably best known as the executive producer of "The Simpsons" but is even more successful with his movies, namely Terms of Endearment and Broadcast News. Brooks' films manage to capture the thoughts and troubles of many characters — young and old — and milk some laughs out of them as well.

In Brooks' newest film, we have an obsessive-compulsive, who brings his own forks and knives to a restaurant. Add a single mom who never has any time for herself and a gay pwintex with unloving parents to the mix and within the imperfections of the characters, the comedy is generated.

As Good As It Gets starts out slowly and awkwardly. Not only are scenes unevenly paced and underwritten, but you're just getting to know these characters, and it's going to take some time to fully understand them. Luckily, it's not hard to stay interested in a movie when Jack Nicholson is involved. This is Nicholson at his best, his most vulnerable, his funniest. Nicholson's character is much more than a just a couple of one-liners and it is to the actor's credit that he can seamlessly create the change from heartless to caring. Nicholson and his obsessive-compulsive Melvin Udall could probably even make the next Home Alone a good movie. More likely though, Nicholson will reap an Oscar to go along with his Golden Globe award for best actor.

Equally good are Helen Hunt and Greg Kinnear as depressed loners going through a bit of a mid-life crisis. At first both are quite afraid and disgusted by Nicholson's antics. But as the movie gains shape, he changes both their lives for the better even as they change his.

In the movie's best plot device, Nicholson, Hunt and Kinnear go on a trip to Baltimore. A bit of a love triangle is formed and the best of worst of each character is visible.

Hunt and Kinnear are warm characters troubled only by life's strange luck. Nicholson, on the other hand, lives in his own world where he walks a thin line between normal and crazy, symbolized best by his refusal to step in the cracks of sidewalks or floors. The big question of the movie is whether or not he'll change, but the film's title gives you a pretty good hint. B+

THE BOXER
Directed by Jim Sheridan with Daniel Day-Lewis, Emily Watson, Brian Cox

I must confess that I don't know much about "the troubles" in Ireland, which is surprising considering how many movies Hollywood has made about them. Among the best of these movies have come from the creative team of director Jim Sheridan and actor Daniel Day-Lewis. Add The Boxer, an old-fashioned, grainy love story, to that list.

When former boxing prodigy Danny Flynn has been released after a long prison term, the release creates all kinds of controversy. Danny, unlike many of the Irish, wishes to unite the Protestants and Catholics, and does this via his "Holy Family" boxing matches. However, this action soon leads to as much trouble and violence as Danny encounters in the boxing ring.

The Boxer is a movie about past histories, and Sheridan's dark, subtle direction lets the film ooze with edginess as if each character is deeply afraid that what has happened in the past will blow up in his/her face. Danny Flynn may be a quiet soft-spoken man, but he isn't afraid. Part of that lack of fear comes from the trust he has in his love for Maggie Hamill, an old flame who is now married and is in the center of the controversy.

The plot is secondary in The Boxer. The boxing scenes serve mainly as a metaphor, but are plausible and exciting themselves. What's most important is the fear these characters feel and the love affair between Danny and Maggie — played with smoldering but restrained intensity by Day-Lewis and Emily Watson. These two aspects are the best thing about a movie which often seems slow and undramatic. However, it only takes a stare from Day-Lewis to Watson to change that tune.

Watson is as good and as beautiful as she was in Breaking the Waves. Day-Lewis continues as one of our best actors — here he sports amazingly dark eyes, a perfect accent and a scraggly look that suggests a man with a troubled past and nothing left to fear. B

TOMORROW NEVER DIES
Directed by Roger Spottswoode with Pierce Brosnan, Jonathan Price, Michelle Yeoh

Fitting right into the theme of history — film history, that is — is James Bond, who made his comeback via the unruffled coolness of Pierce Brosnan in 1995's Goldeneye. The main purpose of this next installment seemed to seamlessly combine the suave 007 with the stunts and spectacle of a modern day-action movie. This goal is reached — sort of. Tomorrow Never Dies is good entertainment, but needs jazzier direction, a fuller script and someone to realize that Teri Hatcher can't act.

The 18th Bond flick finds the secret agent pitted against a media king, played by Jonathan Pryce. Pryce's performance wins the dubious award for Most Annoying Villain. Pryce's zealous bad guy wasn't really that evil, just a little too greedy. Using satellite technology, he tries to create a war between Britain and Japan, so he could sell his news media program. There isn't an easier way to do this?

The answer to that question is he then wouldn't have a movie and we wouldn't have the refreshing face of Brosnan returning. In this reprisal, the elegant Brosnan continues to throw out more one-liners and of course, save more lives. Brosnan, and his remote controlled car, are easily the best part of the movie and any scenes not featuring Brosnan can be considered popcorn breaks. B-

JACKIE BROWN
Directed by Quentin Tarantino with Pam Grier, Samuel L. Jackson, Robert De Niro

I was looking through the Arts & Living section of the paper and inside, there was an advertisement for the Broadway production of Wait Until Dark, starring Marisa Tomei and... Quentin Tarantino. So much for promoting his new movie, Jackie Brown. Tarantino's gone back to acting; you'd think he was actually good at it.

Of course, if he's just enjoying his fame and having a good time, why criticize? After all, Tarantino had a lot of directorial fun in Jackie Brown. Except, he has too much. An overlong, overdeveloped crime caper that needs serious editing help, Jackie Brown tells the story of a down-and-out flight attendant, a gun salesman, a bail bondsman and a perpetually high surfer girl. Tarantino leaves the camera on his stars for long periods of time; some have called this technique character development. I call it the kind of egotistical film making that makes the film woefully uneven. If anything comes out of these scenes, it's the spectacular '70s soundtrack.

Getting the above problems out of the way, Jackie Brown is by no means a bad movie. It often sports the matter-of-fact dialogue and quirky characterizations which make Elmore Leonard's novels (namely Rum Punch, upon which this movie was based) so clever and original. Tarantino goes for the literal approach, and the interactions between the characters (especially De Niro and a refreshing Bridget Fonda) are the best parts of the movie. But the greatest achievement of the film, one that Tarantino should be given much credit for, is his rejuvenation of Pam Grier and Robert Forster. Their love story is one of the more unique and realistic in a sea of unoriginal movie romance.

Next on tap for Tarantino is a movie, written and directed and yes, starring himself. Perhaps someone should warn him, after Jackie Brown's mediocre box-office take, that one great movie doesn't mean you can sit back, relax and think everything you do is as golden as those Delfonics' tracks. C+

THE POSTMAN
Directed by Kevin Costner with Kevin Costner, Will Patton, Larenz Tate

Speaking of golden-boys, let's focus on Kevin Costner for a while. Well, only for a minute, because that's all Costner deserves after giving us The Postman. Costner's latest epic is a combination of the worst parts of Dances With Wolves, Robin Hood and Waterworld. Costner clings to the basic outline of the role he played in all of these previous films — a misunderstood drifter who manufactures hope in the hearts of millions. Coincidental maybe, but still stupidly patriotic.

In The Postman, Costner doesn't play a wounded soldier thug, the son of a king or a gifted mariner. Instead, his role is more ordinary — that of a postman.

And director Costner apparently, in a fit of self-adoration, leaves the actor Costner on screen for practically all of the torturing two and a half hours this movie staggers through. Plenty of Costner shots of Costner dressed in manly sweaters are featured in rugged close-ups.

You know you have a bad movie when the best part turns out to be a cameo from Tom Petty. D

~ UPCOMING CONCERTS ~

Now that we're back, the burning thought on everyone's mind is what to do for entertainment. Well, I'm sure you have classes, maybe a job and certainly a very busy drinking schedule to keep you occupied. But I know as well as you do that each time you pass by Tix Unlimited in the Student Union you stop to see if there are any good live music acts coming here to the Happy Valley. In order to make life more convenient for everyone, here's a list of what will come to the Northampton area in the coming weeks:

At Pearl Street— — if you are interested, R.E.M. cover band Orange Crush is playing on Friday at 9 p.m.; Saturday night you can check out The Amazing Royal Crowns with the Dropkick Murphys. Big Bad Bullocks, and the Racketeers at 7 p.m.; 25 Ta Life will perform on Sunday, Feb. 1, along with Grimkock, Blood for Blood, Catch 13, Section 8 and Powerhouse; Thursday, Feb. 5, Jiggle The Handle will be downstairs; Friday, Feb. 6, People of the Sun with Ride Inc.; and on Sunday, Feb. 7, check out Vision of Disorder.

Later in the month another cover band — Itchy Fish — will deliver their rendition of Pearl Jam's best on Feb. 20, and much later Roomful of Blues will be on March 28.

At the Iron Horse — Tonight there's Electric Blue and the cosmic truth; on Friday, New York City Blues Band and the Holmes Brothers start their show at 7 p.m.; the "God Street Wine shindig" might be interesting on Feb. 2-3; Moonboot Lover will play on Feb. 5; the Seldom Scene on Feb. 6 if you're into bluegrass; Rubyhorse and Another Girl will play on Jan. 31 and Feb. 7 at 10 p.m.; Also on Feb. 7, female blues act Rory Block will play at 7 p.m. sponsored by WRNX FM.

One if not a few of these shows should interest you, so have fun — you should get out more often anyway.

— Compiled by Kevin Monahan

Visit us online: http://www.umass.edu/

UMASS DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION
Something for Everyone
Workshops offered evenings, daytime, weekends, off and on campus
Nearly 100 noncredit workshops
Including:
• Mask Making
• Network Marketing
• Web Page Design
• Chocolate
• Songwriting
• Art Therapy
• Retirement Planning
• Genealogy
• UFOs
• Playback Theatre
• Bartending
• EMT Training
Spring semester workshops begin February 9
For a free course catalog, call 413-545-0107 or e-mail contined@admin.umass.edu
www.umass.edu/contined/
a quality education at an affordable price
• DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION •
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

www.aerotek.com
Take the first step on an incredible career journey.
Aerotek, a nationally recognized leader in the contract services industry, is actively recruiting a diverse community of college graduates. Contract services is a thriving industry that has been spurred by global competition and rapid technological change. It's no wonder contract services has grown to a $100-billion-a-year industry! And Aerotek is leading the way—since 1983, we've been the fastest-growing contract services firm in the U.S.
Hundreds of graduates have launched their careers as sales recruiters, "selling" the market's top professionals on working for Aerotek...then selling them on providing their services to our Fortune 500 clients such as Motorola, IBM, AT&T, Lockheed Martin, and Sprint. Our sales recruiters interview, market, and develop client relations. And Aerotek will make sure you have the tools you need to succeed.
Our Sales Recruiters enjoy:
• A great salary plus bonuses and comprehensive benefits
• Career planning to support advancement into sales and management
• Opportunities nationwide—130 branch offices across North America
If you are unable to see us on campus, call, fax, or e-mail us today!
Here's the first step!
See us on the U. Mass campus for:
JOB FAIR '98
Information Session — 7pm - 8pm
February 18, 1998
INTERVIEWS
School of Management
February 19, 1998
AEROTEK
Aerotek/HR, 7301 Parkway Dr., Hanover, MD 21076
1-800-527-8090/fax 410-579-3972
E-mail: coucho@aerotek.com
EOE M/F/D/V

Research Positions
Creare Inc., an engineering R&D firm seeks capable researchers.
A company of 100 people, our location in Hanover, NH, offers exceptional quality of life in a rural environment.
Research Librarian
Our specialized technical library is offering the experienced researcher an opportunity to provide on-line and Internet searches, reference and acquisition services, and support to our Library Manager in the maintenance and enhancement of library services for a technical staff of 40 engineers. BA and 2-3 years' relevant experience or MLS required.
Research Specialist
The researcher/organizer who loves information handling and the design of systems and procedures will work with a small team of engineering staff on a variety of research assignments. BS/BA degree required; MLS preferred. An appropriate mix of information research, marketing, writing and communication skills are needed, including Internet searching. Relevant work experience preferred. The successful candidate's skills will give final definition to the job.
Creare offers a competitive salary, excellent benefits, and profit sharing. Interested applicants should send a resume, detailing relevant training and work experience, and a copy of transcripts to: Kelly Koloski, Creare Inc., P.O. Box 71, Hanover, NH 03755.
Visit our web site at http://www.creare.com.
We are an equal opportunity employer.

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

Smoke and mirrors
The play, Fires in the Mirror, will be performed on Feb. 10-11 at Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m.

■ Spice

continued from page A11

than a glorified photo opportunity, the results of which can be seen above.

Will Spice World be a hit at the box office? Nobody but the pre-pubescent youth of America know for sure, but let's just say that Titanic director James Cameron probably won't stop saying "ch-ing! ch-ing!" in his sleep any time soon. I bet it'll beat that Howie Long movie though.

But now, many are undoubtedly pondering what the point of all this is exactly. For the answer, I refer to the great circus showman P.T. Barnum who once said, "There's a sucker born every minute."

My sentiments exactly.

DAILY COLLEGIAN
"have paper, will travel"

The rules for happy existence in soap land

Hello soap opera fans, did you miss me during the break?

I must say that I'm utterly exhausted from sitting on my butt and watching three to five hours of soaps every weekday (it's a tough job but someone's got to do it). In all honesty, watching soaps was the only thing keeping me sane during my house-dwelling days.

As a whole, I'm very hopeful about the coming year. Almost all of the soaps have been extremely engaging as of late. For those of you who have always thought about watching, no time is better than the present.

I have to vent for a brief second though. Who is the wise guy who decided that airing "Guiding Light" between the early morning hours (relatively speaking) of 10 and 11 a.m. was a good idea? Because of the ridiculous time slot, "GL" became something of a pastime. The only thing that kept me appraised of what was going on were the tid bits in Soap Opera Weekly — an absolute must for the serious soap opera fan. In any case, you'll have to excuse me if "GL" takes a backseat for a week until I get caught up.

***

I thought I'd start off by indulging in a few of my soap opera fantasies (it's always been a dream of mine to become a soap opera writer). These are some of the storylines I'd love to see on various soaps if I was calling the shots.

In The Postman, Costner doesn't play a wounded soldier thug, the son of a king or a gifted mariner. Instead, his role is more ordinary — that of a postman.

"General Hospital" — Jason becomes attached to the baby which leads Carly to fall in love with him. A Robin/Jason/Carly triangle ensues causing Brenda to get in Carly's face since Robin's a bit too mushy. Of course, involved too. Keesha gets shipped off to some deserted island and is never heard from again (kind of like our dear friends Simone and Gina). Liz goes after Nik in the hopes of ruining his relationship with Sarah (she's encouraged to do so after Lucky pumps her with stories about the looming fear of the Cassadines, especially with Helena in town. Liz wants Sarah away from them). It's not as if the Sarah-and- Nik romance could become any more blase. Alexis surprises everyone by becoming the victor in the Cassadine feud: Laura throws the Stefan/Kathy romance for a loop. The ever charming V. finally get some air time as her friendship with Jax grows. Lucy finally returns to her on true home — "GH!"

"Days of Our Lives" — Sami and Franco play a game of cat and mouse. Franco grows tired of Kate's threats and decides to help Sami snag control of Titan Enterprises away from Kate. All work and no play... don't worry, on her days off she joins Kristin in a scheme to break up John and Marlena once and for all. Austin becomes obsessed with bringing down Sami, so much so that he alienates Carrie. She begins to find comfort in the arms of Mike. There's a hitch though; Eric (who has come out of the closet) develops a crush on Mike himself. A battle between bro and sis emerges. Kristin (Eileen is leaving shortly) makes the ultimate sacrifice for Susan, baby Elvis and John. She ruins Stefano's plans and takes a bullet for John. Kristin dies in John's arms as Marlena watches. Her last words are to Marlena "I'll see you in hell."

Well, now that that's taken care of (other plots shall follow in the coming weeks), I'd love to hear what you guys would like to see in the coming year. I'll mention some of them in the column. I also wanted you guys to know that if you ever miss an episode (week, etc.) of your favorite soaps or are looking for some juicy gossip about the world of soap operas, feel free to e-mail me and I will try my best to fill you in.

***

After seeing Scream again for the trillionth time last week, an idea popped into my head. You know the scene where the horror movie freak (I can't believe I can't remember his name) starts babbling about the "rules" one must follow if they are to successfully survive in a horror flick? Well, soaps aren't entirely without their own set of "rules" either. Here are some tips and lessons you'd be wise to know should you find yourself smack in the middle of soap opera land:

• There's no such thing as a low-risk pregnancy. The chances of giving birth to a perfectly health baby are about as good as winning the lottery. People are always pushing you down a flight a stairs when you are pregnant.

• Don't worry about finding a job, you won't need one. Everyone's rich so no one needs to work (a lovely arrangement, isn't it?)

• Bad girls and boys never win in the end. Maybe the battle, but never the war.

• Cops are always the last to know and the law, when enforced, is very flexible (one or two weeks tops for a manslaughter conviction).

• As the cliche goes, keep your friends close and your enemies closer.

• One out every five soap land inhabitants will suffer from multiple-personality disorder.

• If a child is sent away on a trip or to a boarding school, he or she will always come back 20 years older and looking as hot as can be.

• To the women: if you lose your child and can't come to terms with telling your man, just stick a pillow under your clothes to make it look like you're still pregnant. Believe me, he won't suspect a thing.

• Should you ever find yourself in "Days" land, think nothing of it raining hellfire. It's probably just that wacky Doc up to no good. Think nothing of her spinning head or red eyes either. She's always like that before she's had her morning cup of coffee.

• Should you run into a few ladies by the name of Annie, Molly, Kristin, Phyllis or Carly, run like hell.

• Never turn to a shrink for advice. Trust me, they're not exactly the most stable bunch of people.

• People in soap land have very short memories. Murder someone one minute, run for mayor the next.

• Those happily ever after marriages... I give them till sweeps week.

• Nikolas Cassadine, age 16? And you said high school wasn't fun!

• If you gave your son or daughter up for adoption some time ago, chances are he or she is in town and may be sleeping with your spouse.

***

This week's "Sink or Swim" may be slightly congested, but that's because so much has happened during the course of a month.

Swim

• The "Terror Island" saga on "Sunset Beach." As much as I hate to admit it, the gimmick caught my eye (doesn't take much these days) and almost got to me to watch the show on a regular basis. The show is definitely picking up some steam. It was no Scream 3, but it had its fair share of scares and laughs.

• Once again to "Sunset Beach" for introducing one of daytime's first African-American vixens. It's about time.

• "General Hospital," for an unforgettable past few weeks. This soap has it all and it's all thanks to Mr. Guza. After the crap that we had to deal with last year (this little game of musical chairs with headwriters and not very good ones, I might add), we're untitled.

• Lily and Holden's wedding on "As the World Turns." After all the doom and gloom, it's good to see a little sappy, love stuff. I loved the bit about locking Molly in the closet until after the ceremony was finished.

• The sexual tension between Jack and Carly on "ATWT" and Todd and Tea on "One Life to Live." The sparks between the individuals in these two pairs are intense.

• Gloria and Brooke (may have spoke too soon with her, though) for finally having the sense to see through Dimitri and Jim's lies. Gloria, great smack too. Dimitri had it coming.

• Having Dinah put the "B" back in bitch on "Guiding Light." Someone's got to pick up Annie's slack when she leaves. Glad to see her going back to her roots.

• To the Banks triplets on "Days." They're hysterical!

• Carly on "GH" for finally giving that pompous old windbag Tony an earful. Sarah Brown deserves an Emmy for her recent blow-outs with both Tony and Al. She's been absolutely incredible. Love her and Jason together, too.

• Lucy's smarts on "Port Charles." Glad to see her up to Turn to SOAPS, page A8

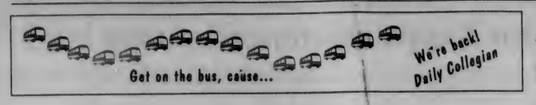
SPRING BREAK
BEST PARTIES CANCUN JAMAICA FLORIDA BEST PRICE
Call today! Space is limited!
1 800 648-4849
Go on-campus and Organize a few friends, earn FREE trips & cash!
@413-566-3267

AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
www.amherstathletic.com
Lifecycles • Nautilus • Stairmasters
Free weights • Aerobics • Saunas
Nordic Track Treadmills • Free Weights
S. Amherst
256-0080



HAS YOUR AUTO BEEN ...OR CONCERNED IT WILL BE?
WE CAN HELP!
Let the Experts at Repair your Cars'
EXHAUST • SUSPENSION • BRAKES
Stop by or Call Today - Free Shuttle Service to Campus
HADLEY 397 Russell St. (Rte. 9) 584-9991
MIDAS
NORTHAMPTON 143 King St. (Rte. 5) 586-4440
90 days same as cash

New WORLD Theater Spring 1998

February 6-7, 1998 at 8 pm, Curtain Theater GUINCEAÑERA by Alberto Antonio ("Beto") Arcaia, Paul Bestin-Rodriguez and Michael Martinez. A co-production of New WORLD Theater and the Department of Theater at the University of Massachusetts.
February 7 & 8, 1998 at 8 pm, Hampden Theater COYOTE GETS SOBER by alex eherKer
February 10 and 11 at 8 pm, Bowker Auditorium FIRES IN THE MIRROR Presented by Trinity Repertory Company. Co-sponsored with the FAC Carter Series
February 20 at 8 pm, Bowker Auditorium VOICES IN THE RAIN. Written and Performed by Michael Kack
February 20-28 & March 3-7 at 8 pm; additional 2 pm matinee on March 7, Rand Theater. MARISOL by Jose Rivera A co-production of New WORLD Theater and the Department of Theater at the University of Massachusetts.
March 7 at 8 pm, Bowker Auditorium RADIO MAMBO: CULTURE CLASH INVADES MIAMI by Culture Clash
April 3-3 at 8 pm & April 4 at 2 pm & 8 pm, Hampden Theater. E HANA'IKE KUMU (LOOK TO THE SOURCE) Performed by Leilani Chan
April 18 at 8pm, Bowker Auditorium DOÑA ROSITA'S JALAPEÑO KITCHEN Written by Rodrigo Duarte Clark Performed by Ruby Nelda Perez
For ticket information, call the Fine Arts Center Box Office (413) 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS. For more information about the shows, call (413) 545-1972.

NEW!
AXIS
It's the 5-college Web site designed and written by students ... for students!

AXIS gives you easy access to news and features from all 5 campuses ... on one fun site. Click on:
X campus news
X career center
X entertainment
X club scene
X dining guide
X movie reviews
X contests & more!
www.gazettenet.com/axis
GazetteNET is the Web site of the Daily Hampshire Gazette

February '98

ARTS ON CAMPUS...
A monthly calendar brought to you by the UMass Arts Council.

Events

Saturday, January 31
MUSIC 30th Anniversary Gala Concert A showcase of faculty artists performing solos and chamber music, including: Walter Chestnut, Fredric Cohen, Nigel Cross, J. Holmes, Laura Kack, Michelle Kinney, Jennifer Langham, Salvatore Macchia, Estela Olevsky, Dorothy Ornest, Nadine Pinsky, Deborah Pauline Stark, Barbara Tillis and Charles Wuorinen. 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. $ 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS. This event is preceded by a 30th Anniversary Dinner. Call 545-2227 for information.

Wednesday, February 4
THEATER Quinceanera by Paul Boran-Rodriguez. "Beto" Arazza and Michael Martinez. 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theatre. $ 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS. Feb. 6-7 Lecture on Feb. 5 at 12:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 803 with the three artists. Call 545-4824 for more info. on lecture.
LECTURE Visual Pedagogy Lecture by Emily Romney, Langy School of Music. 2:30 p.m. Bezanson Recital Hall. 545-2227

Saturday, February 7
MUSIC St. Louis Symphony with Hans Vonk, Music Director and Conductor and Hillary Hahn, Violin. 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. $ 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS.
VIETNAMESE TET CELEBRATION 5p.m.-1 a.m. Campus Center Auditorium. 545-3602.
THEATER Coyote Gets Sober. 8 p.m. in Hampden Theater $ 545-2511 Through Feb. 8
COMEDY Kings, Queens and the Divine Comedy of Karen Williams 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium $ 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS.

Tuesday, February 10
THEATER Fires in the Mirror with Barbara Meek and Becky London of the Trinity Repertory Company. 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. $ 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS. Through Feb.11.
MUSIC Larry Johnson solo Blues guitar concert. 7 p.m. at Augusta Savage Gallery. 545-5177

Thursday, February 12
VIDEO Faces: Weekly Video Series 1 p.m. in the Student Union Gallery. 545-0792
READING Christine Schutt 8p.m. in Memorial Hall. 545-0843.

Friday, February 13
MUSIC Friends 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. 545-2020

Saturday, February 14
MUSIC 13th Annual Honor Band 120 high school instrumentalists from New England, New York and New Jersey with Malcolm Rosedi, Director of Bands. 7 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. 545-2227.

Thursday, February 19
MUSIC Jay Hoggard, Solo jazz vibraphone concert 7 p.m. at Augusta Savage Gallery. 545-5177
VIDEO Faces: Weekly Video Series 1 p.m. in the Student Union Gallery. 545-0792
LECTURE "Beauty, Gender, Image and Sexuality," By photographer Laurie Toby Edison. 12:30 p.m. in Campus Center 803. 545-4824
READING Agha Shahid Ali 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall. 545-0843.

Friday, February 20
THEATER Voices in the Rain Song, dance and monologues of African American men in prison. 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium $ 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS.

Saturday, February 21
MUSIC A Mendelssohn Celebration Estela Olevsky, piano, 8 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall. $ 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS.

Sunday, February 22
MUSIC Saxophone and Piano In Concert Faculty Recital with Lynn Klock, saxophone and Nadine Shank, piano. 3 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall. $ 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS.

Wednesday, February 25
MUSIC Music of Latin America, Thomas Cerny, piano. 8:15 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall. $ 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS.
FILM 50 Years of Walt Disney Film Features "Legend of Oliva Groves" by Dorit Ha'aman, who will be present at screening. 7 p.m. Mahar Auditorium.

Thursday, February 26
MUSIC Gary Louris, Saxophone. 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. $ 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS.
THEATER Married by Jose Rivera 8 p.m. in the Rand Theater. $ 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS. Feb 26 - 28. Open Forum with Jose Rivera at 3 p.m. on Feb 28 and Master Talkback with Jose Rivera on Feb. 27 after performance.
VIDEO & DISCUSSION Classic Blues Videos with discussion by Steve Tracy, UMass Asst. Professor of Afro-American Studies. 7 p.m. at Augusta Savage Gallery. 545-5177
VIDEO Faces: Weekly Video Series 1 p.m. in the Student Union Gallery. 545-0792

Saturday, February 27
THEATER The Night Larry Kramer Kissed Me by the Collective Theatre Company 7:30 p.m. in Hampden Theater $ 545-4824

Exhibits

Augusta Savage Gallery
A Brush with the Blues
by Jack Coughlin
Feb. 2-27
Opening Reception: Feb. 2, 5-7 p.m.

Hampden Gallery
Kathmandu-- Green Tara Room Development
Collaborative Group Exhibition
Feb. 1-21
Closing Reception: Feb. 20, 5-7 p.m.

Hunter Art Gallery
National Juried Print Exhibition
Feb. 9-Mar. 27
Opening Reception: Feb. 9, 5-7 p.m.

Student Union Visual & Performing Arts Space
The Mid Way Show
Works by UMass MFA candidates
Feb.2 -12
Opening Reception: Feb. 3, 4:30-6:30
The Spirit of Place: Recent Black and White Photographs from Beijing
by Hongbing Tang
Feb. 16-Mar. 5
Opening Reception: Feb. 19, 4:30 p.m.

University Gallery
Theatre Theater: Electric Mind and Recent Works
Jan. 31-Mar. 13
Lorna Ritz: Recent Paintings and Drawings
Jan. 31-May 7
Opening Reception for both exhibitions Jan. 30, 5-7 p.m.

Wheeler Gallery
The Spirit of Place: History, Culture, Nostalgia
by Hongbing Tang
Feb. 18-Mar. 8
Opening Reception: Feb. 19, 5-7 p.m.

5-College students can attend any Fine Arts Center event for only $5! funded in part by a grant from the UMass Arts Council

ARTS COUNCIL INFORMATION: 2/98
Plan Your Spring Events NOW!
Apply for funding from the Arts Council to support your art event. The Council awards grants to UMass organizations, such as RSO's. Stop by and share your ideas, we'll help you get started. This year's remaining grant application deadlines are: February 4 and March 11.
UMass Arts Council, 101 Hasbrouck Hall, 545-0202

A look at some of the anticipated releases from the music industry

Marty Keane

After the much-documented failure of 1996's No Code, it will be interesting if popular music has caught Pearl Jam. We'll find out soon enough as they released their fifth album entitled Yield, on Epic yesterday. A big marketing push is already underway, which includes the release of their first video (for the album's first single, "Given to Fly") since the award-winning "Jeremy" clip over five years ago. Word out of Seattle also has them embarking on an 80-date U.S. tour this summer. Given the group's mercurial nature, I'll believe both when I see them.

Another early semester highlight promises to be the latest from Shaun Ryder (former Happy Monday's frontman) and his new outfit, the apocalyptic dance band Black Grape. Having received universal rave reviews from the notoriously fickle British press, Radioactive is set to release Stupid Stupid Stupid next month. If the group hasn't broken up by then, look for a spring U.S. tour.

If their 2-CD set culled from a 1995 set at Red Rocks didn't quench your thirst for The Dave Matthews Band, then perhaps another 2-CD set from a 1993 Richmond, Va., concert coming out this March will do the trick. RCA plans to release a DMB live package every three months or so to cut out the need for bootlegging, so get out your wallets.

After becoming last summer's top-grossing package tour, a live album was an inevitable occurance from the folks behind the Lilith Fair. Tentative plans call for a March release.

One of this coming year's most intriguing releases will certainly be the all-new material currently being recorded by Jimmy Page and Robert Plant in London with legendary noisemaker Steve Albini manning the dials. It'll be interesting to hear what will happen when two of rock's most accomplished names team up with the man behind such indie gems as P.J. Harvey's Rid of Me and Nirvana's In Utero.

Another interesting, not to mention unlikely, collaboration will be released this summer on Electra. British folkie Billy Bragg and Chicago country-rockers Wilco have teamed up to record some of Woody Guthrie's old lyrics. One wonders how Guthrie's decades-old words will translate in today's modern society.

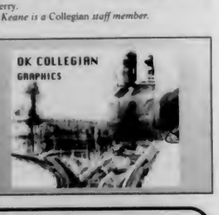
The pioneers behind the trip-hop movement, Massive Attack, return with their first (as yet untitled) album in nearly four years in April on Virgin.

Having recently been quoted in a Chicago Tribune interview as wanting to "take the next two and a half years off," a b-sides compilation by Noel Gallagher and Oasis should help to ease the pain of having to do without one of music's most endearing snobs for a while.

Smashing Pumpkins' guitarist James Iha will see his first solo offering released by Virgin next month. Expect mostly acoustic-based tunes revolving around Iha's often insightful and thought-provoking lyrics.

Speaking of the now drummer-less Smashing Pumpkins, the band has reportedly completed work on the follow-up to the wildly successful Mellon Collie & The Infinite Sadness, the album that made them superstars. According to frontman Billy Corgan, the new release reflects "not having a drummer" although former Soundgarden skin pounder Matt Cameron lends his talents on a few tracks. A mid-summer release is planned.

After the implosion of the Stone Roses, guitarist John Squire returned to action quickly with a new band, The Seahorses. Now it's Stone Rose vocalist Ian Brown's turn. Unfinished Monkey Business (Polydor) is already out overseas while a stateside release is in the works.



After getting married and having a baby, Liz Phair hits back after a four-year absence with whitechocolateegg-space on Matador. A firm release date is to be set shortly.

Among other notables scheduled to release album in '98 are California punk band Bad Religion and schlock-rockers White Zombie. Others to look out for with be Britpop also-- rans, Pulp, Cast and Ocean Colour Scene. Also planning releases this year are former STP lead singer Welland and the kilt-wearing thrashers, Korn.

Although nothing is certain, let's hope the following rumored releases see the light of day in 1998:

- Something, anything, from My Bloody Valentine. We've only been waiting since 1991.
- A planned remix of Radiohead's entire OK Computer by Bristol, England's trip-hop collective Massive Attack.
- After recently unearthing some rare tracks from The Rolling Stones recorded for the BBC, those involved are trying to determine how, if at all, to release these much-sought after early live recordings of "Satisfaction (I Can't Get No)" and various covers from rock pioneer such as Chuck Berry.

Marty Keane is a Collegian staff member.

If the Collegian were a CD...
OK COLLEGIAN
featuring: Karma Journalist coming soon to a record store near you?
until then, check us out at www.umass.edu/rso/collegian
OK COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS

AEROBICS
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
* Classes Daily
* Certified Instructors
* Suspended Wood Floor
* Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST athletic CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst, 256-0080

BRANDYWINE IN AMHERST
BRANDYWINE IS NOW ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS
FOR 1 YEAR LEASES BEGINNING JUNE, JULY, AUGUST, OR SEPTEMBER OF 1998.
LOCK IN YOUR APARTMENT NOW
SPACIOUS 1 AND 2 BEDROOMS • BEAUTIFUL GROUNDS ON THE BUS LINE • CLOSE TO UMASS • SWIMMING POOL PRIVATE BALCONIES • ON-SITE LAUNDRY FACILITIES FREE HEAT, HOT WATER, AND GAS • AIR CONDITIONING
BRANDYWINE APARTMENTS
549-0600
160 BRANDYWINE DRIVE, AMHERST, MA 01002

PROJECT OTZMA
EXPERIENCE ISRAEL FROM OTZMA:
A 10 - MONTH LEADERSHIP DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM IN ISRAEL.
WORK IN VARIOUS LOCATIONS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY AND DEVELOP A DEEP, MEANINGFUL UNDERSTANDING OF ISRAELI SOCIETY.
For more information contact your local Jewish Federation or:
Project OTZMA
Council of Jewish Federations
730 Broadway
New York, NY 1003
212.598.3532 email: otzma@cjfny.org
Website: http://jon.cjfny.org/otzma
PROJECT OTZMA
P.S Don't worry, that office job isn't going anywhere!

KAI CHI
We Deliver to campus
Sun - Thurs
Noon - 2 a.m.
Fri - Sat
Noon - 2 a.m.

Regency Hairstylists
253-9526
January White Sale
Has been extended to Feb. 7
20% of all tanning packages

Paris '98 SUMMER PROGRAMS
* Over 75 accredited courses
* French Immersion Program
* Fine Arts Program
* Advanced Photography and Web Design Programs
* Cultural Excursions
For more information, call or write:
The American University of Paris
Summer Programs, Box S-2000
102 rue St. Dominique
75007 Paris, France
Tel. (33/1) 40 62 06 14
Fax (33/1) 40 62 07 17
New York office: Tel. (212) 983-1414
Web site - http://www.aup.fr
E-mail - summer@aup.fr

Even At Four, You Had A Good Head For Business.

Face it, you didn't come to college to be just like everyone else, so why not ally yourself with one of America's top internships? You'll make your resume stand out after graduation, plus earn real money while still in college. Some of our students earn a five-figure income. Put the Northwestern Mutual Life name to work for you, and realize that you're worth much more than you think. Maybe The Steffen Agency should hear from you. Internship openings available now.
Tune in to "Today's 99.3" for the Northwestern Mutual Life Player of the Game.
KATE KANE
The Steffen Agency
413/748-6000
katekane@javanel.com
Northwestern Mutual Life
The Quiet Company
www.NorthwesternMutual.com
For sales career opportunities 1-800-CALL-NML

Phish sinks on live album, Puff Daddy is back, Brooks disappoints

By Marty Keane
Collegian Staff

Trax On Trax Off

SUP STICH AND PASS
Phish
Elektra

What's this — Phish's third live album? Clearly vying for the leftover Deadheads, Phish packs plenty of noodling, directionless jamming for those still in search of a post-Jerry groove. It's easy to imagine lots of hand-flapping, head twirling dancing going on amongst shoeless hippies at this 1997, Hamburg, Germany concert, but as a CD listening experience, Slip Stich and Pass (Elektra) plays more than a little flat. I've never heard more listless version of "Jesus Just Left Chicago" or "Hello My Baby" — just two of the more memorable songs in their endless catalog of Dead-inspired jams.

Like their counterparts in the neo-hippie outfit, The Dave Matthews Band, these guys have the requisite chops, but the problem is, you can't fake soul, and that's what Phish is trying desperately to do. D

HARLEM WORLD
Mase
Arista/Bad Boy

Sean "Puffy" Combs' grip on the music favored by urban America is the stuff of legend. His label's brand of smooth, soul-infected, hip-hop has taken the country (not to mention Billboard) by storm ever since the posthumous release of the Notorious B.I.G.'s brilliant Life After Death early last year and if Mase's excellent Harlem World (Artist/Bad Boy) is any indication, Puffy's stranglehold is only growing tighter.

The 20-year-old Mase is already familiar to many through his guest spots on other East Coast hits, including Biggie's "Mo'Money, Mo' Problems," and Combs' own "Can't Nobody Hold Me Down." As with most urban music these days, the lyrical concerns are hardly new — getting paid, gaining respect and women.

Producer Combs retains his preference for stealing other people's ideas through choosing obvious but perfectly suited samples: Kool & The Gang, Curtis Mayfield, Harold Melvin and even Michael Jackson are some of the notable names. What makes Harlem World such an uncontested success though, is Mase's easy vocal delivery, which slips in perfectly with Combs' silky smooth grooves. Further proof that Puff Daddy belongs behind the boards, not in front of the mike. A-

GREAT EXPECTATIONS — THE ALBUM
Various Artists
Atlantic

The soundtrack to the new film adaptation of Dickens' classic work starring Ethan Hawke and Gwyneth Paltrow is a pleasant surprise. First off, it's chock-full of new songs from famous acts, thus trumping most half-baked cash-ins that do little but fill studio and record company coffers. Tori Amos' "Siren" is unsurprisingly quirky and kooky, but still beautiful and haunting all the same. Former Soundgarden frontman Chris Cornell checks in with "Sunshower," a tender solo offering more closely in tune with his efforts on the Singles soundtrack than any of the pop-inflected sludge favored by his former band. Also of consequence is Pulp's "Like A Friend," a song whose glam rocky assuredness would be enough to impress Ziggy Stardust or Marc Bolan of T Rex. Not a bad little soundtrack at all. B+

SEVENS
Garth Brooks
Capitol

Now officially the biggest-selling solo artist in American history (all types of music included), Garth Brooks has always based his spectacular live performances on the kind of '70s arena rock showmanship that catapulted one of his idols, KISS, to stardom during rock's cheesy heydays.

On record though, Brooks has played country by the book throughout his recorded output, spanning over a decade and seven albums. Seeing as the aptly titled Sevens (Capitol) is essentially no different from the Garth of years past, that means there are only two brands of tunes in Brooks' canon: rootin', tootin' barroom singalongs like "Longneck Bottle" and "Cowboy Cadillac," and maudlin ballads such as "Belleu Wood" and "In Another's Eyes," the last being a duet with longtime friend Trisha Yearwood.

Sure, it makes for good, clean fun which is ultimately the plus I guess, but Sevens sounds a bit forced as Brooks' righteous country boy-routine is wearing a bit thin. A man of Brooks' stature in the music world has a responsibility, I think, to do more than merely please his fans with crowd-pleasing pandering such as this.

Brooks also has the power to further the cause of country music as a viable mainstream entity to all of America and it is a shame to see him fail to take some chances. Clearly Brooks is afraid to break out of the cookie-cutter country mold — something that is in fact perpetuated by himself. Longtime fans though will not be disappointed, but one cannot but feel as if Brooks is wasting his considerable talents and platform. B-

LOCK 'N LOAD
Denis Leary
A&M

Phish's latest live release falls sadly short of the mark.
COURTESY SONY DELUX

If you have a problem with the "f" word, don't even bother with Leary. If not, then listen to a master use the dreaded word like a rapier. Actually, what makes Lock 'N Load (A&M) most notable is not the swears, it's Leary's caustic, often dead-on indictments of most things politically correct. He also waves very funny on slouchy teenagers ("Pull up your pants!"), boutique coffee ("I want coffee that tastes like coffee!"), and the annoying Michael Flatley (dubbed "Assle of the Dance"). The only crap here are the "songs" Leary attempts. Stick with the jokes, eh? B

UGLY BEAUTIFUL
Babybird
Atlantic

England's Babybird has come along at a fortuitous time. Radiohead hasn't (yet) had the kind of runaway success that leads record companies to sign blatant imitators the way Nirvana did, and No Doubt no doubt will. The new crop of signings share a sense of grandeur without bombast (like Radiohead) that was commonplace among bands rarely broadcast outside college radio a decade ago. Chumbawamba just recently escaped years of obscurity with "Tubthumping," a song with '80s-style big production values, and the Longpigs are garnering a bit of airplay after touring with the similarly-minded reformed Echo & The Bunnymen. And Babybird scored itself a deal with material reminiscent of the Go-Betweens and early James, with contemporary flourishes.

Babybird and its debut album, Ugly Beautiful, are the brainchild of the severely talented Stephen Jones, a DIY-spirited pop troubadour who has written an astounding 400 plus eclectic songs ranging in content from surreal comic narratives to intensely personal meditations. Exemplary of his witticism is "I wanna get famous just so I can get sued" to the amusingly sacrilegious "Jesus Is My Girlfriend." This may be true, but in the same song he also states that he "can't even catch a tune with a hook," which as it turns out, the album reveals as a blatant lie.

"Candy Girl" is ringing and melodic and the upbeat "Good night" brings to mind the underappreciated Woodentops. Then there's the lead single, "You're Gorgeous," which radiates a twisted sexuality in its effortlessly catchy title refrain. Not all the songs have a conventional pop

Turn to TRAX, page A8

music alone shall live
IRONHORSE MUSIC HALL
Northampton, MA
monday & tuesday, february 2 & 3, 8:30pm
the GOD STREET WINE shindig shin.dig, n. - a festive party, often with dancing join God Street for a stripped-down, semi-unplugged, very intimate performance $10 adv.
WFCR benefit!!!
sunday, february 1: 7 & 9:30 pm
Buckwheat Zydeco
Louisiana-style dance party,
$17.50 adv
saturday february 14, 7 &10 pm
5 O'Clock Shadow, Drawn To Scale & the Amherst DQ (7pm); the Smith Smithereens (10pm) a cappella valentine, $10 adv.
thursday, february 5, 10pm
Moonboot Lover
plus Native
funkified grooves for your boogie soul
$ 6 adv.
saturday, february 7, 10pm
Rubyhorse/ Another Girl
alternarock artists in residence
$ 5 adv./door
TICKETS For the Record, at the Northampton Box Office or call 586-8686.
24 HOUR CONCERT INFO: 413.584.0610

FITCHBURG STATE
graduate degrees make the difference

CERTIFICATES OF ADVANCED GRADUATE STUDIES
• Consultation and Peer Leadership
• Educational Leadership and Management
• Interdisciplinary Studies
• Professional Staff Development
MASTER'S DEGREES
Master of Arts
• Biology
• English
• History
Master of Arts in Teaching
• Biology
• Earth Science
• English
• History
• Mathematics
Master of Business Administration (MBA)
• Accounting
• Human Resources Management
• Management
Master of Education
• Arts Education
• Early Childhood Education
• Educational Leadership and Management
• Elementary Education
• Middle School Education
• Occupational Education
• Science Education
• Secondary Education
• Special Education
• Technology Education
Master of Science
• Communications/Media
• Computer Science
• Counseling
• Criminal Justice
• Nursing (Forensic)
GRADUATE CERTIFICATE PROGRAMS
• Adolescent and Family Therapy
• Child Protective Services
• Communications/Media
• Early Intervention
• Educational Technology
• Fine Arts Director Program
• Forensic Case Work
• Forensic Nursing
• Professional Mentoring for Teachers
• Substance Abuse Services
• Traumatic Brain Injury Education and Neurorehabilitation
GRADUATE CONCENTRATIONS AVAILABLE: NEW
• Higher Education Administration
• History & Literature of Women
• School Adjustment Counseling
• Mathematics (M.A.T.)
FOR A COMPLETE LIST OF GRADUATE AND UNDERGRADUATE COURSES, YOU MAY TELEPHONE, FAX OR E-MAIL:
GRADUATE AND CONTINUING EDUCATION
978-665-3181
Fax: 978-665-3658
E-mail: dgce@fsc.edu
PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT CENTER
978-665-3636
Fax: 978-665-3639
E-mail: pdc@fsc.edu
ADMISSIONS
800-705-9692 or 978-665-3144
Fax: 978-665-4540
E-mail: admissions@fsc.edu
VISIT OUR WEB SITE AT WWW.FSC.EDU

COURTESY STEVE DOUBLE

Oasis guitarist, Noel Gallagher, may take the next two years off.

~ CALENDAR OF EVENTS ~

Saturday, Jan. 31

Music — 30th Anniversary Gala Concert. A showcase of faculty artists performing solos and chamber music, including: Walter Chestnut, Fredic Cohen, Nigel Cox, Jeff Holmes, Laura Klock, Michelle La Course, Jennifer Langham, Salvatore Macchia, Estela Olevsky, Dorothy Ornest, Nadine Shank, David Sporny, Paulina Stark, Frederick Tillis and Charles Treger. 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. $5 for Five College students. Call 545–2511.

Wednesday, Feb. 4

Theater — Quinceanera by Paul Bonin–Rodriguez. "Beto" Arsiza, and Michael Mariner. 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater. $5 for Five College students. Call 545–2511. Feb. 4–7. Lecture on Feb. 5 at 12:30 p.m. in Campus Center 803 with the three artists.

Lecture — Vocal Pedagogy Lecture by Emily Romney. Longy School of Music. 2:30 p.m. Bezanson Recital Hall. Call 545–2227.

Saturday, Feb. 7

Music — St. Louis Symphony with Hans Vonk, Music Director and Conductor, and Hillary Hahn, Violin. 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. $5 for Five College students. Call 545–2511.

Vietnamese Tet Celebration — 5 p.m. – 1 a.m. Campus Center Auditorium. Call 545–3600.

Theater — Coyote Gets Sober. 8 p.m. in Hamden Theater. $5 for Five College Students. Call 545–2511. Through Feb. 8.

Comedy — Kings, Queens and the Divine Comedy of Karen Williams. 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. $5 for Five College Students. Call 545–2511.

Tuesday, Feb. 10

Theater — Fires in the Mirror with Barbara Meek and Becky London of the Trinity Repertory Company. 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. $5 for Five College Students. Call 545– 2511 Through Feb. 11.

Music — Larry Johnson solo Blues guitar concert. 7 p.m. at Augusta Savage Gallery. Call 545–5177.

Thursday, Feb. 12

Video — Faces: Weekly Video Series. 1 p.m. in the Student Union Gallery. Call 545–0792.

Reading — Christine Schutt. 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall. Call 545–0643.

Friday, Feb. 13

Music — Entrain. 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. Call 545–2020.

Saturday, Feb. 14

Music — 13th Annual Honor Band. 120 high school instrumentalists from New England, New York and New Jersey with Malcom Rowell, Director of Bands. 7 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. Call 545–2227.

■ trax

continued from page A7

sound however.

"Dead Bird Signs" could have been a lost track by the ambient house band This Mortal Coil; the accompaniment for "Atomic Soda" could be a music box with reverb added; and "You & Me" draws in trip–hop shuffling beat.

Babybird may bear resemblance to other bands of greater fame, but Ugly Beautiful is stamped with originality. A

TIBETAN FREEDOM CONCERT
Various Artists
Grand Royal/Capitol

THE BRIDGE SCHOOL CONCERTS — VOL. ONE
Various Artists
Reprise

The tragic rage in the face of communist China has been well–documented through the news media in recent years with the exiled Dalai Lama having become a celebrity worldwide through his Free Tibet campaign. Over the past two summers in San Francisco and New York City, the music world — led by Beastie Boy and devout Buddhist Adam Yauch — has done their part by holding the successful Tibetan Freedom Concerts which have gathered quite an array of talent. In fact, U2's only non–PopMart gig took place during last summer's two–day festival at Randall's Island in New York. An overview of these shows have been collected on the Tibetan Freedom Concert 3–CD set.

Unfortunately, the collection fails as a musical experience, though not for lack of effort. Many of the tracks are one–of– a–kind performances, such as Eddie Vedder and Mike McCready of Pearl Jam during "Yellow Ledbetter" and Noel Gallagher of Oasis running through (albeit sloppily) "Cast No Shadow." The highlights — including Bjork's "Hyperballad" and Rage Against the Machine's "Bulls on Parade" — are widely interspersed angst rock–star posing (Pavement, U2), and respectable artists caught on an off–day (Beck, Patti Smith, Michael Stipe and Mike Mills of R.E.M.). If you are looking to help Tibet or buy a cohesive collection of tacks by rock's upper echelon, your money is better spent elsewhere.

Since 1986, some of music's most luminous voices have gathered at the request of Neil and Pegi Young to play for the benefit of Hillsborough, California's Bridge School, a facility offering unique and innovative educational opportunities for children with severe speech and physical impairments.

Although still lacking in overall cohesiveness, The Bridge School Concerts — Vol. 1 succeeds where the Tibetan Freedom Concert fails because each of the 15 cuts are woven together by a common acoustic–based thread which helps to even the playing field a bit — something needed when presented a churning industrial band such as Ministry alongside the folkish wisdom of a reunited Simon & Garfunkel.

Among the many highlights include a rarely heard live version of "Nothingman" by Young devotees Pearl Jam and Ministry with a rockabilly cover of the Grateful Dead staple "Friend of the Devil," a real treat (not to mention departure) for anyone who has had their ear drums rattled by Ministry's own work. Although the album sounds a bit stale in spots (Patti Smith's "People Have The Power" and Don Henley's "Yes It Is"), The Bridge School Concerts — Vol. One is filled with more than enough worthy nuggets to merit purchasing. Unfortunately the same cannot be said for the equally well–intentioned Tibetan Freedom Concert which just misses the mark musically.

Tibetan Freedom Concert C
The Bridge School Concerts — Vol. One B

COME TO DADDY
Aphex Twin
Sire

Aphex Twin closes out '97 like he opened it: with an exceptional electronic album. Come to Daddy contains seven new tracks, plus a remix off last January's Richard D. James full–length. Half this EP rivals the digital hardcore practiced by Alec Empire of Atari Teenage Riot (frayed samples and chaotic noise played at a relentless pace) while the rest revels in the elastic sounds and tripped out nursery room melodies that have made Aphex Twin a household name in the electronic realm A–

■ soaps

continued from page A5

some of her old tricks again. I adore her. She's definitely got my vote for RuPaul's "Diva of the Day."

• Joseph C. Phillips (Justus on "GH"): Cheers to both the actor and the character he portrays. After a year of sitting on the sidelines, Justus has finally gotten some well–deserved airtime. Bob Guza has given the character a kick in the pants (backbone and all) and Joseph has not disappointed. He's been marvelous these past few weeks. In fact, he's turning out to be one of my favorite characters.

Sink

• The SORAS (Soap Opera Rapid Aging Syndrome) that has afflicted Rick Forrester on "The Bold and the Beautiful." Could care less about the kid and his ridiculous teen happenin's. I can see the pro's in some of the victims of SORAS but not with this one. I hate to say it, but I find the actor a bit grating as well.

• Peter on "Days." What a bore his return has been so far. Find the guy someone other than a tiger to interact with.

• To the "voices in my head" trend on "Days." I know I've said this before, but is it really necessary to have the characters talk to themselves every three seconds? Am I the only one who finds this annoying? I mean, these people will sit there for hours just talking to themselves. Example: "I've got to find Ien before Jack does," Peter says to himself every scene.

• To useless and unnecessary pre–emptions. Last week, "Port Charles" was pre–empted for a special extended newscast on the snow conditions. Can you imagine the nerve of these execs, cancelling a Friday night episode of "PC" to tell me that it snowed last night! Like I needed to know that. They took an extra half an hour to recycle the same info they covered (quite extensively) during the newscast at noon. It's good to be informed, but there's no need to shove it down my throat, beat a dead horse, or whatever (especially when it comes at the expense of one of my beloved soaps). I should say, however, that they were nice enough to air the episode ... at 3:35 a.m. Thanks for nothing!

Jacob Fanning is a Collegian columnist. Any questions or comments about this column can be emailed to jfanning@student.umass.edu.

THE BOULDERS

x Large 2 Bedroom Apartments
• *New Appliances • *New Counters/Cabinets
• *New Carpets/Tile * Selected Units

x State of the Art Exercise Facility
• Stairmaster • Lifecycle • Nautilus

■ Free Heat & Hot Water
■ Professional Maintenance Staff on Site
■ On Site Laundry Facility
■ Limited Access Entry System
■ 5 College Bus Stop on Property

256-8534
Office Hours Mon-Fri 8:30 - 5:30 Sat. 9:00 - 2:00
156A Brittany Manor Drive, Amherst, MA

CLIFF SIDE APARTMENTS

■ 1,2 & 3 Bedroom Garden Style Units
(Also Townhouse Style for 2 Bedroom)
■ Convenient to Amherst, UMass & Interstate 91
■ Scenic Hiking Trails on 28 Wooded Acres
■ Olympic Size Pool
■ Tennis, Volleyball and Basketball
■ Free Public Transportation
■ 24 Hour Maintenance

Peace sells, but Megadeth still rocks

By Bryan Schwartzman
Collegian Staff

MEGADETH
Orpheum Theater
Jan. 16

The heads were banging during veteran metal act Megadeth's latest area performance. The show drew a capacity crowd despite the fact inclement weather and an Aerosmith show across town at Mama Kin.

The performance was energetic and the sound system was optimum, conditions which contributed to an invigorating two hours of music. The band found just the right balance of old and new material to please most audience members.

Megadeth, touring off its seventh release (its fourth with the current lineup) Cryptic Writings can be described as one of heavy metal's greatest success stories in the "alternative" '90s. Founder Dave Mustaine has been able to shake the reputation as "the guy who was thrown out of Metallica," and has developed a band with a wide repertoire and distinctive sound.

Unlike the '80s when Megadeth was marred by drug abuse and lineup changes, the '90s has seen the band consistently evolve. With a dark blend of political humor, the band has commercialized their sound in a similar vein as metal pioneers Metallica, although Megadeth has retained more of the speed which is associated with '80s metal.

The show opened up an intense version of "Holy Wars," a single released in 1990 which describes the Muslim Jihad. Early in they also surprised the audience with "Hanger 18," from the same album. Most of the set was comprised of songs from the last two albums Euthanasia and Cryptic Writings. Some of the new material is on the monotonous side and lacks the intensity of the older material; yet there were some highlights such as "Trust" and "Almost Honest."

They also played several singles off their most commercially successful album Countdown to Extinction including Megadeth's take on American politics, "Symphony of Destruction." They also featured the title track from their 1986 album Peace Sells But Who's Buying?

About midway through the show Mustaine asked the members of the audience who were attending their first Megadeth show to raise their hands. When nearly half the audience did so he asked, "How can this scene be dying out if so many new people are coming?"

In a similar vein he complained of the lack of access heavy metal bands are getting to concert venues and air play.

"If you let them kill the thing you love, it's not America anymore... my country 'tit of me," he said.

The openers Life of Agony and Coal Chamber provided plenty of loud music to warm up the audience. Life of Agony played solid, yet unvaried riffs to adrenalize a sitting audience. The lead singer who constantly shouted derogatory remarks at the audience for their lack of par-

Turn to MEGADEATH, page A11

The man in charge
Hans Vonk is the brand new conductor of the St. Louis Symphony.

■ calendar

continued from page A8

FRIDAY, FEB. 13

Music — Entrain. 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. Call 545–2020.

SATURDAY, FEB. 14

Music — 13th Annual Honor Band. 120 high school instrumentalists from New England, New York and New Jersey with Malcom Rowell, Director of Bands. 7 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. Call 545–2227.

THURSDAY, FEB. 19

Music — Jay Hoggard. Solo jazz vibraphone concert. 7 p.m. at Augusta Savage concert. Call 545–5177.

Video — Faces: Weekly Video Series. 1 p.m. in the Student Union Gallery. Call 545–0792.

Lecture — "Beauty, Gender, Image and Sexuality," by photographer Laurie Toby Edison. 12:30 p.m. in Campus Center 803. Call 545–4824.

Reading — Shahid Ali Agha. 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall. Call 545–0643.

FRIDAY, FEB. 20

Theater — Voices in the Rain. Song, dance and monologues of African–American men in prison. 8 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall. $5 for Five College students. Call 545–2511.

COURTESY BEN GLASS

And the Oscar does not go to...
Kevin Costner, Olivia Williams and Tom Petty fail to muster any enthusiasm in The Postman.

Another offering in Tupac's memory

By Marty Keane
Collegian Staff

DAYS OF THE NEW
Days Of The New
Outpost

Just what the world needed, another Alice In Pearl Stone Garden cover band. But wait! The press release says that these guys are different (read alternative) because Days Of The New's crappy music is almost based on derivative acoustic guitar arrangements instead of the usual electric.

With such high–brow songs such as "Touch Peel and Stand," I bet these guys might actually be worth something. Whoops. I must have been thinking of someone else. Days Of The New are so pathetic, in fact, I almost miss that whole grunge thing from a few years back.

So then, a concise, one word review of Days Of The New for those pressed for time: Fühgettabouttit! If you are desperate for grunge, go buy an old flannel at a Salvation Army Thrift Shop. At least they can put your cash to good use. But please, I beg of you, don't buy into this garbage.

If I had to wager money on what will be the most solid– back disc in six months at used CD stores, this is almost at the top of the list, save for a Chumbawamba here and a Sugar Ray there. D–

R U STILL DOWN? (REMEMBER ME?)
2 Pac
Amaru/Jive

The second (and most assuredly not the last) posthumous release designed to cash in on Tupac Shakur's death last year, this double–CD cobbles together leftover tracks for yet another rehash of the melodrama and mayhem that defined the multi–talented rapper's final years.

Though the beats are phoned in by a plethora of outside producers, Shakur remains a mesmerizing and unbelievable presence — not the most skilled or inventive emcee to be sure, but he was surely one of the most passionate. When he digs beyond the gansta clichés, his work resonates with pain, poignancy and introspection, as on "I Wonder If Heaven Got a Ghetto" and "Only Fear of Death." But the worthiest tracks on R U Still Down (Remember Me?) could have easily been contained on a single CD, which leaves at least 50 minutes of filler. C

THE UNSTABLE MOLECULE
Isotope 2170
Thrill Jockey

With Tortoise's new release (tentatively titled TNT) not due until March, members of the influential Chicago post– rock collective — including Dan Bitney, Jeff Parker and John Herndon — have branched out a bit with the side project Isotope 2170.

Isotope 2170 explores various permutations of textured jazz and fusion funk vamps, capably capitalized on dub– reggae studio techniques and genre–blending arrangements. Though not nearly as soulless as Tortoise, Isotope 2170 is also not as thoroughly engrossing, even over the course of a brief EP. Raw rhythms and cool jazz overtones highlight the musicians' talents, but The Unstable Molecule is exactly what the title suggests: a bit too unsettled for its own good. It ultimately fails to succeed as anything more than just interesting atmosphere. C+

read the Collegain

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Vegetarian Potato Skins 7.50 3.75
Sweet Potato Fries 4.99 2.50
Shrimp Tempura 6.25 3.13
1/2 PRICE!
J Judie's DOWNTOWN AMHERST
51 N. Pleasant Street 253-3491 http://virtual-valley.com/judies

SHER BLISS DAY SPA
Special
HYBRIDS ORGANIC HAIR GLOSS
$5.00 off
• deeply conditions
• radical shine • hair smoother • color enhancing 253-2332
116 S. Amherst (on Mt. Holyoke / UMass Bus Rte.

Study Participants Needed
BIRACIAL SIBLINGS OF THE SAME BILOGICAL PARENTAGE WHO HAVE CHOSEN DIFFERENT RACIAL IDENTITIES FOR INFO CALL CLAIRE AT 413/585-5029

AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
www.amherstathletic.com
Karate • Nautilus • Step Aerobics
Lifecycles • Free Weights • Aerobics
Martial Arts • Tae Kwon Do
S. Amherst 256-0580

FRESH PASTA CO.
Homemade
FRESH PASTA, TORTELLINI, RAVIOLI & SAUCES
SOUPS, SALADS, SANDWICHES
Charcoal Grilled ENTREES
ROTISSERIE CHICKEN
~ QUICK SERVICE ~ ~ GREAT PRICES ~
TAKE OUT AVAILABLE ANYTIME!!
Open Sun. 2 - 9 p.m.
Mon. - Thurs. 11 - 9 p.m.
Fri. & Sat. until 10 p.m.
249 Main Street
Northampton 586-5875
FAX 585-5882

• Betsey Johnson
• Free People
• Bulldog
• Dollhouse
• Calvin Klein Lingerie
• Soda Blu
• XOXO
• Co-operative
• Tripp NYC
• Danskin
• Esprit
• Chinese Laundry Shoes
• Buffalo Jeans
• Roxy Quicksilver
• Raisins Swimwear
• & Lots More!
Young Hip Clothes
25 CENTRAL
150 Main Street • Northampton, Mass.
Located Downstairs at Thornes • 413-586-8017

CELEBRATE WITH US!
30th Anniversary Gala Faculty Showcase Concert
Department of Music &
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST
TICKETS:

	General Public	Students Children Elders
Rows A-K	$15	$12
All other rows	$10	$8

May be purchased at the Fine Arts Center Box Office 413-545-2511 or at Bowker Auditorium on January 31
14 ARTISTS PERFORMING SOLOS AND CHAMBER MUSIC, CLASSICAL AND JAZZ
SATURDAY, JANUARY 31
8PM · BOWKER AUDITORIUM
Co-Sponsored by: 88.5 WFCR, WFCR 1430am, WRNX 100.9FM, DAILY COLLEGIAN

New Year's with Giuliani

Brian Schwartzman

The large majority of my New Year's Eves in this world have not been particularly memorable. I remember playing Atari until two in the morning at my cousin's house, and standing at the Lincoln Memorial while I drove with my family back from Florida, and two years ago I celebrated New Year's in Tel Aviv — a place which doesn't celebrate the holiday.

Otherwise, I have always regarded New Year's as just another day, an arbitrary date framed by mankind. After all many of us come from traditions which have a different calendar system entirely. Growing up in New York City I did not develop the healthiest notions of New Year's. Namely, hundreds of thousands of people obnoxiously drinking their way through the subway system to the stop nearest Times Square that wasn't blocked off by the police. So when I discovered I was receiving visitors who were making their maiden voyage to the Big Apple, I was unsure of how to give them a genuine New York New Year's.

This is where luck comes in with a capital "L." A friend of mine from high school calls me up with some good news: his uncle, who works for the Guiliani administration, was able to get us tickets to the Mayor's New Year's Eve party.

Now, forget about politics, forget about dress codes, I had the opportunity to bring my friends to an all-you-can eat/drink party just next to the ball in Times Square, so I'm taking them. The sub-freezing temperatures did not extinguish the hysteria on 6th Avenue as I watched my friends closely thinking they might get lost (yet they somehow maneuvered through the crowds like native New Yorkers.) So get this, we had to show special passes just to get down the side street where the entrance to the reception was. Talk about pomp and circumstances.

In Andrew Loyd Weber's musical Evita, Eva Peron describes high society and politics saying, "It never impressed me at all." Speak for yourself, girl, I was plenty impressed. This was a big shindig; not only was it a New Year's Eve party, but the Mayor was being inaugurated the next morning, and New York City was celebrating its centennial (Effective New Years Day, 1898, Brooklyn, Queens, Richmond and the Northern Bronx came under the jurisdiction of New York City).

I did not mind being underdressed amongst evening gowns and tuxedos, nor did I mind standing on the dance floor (which was mc'd by radio personality Cousin Brucie) with my down jacket because the coat check line was two hours long. My high school friend exclaimed "We partying with high class women now!"

I certainly would not have recognized the players in New York City politics, but I did see Colin Quinlyn, Norm Macdonald's replacement on Saturday Night Live's "Weekend Update." On the way to the bathroom I pointed out casually to one of my guests, "Hey there's the mayor," as if I saw him everyday. Actually I was introduced to him four years ago in a Queens bagel shop, but I did not feel the need to remind him. Instead I yelled out in an intoxicated with power sort of way "Yo Rudy!"

So imagine it, half a million screaming people crammed in one of New York's most famous places anticipating the event, while slowly going numb in the extremities. Us folks in the party however, were quite toasty. When midnight approached we went outside and stood in a barricaded clearing set aside us, apart from the masses. When the ball fell, we were all together in spirit.

The seconds after midnight burst with a short elated joy which is difficult to express. The limelight skyline rained with a mass of confetti, falling on the celebration (You would have thought the Goodell Takeover ended or something).

When the sentiments died down, we went back inside and were served hot chocolate. Soon after my high school friend says to me as we sat off the effects of the open bar, "This is really exciting, it's like the New Year's starting off really well, and not too many things start well for me."

Is this all Tom Foolery? (I just heard that expression for the first time a few weeks ago.) Did half a million people flock to Times Square because they were sheep, doing so because Dick Clark and multimillion dollar corporations said it was a good idea? Should one of resolutions have been not to let this enlarge out heads? Was our dumb luck simply that, was it presumptuous of my friend to take this experience as an omen of hope?

Maybe, or maybe the fact that so many people get so excited is a celebration of life, a ritual of anticipation towards the future, and not just thousands of bumbling idiots getting wasted? I don't know what the truth is, but I choose to believe the second option.

Bryan Schwartzman is a Collegian columnist.

Paltrow slides into literary films

By John Horn
Associated Press

PARK CITY, Utah — Jane Austen, Charles Dickens, William Shakespeare, Dorothy Parker — by the time Gwyneth Paltrow is done acting, she'll have crossed paths with every great writer.

In an era where most fast-rising actors are chasing fat paychecks and expensive, audience-pandering blockbusters, Ms. Paltrow is moving in the opposite direction: She'd much rather make small movies with literary roots.

Ms. Paltrow's Sliding Doors, a story of a woman's romantic predicaments, was selected as the opening night film for the prestigious Sundance Film Festival in this mountain resort. By the end of January, she will be seen in Great Expectations, a complete and modern retelling of the Dickens classic. Next up is Shakespeare in Love, a highbrow script by playwright Tom Stoppard about the Bard's writing of Romeo and Juliet.

"The kind of film that I like to perform in has its own kind of audience," Ms. Paltrow says. "They're not for everybody."

In between all the acting jobs, Ms. Paltrow is busy reading John Krakauer's Into the Wild, having recently finished Frank McCourt's Angela's Ashes.

"I love to read," she says. "It's kind of like making your own movie in your mind."

The daughter of television producer Bruce Paltrow and actress Blythe Danner, Ms. Paltrow's biggest role to date was as the title character in Jane Austen's Emma. She also appeared in Seven, The Pallbearer, Jefferson in Paris, Malice and Mrs Parker and the Vicious Circle.

While not based on a well-known book, Sliding Doors is a typical choice by Ms. Paltrow. She was being wooed by "really high-budget, really high-profile" movies, but was more attracted to the Sliding Doors premise, even though its writer and director, Peter Howitt, had never made a movie before.

Set in London, Ms. Paltrow plays Helen, an English public relations executive fired from her job. The film offers two parallel stories based on whether or not Helen catches a subway home. If she does, she'll find her boyfriend having sex with another woman. If she misses the train, she'll simply find, with much less shock, that her boyfriend isn't right for her.

Consequently, Ms. Paltrow must perform two parts concurrently, and the audience has to pay attention to what's happening to whom when.

"It's a low-budget film and it has an independent sensibility, in that it has its own ideas, its own rhythms, its own point of view," Ms. Paltrow says. "It has an edge. It doesn't pander to audience expectations or their intellectual shortcomings. If you trust the film, you will be rewarded. But you have to keep on your toes."

Like many who take filmmaking seriously, Ms. Paltrow worries about moviegoers' sophistication. Audiences don't want difficult subject matter or tricky narratives, and producers want everybody to like their movies. So just as tastes get dumber, so, too, do the movies.

Research audiences for Sliding Doors were confused by a perfectly obvious scene in a restaurant, so the film's makers digitally added a sign outside the restaurant so even the least attentive moviegoer could follow along and eat popcorn at the same time.

"It is sad but it's not surprising," Ms. Paltrow says. "Look at what people read and what people watch: it's all kind of mindless — this massive homogenization of culture."

Even a classic movie such as The Red Balloon doesn't appeal to some children anymore, Ms. Paltrow says — today's youngest people can't stand to see the balloon popped.

Like Sliding Doors, Great Expectations is also interested in examining relationships both troubled and blessed.

Ms. Paltrow stars opposite Ethan Hawke as Estella, a young woman more interested in using people than loving them. Hawke plays painter Finnegan Bell, and Anne Bancroft co-stars as Estella's eccentric guardian, Ms. Dinsmoor.

"It's something that everybody knows something about," Ms. Paltrow says of the underlying love stories behind both Great Expectations and Sliding Doors.

"If you've ever had your heart broken, you remember and connect with (the two films) so palpably. But out of heartbreak always comes the most interesting evolutions, the most interesting changes: When you wake up and say, 'I will never make those mistakes again. I will never make the same choices'."

With people talking about her acting life and not her personal life (she recently broke up with actor Brad Pitt), Ms. Paltrow feels relieved.

"I really had a lot of trepidation — I thought it was going to be a blood bath," she says of talking to reporters for the first time in months. "But people only want to talk about my work and about the subject of my films."

LAUREN ROSATI \ COLLEGIAN

Tickle the ivories

The Fine Arts Center at the University of Massachusetts will host a variety of programming this season, from music and dance to theater and film. For information on upcoming events, please call (800) 999-UMAS.

Television flounders miserably

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press

NEW YORK — It's too bad the new year doesn't come with a warranty. After just three weeks, 1998 is on the blink. TV-wise, anyway. What else can we conclude when ratings are soaring for the lowlife "Jerry Springer Show"? And this, when trash-talk supposedly is out and that nice "Rosie O'Donnell Show" is in!

And what else can we conclude when President Clinton, no less, taped a "Springer"-worthy TV appearance last weekend? Well, actually, it was a behind-closed-doors legal deposition for that pesky Paula Jones' sexual harassment lawsuit. But picture the possibilities: "I'm the Prez and She Says I Hit on Her!" ... next "Jerry."

Oprah Winfrey, the queen of daytime talk, has her own legal problems. Last week she took the stand in Texas cattle country, where she was sued for her comments about mad cow disease.

No stranger to courtrooms, O.J. Simpson was interviewed a couple weeks back on ESPN, comparing himself to Jesus and Job, then impiously declaring, "I feel I got screwed big-time in this case."

And don't forget veteran newsman David Brinkley. Vowing to continue speaking "straight and true," he has re-introduced himself at age 77 as a commercial pitchman for Archer Daniels Midland, the agribusiness giant with a crooked past. (In 1996, the corporation paid $100 million in price-fixing fines.) Say good night, David.

In the opening days of 1998's Bloopers, Bleeps and Blunders, NBC, too, was a major player.

The network waited until after "Saturday Night Live" returned from its holiday hiatus, and just before network brass faced reporters at TV's semi-annual "critics' tour," to bounce Norm Macdonald as mock-anchor of "Weekend Update." So perfectly positioned, a one-day story was inflated to a press free-for-all.

"Censorship!" wailed Macdonald's defenders. "The network weasels are trampling on the creative process!" You'd have thought Tom Brokaw had been yanked from the real-life "Nightly News" anchor desk in mid-sentence.

Of course, NBC has bigger troubles than Norm Macdonald's

Turn to TELEVISION, page A11

■ television

continued from page A10

vexed fans. Socked with Jerry Seinfeld's Christmas Day decision to end his sitcom after this season, NBC is in a tizzy to replace the truly irreplaceable.

Maybe the answer to the network's Thursday-at-9 prayers lies in an inspiring new show based on Microsoft titan Bill Gates, already a partner with NBC in its MSNBC cable and online venture. The sure-to-be-Must-See "Touched by a Bill" would be about a lovable software nerd who wants to save the world by buying it.

Would anybody watch? Are you kidding? Gates could bundle the show with your local water supply. You'd watch, or die of thirst. That's a joke, folks.

In fact, the year's biggest programming news from the Big Four networks has centered on their multi-billion-dollar buys of NFL football rights (by ABC, CBS and Fox, that is) — and how, this time, NBC lost out.

"The NFL is the only solid ground in a very scary swamp," Fox Sports president David Hill said last week, in a telling indication of how dimly the networks have come to view their prospects for generating mass-appeal entertainment. How sports, whatever the cost, is the only thing they really trust.

It seems that, increasingly, the networks have conceded that their few smash-hit series — like "Seinfeld," "ER," "The X-Files" — are divine accidents. And they have rededicated themselves to thwarting future accidents in a surefire way: by jamming inspiration into pat recipes.

How else to explain NBC's "Jenny," starring former MTV "It" girl Jenny McCarthy in a sitcom devoid of any creative chemistry other than the leading lady's silicone implants? And what about "Dellaventura," a CBS drama best described as Sam Spade meets Chef Boyardee? Mercifully, both of these freshman series were cancelled last week.

What's next? Don't underestimate the networks' ability to focus on ratings strategy at the expense of entertainment value; or to dwell on whose trees are taller while the forest burns.

But 1998 has just begun. Due to rise from TV's trembling swamp later this year, if only for a glimpse: a revival of "Fantasy Island."

■ Megadeath

continued from page A9

tication. The highlight of the set was a cover of the Black Sabath tune "Symptom of the Universe."

Coal Chamber was a blend of Korn and Marilyn Manson, supported by interesting bass lines and drum beats; the music fluctuated between ground breaking and sheer noise.

COURTESY MOUNT HOLYOKE COLLEGE ART MUSEUM

The power of art

This poster is an example of some posters brought back by American volunteers who served in the Spanish Civil War (1936) as members of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade. These posters are on display at the Mount Holyoke College Art Museum through March 13.

DON'T BE LEFT OUT IN THE COLD GET ON THE BUS

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
922 Campus Center
545-1995 Call Today!

COME SEE WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT...
SHAB
Gain Experience in Administrative Aspects of Health Care
Come join the Student Health Advisory Board
Informational meeting:
Wed. Feb. 11 & 25, 5:30 -6:30pm
University Health Services Rm. 304
For more info call Tamara at the Health Education Office 577-5181

THE FINE ARTS CENTER SERIES
TICKETS ONLY $5 FOR FIVE COLLEGE STUDENTS
HARMONIC CONVERGENCE
SAINT LOUIS SYMPHONY
HANS VONK, CONDUCTOR
HILARY HAHN, VIOLIN
One of the world's premiere orchestras and one of its youngest and most gifted soloists perform Prokofiev's Violin Concerto. Also on the program is Harbison's Symphony No. 1 and Brahms' Symphony No. 1. A harmonic convergence not to be missed!
SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 8PM, CONCERT HALL
PRESENTED WITH THE GENEROUS SUPPORT OF FIRST MASSACHUSETTS BANK, THE DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE, AND WFCR 88.5FM
GREAT AMERICAN THEATER
TRINITY REPERTORY COMPANY IN
FIRES IN THE MIRROR
BY ANNA DEVEARE SMITH
Rhode Island's Tony Award-winning theater presents a consummate play for our times, called by the New York Times, "Quite simply the most compelling and sophisticated view of urban racial and class conflict that one could hope to encounter."
TUESDAY & WEDNESDAY
FEBRUARY 10 & 11, 8PM
BOWKER AUDITORIUM
STAR SAXOPHONE
GARY LOUIE
A rising star in the music galaxy, alto saxophone virtuoso Gary Louse has performed at Lincoln Center, Jordan Hall, and the Kennedy Center, among many other world-class venues.
"Without a doubt, an astonishing player..." The LA Times
THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 8PM
BOWKER AUDITORIUM
A THOMAS F. PARKER YOUNG ARTIST COMMUNITY RESIDENCY
Call 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS for tickets
Visit our Website at www.umass.edu/fac/fac.html
THE FINE ARTS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST
CONNECT WITH YOUR CENTER!

PERFORMING ARTS DIVISION
MUSIC
ACTING
DANCE
REGISTRATION DATES: FEBRUARY 2 - 13, 1998
CALL: PAD (413) 545-0519
Corner of Fearing & N. Pleasant St. #208

AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
www.amherstathletic.com
Kickboxing • Boot Camp • Weights • Cardio Machines • Aerobics • Personal Training • Nutritional Counseling
S. Amherst
256-1261

EMERGENCY MEDICAL TRAINING
•by Human Services Training Consultants, Inc.
•Part Time Evening
•Classes start February 9, 1998
•Call UMASS, Continuing Education at 545 - 0474

spring break fever
Need a break?
Cheap tickets Great advice Nice people
Ft Lauderdale $178
Cancun $304
Orlando $178
Los Angeles $355
Council Travel
STUDENT TRAVEL SERVICES: Connect to International Educational Exchange
44 Main Street
Amherst
(413) 256-1261

Welcome Back Party for College Students
UPSTAIRS
ANIMAL HOUSE DANCE PARTY
Sponsored by Bud Lite & Myer's Bar & Grill
FRI. JAN. 30
All 18+
Up & Down
Same Cover
GET $1 OFF
DOWNSTAIRS
ORANGE CRUSH
REM & 80S TRIBUTE BAND
Sponsored by Pete's Wicked Winter Brew
10 Pearl St • Northampton, MA
(413) 584-7771
Pearl Street NIGHTCLUB

COMPUTER ENGINEERING • COMPUTER SCIENCE • PHYSICS • CHEMICAL ENGINEERING
MATH • ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING • MECHANICAL ENGINEERING • BUSINESS ANALYSIS
TAKE TECHNOLOGY TO THE NTH POWER.
When something is too extreme for words, it's to the Nth degree. And that's the level of technology you'll experience at Raytheon.
Raytheon has formed a new technological superpower–Raytheon Systems Company, composed of four major technological giants: Raytheon Electronic Systems, Raytheon E-Systems, Raytheon TI Systems and Hughes Aircraft. The new Raytheon Systems Company is driving technology to the limit. And we're looking for engineers who want to push the envelope. Break new ground. Make their mark.
At Raytheon, you'll take technology–and your career–to the highest possible level. You'll take it to the Nth. We'll be visiting your campus soon. Contact your career placement office now to schedule an interview, or check out our website at www.rayjobs.com. If you are unable to meet with us, please send your resume to: Raytheon Staffing, P.O. Box 655 474, MS-201, Dallas, TX 75265. We have many exciting opportunities available and we would like to talk to you.
Internet: www.rayjobs.com • E-mail: resume@rayjobs.com
U.S. citizenship may be required. We are an equal opportunity employer
Raytheon
EXPECT GREAT THINGS

PIZZA
PAPA JOHN'S®
331 Russell Street, Hadley
5 8 6 - 7 2 7 2
Welcome Back
Carry-out Special
NOW ONLY $3.99 PLUS TAX
Large Cheese Pizza
(Offer expires February 15, 1998)
NEW HOURS OF OPERATION
Sunday - Wednesday 11am - 1am
Thursday 11am - 2am
Friday & Saturday 11am - 3am
LARGE ONE-TOPPING PIZZA DELIVERED $6.98
Offer expires 5/31/98 • Not Valid with any other offer • Valid only at participating locations • Customer pays all applicable sales tax • Additional toppings extra
LARGE MEATS PIZZA DELIVERED $9.98
Offer expires 5/31/98 • Not Valid with any other offer • Valid only at participating locations • Customer pays all applicable sales tax • Additional toppings extra
PAPA'S CHOICE 1 LG UP TO 5 TOPPINGS DELIVERED $9.98
Offer expires 5/31/98 • Not Valid with any other offer • Valid only at participating locations • Customer pays all applicable sales tax • Additional toppings extra

Minutemen win seven straight over winter break

Basketball stands undefeated at home and in Atlantic 10

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's basketball team is riding a seven-game winning streak, including five straight to start the Atlantic 10 docket.

Now at 13-5 (5-0 A-10) and with a game against lowly conference foe Virginia Tech (Jan. 24) to finish out the winter break, the Minutemen are poised to crack the Top 25 and make a run at their seventh straight NCAA tournament.

Here's a brief look at the fortunes of UMass over a break in which it went 9-2.

UMass 88, Davidson 62 — The Wildcats could only stand by and watch UMass big men Tyrone Weeks and Lari Ketner in action at Davidson on Jan. 22. They certainly couldn't stop them. Weeks chipped in with 16 points and 12 rebounds, while Ketner matched his teammate's rebound total and pocketed 14 points as well.

To make matters worse for Davidson, which was led by Chadd Holmes' 12 points, Charlton Clarke and Ajmal Basit also reached double digit scoring marks (15 and 10, respectively).

With the win, UMass moved to seven straight wins, the longest streak in coach Bruiser Flint's tenure.

UMass 62, St. Bonaventure 50 — On Jan. 19, the Minutemen took down the ever-improving Bonnies in the William D. Mullins Center. The Bonnies were coming off their upset of No. 22 Rhode Island, 86-81, giving the Rams their first conference loss. In the process, UMass took over sole possession of first place in the A-10 East.

Monty Mack led the offensive charge for the Minutemen, scoring 13 points despite 4-for-15 shooting (1-for-7 from 3- point land). Ketner was triple-teamed throughout and managed just six points, but hauled in 12 boards and blocked five shots.

Little-used small forward Chris Kirkland staged a coming- out party at the Bonnies' expense, scoring a career-high 11 points off the UMass bench. Rashaan Palmer led the St. Bonaventure with a game-high 19 points.

UMass 62, Fordham 46 — Last season Ketner set a UMass Mullins Center record with 16 rebounds against Fordham. In '96, former standout guard Edgar Padilla had a Mullins best 10 assists against the Rams.

No Mullins marks were set on Jan. 17, but sophomore Mike Babul set a personal record, scoring a career-high 13 points to push UMass to its fifth consecutive win.

Clarke led the way for the Minutemen with 17 points and three assists. Bevon Robin, Clarke's counterpart at point guard, paced the Rams with 11 points, four rebounds and two assists.

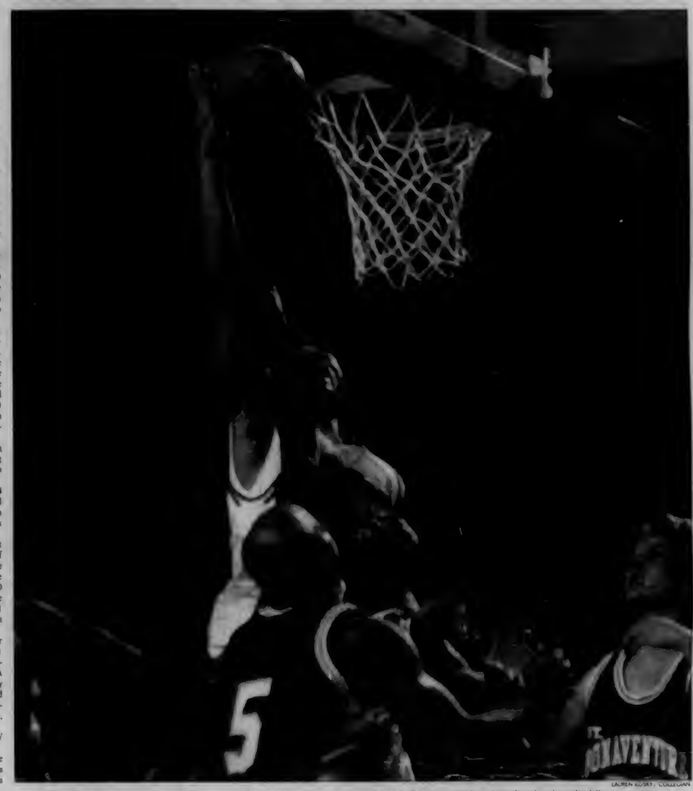
UMass 68, UNC-Charlotte 62 (OT) — The Minutemen jumped out to a quick 11-1 lead, but had to rally from a 10- point second-half deficit to pull out the overtime victory over the 49ers on Jan. 15.

Charlotte outscored the Minutemen 31-17 after the preliminary UMass spurt, but was held to 20 points on 7- for-25 shooting in the second half as the Minutemen crawled out from a 42-32 hole to force overtime.

Tied, 52-52, Mack scored the first four points of the extra period to distance the Minutemen from the 49ers. Mack finished with 12 points despite being shut down for most of the game. Ketner had 15 points, nine rebounds and four blocks and helped Weeks (nine points, 15 rebounds) hold UNCC star DeMarco Johnson in check (10 points on 5-for- 18 shooting).

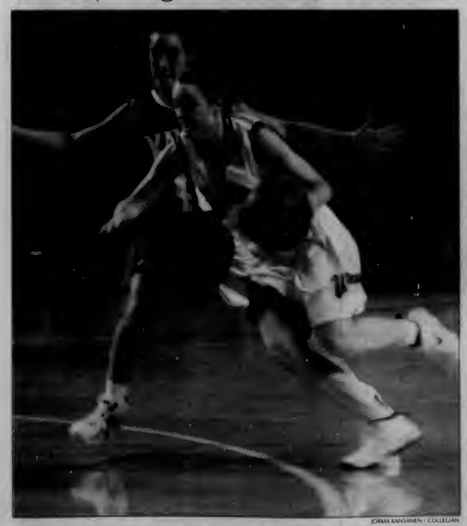
Kelvin Price netted a game-high 16 points and 18 rebounds, taking advantage of the attention paid to Johnson.

UMass 79, George Washington 48 — Led by Ketner's 21 points and nine rebounds, the Minutemen destroyed the Colonials in front of a raucous 9,493 at Mullins on Jan. 10.



With 11 minutes left in the first half, Mack (19 points) drained one of his five 3-pointers to make the score 22-12. From that point on, the Minutemen never led by less than 10 points and they went into halftime with a 40-25 lead. For the last 11 minutes of the game, the Minutemen led by at least 25 points.

Highly-touted center Alexander Koul rarely got his hulking 7-foot-1 frame off the bench due to foul trouble, but when he did the seven NBA scouts in attendance were probably not impressed anyway. Koul scored six points, had one rebound and committed five turnovers in 15 minutes, playing straight up against Ketner.



Ketner was double-teamed by GW even when Koul was in.

Yegor Mescheriakov led the Colonials with 11 points, but was held in check by Mike Babul's tremendous defensive effort.

Turn to WRAP, page 57

LAUREN KORY / COLLEGIAN
Lari Ketner has provided a strong inside presence for the Massachusetts men's basketball team over the winter break, when the Minutemen won seven straight.

Career-highs fuel Minutewomen over break

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN
Alison MacFarland posted a career-high 24 points as the Minutewomen beat St. John's to start their winter break.

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

The winter break has been one of growing pains for the Massachusetts women's basketball team. The Minutewomen have volleyed back and forth between wins and losses for their first four games, and finished 4-5 (not including the team's late-break Philadelphia road swing. Results will be in tomorrow's Collegian).

The following is a recap of UMass' wintersession games.

Fordham 62, UMass 58 — Kathy Coyner pocketed a career-high 15 points when the Minutewomen travelled to the Bronx on Jan. 18, but Fordham proved to be too strong.

Both teams scored four players in double figures, with Malyssa Thorngren taking the reigns for the Lady Rams. Thorngren pocketed 17 points and added nine assists.

The Minutewomen were not without their chances. They led by one after a back-and-forth first half, but came out of the locker room cold. After failing to connect on a shot until 14:43 remained in the game, Fordham had taken control.

Tex Kraft matched Coyner's 13, while Sabriya Mitchell and Yolands Raysode added 12 and 11, respectively.

Xavier 60, UMass 49 — At the William D. Mullins Center Jan. 15, Kraft led UMass with 17 points and seven rebounds. Xavier, though, relied on the strength of Connie Hamberg and Jennifer Philips. Hamberg scored 19, and Philips chipped in with 13 points and six rebounds.

Alison MacFarland had 15 points and Kara Trent added five assists in the loss.

St. Joseph's 64, UMass 63 — In what could have been the most exciting contest the Mullins Center has seen this year, Hawk Angela Zampella connected for 27 points on Jan. 11.

More impressive however than her point total, or even the heart-stopping three-pointer to win the game with 2.7 seconds remaining, was the fact that the sophomore, who had only taken over the starting point guard duties 11 games previous, connect-

Turn to WOMEN'S HOOP, page 58

Changes needed if hockey is to make it to postseason

Jorma Kansanen

Out of the few experiences I had with the Massachusetts hockey team over intersession, due to their travelling schedule, one weekend really struck deep into my soul.

I returned the night of Jan. 16 at the William D. Mullins Center — and a conference tilt against fellow Hockey East cellar dweller Merrimack College — and that hazy feeling of "home" enwrapped my psyche like a warm winter blanket.

I returned to the place which I called "home" during my own playing days in the greatest sport in the world...

The penalty box.

Reassuming my role as the

Turn to POSTSEASON, page 59

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN
The UMass hockey team struggled through a rough wintersession.

Whipple takes reins as new football coach

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts football program, fresh off its worst season in 44 years, is hoping the road back to respectability starts by changing everything.

Well, almost everything.

UMass, long known for its traditional run-oriented offense, decided its future lies in the passing game by naming Brown coach Mark Whipple as the new head coach of the Minutemen on Dec. 16.

Whipple, whose Brown team set an Ivy League record for passing yards — 318 ypg — in 1997, has promised to open up the offense. Whipple said he will cater somewhat to his personnel, which includes only one quarterback — junior Jeff Smith — with game experience and a stable of capable running backs, but the offense will be similar to the pass- happy style he ran at Brown.

But the hiring of Whipple, a coach without Division I-A experience, seemingly puts the slowly dying aspirations of a move up to I-A to rest. Last year's disappointing 2-9 campaign left UMass worrying about fixing on-the-field concerns first, according to athletic director Bob Marcum, and Whipple said that although a possible move was discussed in the interview process, it was not a priority.

"The goal for myself and the goal for our team will be to take this program to a [I-AA] national championship," Whipple said.

Whipple's resume lists successful stints in his first two head coaching jobs. The 40-year-old Whipple has been a head coach since 1988, when he took over the job at Division II New Haven. Whipple turned the Chargers into a national powerhouse by employing a wide-open attack, one that saw New Haven ranked in the Top 5 nationally in both 1992 and 1993. While at New Haven, his Chargers earned the title "Best Offense in College Football" by Sports Illustrated in 1993.

Whipple spent the last four seasons at Brown, where he racked up a 23–17 record. He led Brown to its first winning season since 1987 in his rookie campaign. Last season Brown went 6–4, setting school and Ivy League records for total offense at 474.3 yards per game. Whipple, who started at quarterback for the Bears in 1977 and 1978, compiled a 13–5 record running the Brown offense.

Whipple says he is excited at the chance of restoring the tradition of UMass football. He said Massachusetts has the necessary resources to contend for an A-10 and national championship in the near future, and should be able to recruit well in a state Whipple called "the best in the northeast".

"I'm excited to be associated with a school like UMass that has such a storied football history, and that is also one of the top all-around athletic programs in the nation," Whipple said.

Whipple inherits a program coming off its worst campaign since 1953. After losing 15 seniors following 1996's 6–5 season, former coach Mike Hodges' inexperienced squad hobbled to a 2–9 record that included a 1–5 record at McGuirk Stadium and four losses by more than 30 points.

If he is to revamp the offense, Whipple's first priority will be finding a quarterback in spring practice. Whipple has said the job will not be by committee, that he'll pick a starter and stick with him. In 1997 Anthony Catterton started the last six games after quarterback Jeff Smith was pulled by Hodges following a 28-10 home loss to UNH. Smith and Ed Campbell appear to be the top two candidates for the job.

Among the main personnel returning is senior linebacker Khari Samuel, who was a finalist for the Buck Buchanan award last season as the best defensive player in I-AA. Also returning is sophomore tailback Marcel Shipp and a receiving corps that will have more depth with the return of sophomores Torey Hamilton and Raphael Quinn, who red- shirted in 1997.

Whipple hires assistants; Iverson tabbed with honor

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Football assistants named

New Massachusetts football coach Mark Whipple tapped his former school for several assistant coaches and has finalized his new staff with the new additions.

Keith Dudzinski, Mike Cassano, Mark Michaels, Don Brown, Paul Gorham have been named to new positions. Whipple should finalize his coaching staff soon.

Duzinski, who worked under Whipple for four years at Brown, will serve as the defensive line coach. At Brown his defense held opponents to 194 points in the 1997 (an average of 19.4 points per game). Prior to his Brown days, Duzinski also worked under Whipple at New Haven.

Cassano also worked with Whipple at Brown and will be UMass' new secondary coach. At Brown, Cassano was the assistant running backs coach, where his players set Ivy League and school records for total offense.

Michaels will coach the linebackers at UMass, after moving from the same position at Brown. Michaels, who also worked under Whipple at New Haven, was the 1985 Yankee Conference co-Defensive Player of the Year and was signed as a free agent by the Phoenix Cardinals in 1986 before he began coaching.

Brown, who served as Whipple's defensive coordinator for the past two years, has moved into the same position at UMass. In addition to the Bears' 19.4 ppg allowed, Brown's defense picked off a school-record 28 passes last year.

Gorham has been named the recruiting coordinator/offensive line coach for UMass. Gorham, who served at Brown for four years and at New Haven for six, developed two Bear first-team All-Ivy League offensive linemen. He was also instrumental in recruiting Brown's first Ivy Player of the Year.

Iverson named to All-America team

Senior women's soccer defender Erica Iverson was named to the NSCAA/UMBRO All-America first team, the first such honor in her

Turn to COACHES, page S9

Do you like snow? Ski on down to the Collegian and write for Sports!
Maybe you dislike snow? Why not park yourself in the newsroom and write for Sports!
See Casy Kane — she likes snow

Coming April 25 and 26
UMass UMass UMass UMass UMass
A UMass tradition
new balance
Haigis Hoopla VIII
APRIL 1998
For Tournament and volunteer information call 545-5689
Look for registration forms in early March new england's largest college daily

17,000 copies
1997 Hockey
your source for : news, sports arts & living editorial/opinion classifieds comics horoscope t.v. listings & much, much more!
read the collegian

AEROBICS
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
• Classes Daily
• Certified Instructors
• Suspended Wood Floor
• Area's Largest Room
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst, 256-0080

DESIGN SUPPLY
ART STUDIO SUPPLIES
AT THE TOWN COMMON
20%

College Pro Computers welcomes you back
FREE Diagnostic and Cleaning for your Computer
Upgrade Special — CD-ROM, Sound Card and Speakers Starting at $99 (parts only)
Special Blowout Price — 486 computer : 3.5" Drive • Mouse • Keyboard • Color VGA Monitor • 8 meg RAM $339
We specialize in new and used systems at all price levels.
584-8807 • Ric, Hadley

Intimacies
Sex toys, books, gifts, games, romantic stuff and more in a safe, comfortable, fun atmosphere.
Closed Mondays
Tues, Wed, Fri, Sat 10 - 6
Thurs 10 - 9
Sun 12 - 5
28 Center Street • Northampton, MA 582-0709 (V/TTY)
http://www.intimaciesonline.com

AWARD WINNING LOCAL SERVICE
• Full Service Autobody Insurance Approved
• Mass. State Inspection Station #3243
• Fine Selection of New and Used Cars & Trucks
• Ask about our FREE 18 point maintenance check
• Full Selection of genuine GM Goodwrench parts.
PAIGE'S Amherst Chevrolet Geo
DICKINSON ST • BETWEEN RT 9 & MAIN ST • 253-3444

For Fast Easy Delivery Call 256-[illegible]
Back by popular demand: Specials running Monday - Thursday!
1 Large Cheese Pizza $6.95
PLUS 10 Free Buffalo Wings
Must Mention Ad When Ordering!
Any Large 1 Topping $7.50
Any Calzone $4.00
Delivery Only. Not Valid in Restaraunt
Offer Expires 3/31/98

What's cheaper than a card?
Healthier than candy?
Comes in lots of colors?
Can be funny, cute or sexy?
CONDOMGRAMS!
Send one to that special someone.
Campus Center - 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.
Monday - February 9
Wednesday - February 11
Thursday - February 12
Sponsored by your Peer Health Educators
Health Education Division • University Health Services

NEW YEAR!
HAPPY N
the hatch FOOD COURT
THE COFFEE SHOP
TOC Bar & Grill
11TH FLOOR • LINCOLN CAMPUS CENTER
(413) 545-3217
Top of the Campus Restaurant
Great Food Right in the Middle of Campus
BLUE WALL
Graduate Student Lounge
Campus Center Food Services
Welcomes UMASS Students
Back to Campus

UM hockey travels tough road over winter break

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

Looking straight into the face of an early test concerning postseason playoff considerations, the Massachusetts hockey team lost a pair of close games to Merrimack College during the weekend of Jan. 16 by identical 6–4 scores.

For UMass coach Joe Mallen, it was another case of his team not being able to win another close conference game.

"We beat ourselves, especially with a series of bad goals and bad penalties," Mallen said. "We had a two-goal lead, and I thought the entire game was evenly played, but we just haven't found a way to win these kind of games."

With the two losses to the Warriors (9–12–1, 4–8 in Hockey East), the Minutemen (3–15–2, 0–10–1 HE) have now failed to register a conference win in 11 games this season — their only point coming in a 1–1 tie with Northeastern on Dec. 5. Going into the weekend of Jan. 16, both teams inhabited the bottom of the HE standings.

So, taking into account a potential spot in the HE Tournament, which begins March 12th at the campus sites of the top four teams in the standings, the hole dug by the Minutemen with these two losses is a deep one — but not bottomless in any way, shape or fashion.

To get into the postseason conference tournament, the Minutemen have to first beat Merrimack on Jan. 31 at the Volpe Complex, then win four HE games in total by the end of the season, and finally, hope the Warriors do not win another conference game. In that same mathematical vein, if Merrimack wins one more HE game, UMass will have to win five HE games in total, and so on.

In a conference race that has seen last season's cellar dweller in Northeastern take one of the top spots in the conference, the task of winning four HE games is not an unforeseeable one. However, the next month holds the toughest part of the schedule for the Minutemen with games against nationally ranked teams in Boston University, New Hampshire and Boston College — and do not forget Maine, which held a spot in the top 10 for most of the season.

A deep hole, yet not a bottomless one.

For a more in depth analysis of the Minutemen's games over intersession, here is a recap of each game (look for the recap of UMass' home-and-home series with No. 9 Boston College during the weekend of Jan. 23rd in tomorrow's Collegian):

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Bryan Fitzgerald and the UMass hockey team will have to catch fire if they are to make the Hockey East tournament

Merrimack 6, UMass 4

A bizarre night at the Volpe Complex was encapsulated with Minuteman senior Mike Gaffney scoring on his own goal at the 9:39 mark of the third period, and combined with junior Kris Porter's game-winning goal at the 3:28 mark, the Warriors took their second consecutive 6–4 win.

While Merrimack was on a power play, Gaffney circled around his net and as he dumped the puck out of the zone, his clearing pass careened off senior goaltender Brian Regan into the net for the insurance goal.

Disregarding Gaffney's unintentional error, the damage was already done because the Minutemen gave up two leads during the course of the game. The first was an early 1–0 lead off of freshman R.J. Gates' team-leading sixth goal of the season at the 3:00 mark of the first period, and the second was a 4–2 lead in the second period helped by goals from sophomore Dean Stork and freshman Jeff Turner, his first career tally in a UMass uniform.

The Minutemen continued their hot play on the man-up advantage as of late, scoring two power play goals on the night for a total of five in the home-and-home series.

Merrimack 6, UMass 4

The Minutemen's defensive zone coverage fell apart in a span of 1:21 in the third period, and the Warriors left the Mullins Center like thieves in the night with the first of their two 6–4 wins on the weekend. In the third period, sophomore Sandy Cohen netted his second goal of the game at the 1:21 mark, while senior Casey Kesselring scored 1:11 later with Cohen completing his hat trick just :10 later for the game winning push for Merrimack.

UMass did not give up, though, as two members of the new No. 1 line in freshman Kris Wallis and sophomore Jeff Blanchard got the game back to 5–4 with goals at the 5:17 and 19:29 marks respectively. The Minutemen could not gain offensive zone possession after Blanchard's goal, and senior Martin Laroche scored the empty-netter just :13 later for the final score of 6–4.

Freshman goaltender Markus Helanen started his second consecutive game in net for UMass, making 21 saves in the losing effort.

UMass 3, Air Force 0

The Minutemen recorded their first win since Nov. 15 with Helanen's first career shutout in net for UMass in a 3–0 win over the Falcons at Cadet Ice Arena in Colorado Springs. The native of Vantaa, Finland recorded 28 saves on the night, continuing his steady acclimation to Div. 1 competition from a stellar career for Jokerit of Helsinki in the Junior A League.

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Kris Wallis has helped the Minutemen find some bright spots in an otherwise dark season.

UMass dominated the pace of play in the first period, reeling off 12 shots on Falcon goalie Aaron Hatfield, while allowing only one shot on Helanen. Sophomore Nathan Sell scored first for the Minutemen at the 15:09 mark of the first period, converting on the rebound from a shot by senior Tom O'Connor.

Goals by senior Dean Campanale and Gaffney at the 4:42 and 13:47 marks of the second period respectively put an exclamation point on a big morale boosting win. The Minutemen's penalty kill unit did their job as well, holding Air Force to an 0–for–6 night.

Air Force 6, UMass 2

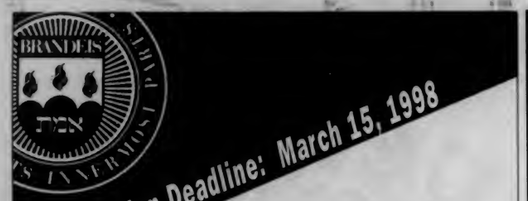
The battle between two of the three worst teams in Div. I hockey ensued on Jan. 9, with the Falcons using the strength of five goals in the final two periods to fly past the Minutemen at Cadet Ice Arena, 6–2.

UMass took a 1–0 lead on freshman Matt Smith's power play goal with assists going to Wallis and senior Brad Norton at the 16:54 mark of the first period, but five unanswered goals on Regan (18 saves) eventually spelled defeat. A goal by Norton at the 14:53 mark of the third period sliced the Air Force lead to three goals, but Falcon freshman Scott Bradley registered his first career hat trick with a goal just :10 later for the final score in another disheartening loss for the Minutemen.

Here is one warning sign as how badly the UMass offense has suffered this season without graduated seniors Rob Bonneau and Warren Norris — in Air Force's two games at the Mullins Center last season, the Minutemen outscored the Falcons by a 14–3 advantage.

Army 5, UMass 0

Simply said, beating a team by an 8–0 score the previous season is the best motivational factor for the losing team — in any sport. On Jan. 3, that is what the Black Knights seemed to use against the Minutemen at Tate Rink, skating away with a 5–0 win.



On Nov. 22, 1996, Army travelled to the Mullins Center and were demolished by a 8–0 score off of the natural hat trick by now-graduated forward Gerry Cahill in the first period, with then-junior goalie Brian Regan only having to stop 19 shots. A three-week layoff from competition looked to have its effect on UMass this season, as Regan faced 36 shots on net, and a 2–0 lead for the Black Knights evolved into three third period goals for the blowout.

A goal by Jason Choi at the 16:29 mark of the first period proved to be the eventual game-winner for Army, with Andy Lundbohm adding two goals and an assist in the winning effort.

UMass 0, Dartmouth 0 (OT)

For the first time since a 0–0 tie with Bates on Jan. 29, 1927, the Minutemen were involved in a scoreless tie, and this time it was against the Big Green at the Mullins Center on Dec. 14, 1997. The goalies in Dartmouth's Eric Almon (33 saves) and UMass' Regan (37 saves) were

Turn to HOCKEY page 59

Application Deadline: March 15, 1998

Heller Graduate School
Master of Management
M.B.A. (human services)

Complete a two-year curriculum in 15 months.

An innovative Team Consulting Project provides valuable hands-on experience.

Optional Management Concentrations in Health Care and Child, Youth, and Family Services.

Self-designed concentrations from Heller policy specialties including aging, disabilities and substance abuse.

To discuss what a Heller education can offer you, call:
Karen Cooney
Admissions Officer
781-736-3820

*Applications submitted by February 15th will receive priority in financial aid decisions.

Eid-ul-Fitri Gathering

6:00 pm January 31 '98
Campus Center, UMass

info 256-8482 : 546-0514
muslim@stuaf.umass.edu

University of Massachusetts msa Muslim Students Association

UMass men's basketball box scores

Massachusetts 82, Davidson 66
At Davidson, N.C.
Jan. 22, 1998

MASSACHUSETTS (13–5)

Mike Babul 1–2 2–2 4, Tyrone Weeks 5–9 6–8 16, Lari Ketner 5–8 4–6 14, Charlton Clarke 2–3 2–2 7, Monty Mack 5–17 4–4 15, Jonathan DePina 3–6 1–2 8, Rafael Cruz 0–0 0– 0 0, Chris Kirkland 4–7 0–0 8, Ajmal Basit 1–6 8–11 10. Totals 26–58 27–35 82.

DAVIDSON (8–9)

Mark Donnelly 3–15 3–5 10, Landry Kosmalski 2–6 2–2 6, Chadd Holmes 5–7 0–0 12, Ali Ton 1–5 4–5 7, Davor Halbauer 2–6 0–0 5, Billy Armstrong 1–4 0–0 3, David Burns 0–1 0–0 0, Rmeka Erege 4–6 1–2 9, Jeff Bergmann 0–0 0–0 0, Ben Ehong 1–2 4–4 6, Stephen Marshall 3–9 0–0 8, Brian Allenspach 0–0 0–0 0. Totals 22–61 14–18 66.

Halftime: UM, 42–29. Three-point field goals: UM, 3–8 (Mack 1–5, Clarke 1–2, DePina 1–1). D, 8–24 (Marshall 2–5, Holmes 2–3, Donnelly 1–8, Armstrong 1–3, Ton 1–2, Halbauer 1–2, Burns 0–1). Attendance: 4,417.

Massachusetts 62
St. Bonaventure 50
At William D. Mullins Center
Jan. 19, 1998

ST. BONAVENTURE (11–7, 2–4 Atlantic 10)

Rashaan Palmer 6–12 7–9 19, Terrence Durham 1–4 0–0 2, Caswell Cyrus 4–11 1–2 9, Isaac King 2–4 1–2 6, James Singleton 2–9 0–0 4, David Capers 2–5 5–8 10, Peter Van Paassen 0–1 0–0 0, Chris Lumsden 0–0 0–0 0. Totals 17–48 14–21 50.

MASSACHUSETTS (12–5, 5–0)

Mike Babul 1–3 2–2 4, Tyrone Weeks 4–7 2–2 10, Lari Ketner 3–8 0–4 6, Charlton Clarke 3–8 0–0 7, Monty Mack 4–15 4–5 15, Jonathan DePina 3–6 0–0 6, Chris Kirkland 3–7 5–6 11, Ajmal Basit 1–1 3–4 5. Totals 22–55 16–23 62.

Halftime: UM, 28–34. Three-point field goals: SB, 2–6 (King 1–3, Capers 1–3). UM, 2–11 (Mack 1–7, Clarke 1–3, Weeks 0–1). Attendance: 7,365.

Massachusetts 62
Fordham 46
At William D. Mullins Center
Jan. 17, 1998

FORDHAM (4–11, 0–5)

Alejandro Olivares 1–7 0–0 2, Maurice Curtis 5–9 3–4 9, John Pugh 4–9 0–0 8, Bevon Robin 4–11 2–2 11, Scott Harmatuk 2–8 2–2 8, Jason Harris 1–3 0–0 2, Greg Griffin 2– 5 0–0 4, Connie Mack 1–3 0–0 2. Totals 18–55 7–8 46.

MASSACHUSETTS (11–5, 4–0)

Mike Babul 6–12 1–2 13, Tyrone Weeks 5–7 0–0 10, Lari Ketner 4–5 1–3 9, Charlton Clarke 7–10 1–3 17, Monty Mack 2–9 1–1 5, Jonathan DePina 0–0 0–0 0, Ross Burns 0–1 0–0 0, Rafael Cruz 0–1 0–0 0, Andy Maclay 0–0 0–0 0, Chris Kirkland 0–1 2–2 2, Ajmal Basit 2–4 2–2 6. Totals 26–50 8– 13 62.

Halftime: UM, 26–21. Three-point field goals: F, 3–15 (Harmatuk 2–5, Robin 1–4, Olivares 0–2, Harris 0–1, Griffin 0–1). UM, 2–10 (Clarke 2–4, Mack 0–5, Babul 0–1). Attendance: 7,110.

Massachusetts 68
North Carolina-Charlotte 47
OT
At Providence Civic Center
Jan. 15

UNC–CHARLOTTE (7–6)

DeMarco Johnson 5–18 0–0 10, Versile Shaw 2–2 0–0 4, Kelvin Price 5–11 6–13 16, Sean Colston 4–16 0–1 9, Galen Young 0–5 4–4 4, Kedric Smith 1–1 0–0 2, Dalonte Hill 1–5 0–0 2, Marlon Thomas 1–2 0–0 2, Diego Guevara 4–11 3–5 13. Totals 25–69 13–21 47.

MASSACHUSETTS (14–3)

Mike Babul 1–5 0–0 2, Tyrone Weeks 2–7 5–6 9, Lari Ketner 7–13 1–1 15, Charlton Clarke 6–15 3–4 15, Monty Mack 3–11 5–8 12, Jonathan DePina 1–10 0–0 2, Chris Kirkland 3–5 0–2 6, Ajmal Basit 3–5 1–2 7. Totals 26–69 15– 23 68.

Halftime: UNC–C, 32–38. Three-point field goals: UNC– C, 3–10 (Guevara 2–3, Colson 1–5, Hill 0–1, Johnson 0–1). UM, 1–11 (Mack 1–5, Clarke 0–4, DePina 0–1, Babul 0–1). Attendance: 3,925.

Massachusetts 79
George Washington 48
At Wilhams D. Mullins Center
Jan. 10, 1998

GEORGE WASHINGTON (13–3, 2–1)

LAUREN KOVAT / COLLEGIAN

Jonathan DePina has provided a spark off the bench for the Massachusetts men's basketball team.

Antxon Iturbe 0–2 1–3 1, Yegor Mescheriakov 4–9 3–4 11, Alexander Koul 2–4 2–4 6, Darin Green 0–0 0–0 0, Shawnta Rodgers 3–14 3–4 10, Mike King 2–4 0–0 4, Rory Eyal 0–0 0–0 0, Andrei Krivtsov 1–3 0–0 3, Francisco de Miranda 1–3 2–4 4, 11. Brade 0–3 0–0 0, Daniel Soares 0–0 0–0 0, Pat Ngongba 1–3 2–2 4, Rashoed Hazzard 0–2 0–0 0, Seco Camara 1–4 2–2 5. Totals 15–51 15–23 48.

MASSACHUSETTS (9–5, 3–0)

Mike Babul 2–3 1–2 5, Tyrone Weeks 4–9 5–8 11, Lari Ketner 8–15 9–10 21, Charlton Clarke 3–8 0–0 8, Monty Mack 6–14 2–2 19, Jonathan DePina 0–1 0–0 0, Ross Burns 0–2 3–5 3, Chris Kirkland 2–6 0–0 4, Ajmal Basit 4–5 0–1 8. Totals 27–61 18–26 79.

Halftime: UM, 40–25. Three-point field goals: GW, 3–11 (Rodgers 1–5, Camara 1–3, Krivonos 1–1, Merscheriakov 0– 2). UM, 7–13 (Mack 5–8, Clarke 2–4, Burns 0–1). Attendance: 9,493.

Massachusetts 73
Fordham 55
At Rose Hill Gymnasium
Jan. 6, 1998

MASSACHUSETTS (8–5, 2–0)

Mike Babul 1–4 0–0 2, Tyrone Weeks 7–8 2–2 16, Lari Ketner 5–8 4–6 14, Charlton Clarke 5–7 2–2 9, Monty Mack 5–7 0–0 10, Jonathan DePina 5–5 0–0 10, Ross Burns 0–1 0–0 0, Rafael Cruz 1–2 0–0 2, Andy Maclay 0–1 0–0 0, Chris Kirkland 3–6 0–0 6, Ajmal Basit 2–3 0–2 4. Totals 32–52 8– 12 73.

FORDHAM (8–5, 0–2)

Greg Griffin 2–7 0–1 4, Maurice Curtis 6–8 2–5 14, John Pugh 2–5 0–0 4, Bevon Robin 5–12 6–9 18, Scott Harmatuk 1–7 6–6 9, Jason Harris 0–2 0–0 0, Alejandro Olivares 1–2 2– 2 4, Connie Mack 0–0 0–0 0, Alexander Zinkunov 0–3 2–4 2, Chris DiMascio 0–3 0–0 0, Steve White 0–0 0–0 0. Totals 17– 50 18–27 55.

Halftime: UM, 35–23. Three-point field goals: UM, 1–9 (Clarke 1–4, Mack 0–1, Burns 0–1, Cruz 0–1, Maclay 0–1, Kirkland 0–1). F, 3–13 (Robin 2–5, Harmatuk 1–3, Harris 0– 2, DiMascio 0–2, Griffin 0–1). Attendance: 2,217.

Massachusetts 72
St. Joseph's 66
At Alumni Fieldhouse
Jan. 3

MASSACHUSETTS (7–5, 1–0)

Mike Babul 2–4 2–4 6, Tyrone Weeks 3–7 4–6 10, Lari Ketner 4–7 2–3 10, Charlton Clarke 4–15 4–6 12, Monty Mack 8–15 1–2 22, Jonathan DePina 1–1 2–4 4, Chris Kirkland 0–1 0–0 0, Ajmal Basit 4–8 0–1 8. Totals 26–58 15– 33 72.

ST. JOSEPH'S (4–4, 0–1)

Duval Simmonds 3–8 0–0 6, Robert Haskins 5–9 6–6 19, Harold Raoul 2–6 7–9 11, Rashid Bey 0–1o 3–4 17, Erick Woods 4–5 2–2 10, Frank Wilkins 1–4 1–4 3, Tim Brown 0–2 0–0 0. Totals 21–50 19–25 66.

Halftime: UM, 37–27. Three-point field goals: UM, 5–8 (Mack 5–6, Clarke 0–21. SJ, 5–17 (Haskins 3–4, Bey 2–10, Brown 0–2, Simmonds 0)1). Attendance: 3,200.

Cincinnati 74
Massachusetts 66 OT
At Gund Arena, Cleveland
Dec. 27

MASSACHUSETTS (6–5)

Mike Babul 1–3 1–2 3, Tyrone Weeks 4–6 0–0 8, Ajmal Basit 3–6 2–3 6, Charlton Clarke 3–10 0–0 6, Monty Mack 7– 16 1–2 16, Lari Ketner 4–9 2–2 10, Jonathan DePina 5–12 4– 9 15, Chris Kirkland 0–1 0–0 0. Totals 27–65 10– 18 66.

CINCINNATI (7–2)

Levett 1–13 4–6 7, Bobby Brannen 9–22 14–18 32, Fletcher 1–7 0–0 2, Horton 4–7 2–4 10, Petrus 3–4 0–0 8, Jackson 0–0 0–0 0, Shawn Myrick 6–8 2–7 17. Totals 24–61 22–35 74.

Halftime: UM, 30–24. Three-point field goals: UM, 2 (Mack, DePina). C, 4 (Myrick 3, Levett). Attendance: 12,324.

Connecticut 72
Massachusetts 55
At Hartford Civic Center
Dec. 23, 1997

CONNECTICUT (10–1)

Kevin Freeman 1–6 4–9 6, Richard Hamilton 8–15 4–5 21, Jake Voskuhl 2–6 2–2 6, Ricky Moore 3–8 3–4 10, Khalid El-Amin 6–12 5–5 18, Rashamel Jones 0–2 0–0 0, Antric Klaiber 1–3 1–1 3, Albert Mouring 1–2 0–0 2, Monquencio Hardnett 2–4 0–0 4, Souleymane Wane 1–1 0–0 2, E.J. Harrison 0–0 0–0 0, Chris Crowley 0–0 0–0 0, Jeff Cybart 0– 1 0–0 0. Totals 25–60 19–26 72.

Turn to SCORES page 57

Fat Tire

Southern New England's LARGEST Burton Dealer

ALL '98 BURTON'S ON SALE NOW!

EXAMPLES:
98 Burton Specials (was $300)
98 Burton Freedom (was $430)
98 Burton A Series (was $290)
(ONLY $329 WITH BINDINGS!)
98 Burton Freestyle Bindings
(*WITH BOARD PURCHASE)

98 BOARDS
Free Harness, Burton Shoot, Satin Cap, LB Sock, and Xmas Bumper

AGGRESSIVE SKATES
Free K2, Rollerblade & Oxygen

(413) 586-0700
ROUTE 5, EASTHAMPTON, MASS

The Right Place to Be!
3 Barbers Everyday
Unisex Hair Styling

Terri

Jim

Guys & Gals Clipper Cuts
Layer Cuts Razor Cuts
Flat Tops Kids Cuts
Fades

Appointment Not Neccessary

Amherst Barbers

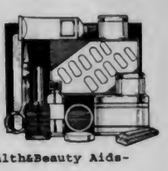
$9 & up

Tel. 253-1722
40 Main Street, Amherst, MA
(Next to Newbury Comics)

4 Barbers
Wed. to Sat

Gabe

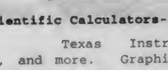
Hours: Mon- Fri, 8-5:15pm • Sat 8-4:45pm



YEAH. LIKE YOU'VE GOT TIME FOR MALL SHOPPING...

Why Bother?

At University Ustore, you can get mall pricing and selection, without the hassle!



Computers-
Systems, Hardware, Software, Cables, Printers, Supplies, Papers, Books, Disks, and more! Many at great Academic Discounts, as much as 60% below retail!
Shop, Compare, and Save!

Health&Beauty Aids-
National brands and generics. Many at or below "discount" chain store prices!

School Supplies-
Pencils, Pens, Notebooks, Tape, Files, Glue, Tacks, Staples, Paper, Memo Boards, Mailers, Index Cards, Binders, and much, much more! We'll order it if we don't have it!

Scientific Calculators-
Texas Instr., HP, and more. Graphing and standard styles!

Planners and Calendars-
Many styles: Desk, pocket, notebook, pictorial wall, and others. Many styles on Sale right now!!!

Dorm Supplies-
Lamps, Storage, Lightbulbs, Posters, Sewing Kits, Racks, Clock/Radios, Stereo Access., Hooks, Bins, and tons more!

Lab Supplies-
Locks, kits, notebooks, and more!

Art Supplies-
The Valley's best source for low-cost art supplies. The choice of area professionals! Shop, Compare, and Save!

Bags and Packs-
Great selection in our huge clothing department!

The University Ustore
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST
University Store
In the UMass Campus Center
Hours:
M-F 9 to 5 Sat. 11 to 4
(413) 545 - 2619
MasterCard, Visa, AMEX, Discover and UCard cheerfully accepted!

Without fanfare, UMass takes 3rd Classic

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

BOSTON — Ever since the Boston College and Massachusetts basketball teams renewed an old rivalry in 1995, UMass has treated the Commonwealth Classic like a personal vendetta. And for the third straight season, the Minutemen proved to fans of college basketball state-wide that they are indeed the best team in Massachusetts.

Even if it seemed like nobody cared anymore.

The skepticism haunting both the UMass basketball programs this season masked itself on Dec. 14 in Boston, where the Minutemen beat Boston College 65-57 before a half-empty FleetCenter. The crowd, officially listed at 9,218, was a far-cry from the 15,000 plus at last year's Classic and the sellout crowd that saw them No. 11 UMass beat BC in 1996. After two years of national coverage on CBS, this year's game was moved to Fox Sports New England, and the lack of interest in this natural rivalry left many scratching their heads.

But the disappointing atmosphere did little to take away what was a big early season win for the Minutemen. Coming off a near-upset of No. 3 Kansas in Allen Fieldhouse four days earlier, UMass handled the Eagles with relative ease, en route to its third Commonwealth Classic win in as many tries.

Sophomore guard Monty Mack made his homecoming one to remember by pouring in 20 points, and the Minutemen made 12-for-15 from beyond the arc that week with a 5-for- 7 performance, after sizzling the layhawks with 7-for-8. Charlton Clarke, whom Flint still swears isn't the "sharpshooter" ESPN dubbed him in promos for the Cincinnati game, symbolized the trend by burying two treys in the game's opening minutes. The second, a bank shot from the top of the key with the shot clock running down, sent the UMass crowd into a frenzy and keyed the few who made it to the FleetCenter in to the fact that this would be the Minutemen's day.

"Clarke must have thought he was still in Kansas the way he was shooting today," BC coach Al Skinner said. "UMass played with confidence, and it showed in the final score."

BC also proved to be a pivotal game for sophomore Mike Babul, who was forced into heavy playing time following Winston Smith's season-ending knee injury. Flint said the key for the small forward was to "play defense, keep balls alive and make some plays," and that's exactly what Babul did. Assigned to guard Antonio Granger, the 6-6 swingman was an offensive option for BC. Babul held him to eight points on 2-for-12 shooting. Though his numbers, two points and six rebounds in 26 minutes, weren't spectacular, after the game Flint said after that Babul did the best job of all his players.

The BC win was the first big win of the season for the Minutemen, who nearly pulled off what would have been the biggest upset of the Flint era four nights earlier in Kansas. They showed New England college basketball fans that despite the departure of names like Calipari, Camby, Padilla and Travieso — names that had seared the local hoop conscience during the glory years of the mid-'90s — UMass is still the best program in the state. And they did it with Monty Mack, Babul and Jonathan DePina — probably the top three schoolboy products the state has produced lately — all of whom played well in their homecoming.

But when all was said and done, all anyone seems to remember was how lifeless the FleetCenter was that Sunday. UMass fans did their part, accounting for as many as 6,500 of the fans in attendance, but with neither team in the Top 25 — a first in the brief history of the Commonwealth Classic — the state of Massachusetts didn't seem to care much about this one.

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Monty Mack had a career-day with 22 points when the Minutemen played at St. Joe's on Jan. 3.

Bonnies tough to beat at home

Atlantic 10 has two teams in poll in up & down year

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

St. Bonaventure is not usually the team that puts fear into the hearts of its opponents. But it soon may be. This year, the Bonnies, always considered one of the Atlantic 10's doormats, have caused a bit of a stir among its conference opponents.

St. Bonaventure shook up the A-10 on Jan. 3, when they knocked off nationally ranked Xavier at the Reilly Center in Olean, N.Y.

Then, on Jan. 17, the Bonnies tangled with visiting Rhode Island and the Rams walked away with a 86-81 loss.

St. Bonaventure is dangerous, especially on its home court, where last year the Bonnies won eight games, including ones over George Washington, Temple and Dayton.

Massachusetts has already defeated the Mustard and Brown once this year — in Amherst. The Minutemen travel to Olean for Round No. 2 on Feb. 25.

• The Bonnies could struggle for the next few weeks, however, since star Tim Winn is out with a broken ankle. The guard went down during St. Bonaventure's 64-43 loss to Temple on Jan. 11. He is expected to be out for 3-6 weeks.

• Temple celebrated a birthday recently. Legendary coach John Chaney turned 66 two weeks ago.

• There were only two Atlantic 10 teams in both The Associated Press Top 25 poll and the ESPN/USA Today Coaches' poll when the two were released on Jan. 18. In the AP poll, Xavier ranked 19th and URI settled at No. 22. The Rams stayed in the same position on the coaches' poll, while the Musketeers came in at No. 18.

• Rhode Island has seen an increase in its average attendance this year. Last year the Rams played in front of an average of 4,652 fans. This year 5,870 see them run the floor.

• Tyson Wheeler —one of the reasons for the increased fan support — has been a steady and quiet performer for Rhode Island this year. In a time when attention was heaped on the school for recruiting Lamar Odom, a high school sensation who some say is cheated on the SAT. Wheeler has been a rock at point guard. Currently, he is leading the A-10 with 6.1 assists per game.

• Odom, who was attending URI as a non-matriculating student, left the Kingston, R.I. campus two weeks before final exams last semester and failed to receive the necessary 2.4 grade point average in order to become a matriculating student. Odom will not take classes at Rhode Island in the spring semester.

• Three players have been named as the A-10 Rookie of the Week more than once this season. Fordham's Bevon Robbins, who hails from Rice High in New York — the same school as St. John's Felipe Lopez, has been a consistent performer at point guard for the Rams all season. Janis Grindstaff from Virginia Tech has also received the honor twice.

UMass' Monty Mack has actually been tabbed three times for the award. He is the only rookie to receive three thus far.

• On the Player of the Week side, only two players have received multiple honors. They were the first two of the season to be named and have taken the most recent two as well.

Xavier's James Posey and Temple's Lamont Barnes each have two citations as the league's weekly best player.

• Posey leads a strong contingent at Xavier. The Musketeers have earned their No. 19 ranking in the AP Top 25 with five players whose scoring averages are in double figures. They are the only team in the league to do so.

• Even if St. Bonaventure does not make the postseason Chris Lumsdon won't worry. The center has completed his degree in psychology in three and a half years and is enrolled in graduate classes for the spring semester. He plans to teach upon completion of his masters requirements.

• George Washinton coach Mike Jarvis is hoping his team's success in regular season tournaments pays off when it comes postseason time. The Colonials played in the Red Auerbach Colonial Classic, the Maui Invitational and the U.S. Airways Holiday Classic already this season, tourneys in which GW went 8–1.

• Xavier's Lenny Brown and Rhode Island's Tyson Wheeler are currently among the group of players eligible for the Wooden Award. The list of potential candidates is trimmed down throughout the year. Marcus Camby, who won while at UMass in 1996, is the only Atlantic 10 player to ever receive the award.

• Marriage proposals came from everywhere over the Christmas break. La Salle men's player Mike Gizzi and Sarah Haynes, who plays for the Explorer women's team, got engaged.

URI assistant coach Tommy Penders also announced his impending nuptials.

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

James Singleton and the Bonnies will likely be calling for more help since guard Tim Winn is expected to miss at least a few weeks of action.

THANH VO / COLLEGIAN

Lari Ketner has dominated the glass for UMass over the break.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT THIS GUY IS IN CLASS.

Excitement and adventure is the course description, and Army ROTC is the name. It's the one college elective that builds your self-confidence, develops your leadership potential and helps you take on the challenges of command.

There's no obligation until your junior year, and that means there's no reason not to try it out right now.

LEADERSHIP EXCELLENCE

ARMY ROTC

THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE

For details, visit the Army ROTC Building or call
545-2321/2322

Minutemen make statement in A-10 opener

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA — If there was ever a game where the Massachusetts men's basketball team needed to make a statement, the Atlantic 10 conference opener Jan. 3 at St. Joseph's was it.

The game had everything. For UMass coach Bruiser Flint, it was a chance for redemption. The former St. Joe's point guard and his Minutemen were thumped in his homecoming last season 78–63, the statement game the Hawks used to propel themselves to both the A–10 regular season and tournament titles.

For the Minutemen, it was a chance to prove that they are still an A–10 force to be reckoned with, and to get back on track after ending their "UMass World Tour '97–'98" by blowing a six–point lead with a minute to go against Cincinnati.

And sophomore guard Monty Mack? St. Joe's wasn't going to let Lari Ketner or Tyrone Weeks beat them. If UMass was going to win, Mack needed to have a hand in it.

Which is exactly what he did.

UMass made its statement, and did so in convincing fashion by beating the Hawks, 72–66, before a sold–out and very loud Alumni Fieldhouse crowd. Mack lit up the Hawks for a career–high 22 points, including 5–of–6 from three– point land. Charlton Clarke added 12 points and five assists, as the backcourt which had its growing pains in the first part of the season led UMass to a crucial win over the defending conference champions.

"This is special for me because it's my first win at home," Flint said. "And it's a good win for us because they are defending champs. The Cincinnati game taught us a lesson. We have to get back to basics, hitting foul shots, etc. Doing the things you need to do to win ballgames."

The teams battled back and forth throughout the first half, but Mack's second three gave UMass an 18–17 lead. Mack then buried a three a few minutes later to push the lead to 32–22. UMass would finish a 24–10 run to close out the half, and Mack buried a three with two seconds left on the clock to give UM a 37–27 lead at the intermission.

St. Joe's kept Mack in check most of the second half, but Ketner and Weeks stepped up their games and carried UMass the rest of the way. The Hawks cut the lead to two, 44–42, but UMass pulled away with a 14–2 run that gave them a 58–44 lead with 7:25 left, sealing the win.

"We worked hard in practice this week. This is a big win for our team," Weeks said. "Our confidence is back. We didn't play well the last two games, but we executed well today."

UMass' confidence was wavering following a brutal early– season stretch that ended with two devastating defeats to UConn and the Bearcats. After playing flat against a very good UConn team and blowing the Cinci game, Flint knew he needed a win on Hawk Hill to get his team's psyche back on track.

"We've been all over the world, and we've played some pretty good teams," Flint said. "I thought the only game we really let get away was the Cincinnati game. We really didn't want our confidence busted [today]."

The Minutemen showed their mettle by withstanding the St. Joe's run that brought the lead back to two. Instead of crumbling, they circled the wagons and put the Hawks away. In a season where UMass had yet to learn how to put a team away, they did it when they needed it most.

"They answered our run, and that's the sign of a good team," St. Joe's coach Phil Martelli said. "UMass has two staples. They guard well, and they rebound every shot. That was the difference [today]."

For Mack, the game wasn't nearly that complicated. Asked who was guarding him that blistering first half, he said "I don't know."

When asked if it mattered, the response was both quick and final.

"No."

■ scores

continued from page S5

MASSACHUSETTS (6–4)

Mike Babul 0–4 0–2 0, Tyrone Weeks 2–6 7–9 11, Lari Ketner 3–7 3–6 9, Charlton Clarke 7–17 1–2 17, Monty Mack 2–9 2–2 7, Jonathan DePina 3–5 0–0 6, Rafael Cruz 0–2 0–0 0, Chris Kirkland 0–1 0–0 0, Ajmal Basit 1–4 1–3 5. Totals 18–55 16–25 55

Halftime: UC. 34–23 Three–point field goals: UC. 3–9 (Hamilton 1–3, El–Amin 1–3, Moore 1–1)Jones 0–1. Mouring 0–1). UM. 3–12 (Clarke 2–9, Mack 1–2, Babul 0–1) Attendance: 10,797

Massachusetts 79
Colorado 68
At Las Vegas, Nevada
Dec. 20, 1997

COLORADO (4–4)

Kenny Price 4–9 0–0 10, Ronnie DeGray 2–13 4–6 8, Charlie Melvin 5–12 6–10 16, Marlon Hughes 8–13 4–5 24, Dwight Jones 0–3 0–0 0, Howard Frier 1–2 1–2 3, Will Smith 2–5 0–2 4, Ernest Renfroe 0–0 0–0 0, Jamahl Mosley 0–1 2–5 2, Aki Thomas 0–0 1–2 1. Totals 22–58 18–32 68

MASSACHUSETTS (6–3)

Mike Babul 1–3 2–2 4, Tyrone Weeks 5–7 2–2 8, Lari Ketner 8–15 1–2 17, Charlton Clarke 2–5 8–9 12, Monty Mack 5–14 0–0 21, Jonathan DePina 0–1 2–2 2, Chris Kirkland 0–0 0–0 0, Ajmal Basit 5–7 5–8 15. Totals 28–52 20–25 79.

Halftime: UM. 41–35. Three–point field goals: C. 6–10 (Hughes 4–7, Price 2–3). UM. 3–5 (Mack 3–4, Clarke 0–1). Attendance: 5,000.

Massachusetts 65
Boston College 57
At FleetCenter
Dec. 14, 1997

MASSACHUSETTS (5–3)

Mike Babul 1–3 0–0 2, Tyrone Weeks 6–14 1–1 13, Lari Ketner 2–12 0–0 4, Charlton Clarke 4–6 2–7 13, Monty Mack 8–12 2–20, Jonathan DePina 2–5 1–2 5, Chris Kirkland 0–0 0–0 0, Ajmal Basit 3–4 2–2 8. Totals 26–56 8–14 65.

BOSTON COLLEGE (6–4)

Mickey Curley 4–14 5–5 11, Antonio Granger 2–12 4–8, Kostas Maglos 3–11 2–4 20, Kenny Harley 2–4 1–1 6, Duane Woodward 3–11 2–4 10, Jonathan Beerbohm 1–2 0–0 2, Javier Rodriguez 0–1 0–1 0. Totals 21–55 12–19 57.

Halftime: UM. 33–25. Three–point field goals: UM. 5–7 (Clarke 3–5, Mack 2–2). BC. 3–12 (Woodward 2–5, Harley 1–1, Granger 0–5, Rodriguez 0–1)

■ wrap

continued from page S1

UMass 73, Fordham 55 — On Jan. 6, the Minutemen shot the lights out at Rose Hill Gymnasium (season–high .615) to easily defeat the host Rams.

The Minutemen held Fordham to a .340 shooting clip, allowing the bench to hit just 1–of–11 shots.

UMass was led by Weeks with 16 points and nine rebounds, but had a balanced scoring attack. Ketner had 14 points and nine boards; Clarke had nine points; Mack scored 10 points. Freshman point guard Jonathan DePina scored 10 points and dished out five assists in 20 steady minutes off the bench.

The Rams were led by Robin who dropped 18 points on UMass in the loss.

UMass 72, St. Joseph's 66 — (See related story, page B– 7.) In both teams' first A–10 contest, the Minutemen got 22 points from Mack and 20 points and 13 boards from the Philadelphia connection (Ketner and Weeks) to ground the Hawks in Philly on Jan. 3.

Forward Robert Haskins led the Hawks with 19 points and eight rebounds.

Cincinnati 74, UMass 66 (OT) — The Bearcats outscored the Minutemen 12–4 in overtime after rallying to tie the game in the final two minutes of regulation to defeat UMass at the Colorado Rock 'n' Roll Shootout in Cleveland on Dec. 27.

Cincinnatti forward Bobby Brannen scored a game–high 32 points and pulled down 12 rebounds to pace the 'Cats. Mack had 16 points and four assists for the Minutemen.

Mack's former South Boston teammate DePina bagged a career–high 15 points and Weeks chipped in with eight points and 13 rebounds.

Ajmal Basit started in place of Ketner and contributed eight points, seven rebounds and a career–best six blocks. Ketner came off the bench for 10 points, eight rebounds and three blocks.

Connecticut 72, UMass 55 — (See related story, page B– 7.) The Huskies ran away from the Minutemen with a 14–3 spurt in the first half to capture their second MassMutual "U–Game" in as many tries on Dec. 23.

UConn swingman — and NBA prospect — Richard Hamilton led all scorers with 21 points. Clarke led the Minutemen, who shot .327 from the field, with 17 points.

UMass 79, Colorado 68 — Minuteman sixth man Basit came off the bench for 15 points, seven rebounds and two blocks to push UMass to an 11–point victory at the Las Vegas Shootout on Dec. 20.

Mack led the Minutemen with 21 points, including three 3–pointers, and Ketner dropped in 17 points for UMass.

The UMass defense, suffocating throughout the season, held the Buffaloes to a .379 shooting percentage (22–for–58).

The Buffs were led by Marlon Hughes who scored a game–high 24 points despite turning the ball over seven times.

UMass 65, Boston College 57 — (See related story, page B–6). The Minutemen backcourt of Clarke, Mack and DePina combined for 38 points and 13 assists to push UMass past the Eagles.

Mack had 20 points for UMass. BC center Kostas Maglos topped the Eagle scorers with 20 points.

UConn has UM's number in second straight U-Game

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

HARTFORD, Conn. — The MassMutual U–Game is fast becoming the MassMutual UConn game.

The weather was cold and miserable outside for the second annual U–Game, and the Massachusetts men's basketball team was cold and miserable inside. The Minutemen shot 33 percent from the field on their way to a 72–55 loss to the Huskies on Dec. 23, 1997 at the "neutral" Hartford Civic Center.

UConn won last season's inaugural game — also in Hartford — 64–61, as Carmelo Travieso's last second 3–point attempt rimmed out.

There would be no such suspense this night as the Huskies literally went on a 14–3 run to up their two–point lead to a 29–16 bulge late in the first half to put the game away.

Richard Hamilton bagged 11 points in the first half to lead UConn to a 34–23 advantage at intermission. Hamilton dropped a game–high 21 points including a jumper with 4:07 left in the game to push the Huskies out to their biggest lead at 67–45.

Charlton Clarke led the Minutemen with 17 points despite 7–for–17 shooting in 39 minutes. The entire frontcourt was anemic, shooting a combined 6–for–22. Tyrone Weeks scored 11 points (2–for–6 field goals, 7–for–9 free throws) hauled in nine rebounds and blocked three shots.

Weeks and Clarke were the only stable forces for the Minutemen, who were simply outplayed by the currently– No. 8 Huskies. "They took it to us," Weeks said. "What can you do when the other team is playing like that?"

"We were a step behind today," UMass coach Bruiser Flint said after the game. "The only thing good about this [is that] we're going home for Christmas."

Another good thing may have come from the loss — it looked like Ajmal Basit had finally become a sophomore in college rather than a sophomoric presence on a college basketball team.

His emotional antics are often over–animated, out–of– control and untimely, taking something away from what Flint believes is some of the best big–man talent in the Atlantic 10.

Earlier this season, Flint reflected on Basit's talents and said he thought his 6–foot–9 forward/center had the potential to be one of the top performers in the conference by the time he's finished with his college career.

But still, in his second season, Basit's desire and talent have often been clouded by his outbursts which too frequently lead to early foul trouble or just draw his focus away from games.

This game drew something new out of Basit — a burgeoning maturity not expected. The screaming and fist– pumping, skipping–and–jumping antics were still available, but this was a new and improved product.

Basit scored just five points, but pulled down a team–high 10 rebounds (six offensive) in 24 minutes off the bench. In a game where Lari Ketner (nine points) struggled to keep his emotions in check — Flint and Ketner were visibly at odds throughout the game — Basit's stability was a factor in the Minutemen's staying competitive.

His performance on the court was secondary, though, to the one he gave in the locker room in the wake of UMass's poorest showing of the season.

According to Flint, after the game a player stood up in the locker room and exclaimed, "We're better than this!" Flint was asked who the player was and he casually responded that it was "Aj," as if he wasn't surprised.

Not surprised?

Basit had been a ticking time bomb, and now all of a sudden he was a steady presence on a young team that was just thwarted by a younger team. It took a situation in which Basit would normally have emotionally fouled out to force the talented sixth man to come of age.

Now Basit is thriving, playing within himself while still letting the fire peak every now and then, as the Minutemen are making a push toward their seventh consecutive NCAA tournament appearance.

In fact Basit's newfound stature on and off the court earned him a start in the Minutemen's next game at Cincinnati a 74–66 overtime loss. He responded with an eight point, seven rebound, six block performance.

As of Jan. 20, Basit averaged 6.5 points and 5.2 rebounds in 17 games and leads the team in field goal percentage with a .538 mark (.619 in conference).

no the score, and brush up on your speling!

Write for Sports

AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
www.amherstathletic.com
S. Amherst
256-0808

★ Your Student Travel SPECIALISTS ★
SPRING BREAK
•MEXICO
•JAMAICA
•CANCUN
•BAHAMAS
LOWEST FARES GUARANTEED
CARNIVAL CRUISES
Continental USA MAX $137
CALL FOR DETAILS
Student Youth Fares
256-8228
TRAVEL MAKERS, INC
THE TRAVEL EXPERTS
OPEN SEVEN DAYS
★ 321 Main St. (Cor of Dickinson) Amherst, MA ★

daily special (Mon - Thurs) 7.95 for sushi, seafood and much much more authentic Japanese restaurant
ICHIBAN いちばん
Northampton, Mass
1 Roundhouse Plaza
(413) 585 -1185
• sushi bar
• tatami room
Japanese style small party room

EXOTICA ENTERTAINMENT
EXCLUSIVE AGENT FOR Anthony's
IS NOW RECRUITING ATTRACTIVE ENTERTAINERS OVER 18 TO WORK IN THE MOST EXCITING AND PROFITABLE ADULT CLUBS IN THE NORTHEAST!
No Experience Necessary!!
CALL 413-532-8888 TODAY

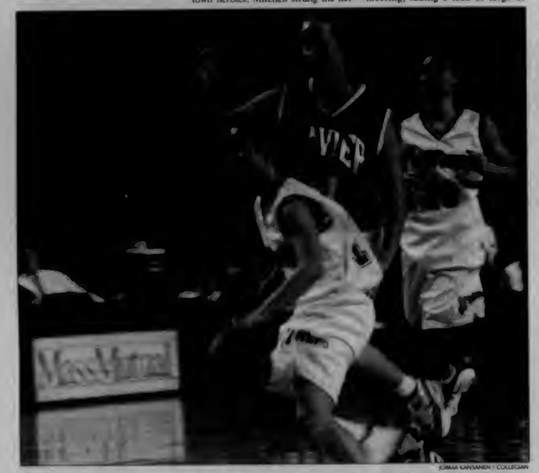
WIR SPRECHEN VOLKSWAGEN
The Valley's largest VW inventory!
Whether it's a simple tune-up of a full blown restoration project; from engine valves and bearings to door handles or gas caps, we have the parts for just about any model VW ever made! Plus a full inventory for Japanese and Korean cars and trucks.
WE SPEAK VOLKSWAGEN!
It All Starts With Parts...
BECK/ARNLEY WORLDPARTS
PELHAM AUTO PARTS
ROUTE 9
AMHERST BELCHERTOWN LINE
256-0457
Hrs:
M-F: 8 - 5:30
Sat: 9 - 2:00

Hungry?
Subway of Amherst offers fresh 6" and footlong subs, delicious salads and, for smaller appetites, 4" round sandwiches.
SUBWAY®
4 Main Street, Amherst • 256 -1919
Sunday - Thursday 10 am - Midnight
Friday & Saturday 10 am - 2 am

■ women's hoop

continued from page S1

ed for St. Joe's last 22 points of the game.



Kraft's effort — 22 points, 13 rebounds — kept UMass in the right to the wire. The junior scored 10 in the game's first 20 minutes, giving the Minutewomen a 43–32 margin over the A–10 East leading Hawks after seven minutes.

Mitchell, also instrumental in keeping UMass close, drained 14 points and added five assists.

UMass 69, Temple 56 — Rayside took her turn at the career–high mark when the Owls came calling on Jan. 8, scoring a personal–best 19 points in the win.

Temple jumped out to an early lead, but Rayside kept the game close, as she spurred an early 14–5 run. In the second half, the Minutewomen tore off a 18–6 run to put the game firmly out–of–reach.

Mitchell followed Rayside closely with 16 points and eight assists.

Kathy Coyner scored a career–high 13 points against Fordham, and helped push the women's basketball team over the winter break.

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

UMass 58, Virginia Tech 56 — In Blacksburg, Va., the Minutewomen held on for a win in this tightly–fought tilt on Jan. 4. Rayside led the charge for UMass with her 12–point– 11–rebound performance. Mitchell turned in 12 points, as well as seven assists. Trent helped out with her 10–point output.

Kim Seaver and Renee Maitland spurred on the Hokies with 14 and 15 points.

Duquesne 75, UMass 65 — Lady Duke senior guard Korie Hlede has easily become one of the most dominating forces in Atlantic 10 women's basketball. She showed off the form that got her into that position with a 27–point outpouring when the Minutewomen visited Pittsburgh on Jan. 2.

The meeting opened the conference slate for both teams, as UMass fell to 0–1 in the A–10.

Not to be outdone by Hlede hometown heroics, Mitchell strung the net for a career–high herself, as she knocked down 21 points on the night.

The Dukes used an 8–2 run with just over five minutes remaining in the game to pull away from UMass. Mitchell, who had cut the lead right before the run, made a three– point play and MacFarland hit for three to bring the game within four, 67–63. Duquesne wrapped things up neatly, however, by hitting five free throws in the three minutes.

Kraft had 12 and MacFarland 11 for UMass.

UMass 54, Dartmouth 50 — In the consolation final of the Citizens Bank Classic at Dartmouth College, the Minutewomen defeated the host Big Green. With the win, UMass coach Joanie O'Brien tied Mary Ann Ozadarski for the all–time coaching win mark with her 92nd victory.

UMass dominated the Dec. 29 meeting, taking a lead as large as 31–16 in the first half. MacFarland, who led the team with 16 points, scored 13 of her total in the opening stanza — nine in a 14–5 run that pushed the Minutewomen to their comfortable cushion.

But Mitchell was forced out of the game with her third foul before halftime and Dartmouth took advantage, running off an 11–1 spurt that made the intermission score 32–25.

UMass held the Green in check during the second half, but Dartmouth used an 11–3 run to cut the UMass lead to 51–50 with 1:33 remaining. Kraft hit a trey at 1:15 to lift UMass to the final margin.

Rayside had 14 points and nine rebounds in the win. Kraft also contributed nine boards.

Kentucky 57, UMass 51 — In the first round of the Citizen's Bank Classic (Dec. 28), the Minutewomen ran up against a tough Kentucky squad headed by Jaye Barnes. Barnes pocketed 16 points and seven rebounds in the Wildcat win.

After an even first half that included four lead changes and seven ties, there was a lull before things got underway in the second period. UMass came up with a short spurt in which the Minutewomen held their largest lead at 36–30.

The Wildcats kicked in with a 8–0 run and then a 7–0 surge that held their opponent at bay. The Minutewomen came fighting back, however, when Kraft knocked down a jumper and Trent converted on two free throws to cut the deficit to 54–51.

Kraft led her team with 15 and Trent followed with 10. Rayside pocketed nine.

UMass 60, St. John's 54 — MacFarland, a sophomore, tallied a career–high against the Red Storm, as the Minutewomen started off the winter break with a win.

MacFarland led the Minutewomen out of the gates in the second half, scoring 13 of her 24 points in the second stanza of play. She shot 8–for–16, a career–high for shots attempted in a game. Her previous high point total was 19, which she scored against Hartford on Dec. 22, 1996.

After the Minutewomen went into the break down one, MacFarland came out and shot six–of–nine, including two three's, to give her team the lead. The Red Storm, which was led by Victoria Miller's 12 points, fought back to take a one–point edge with 3:52 remaining. MacFarland hit a jump shot and one free throw and drove for a lay–up to put UMass up for good.

Hlede reaches milestone; A–10 women in the pros

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Women basketball players in the Atlantic 10 could have a better shot at making the pro ranks than some may realize. Currently there are four A–10 alums in the American Basketball League and five in the WNBA.

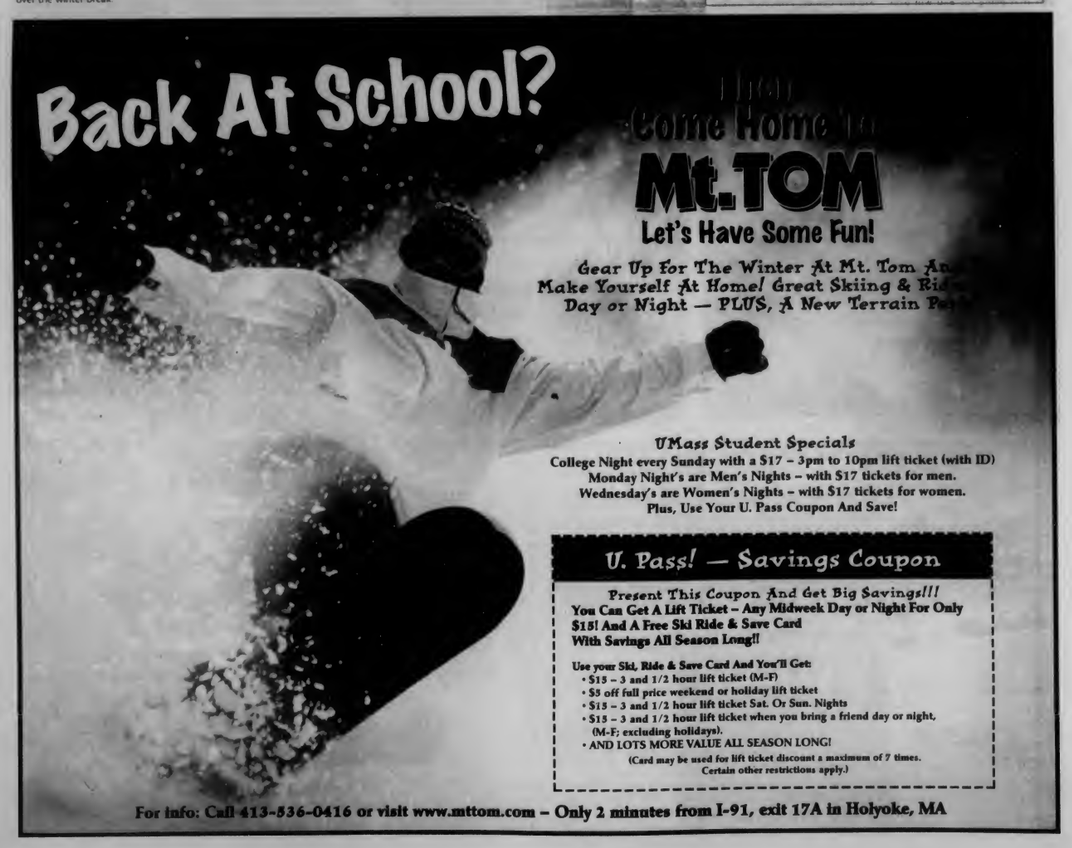
In the ABL, which is currently in season: Dale Hodges, St. Joseph's class of 1990, with the New England Blizzard; Amy Mallon, St. Joe's class of '93, with the Philadelphia Rage; Darlene Saar, George Washington class of '95, with the Atlanta Glory; and Debbie Black, St. Joe's class of '88, with the Colorado Xplosion.

Women in the WNBA who used to pound the A–10 hardwood: Last year's Atlantic 10 Player of the Year, Tajama Abraham, GW class of '97, with the Sacramento Monarchs; Melissa Gurile, Massachusetts class of '96, with the Phoenix Mercury; Megan Campain, St. Joe's class of '97, with the Utah Starzz; Sue Wicks, Rutgers class of '88, with the New York Liberty; and Monique Ambers, a former GW assistant coach, with the Mercury.

• GW's Noelia Gomez, who is leading the Colonials with 16.1 points per game, has already scored 801 points (as of Jan. 23) in her two–year career at George Washington. If she continues on her current pace, she will hit the 1,000–point mark in GW's first Atlantic 10 tournament contest this year. And she will become the fastest player in school history to reach that mark.

• Duquesne's Korie Hlede has topped a scoring plateau of her own. Already the school's leading scorer — male or female — Hlede netted her 2,000th career point against San Diego State on Dec. 7. She becomes the first player in Duquesne history to reach that milestone.

• La Salle could return to its revamped home court as early as Feb. 1, if as goes according to plan. Temporarily displaced while repairs were done, the Explorers should return to the Haywood Center soon. In the meantime, they have been playing at Bucky Harris Gym on the campus of Philadelphia Textile. While there they posted a 5–3 record.



• In recent women's basketball action, Atlantic 10 East leader St. Joe's lost its first conference game to Temple on Jan. 15, 66–64. The Hawks remain atop the East division with a 5–1 conference record. Temple is in second in the East with a 3–3 league mark (as of Jan. 22).

Virginia Tech downed GW, 64–57 on Jan. 17, but the Colonials rebounded to down La Salle (76–47 on Jan. 19) and Xavier (70–58 on Jan. 22). After its win over St. Joe's, Temple fell to Duquesne. The Lady Dukes put in a solid week, beating La Salle and St. Bonaventure, in addition to the Owls.

COURTESY DUQUESNE SPORTS INFORMATION

Korie Hlede is the only Duquesne player to ever reach the 2,000–point milestone.

■ postseason

continued from page S1

Finnish Army knife of the sports department, I was both covering the game and taking photos of the Minutemen's eventual 6–4 loss to the Warriors. Due to an experiment gone awfully awry at Tully Forum in UMass' season opener at Lowell, I chose the less blurry and better lit confines of my former "home" to take color photos for this Back To School issue.

But as I watched Merrimack score three goals in a span of 1:21 to open the third period, thus putting the game away, I began to wonder who should be penalized:

• The Minutemen (3–15–2, 1–10–1 in Hockey East) for not buckling down mentally at a crucial part of the game, while also losing a chance to catch up on the Warriors in the HE conference standings;

• The coaching staff, due to the fact that 10 seconds after coach Joe Mallen called a timeout to stop the oil leaking from his ship, the team let up the last of those three goals;

• Or myself, for covering this team full–time for the past two seasons, and part–time for the 1994–95 season.

I quickly dispelled that latter statement with two thoughts — the first was of my psychological "life" (UMass hockey has been a part of my life since its reinstatement, and the game itself for the past 22 years or more); and the second was of my physical "life" (at 6–foot–4, I can take care of myself, but not against a angry group of guys who average that height).

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Markus Helanen

After serving a 2:00 hitting after the whistle penalty, I'm back in the figurative game.

The former statement is applicable, because as of this moment, the Minutemen have immersed themselves in the midst of a major dilemma. UMass has to win its game against Merrimack this weekend at the Volpe "Inferiority" Complex, and then finish at least two wins higher then the Warriors' final win total to make the HE playoffs.

If they don't make it to the conference playoffs, this will be the first year since starting a full HE schedule that UMass will miss the postseason. All of this recent headbanging is because making the postseason seemed to be an automatic one this season, especially with the addition of Maine's All–HE selection Tim Lovell to the lineup, and the return of an experienced defensive corps.

The addition of a quality group of freshman like forward Kris Walls (five goals, 6 assists) and defenseman Matt Smith (four goals, five assists) have refreshed the lineup. However, Lovell (five goals, eight assists) has been way below his own level of accomplishment due to a bum ankle. And the defense was what let the Minutemen down in this 6–4 loss to a woeful defensive team in Merrimack.

Yet, criticism aside, these are the key components in any resurgence for the team. Support is key, and that is what this team will need to get back in the race for the postseason. But after serving this 1:21 tripping minor with the corresponding game misconduct, buckling down is what the team will have to do — no questions.

So, this leaves us with the coaching staff. Touchy stuff.

There seems to be something wrong, here, people.

It could be just me, but I don't think a 3–15–2 record is what anybody (nevermind the coaching staff) expected out of this team this season. By this time last season, the Minutemen had already won two season series in the conference (Providence and Northeastern), and were on the verge of winning the Alumni Cup once again from Lowell.

This season, a tie against Northeastern is the only conference point UMass has mustered, and the River Hawks have already won the Alumni Cup. An opportunity to gain an edge on Merrimack was lost with three goals in 1:21 that night, and you have to wonder if it is the players or the coaches that are at fault here.

Players play the game, but coaches orchestrate the game. You can have the best musicians in the world, but if they're not properly orchestrated, all you'll get is an inferior product, with glimpses of artistic brilliance through the muddled malaise.

Players need to want to play for their coaches, and if that desire has been lost for whatever reason, then it needs to be rediscovered — quickly.

But, it is a tough job to start up a program in this conference, and there are a lot of circumstances pushing and pulling at a coach. In one of the most realistic comparisons between college hockey and basketball, basketball coach Brutser Flint compared starting a team in HE to starting one in the Atlantic Coast Conference. You know, that really "good" college basketball conference that has a million or so teams in the Top 25?

The same is true with HE. To make the playoffs, the Minutemen will have to register their first wins since reinstatement over two current Top 5 teams in Boston University (last win over BU occurred on Jan. 16, 1920) and New Hampshire (last win over UNH occurred on Feb. 23, 1963), and two teams who have been in and out of the Top 10 in Boston College and Maine (they're "good," too).

This circumstantial evidence proves a young program like UMass should be at the bottom of such a tough conference, but on the other hand, those same circumstances were proven wrong the past three years by making the playoffs.

So, go figure. We'll save all the judgments for the end of the season. Unfortunately, speculation is the heart of this debate, and it is all that can be done now.

A 2:00 bench minor, and the coaches are back in the literal game.

Home is where the heart is, and in this case — whether it is the penalty box, the bench or the ice surface — If you have lost that heart for the game, it must be found once again. I found "home" once again, and the Minutemen need to find it before it is too late — or they'll be staying home in March.

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist

■ wrap up

continued from page S4

named the No. 1 stars of the game, with Regan posting his second career shutout in the 0–0 draw (his first being the 8–0 win over Army described in the previous recap).

The two teams faced off last season, with the Big Green getting the best of the Minutemen in a 6–5 loss at Thompson Arena in Hanover, N.H on Dec. 14, 1996.

Princeton 4, UMass 3 (OT)

The Hobey Baker Award is given annually to the best college hockey player of the year, while at the Hobey Baker Arena on Dec. 12, the Tigers got the best of the Minutemen in their annual matchup with a 4–3 overtime win. In a less closer game last season at the Mullins Center, Princeton walked away with a 7–2 win over UMass.

Helanen started his second game in net for the Minutemen this season, making 17 saves on the night. Gates, Stork and Wallis tallied goals for UMass In this contest, while Blanchard notched two assists to his total of nine on the season.

From the "win it in regulation, please" department, the Minutemen have now gone to five overtime games this season, while winning none of them, and losing three for a less than wonderful 0–3–2 mark.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Jeff Blanchard

Matt Jordan (above) and Mike Wynne (below) were named to the Atlantic 10 All–Academic football team, while Erica Iverson (right) was honored as a All–American (JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN, HEADSHOTS COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS).

■ coaches

continued from page S2

career. She joins Connecticut's Sarah Whalen as the only northeast region representatives on the team.

Iverson, a three–time All–Atlantic 10 team member, was UMass' fourth–leading scorer with 18 points (eight goals, two assists). The conference tournament's Most Outstanding Player this year, she also earned a mention as a Soccer America Player of the Week this year.

Iverson started all but one game of her career as a Minutewoman, on a defense that shut out 26 of 44 opponents.

Iverson and fellow senior Danielle Dion have been selected to play in the UMBRO Select All–Star Classic, a showcase for the sport's top collegiate seniors. The Classic will take place Jan. 29–Feb. 1.

Two named to all–academic football team

Matt Jordan and Mike Wynne are among the 37 athletes who have been named to the Atlantic 10's all–academic football team.

Jordan, a junior running back who earned a 3.04 grade point average in sport management, is on the academic squad for the second straight season. Wynne, a sophomore left guard, carries a 3.95 GPA in sport management and was one of 16 student–athletes named to the 1997 GTE/CoSIDa academic all–district team.

Eleven earn fall academic all–league honors

UMass continued its trend of putting the most student– athletes on Atlantic 10 academic all–conference teams for the third straight year. To be eligible for the honor, players must post at least a 3.00 GPA and be a starter or key reserve on his/her team.

This fall's UMass honorees are: Danielle Dion and Emma Kurowski, women's soccer; Rebecca Donaghue, Sally Hirsch and Nicole Way, women's cross country; Jen Gutzman, Kate Putnam and Christine Millbauer, field hockey; Jill Meyers and Michelle Paciorek, volleyball; and Brad Kurowski, men's soccer.

Mack earns Rookie honors

Monty Mack has been named Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Week three times this season. A 6–foot–3 sophomore shooting guard from South Boston High, Mack was the Minutemen's leading scorer through Jan. 9 with 14.0 ppg.

He is the first UMass player to earn three Rookie honors since Marcus Camby won five in 1993–94

Ha Ha Ha! Ha Ha Ha!
Wondering what's so funny? Keep reading...

Write for Sports! It's fun(ny)...

Volunteer in Africa of Mexico!
One year placements in education, human rights, health, journalism, micoenterprises & more. If you want an international career don't miss our 4th annual Working for Global Justice conference.
Visions in Action For info: 202-625-7402. Visions@igc.org.

Daily Collegian
"we like words"
This is not our motto, but it could have been...

Comic characters write for Sports... shouldn't you?

NEW AEROBICS NEW
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
• Classes Daily
• Certified Instructors
• Suspended Wood Floor
• Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST athletic CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst, 256-0080

amc
Hampshire 6 •584-7550 Hampshire Mall
Mt. Farms 4 •584-9153 Mt. Farms Mall
The Boxer (R) Today at 8:20
Phantoms (R) Today at (5:50@2.50) 8:30
As Good As it Gets (PG13) Today at (5:20@2.50) 8:10
Hard Rain (R) Today at (5:40@2.50) 8:30
Tomorrow Never Dies (PG13) Today at (5:30@2.50)
Half Baked (R) Today at (6:00@2.50) 8:30
Wag the Dog (R) Today at 8:30
Spice World (PG) Today at (5:50@2.50) 8:30
Titanic (PG 13) Today at (4:20@2.50) 8:10
Good Will Hunting (R) Today at (5:20@2.50) 8:20
Fallen (R) Today at (5:30@2.50) 8:20
Mousehunt (PG) Today at (5:40@2.50)

Peter Pan & PVTA
Your Community Link To The Entire Northeast!
BOSTON NEW YORK
DAILY EXPRESS SERVICE
Peter Pan 800-343-9999 PVTA • 781-PVTA (413-781-7882)
Amherst, Peter Pan Terminal, 79 S Pleasant St
Umass Campus Cntr, or SW Hampden Dinning Common
Northampton, Peter Pan Terminal 1 Roundhouse Pz

WELCOME BACK!
Get into the Swing of Spring Semester With Smart Savings at Hampshire Mall!
GET YOUR STUDENT DISCOUNT CARD TODAY!
STUDENT TUESDAY DISCOUNT CARD
Hampshire Mall Advocate
Shop and Save Every TUESDAY at the HAMPSHIRE MALL! Route 9, Hadley, MA
A Student Reward Program!
Expires May 31, 1998
SAVE AT OVER 25 STORES EVERY TUESDAY JUST FOR BEING A STUDENT!
Student Tuesday Discount Cards Available At the Customer Service Booth.
Student I.D. Required.
Some Restrictions May Apply
Hampshire Mall Route 9, Hadley, MA (413) 586-5700
Route 9 Hadley (413) 586-5700

Get in SHAPE!
TRY OUR
Designer Whey Protein 2lb 29
Creatine 400g 29
MetRx 20 ct 38
NUTRITION EXPRESS
NUTRITION SUPPLEMENTS & PERSONAL TRAINING
Amherst, Mass. 253-1850

Men's and women's gym move in opposite directions

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

Thus far, January has been a painful experience for the Massachusetts men's gymnastics team. After capturing the UMass Open last month at the Cage, the Minutemen turned in two disappointing performances recently.

On January 10, at the West Point Open, the Minutemen placed fourth out of 10 squads competing, but they were hoping for a better finish coming into the event.

UMass tallied 209.250 points in this event, well off the 219.975 standard set by Penn State. More importantly, UMass finished behind arch rival Temple, who placed second with 219.150. Navy, UMass and International rounded out the top five, as host Army only managed sixth place with 200.800.

There were several strong individual efforts by the Minutemen, including junior Stephen Pryor. Pryor led the Minutemen with 52.05, which was good for 12th place among the competitors. Freshman Andy Leis contributed with a 50.65 total, which earned him 18th place individually.

The bumpy road continued for UMass on January 16, when it finished last at a three team competition at Temple. Penn State once again came out the victor, with Temple placing second. The UMass total of 216.550 was 10 points off the tally posted by the ferocious Nittany Lions.

Coach Roy Johnson was upset with the results, but still has the utmost confidence that his squad will turn it around.

"We started the season off well last month, and we had some really tough meets recently," said Johnson. "Come February, this team will really be taking shape, and putting out quality efforts."

Pryor once again led the Minutemen at Temple, with a season best 54.45 output. He finished third overall at the meet, behind only Temple's Mike Moran and Penn State's Tobias Ekman.

Pryor was second on the high bar, and fourth on the floor, his two strongest events.

"Pryor has performed really well for us all season, but I am glad to see the younger guys like Andy Leis are stepping up as well," said Johnson.

With an upcoming date with Temple looming over their heads, the Minutemen must remain focused in the next few weeks. After a home match with Navy, the Minutemen will host Vermont and M.I.T on Jan. 31 at the Cage.

"We need to concentrate at the task at hand, before we worry about Temple," said Johnson. "Navy is a quality opponent and we are not going to overlook M.I.T. or Vermont either. It is very important that we compete well at home."

* * *

The Massachusetts women's gymnastics team fared a bit better than the men in starting off its season. The Minutewomen claimed a win in a quad-meet at Springfield College on Jan. 17, which instantly gave UMass a 3-0 record.

UMass finished with 190.000 points, Ithaca was second with 177.700, host Springfield finished third with 174.025 and SUNY-Cortland took fourth (171.175).

Sophomore Mandy Mosby turned in a stand-out performance for the Minutewomen with a 38.025 score and the all-around crown. She also won the balance beam with a score of 9.750.

Mosby's accomplishments only added to a day full of UMass highlights. The Minutewomen swept the top three spots in every individual events. Senior Penny LeBeau posted a 9.725 for first place on the vault, junior Anita Sanyal captured the bars with a 9.650 and freshman Jill Dicker won the floor exercise with a 9.750.

The Minutewomen have a slight break in action and will next compete Feb. 6 at Atlantic 10 opponent Rhode Island.

Collegian staff member Casey Kane contributed to this article.

Daily Collegian,
dig the colors, man!

Men's, women's swim reap winter wins

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

LAUREN KOSSY / COLLEGIAN

Ed Hefferon set a personal best in the 1-meter diving competition against Dartmouth.

The winter break was a successful one for the Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team, which picked up a dual meet win and a first place showing at the Rhode Island Invitational.

The Minutemen moved to 5-0 on their dual meet schedule with a 217-83 win over Dartmouth at Joseph Rogers Pool on Jan. 18. On Jan. 9-10, UMass held off URI and La Salle to take the Rhode Island Invitational.

Junior Brian Wisniewski highlighted UMass' meet against Dartmouth with four first place finishes. He claimed individual wins in the 200 freestyle with a time of 1:44.68, and in the 200 backstroke with a 1:56.25. Wisniewski also participated on the winning 200 medley relay and 800 free relay teams.

Freshman Billy Brown, Sean Anderson and Chris Arsenault also swept a pair of individual events apiece. Brown took the 100 breaststroke (:58.24) and the 200 breast (2:06.71). Arsenault 200 individual medley (1:57.37) and 100 back (:52.60). Anderson took top honors in the 200 butterfly (1:55.27) and 50 freestyle (:21.30). He also placed second behind Arsenault in the 100 back.

Brown, Diego Alcala and Anderson joined Wisniewski in posting a 1:36.53 for the medley, while Simon Flynn, B.J. Brannon and Dan Peck team with him for the free relay (6:55.87).

Flynn had a strong day individually as well. He swam to a 9:32.31 in the 1,000 free, a time which sits as the second fastest in school history and Flynn's own personal best.

Diver Ed Hefferon marked his afternoon with a personal record performance in the one-meter diving competition with a 280.65. That point total is the third best in school history in the event.

Other individual winners against Dartmouth for UMass were Matt Andrews in the 500 free with a time of 4:45.36 and Henry Turner, who had a :47.67 in the 100 freestyle.

At the Rhode Island Invitational, UMass scored 409.5 points to run away from the Explorers and Rams, who scored 323.5 and 173, respectively.

Brown, who had set the UMass school record in the 200 breast earlier in the year, swam to a first place finish and a pool record in Kingston, R.I. with a 2:03.52. He also took the crown in the 100 breast with a time of :57.58.

Similar to the Dartmouth meet, the Minutemen dominated the individual events, as four other athletes swept two each. Wisniewski claimed the 100 and 200 backstrokes with times of :50.96 and 1:52.93.

Anderson clocked a :21.09 to win the 50 free and a :46.99 to take the 100 freestyle. Flynn concentrated on the distance freestyle and won the 500 in 4:40.99 and the 1,000 with a time of 9:42.58. Andrews, a freshman, posted a :52.25 in the 100 butterfly and a 1:55.27 in the 200 fly.

The Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team had a successful break as well, as the Minutewomen capiured both a dual meet against Dartmouth on Jan. 18 and first place in the Rhode Island Invitational on Jan. 9-10.

At Rhode Island, the Minutewomen captured six events en route to the title over the Rams and La Salle. Against the Big Green, UMass won nine events to take the meet, 166.5-132.5.

Sophomores Lia Lansky and Andrea Spencer were instrumental in both UMass victories. At URI, Lansky took the 200 butterfly with a time of 2:09.11 and Spencer won the 100 fly (1:00.68). The same held true against Dartmouth, when Lansky posted a 2:10.14 in the 200 fly and Spencer a 1:00.26 in the 100. Spencer also won the 50 free in a time of :25.49 and the 200 IM in 2:12.80.

A pair of other underclassmen pushed UMass to the win at Rhode Island, as freshman Sarah Newell claimed the 200 breast in 2:26.37 and classmate Shannon Rowell took top honors in the 100 back (1:01.46).

At home on Jan. 17, senior Barbara Hickey was a driving force in UMass' victory. Hickey posted a 5:08.25 to win the 500 freestyle and swam to a winning 10:25.80 in the 1,000 free.

Marci Hupp was a double winner for the Minutewomen in their last meet. Hupp clocked a 1:56.78 to take the 200 free and a :54.66 to win the 100 free.

Julie Alexander rounded out the UMass winners with a victory in the 200 breast (2:29.09).

Both the Minutemen and Minutewomen swam at New Hampshire on Jan. 24 and at home against Connecticut on Jan. 25.

Men's, women's track cruise at Challenge Cup Trials

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's indoor track and field team dominated the field at the New England Challenge Cup Trials on Jan. 16 to win the meet and advance to the Cup Finals, which were held on Jan. 24 at Yale (results were not available at press time).

Silifa Kenku was a big part in the Minutewomen's win. The senior captured two events to boost UMass to a total score of 168. Host Dartmouth took second with 137, Maine ran third with 128 and New Hampshire followed with 115 points.

The meet was the second of the young UMass season. The Minutewomen competed in the Brown Invitational on Dec. 6, but the meet was not a scored competition.

Kenku started the day's highlights with a season-best time of :25.76 to win the 200m and a team season-best time of :58.04 in the 400m.

Fellow seniors Rosey Bryan, Anya Forrest, Rebecca Donaghue and Shana Mitchell joined Kenku as event winners at the Challenge Cup. Bryan posted a 7.37 to take the 55m dash, while Forrest clocked a 8.46 in the 55m hurdles.

Donaghue, one of UMass' top distance runners, claimed a win in the 800m with a time of 2:16.32. Mitchell, meanwhile, headed up the Minutewoman field contingent by winning the hammer with a throw of 49-feet-1 3/4-inches.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Silifa Kenku

UMass also received help from junior Nicole Way and sophomore Monica Elmore. Way took the mile (5:11.83) and Elmore won the 1,000m (3:07.61).

Earlier in the winter break, the Minutewomen sent two team members to compete at the Rhode Island Pentathlon. Sophomore Andrea Comeau broke her own UMass record with her third place score of 3,355. Melissa Ward took fifth with 3,234 points.

Comeau set the old mark at the same meet last year with a score of 3,342. This year, she claimed second place in the high jump with a jump of 5-feet-7 3/4-inches.

Ward's mark was just shy of her personal best, which she set at last year's meet. This year, Ward placed second in the shot put, where she reached a mark of 33-feet-10 1/4-inches.

Tom Toye led the Massachusetts men's indoor track and field team to a victory at the New England Challenge Cup Trials on Jan. 17 at Dartmouth. UMass posted a 114 point total in the win, the host Big Green was second with 98, Maine finished third with 60.5 points, New Hampshire and Boston College rounded out the competition with 55 and 34.5 points, respectively.

The men took part in the Challenge Cup Finals at the Reggie Lewis Track on Jan. 23 (results were not available at press time).

Toye did his damage in the 55m dash, where he clocked a 6.47, and the 200m, which he finished in 22.03. His time in the short sprints his own career-best, which ranks fourth school history. The 200m time is just six hundredths of a second off Toye's own school record, which he set last year.

A group of juniors and seniors captured a host of other races for the Minutemen. Junior Neil Concepcion took the 400m in :49.61, while classmates Ben Biraldi won the 55m hurdles (7.70) and Andre Roach claimed the triple jump (44- feet-6 3/4-inches). Seniors Ryan Carrara and Janda Ricci- Munn handled the distance duties, as Carrara took the crown in the mile with a 4:15.87 and Ricci-Munn won the 3,000m in 8:47.87.

The Minutemen sent one representative to the URI Pentathlon on Dec. 13. Mark Grogan competed in his first collegiate pentathlon and came away with a fifth-place finish.

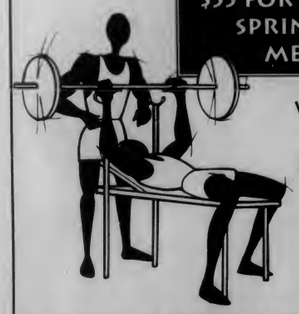
The freshman racked up 2,856 points with a second-place performance in the 55m hurdles (8.1) and fourth-place showings in the shot put and high jump.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Tom Toye won two events to propel the UMass men's indoor track team to a victory in the New England Challenge Cup Trials.

VOTE YES FEB. 3rd
A VIABLE DOWNTOWN MAKES A BETTER AMHERST
YES TO PARKING COMPROMISE!
Polls open 2pm - 8pm
Students Vote in Hamden Dining Hall
Political Advertisement paid for by Larry Kelley, West St. Amherst

Big Guy's Liquors
Big On Friendly Service
2 Locations means you are always see the Big Guy
Rt. 116 Sunderland 665-5030
Rt. 63 N. Amherst 549-3555
(next to Cumberland Farms)



Welcome back to all the UMass students. Best of Luck for a great semester!

TOTAL FITNESS Without Waiting In Line!
NORDIC TRACK Upper and Lower Body
GRAVITRON Total Upper Body Training in 6 minutes
CROSSBOARIC Strength & Cardio combined
STAIRMASTER 4400 Advanced Ergonomic Design
VR BIKE The ultimate merging of computer & exercise technology
LIFESTRIDES Shock Absorbing Decks
PRECOR EFX 544 Combines cycling, walking and cross country skiing
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES BEST PRICES
"Big Enough To Own The Best Equipment But Small Enough To Know Your Name"
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0000 460 West St., Amherst

AEROBICS
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
* Classes Daily
* Certified Instructors
* Suspended Wood Floor
* Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst 256-0080

THE AMHERST DELICATESSEN
MEMBER O.C.M.P.
WE ACCEPT ALL MAJOR CREDIT CARDS.
Can We Build One For You?
Serving Sandwiches, Bagels & Lox, Fresh Soups & Salads, Take Out.
★ DELIVERIES CALL 549-6314 ★
★ OPEN UNTIL 9p.m. ★

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS
Late Entrants should check for extensions in Boyden 215
Still time to enter:
Basketball (M/W/C)....A.S.A.P
Ice Hockey (M/W).....A.S.A.P
Get Those forms in by 2/2:
Wallyball (M/W/C)
Wrestling (M/W)

A $55 BODY SHOP MEMBERSHIP SPECIAL FOR YOU
A GREAT WAY TO KEEP THOSE NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS TO LOOK AND FEEL BETTER AND TO GET READY FOR SPRING BREAK
SIGN UP AT EITHER THE TOTMAN OR BOYDEN CENTER BEFORE FEBRUARY 2ND AND PAY ONLY
$55 FOR AN UNLIMITED SPRING SEMESTER MEMBERSHIP

WORK EVERY MUSCLE IN YOUR BODY AT ANY OF THE FIVE BODY SHOP LOCATIONS (TOTMAN GYM 8, BOYDEN GYM 17, WASHINGTON TOWER 19, WEBSTER/ HILLTOP OR GORMAN/CROSSMAN)
FOR HOURS OF PREVIEW AND THE SPRING SCHEDULE
CALL 545-6075
THIS LIMITED OFFER EXPIRES 2/2/98
14 DAY REFUND POLICY IN EFFECT WITH ORIGINAL RECEIPT AND YOUR U-CARD

Minutemaniacs
1997-98 Member Registration
UMass Athletic Fund
It's not to late to become a Minutemaniac!
UMass Student Booster Club.
Minutemaniac Benefits:
• Advanced Reserved Ticket Pickup
• Minutemaniac T-Shirt
• Game Receptions
• "The UMass Maniac" Newsletter
• Membership Card
Great Value at $25.00 to Join!
Look for Minutemaniac registration at the student entrance to the MullinsCenter at basketball and hockey games.
If you have any questions, give us a call at 545-9672.
Complete form below, cut, and mail to Minutemaniacs at:
308 Mullins Center • University of Massachusetts • Box 35910 • Amherst, MA 01003
Application for Minutemaniacs Membership
Student Name:_____
Student #:_____
Local Address:_____
Local Phone:_____ Year at UMass:_____
Home Address:_____
City:_____ State:_____ Zip:_____ Home Phone:_____
Make checks payable to: UMAF
Or Charge to your credit card: Visa ☐ Mastercard ☐ Discover ☐
Number_____ Expiration Date_____

A Special Series of Free Campus Events
http://www.umass.edu/campus_events_calendar.html
A RED-HOT THRILLER
THE PEACEMAKER
...8:00PM
DAY FEBRUARY 6
...AN KIVI ROGERS"
...T UNION BALLROOM 8PM
...M "THE JACKAL" WILL FOL-
Comedian Kivi Rogers
DAY FEBRUARY 8
...CCA... 8PM & 10PM
...FEBRUARY 13

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS CLUB
Free HFC T-Shirt
The Area's Most Complete Club • 256-6446
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
•PVTA bus route to Rolling Green • • Pool •
• Aerobics •
• Aqua-aerobics •
•Steps •
• Nautilus • •Racquetball•
• Free weights •
•Jacuzzi•
• Sauna • Massage • •Bikes•
• Indoor tennis & Basketball •
• Rowers • •Treadmills •
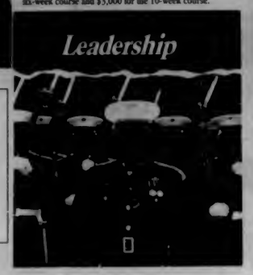
90 Gatehouse Road
Off Rt. 9 2 miles East of Town Center
Join now for our 15 week Semester Special ($169) & get a free HFC T-Shirt

WANTED: LEADERS/PILOTS
UNITED STATES MARINE CORPS OFFICER PROGRAMS



GUARANTEED AVIATION
Marine Corps aviators fly everything from jets to helicopters. Qualified applicants, male and female, are guaranteed aviation training before enrolling. Once commissioned, you will receive flight training at Pensacola, Florida, with the world's most modern and sophisticated aircraft.

NO OBLIGATION
This is an officer training program. If, after the summer training, you decide the Marine Corps is not for you, cancel your enrollment and you will not be obligated to serve. This program allows you the flexibility to change your career path.

WE TEACH LEADERSHIP
Officer candidates learn how to lead peers and subordinate with confidence. As an Officer of Marines, you will have more responsibility at the start of your career than most people have at the peak of theirs.

THIS IS NOT ROTC
All training is conducted during the summer. No classes or uniforms are required at school. For freshmen and sophomores, the training consists of two six-week sessions at Officer Candidate School in Quantico, Virginia. For juniors and seniors it is one 10-week session. Candidates earn about $1,800 for a six-week course and $3,000 for the 10-week course.

FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL:
UNITED STATES MARINE CORPS OFFICER SELECTION
SPRINGFIELD
NICHOLAS W. PETERS CAPTAIN, USMC
GINA M. RIQUIER SERGEANT, USMC
105 EAST STREET
CHICOPEE, MA 01020
1-800-255-USMC OR (413) 594-9781

USMC

MCAT
Expert Teachers
Superior Materials
Smart Technology
Proven Results
Find out why more than 2.5 million students have chosen Kaplan
KAPLAN®
1-800-KAP-TEST
www.kaplan.com
*Course names are registered trademarks of their respective owners.

Bringing opportunity closer to you...

ANNUAL CAMPUS WIDE CAREER FAI
February 18th 10am-3pm
Campus Center Auditorium
The Alana Job Fair* is also being held on from 7pm-9pm
The Co-Op Job Fair* is being held Febr 10am-3pm
Over 100 Companies and organizati here!
The perfect chance to meet with repr employers that you are interested in ar interested in you! Or, just come and find companies are suited to what you are looki career!
Opportunity is knocking... You better be there to open the door!

...ONAL NETWORK Offices will be locat... ...ruary 26. See the Career Planning (CP) ... ...career planning and information about ... ...s. ...e Field Experience Representatives (FE) for Co-Ops, in... ...community service opportunities.

Humanities and Fine Arts	... (CP)	105 ...
	... (FE)	105 South ...
Social & Behavioral Sciences	Tommie Joyner (CP)	105 ...
	Jeff Silver (FE)	105 South ...
Food & Natural Resources	Ginger ... (CP)	111A Stockbridge
	John Roland (FE)	110A Stockbridge
Social & Behavioral Sciences	Tommie Joyner (CP)	South College
	Jeff Silver (FE)	South College
Management	Cori Ashworth (FE)
Engineering	Clark Edwards (CP)	... Marston
	Deborah ... (FE)	... Marston
... Nursing and Education	... Casey (CP)	150 Totman
	... (FE)	416 Arnold
...	... DeFulvio (FE)	209 Mather

Any questions about the changes? Please call us at

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVIII Issue 2 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday, January 29, 1998

Sight & Sound

Listening to music is no longer enough — you have to watch the video too. Check out our music video reviews (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Road trip to Rhody!

Ajmal Basit and the Massachusetts men's basketball team look to upend the Rams of Rhode Island. (see Sports, page 14.)

WORLD

34 dead in massacres 18 rebels also killed

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP)— Armed Islamic groups killed at least 34 people in three separate attacks, security forces said yesterday. Eighteen Muslim rebels were also killed, including one known as "the throat-slasher," they said.

The bloodshed Tuesday was a continuation of the violence that has wracked this North African country since 1992, peaking during the Muslim holy month of Ramadan, which drew to a close Wednesday night.

According to security forces, 13 people were killed in an attack in the Blida region, 50 miles south of Algiers; nine in the Djelfa region, 170 miles south of the capital; and 12 in the Laghouat area, 250 miles south of Algiers.

The security forces released the information over state-run radio. They provided no further details.

Three armed rebels were killed in Laghouat and four in Blida by security forces fanning out in the region after the massacres, the statement said.

NATION

Crichton, Spielberg cleared in Twister trial

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Steven Spielberg, author Michael Crichton and other Hollywood heavyweights were found innocent yesterday of pirating a man's screenplay to make the 1996 hit movie Twister.

Stephen Kessler had claimed Spielberg, Crichton, Crichton's wife, Anne-Marie Martin, Warner Bros. and Universal Studios had used his screenplay, Catch the Wind, to make Twister. He had sought all of the movie's profits, which his lawyer had estimated to be around $150 million. Spielberg, who produced Twister, estimated his agency made $20 million to $80 million from the movie about tracking devastating tornadoes in Oklahoma. After the verdict was read, Kessler attempted to shake Crichton's hand, but Crichton refused.

As he left the courthouse, Crichton restated his innocence. "I've never heard of this person until the lawsuit came out," he said.

Crichton said he's faced similar accusations in the past and has always been cleared of any wrongdoing.

Kessler said he would appeal.

The verdict brings to close a three-week trial that at times had turned nasty.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 41 LOW: 24	HIGH: 38 LOW: 20	HIGH: 37 LOW: 21

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 12
Comics.....page 13
Crossword .....page 13
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 12
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 14

ON THE INTERNET
www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Clinton delivers speech in midst of sex scandal

KEVIN MACDONALD/COLLEGIAN
Students from the UMass Student Government Association gathered Tuesday night to watch President Clinton's State of the Union address.

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

In an effort to redirect public attention to his leadership ability, President Clinton delivered his State of the Union address Tuesday night in the midst of a sexual scandal that may threaten his presidency.

Urging Congress and Americans to "remember the big picture," Clinton proposed an end to big budget deficits, with 100 percent of the surplus going towards saving the Social Security system.

Issues most pertinent to members of the University of Massachusetts community included extending his first bill passed through Congress, the Family and Medical Leave Act, to cover 10 million more workers; a balanced budget proposal that would allow for the hiring of 100,000 new teachers and would cut the average class size to 18 students all across America.

Clinton also mentioned his continued support for such programs as Headstart pre-school and 220 Pell Grant college scholarships.

"We can make college as accessible in the 21st century as high school is today," Clinton said.

Jennifer Casasanto, a junior political science major and Student Government Association (SGA) senator, who watched the address in the University Video Center studio with other members of the student senate, feels Clinton will concentrate on education reform for the rest of his term in office and that this is an important step to securing America's future.

News

"I think the focus of his speech was education. Any reforms in education affect us all. The additional support that he is giving across the board is fantastic," Casasanto said.

While Clinton may not be able to follow through on everything he proposed in his address because he will

Turn to SEX SCANDAL, page 3

Amherst Health Board likely to pass smoking ban effective July 1

By Paul Hayes
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — The Amherst Board of Health will likely pass a ban on smoking in bars at their next meeting on Feb. 10.

The ban, tentatively scheduled to be enacted on July 1, is an amendment to previous regulations passed by the board in 1994. In the previous regulations smoking was banned in all public places except bars.

The ban would be the culmination of months of effort by the Board of Health.

"It's been a year of very careful deliberation, of trying to weigh our mandate to protect the public health against the concerns of bar owners," director of the Amherst Department of Public Health Epi Bodhi said.

The Board is also considering an added provision to the ban. Under it, bars which serve food or non-alcoholic drinks to minors, and allow smokers, would have to choose between one or the other — even if the times the two were permitted did not overlap.

"Environmental Tobacco Smoke (ETS) will still be in the air when people are done smoking, and anyone sensitive to this smoke will still be affected," board member Marisela Latimer said.

This provision will take effect if and when the Board approves it as part of town smoking regulations on the Feb. 10 meeting. On that date, bars choosing to allow smoking would have to cease allowing minors on their premises until the July 1 enactment date; and bars choosing to allow minors would have to go smoke free immediately.

However, it is uncertain if the Board will add this provision to town smoking regulations.

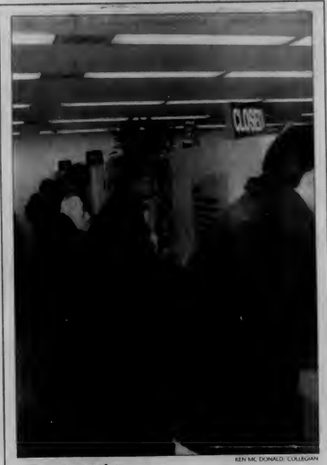
The Board's chair Sam Gladstone said the July 1 date might be enough, and to take action against the bars twice might be overkill.

Bars which would be affected by this provision are Charlies Tavern on Pray street, Delano's and the Pub on North Pleasant street, the Old Amherst Alehouse on route 116, and Rafters Sports Bar on University Drive.

For some of these bars, which serve primarily of-age customers, the choice between allowing the business of minors or smokers is an easy one.

"We're just going to have no one under 21," said Alehouse owner Eugene O'Neil.

Yet bars serving many under and over-21 customers would have to choose one source of income over the other.



One person in this position, Pub and Rafters owner Jerry Jolly, said he felt the provision would be unfair to bar owners.

"To do something like this in the middle of a semester is absolutely ridiculous," Jolly said.

The board feels strongly that the elimination of ETS from bars is part of its mission to protect the public health. Bar owners, however, strongly oppose the ban, and have said it would cause customers to go to bars in surrounding communities where smoking is allowed.

Considering the closing of several Amherst businesses, including the Classe Cafe, Seasons and Rasa Sayang, bar owners have added

Turn to SMOKE, page 3

KEN MC DONALD/COLLEGIAN
Fun in Whitmore
Students wait "patiently" in line at the Bursar's office in Whitmore yesterday.

GEO, administration at impasse in graduate contract negotiations

By Jason Eiseman
Collegian Staff

After almost two years of contract negotiations, the Graduate Employee Organization (GEO) and the University of Massachusetts administration have failed to reach an agreement, and according to both sides progress has become increasingly difficult.

"Progress has been extremely slow," said Associate Chancellor Susan Pearson, a member of the administration's negotiating team.

"There has been extremely little progress for the past several months," she said.

According to GEO Vice President, Jennifer Fasulo, the issues both groups disagree on are wage increases, affirmative action the health plan, and child care.

Fasulo said the average wage for UMass graduate students is one of the lowest in the country.

"You can't recruit the best graduates without paying good money," Fasulo said.

In addition she said, an average graduate student salary was not enough to live on. "You can't get by on that stipend. You have to get another job. A lot of our members are parents, and they're trying to support families," she said.

Pearson said her offer "on the table" has addressed the concerns of GEO.

"We proposed a stipend increased package which is a 16 percent increase over the life of the package," Pearson said. "I think personally that the administration has made eminently reasonable proposals, and GEO negotiators failed to accept it," she said.

"It was 19 months into negotiation before they offered us any wage proposal," Fasulo said.

She also said after wages; the issue of child care came into play. Furcolo

Turn to GEO, page 3

"Women in Science" hold first lecture about field

By Joseph Fountain
Collegian Staff

A newly formed group, "Women in Science," sponsored their first lecture intended to help women in the sciences stay in their field, yesterday in the Morrill Science building.

The lecture "Domestic Violence Education: Compelling Reasons for Evaluating and Revising Curriculum" was given by Dr. Julie Jonassen, assistant professor of physiology, at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center in Worcester.

Jonassen teaches physiology and ethics to her medical students. In addition, she also directs the Interclerkship Program which address topics under-represented in medical education. Three years ago, she developed a Interclerkship course on domestic and family violence, which provides fundamental knowledge about domestic violence and promotes nonjudgmental attitudes about the issue.

According to Jonassen domestic violence has largely been ignored by physicians who do not probe enough into the lives of women who may be at risk.

The question of what is domestic violence was first addressed by giving it a proper definition.

Jonassen said domestic violence is, "a pattern of coercive behavior in an intimate relationship where one partner controls the behavior of the other through fear, intimidation, humiliation,

Turn to LECTURE, page 2

New ruling may make it cheaper to buy alcohol

BOSTON — The state law on pricing alcoholic beverages violates federal antitrust law, a federal judge has decided in a ruling that could make it cheaper for imbibers to hoist a beer, glass of wine or highball.

Under the 50-year-old law, wholesalers of beer, wine and liquor must announce their prices every month.

They can match their competitors' prices, but they cannot beat them.

With no law, they could change prices any time, dropping them below the competition and, presumably, lowering the price for consumers.

The law was challenged in a federal suit brought against the state in 1994 by five package stores on Cape Cod.

U.S. District Judge Mark L. Wolf ruled Tuesday that the law is anti-competitive, and in violation of the federal antitrust law. However, he said he will not implement his ruling immediately to give the state time to decide whether to appeal.

A spokesman for the attorney general's office, which defended the state, told The Boston Globe a decision on whether to appeal will be made soon.

An appeal is likely, said Glenn Alberich, a lawyer representing the Massachusetts Association of Malt Beverage Wholesalers, which made itself a defendant in the case.

"Ultimately, consumers will benefit from this decision. Prices will be lower," Gerald Caruso, the lawyer who represented the package stores that sued, said of Wolf's ruling.

The average price of a six-pack of beer in the Boston area now is $5.10, compared with a national average of

Turn to ALCOHOL, page 2

KEN MC DONALD/COLLEGIAN
Cash rules everything around me...
Lincoln Geraghty, a junior exchange student from England prepares to dole out cash for books at the Textbook Annex.

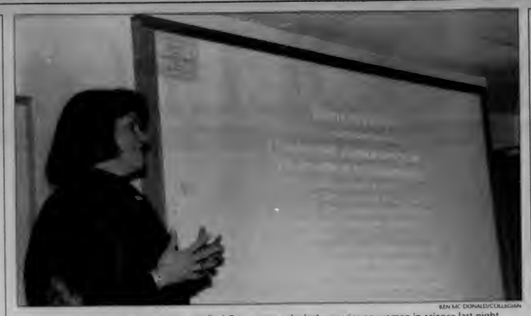
■ alcohol

continued from page 1

$4.33. A 1.5-liter bottle of wine costs an average of $6.02 in the Boston area, compared with $5.69 nationally.

However Bostonians pay an average of $17.99 for a 750-ml bottle of hard liquor that costs $18.44 on average around the country. Opponents of the state law say it amounts to price-fixing, and boosts wholesalers' profits.

The package store owners who sued said the state Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission rarely enforced the price-posting. They said this benefited retailers who violated the law by taking illegal offers of price cuts, while those who obeyed the law paid more for beer and liquor.



Wholesalers say the law doesn't affect their prices; competition does. They also say the law prevents corruption and unfair sales tactics because price information is public.

"Everyone has wrapped this up in a pro-consumer banner, but this law doesn't do an awful lot that impacts on competition," Alberich said.

"Those who want the law done away with are the more powerful retailers who can seek better deals from wholesalers than what will be given to the mom and pop stores," he said.

And, he said, the potential benefit to consumers of doing away with the law has been exaggerated.

However, the Federal Trade Commission said an analysis showed competition would increase if the law were repealed.

BEN MC DONALD/COLLEGIAN

Professor Julie Jonassen from UMass Medical Center opened a lecture series on women in science last night.

■ lecture

continued from page 1

isolation, threatened or intentional physical or sexual injury."

The problems with identifying domestic violence goes beyond the problems of asking the probing questions but to the problem of doctor's myths behind what causes domestic violence.

The interclerkships that are being held at UMass Medical Center for graduate and medical students are meant to help students understand why these myths are not true and how to question possible victims properly.

Jonassen compared a domestic violence situation to having two buckets of water and two frogs.

"If you take one bucket and bring the water to a boil and then throw the frog in it will immediately die. If you take the second frog and put it in the second bucket and slowly turn up the heat it will adjust to the temperature until it dies. This is also true in abusive relationships where the woman will leave early on if she is hit but in a longer relationship she will stay," she said.

Jonassen said the first myth doctors and people need to learn is "it's not the victim's fault."

In Jonassen opinion, "screening is extremely important to stopping domestic violence."

Doctors must stop denying domestic violence and recognize the signs of abusive relationships. There is no stereotypes for women who are abused nor the abuser, said Jonassen.

According Jonassen, many doctors are afraid to approach the subject of domestic violence with their patients because they are not always familiar with support services.

Part of the interclerkship has people from the community; police, lawyers, judges and other officials, who are ready and willing to help people that are abused.

Jonassen said in 95 percent of all domestic cases, women are battered by men. However, there are also cases of women who abuse men as well as abuse in gay and lesbian relationships.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
Jan. 21
A minor accident occurred on Massachusetts Avenue.
Jan. 22
A two-vehicle accident occurred at President's Drive and Massachusetts Avenue. No injuries were reported.
Jan. 23
Slippery road conditions caused one vehicle to collide with another on Massachusetts Avenue.
A minor accident occurred at an intersection in parking lot 71 on Massachusetts Avenue.
Jan. 24
A vehicle hit a traffic sign on Fearing Avenue.
Jan. 26
A three-car accident occurred on University Drive. No injuries were reported.

Annoying Behavior
Jan. 22
Loud individuals were disturbing residents in Prince Residence Hall.
Individuals were involved in a dispute at the W.E.B. Library.
Jan. 24
An individual from the University Press reported being harassed by another individual.
Jan. 25
Individuals handing out leaflets were impeding traffic on Fearing Street.
There was a report of an individual smashing windows on the 6th floor of Grayson Residence Hall.
There was a report of an individual urinating in the hallway of Baker Residence Hall.
Jan. 27
An individual reported being harassed in the Campus Center.
A staff member from Boyden Gymnasium reported individuals who refused to the leave the gym.
An individual at University Health Services reported being threatened.

Breaking & Entering/Burglary
Jan. 22
An Individual from Thoreau Residence Hall reported a stereo stolen from his room over break.
Jan. 24
An Individual from Brett Residence Hall reported compact discs stolen from room over break.
An individual from John Quincy Adams Residence Hall reported a television stolen from room over break. Estimated value $225.

Health and Safety Hazard
Jan. 23
Individuals were exricated from an elevator in the W.E.B. Dubois Library.

Larceny
Jan. 21
A laptop was reported stolen from an office in Gunness Laboratory. Estimated value $2500.
Jan. 26
A past larceny of camera equipment was reported stolen from Morrill Science Center. Estimated value $1000.
Jan. 27
A calculator was reported stolen from University Health Services. Estimated value $200.
A cell phone was reported stolen from the Campus Center. Estimated value $800.

Traffic Stop
Jan. 27
Christopher S. Coakley, 23, of 387 N. Pleasant St., Amherst, was arrested on Fearing Street with warrant for trespassing.

Vandalism
Jan. 27
Valve stems were removed from all four tires on a vehicle in parking lot 49 on Van Meter Road.

Warrant Service
Jan. 26
Ji Won Choi, 18, 322-1601 Olympic Apartments, Songpa, Seoul, Korea, was arrested in Johnson Residence Hall on a warrant.

Correction

The release date of Pearl Jam's new album, Yield, was incorrectly reported in yesterday's issue. The album will be released Tuesday, Feb. 3. The Collegian regrets the error

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS

Paid officials Needed for Basketball, Ice Hockey & Wrestling.

Basketball #1 - Jan. 28 @ 6pm (Boyden 249)
Basketball #2 - Jan. 29, 30 @7pm (Totman Gym)
(you must attend both clinics)
Ice Hockey - Feb. 2 @ 6pm (Boyden 223)
Wrestling - Feb. 9 @ 6pm (Boyden 223)
Still time to enter: Basketball & Ice Hockey
More Info: 215 Boyden, 5-2693
On the Web: http://www.umass.edu/umim/

The Collegian is currently accepting applications for the following editorial positions:

Developing Nations Editor
Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender Issues Editor
Jewish Affairs Editor

Experience with writing and reporting with concentration in the applicable community is preferred for these paid staff positions.

To get involved in any other aspect of the Collegian newsroom, stop by 113 Campus Center and speak to Managing Editor Laura Stock or the editor of the desk you'd like to write for, Sunday-Thursday, noon-5 p.m.

Minutemaniacs

1997-98 Member Registration

It's not to late to become a Minutemaniac!
UMass Student Booster Club.

Minutemaniac Benefits:
- Advanced Reserved Ticket Pickup
- Minutemaniac T-Shirt
- Game Receptions
- "The UMass Maniac" Newsletter
- Membership Card

Great Value at $25.00 to Join!

Look for Minutemaniac registration at the student entrance to the MullinsCenter at basketball and hockey games.
If you have any questions, give us a call at 545-9672.
Complete form below, cut, and mail to Minutemaniacs at:
308 Mullins Center ● University of Massachusetts ● Box 35910 ● Amherst, MA 01003

Application for Minutemaniacs Membership

Student Name:_____
Student #:_____
Local Address:_____
Local Phone: _____ Year at UMass:_____
Home Address:_____
City:_____ State:_____ Zip:_____ Home Phone:_____
Make checks payable to: UMAF
Or Charge to your credit card: Visa ❑ Mastercard ❑ Discover ❑
Number_____ Expiration Date_____

A special Series of Free Campus Events
http://www.umass.edu/campus_events/calendar.htm

0:00pm

riday; Saturday;

to Febru

DAILY COLLEGIAN

■ sex scandal

continued from page 1

have to look to Congress for support, Casasanto believes that it was important for him to put forth his ideal agenda regardless of whether or not Congress will back him up.

"Any president should always put forth everything he wants to accomplish and then be optimistic about it," Casasanto said.

Republican Club President and SGA senator Paul Ferro felt that Clinton took credit for many positive changes that was really due to the work of Congress.

"He seemed to take credit for things that should be attributed to Congress, such as lowering the deficit... I find it amazing that he can say all these things but not get very deep on details," Ferro said.

"He needs to concentrate more on impacting in a modest way. Start with something that's not so grandiose," Ferro said, referring to Clinton's plan to save Social Security.

Howard Wiarda, professor of political science at UMass, felt that although the speech was well given, it was used to cover up the scandal that was on the minds of many viewers.

"The speech was well delivered and well prepared... but it was designed to divert attention from present difficulties. It was like there was a gigantic elephant in the middle of the dining room that no one talked about. Look not just at what he said, but the purpose of the speech," Wiarda said.

He also offered his own insight into what lay ahead for Clinton's proposed changes and improvements.

"All of this is up to Congress. Clinton presented a laundry list... not very many [bills] are going to be passed by Congress. The speech was very carefully crafted to have a little of everything for everyone," Wiarda said.

Claiming it as one of the best speeches Clinton has ever given, Jerome Mileur, also a professor in the political science department, believes it was designed to address goals for the State and Clinton simply overcame the personal difficulties that threatened to shadow it.

"I thought it was a superb speech. It was clear headed, well focused, and he clearly made education the center of his domestic plans for the future. "I think [the speech] was designed to be a State of the Union address. He overcame present difficulties and it was remarkable for that reason," Mileur said.

KEN MC DONALD/ COLLEGIAN

The siege of Surge
Brian Mursch and Shaun Barry, both junior communication majors, participate in the Surge promotion which is currently being held outside the Student Union.

■ smoke

continued from page 1

reason to show concern regarding the effects of a ban.

"[The ban] just shows the board's attitude towards small businesses," Spoke manager Dave Rohde said.

During the board's Jan. 7 meeting, member David Buchanan brought this concern to the board's attention during their Jan. 7 meeting.

"The opinion of many is this ban will be taxing on Amherst businesses, that it would be more fair if the approach was region wide," Buchanan said.

Alternative approaches to implementing a smoking ban on the bars were presented on Jan. 7, including plans to successively increase the number of days bars would be smoke-free each week. Bars would be smoke-free one day a week, and with each successive month or couple of months another day would be added until bars were smoke-free seven days a week.

This approach would have allowed the board to determine if the ban truly had a negative effect on bar business, and would have allowed the bars and their customers time to get used to the ban.

Gladstone said he agreed that bars would lose business, but that the board would have to decide what its priorities were.

"We need to decide if we should bite the bullet [now], or to do so at all," Gladstone said.

The board eventually decided against the alternate solutions, because they felt the health concerns outweighed the business concerns.

■ GEO

continued from page 1

explained the most important movement in the negotiations was made when the administration agreed to go to the State for a GEO wage increase, and use the money saved on that to spend on affirmative action and child care.

"There are 24,000 students, and 6,000 workers. And for that huge population of people they only have 78 slots," Fasulo said.

Fasulo added only 19 slots were subsidized, so as to be affordable for low-income graduate students. She also said child care in Amherst averaged $4,800 per year, which costs over half of the average graduate student salary.

Pearson said the administration is working to put more money into child care, and find more money for low-income students. "We've proposed increased funding for disadvantaged students," she said.

Fasulo said GEO wants to negotiate the graduate health care package. She said that Employees have health care provided for them by health services, but many employees would like to have an option other than University health services. In addition, there is no optical or dental coverage for the current health plan, and graduate students are not covered by the plan during the summer.

One of the larger issues for GEO is the lack of diversity within the graduate student population. Fasulo said in the last two decades the number of African, Latin American, Asian, and Native American (ALANA) students has dropped, while the University has said it would try to increase the number of ALANA students at the University.

Fasulo said that out of 6,000 graduate students there are 524 ALANA students. She said that number of African American graduate students has declined by 49 percent, and the number of Latino graduate students has declined by 24 percent. Many ALANA students also flock to one department leaving many departments without any ALANA graduate students.

"There are 35 departments on the graduate level that don't have a single ALANA student," Fasulo said. "There is a severe lack of representation in the T. A. [teaching assistant] population. There are 1200 T.A.'s, and only 20 are ALANA."

Massachusetts law requires that the graduate employee contract be renegotiated every three years.

According to Fasulo and Pearson negotiations have been ongoing for almost two years. March of 1999 will mark the three-year anniversary of when the two parties last began negotiations and both parties will have to renegotiate again, regardless of any agreement which is made this semester.

"A year from now we'll be back at the table," Pearson said.

Fasulo said that this past weekend GEO held a bake sale to help raise money for some of their proposals, and on Monday, Feb. 2 with the money raised from the bake sale, GEO will present a check to Chancellor David K. Scott.

"We feel like we're gearing up for a major action in early spring," Fasulo said.

"I hope that the GEO leadership will come to acknowledge that the administrations proposals are reasonable," Pearson said.

Bell's Pizza House

20 oz SODA NOW 75¢
No Coupon Needed
Bell's Pizza • 549-1311
65 University Dr. • Amherst

LARGE CHEESE PIZZA $5.00 & 25 tax
With this coupon • Exp. 8/31/98
Non comb. with any other offer
Bell's Pizza • 549-1311
65 University Dr. • Amherst

WANT A SODA OR SNACK FROM THE VENDING MACHINE?

USE YOUR Card

UCARD VENDING IS COMING FOR SPRING 1998 AT THE:

Campus Center ™ Bartlett Student Union Whitmore
Lederle GRC Herter
Conte SOM
and selected residence halls

WITH YOUR UCARD, NO CHANGE OR BILLS NEEDED

IT TAKES JUST $10 TO OPEN A UCARD DEBIT ACCOUNT

VISIT THE UCARD OFFICE @ FRANKLIN DINING HALL
OPENING WEEK HOURS, M-TH 8:30-7, F 8:30-5

CALL 545-0197 FOR MORE INFORMATION

Right Here Right Now!

Begin a career in our corporate office.

We're Ames. One of the dominant discount store chains in America, with more than $2 billion in sales and 300 stores in 14 states across the Northeast. Currently, we're looking for dynamic, creative, success-oriented graduates with excellent communication, analytical, and planning skills!

Assistant Buyer Training Program

Because discount retailing has developed into a complex, dynamic field where farsightedness and strategic planning are essential for success, we've created a formal, 10-week training program for you that couples comprehensive classroom seminars and on-the-job training with a successful Buyer.

Upon successful completion of the 10-week program, you will become an Assistant Buyer. Then, you'll work alongside a Buyer, assisting in the management of a $20 to $100 million business! As an Assistant Buyer, you will continue to participate in ongoing developmental seminars, Business Analysis Group Workshops, and other training support programs...all designed to ultimately prepare you for a career in Buying.

Finance Executive Trainees

As a Finance Executive Trainee, you will participate in our 10-week training program, designed to provide you with an understanding of the fundamentals of retail and orient you with Ames. On-the-job training in our Finance Division is coupled with seminars and classes taught by senior management.

Upon successful completion of the 10-week training program, rotational on-the-job training continues as you work within the various departments of our Finance Division, such as Planning & Analysis, Internal Audit, Accounting, and Accounts Payable.

We're looking for dynamic, creative, success-oriented graduates with excellent communication, analytical, and planning skills.

If that's you, please come talk to us!
We'll be at the University of Massachusetts on the following days:

School of Management Information Session
Campus Center, Room 905
Thursday, February 19th
7:00pm - 8:30pm

Campus Career Network Information Session
Campus Center, Room 903
Thursday, February 26th
7:00pm - 8:30pm

Sign up for an on-campus interview at your Career Placement Office today!

Contact your Career Placement Office to schedule an interview or for more detailed information.

Ames
Department Stores, Inc., Rocky Hill, CT
Ames is an equal opportunity employer M/F/D/V.

— The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian —

The truth of the matter

Leave the sordid sex stuff out of this.

True, the inexcusable act of adultery is part of the controversy. But were Bill Clinton an average chap in the private sector who engaged in such a wretched act, chances are he'd just be the father in mid–life crisis — maybe one of many in the neighborhood — of someone you know. It just so happens Bill has a really, really important job.

But most folks aren't huffing and puffing as much over the possibility that Clinton may have lied and forced Monica Lewinsky to lie as well. They're more crimson over a married man — the president no less — perhaps having fornicated with yet another woman, a 21–year–old intern at that. How immoral!

First and foremost, let's eschew any whacked–out notions that politics and morals are any more compatible than David Duke and Angela Davis. Everybody knows that folks do bad things when they have power. That Clinton got caught with his hand in the cookie jar (among other places allegedly) is not the issue at hand. That Clinton may have forced Lewinsky to lie about the incident is what becomes highly problematic.

The moralistic argument is, from an historical perspective, almost moot. Leaders have had mistresses, have mistresses, and probably will continue to have mistresses, though media bloodhounding makes it a little more difficult these days. And from a moral standpoint, who would even pretend to condone such behavior? But those who base greater grievance with the adultery versus the perjury are missing the whole point. To illustrate, take to task on moral grounds three of our most significant presidents of the 20th century: Franklin Delano Roosevelt, John Fitzgerald Kennedy and Richard Milhous Nixon.

Roosevelt bailed the country out of the Depression, instituted Social Security, and cheated on his wife. Which of the above items makes him a lousy president? The answer is none. A lousy man, maybe.

Kennedy remains one of our most beloved American icons despite his widely–known infidelity. Maybe creating the Peace Corps and pushing along major Civil Rights legislation is and will always be more important to us. Why? Because it should be.

Place the blame on Nixon for screwing it all up. No, maybe he didn't have an affair (that we know of), but that whole darn Watergate fiasco really brought the press into a new era of investigative reporting. And while it was about time Joe Public realized that even the Chief Executive could be a Tricky Dick, we should have seen the consequences coming — the scrutiny of our leaders would reach far, far beyond what they did from a legal standpoint to compromise the integrity of their desired or held offices.

And while few Americans in their right mind would trade away freedom of the press, imagine how our identity might have been reshaped if FDR, while fighting for the New Deal, was simultaneously fending off mounting accusations of adultery. Could be distracting while you're trying to rebuild a nation, don't you think?

Unfortunately for Clinton, we are not in a depression nor are we at war, two factors which could have bought him some smokescreen time. He has to face the banjo music one way or another. Even if he didn't sleep with Lewinsky, the allegation itself still becomes yet another in a damaging series, more destructive to the perception of his character than the state of his presidency. However, now that he has emphatically refuted all charges leveled against him by Lewinsky, his "I did not have sexual relations with that woman" would become his "I am not a crook" if he is proven guilty.

But are sexual misadventures what it takes now to force us to evaluate the quality of a leader? If Clinton is nailed for this one, it would be the political equivalent of Al Capone's imprisonment for tax evasion. After the one–two punch of Whitewater and a term–and–a–half of no notable action, this guy had it coming for other reasons than the most recent. Unfortunately, you can't be impeached for unproven allegations and hollow promises — promises like, say, wedding vows.

"The reason Bill Clinton should go down if he's guilty is because he lied illegally this time, not on some high–ground bone of contention that his character is questionable."

While it may seem cynical, the reason Bill Clinton should go down if he's guilty is because he lied illegally this time, not on some high–ground bone of contention that his character is questionable — well, duh. And when it comes down to it, it's just Bill or Dad who has to look Hillary or Chelsea in the eye knowing what he has or hasn't done, just like any other man.

The sanctity of his marriage and family is Clinton's bag, but the alleged perjurious dishonor of the presidency is ours.

C. Taylor Conner is a Collegian columnist.

A moral dilemma

I want a man.

I want him to be honest. I want him to be respectable. I want him to be a leader.

I want him to be president.

For those who believe Bill Clinton's latest alleged infidelity is acceptable because, "hey, he's a just normal guy," let me remind you of one thing.

Clinton is the most powerful man in the free world... with a few proclivities, it seems.

To those who justify Clinton's impropriety by labeling his behavior as that of a "typical" politician, hopelessly (and excusably) immoral, I fear for the future of our democracy.

"Is he a president or a predator? It's debatable."

It may be an imperfect marriage, but politics and morals are inextricably linked. Simply put, if Clinton was open and honest about his extramarital affairs, he would not have been elected president.

The rapt attention the media and the American public are paying to the Clinton sex scandal is not just another feeding frenzy; it is justification for what I believe will be the president's ultimate fate: leaving the White House in disgrace.

If the allegations are true that Clinton committed perjury by lying under oath about his affairs and asked others to lie as well, and on top of that, had sexual relations with a then– 21–year–old Monica Lewinsky while she was interning in his office, he is no longer fit to be president.

Why? Because Clinton's credibility is already shot.

How embarrassing for this country that, while sitting next to Yassir Arafat, the president had to address his sex life.

How frightening for the U.S. soldiers in Iraq who have anthrax–filled missiles pointing at them that we Americans back home care more about distinguishing characteristics on the president's genitalia.

The Pope visited Cuba, Whitewater remains under investigation, and we've still got troops over in Bosnia — but our attention is diverted to the DNA–testing of clothing seized from Lewinsky's home which may prove she had sex with Clinton. Disgusting.

I do not think it too lofty to hope the president of our country — a leader, a role model, an influential man in domestic and foreign policy — has morals. And when scandals like this break open, it makes you wonder what else Clinton is lying about.

First he said didn't have an affair with Gennifer Flowers, but now he admits it. Already tangled up with Paula Jones, Clinton is now embroiled with Lewinsky.

And God knows who else? Is he a president or a predator? It's debatable.

Surprisingly lacking is female reaction to the president's exploits. Perhaps everyone is too busy towing the party line to express their true opinions. Am I the only woman offended by Clinton's blatant disregard for the feelings of his wife and daughter?

As a 21–year–old woman who has interned in government offices, I would feel threatened and harassed if my boss approached me in a sexual manner. And if Lewinsky went after Clinton, the man with the power to destroy large portions of the planet with a single bomb should have executed better judgement and controlled his libido. Not to mention thinking of his wife, or Chelsea — who is so close in age to Lewinsky it's unnerving.

I understand party loyalty to a certain extent. I voted for Clinton — but I feel betrayed. Like most Americans, I didn't want to believe the reports when they broke. My knee–jerk reaction was that Lewinsky was fabricating, or Republicans were conspiring against him. Now it is looking bad for Bill, and it's getting worse.

The record–high viewership of Clinton's State of the Union address is simultaneously inspiring and pathetic. Obviously, the president was not going to address the Lewinsky matter in that setting. But did anyone catch the irony in the weary–eyed president's speech?

The focus of Clinton's address was childcare and after–school programs for latch–key kids, particularly those of single, working mothers. As the foremost male figure in this nation, the "First Man" if you will, Clinton hardly provides a glowing example. If anything, he stands to contribute to growing statistics of broken families.

Who are we to judge this man? We are voters, constituents, and yes, the employers of Bill Clinton. He is our public servant, and we have to determine whether we want him working for us anymore.

Laura Stock is a Collegian columnist.

Point Counterpoint
by Laura Stock

Of rock stars and French class...

All my life, I've wanted to be a rock star.

To me, being a rock star is the life. If I've learned anything from TV, it's that all rock stars do is wash down valiums with vodka, drive Harley's down hotel lobbies throwing TVs into the swimming pool, and break up because "the drugs got in the way of the music."

Now that's the life.

But Housemate C says I'm not skinny enough to be a rock star. Plus, I could never grow my hair long.

Luke Meredith

So I went to college. At college, I've been told I have to learn a foreign language to graduate. According to "The Man" (yeah, him), a degree in journalism isn't complete without some knowledge of some other country's language.

Hmm.

So with "The Man" on my ass, I enrolled in French 120 over winter–session. Three weeks of le francais. Two and a half hours a day. Five days a week.

Hmm.

My experience in French classes was minimal. Two unremarkable stints at Methuen High, the highlight being an incident in which my teacher asked me how old I was. When I replied, "15, Ms. Taylor," she said "Well, your grade's a little lower than that."

Hmm.

I tried again with French 110 in 1994, a hazy semester spent copying my friend's homework. So coming into 120, I was raw material, ready to be molded into l'etudiant extordinaire.

Quite a challenge.

What I learned these last three weeks has been mind– boggling. While some of you were skiing, working or even sitting on le fanny watching "Growing Pains" reruns (oh Maggie, oh Maggie), I learned some very interesting things about our friends en France.

For one, France rules the world of Olympic handball. Young boys and girls tack posters of qu–il fait du handball on their walls, with dreams of Olympic glory and bringing the gold back to en ville.

Hmm.

I learned that in French, the term "I watch you" is "Je vous regarde." which translates into "I you watch."

And nobody can tell me why.

Throw in "I didn't watch you," which is "Je ne vous regarde pas."

Translation? "I no you watch no."

Again, nobody can tell me why.

Hmm. (Le conspiracy, perhaps. Wouldn't doubt it).

Three weeks ago, I couldn't say my name in French. But now I walk around the house muttering things like "Je parle francais" and "Slump et fimmy boit beaucoup de la biere." Last Friday evening, at 2 a.m., the tipsy trio of Garv Housemate B (or La maison–ami B, to those down with francais) and I spent 20 minutes making fun of passed out Housemate A en francais. Yesterday, I translated a newspaper ad about shaving cream into French. While going to the bathroom.

Hmm.

To finish things out, "The Man" has got me in French 246, which promises to be tres difficile. And though I really don't know how to say much of anything, I can go about the rest my days able to conjugate regarder in the workbook.

Or at least come close.

I now know that IR verbs are different from ER verbs (different stems, kid), and that it's okay to not know why the French say "Je vous regarde" and not "Je regarde vous" like we do.

I've learned just to shut up and try to memorize all those wacky stems. It may not be as fun as what Bon Jovi, Axl Rose or that guy in Pantera (the one who's always yelling) do to kill time, but then, they never had to go to UMass.

Besides, if I ever grew my hair long, my girlfriend would probably kill me.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

MATT DAVIES 1998 COPLEY NEWS SERVICE

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Aren't you tired of turning to strangers in the Dining Common and giving them your commentary on the news of the day? Or rather, aren't you tired of having soup thrown in your face? Write Editorials.

Expose people to your ideas, however slight they may seem to the people who threw hot liquids at you from afar. You'll be safe. Trust us.

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor. Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words long, and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes.

They can be submitted by mail to Ed/Op Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst MA 01003; by email to letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu; or by fax to (413) 545–1592.

The Collegian reserves the right to edit letters for length, clarity, and style.

Attention all interested columnists:
There will be a meeting tonight for prospective columnists at 7 p.m. at the Collegian offices in 113 Campus Center Basement. Please bring a sample column, approximately 600–800 words long, with you. Call Dan Bodah or Tamar Carroll at 545–1491 for more information.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Co–Opinion Editor
Tamar Carroll Editorial/Opinion Co–Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Albertina Fernandes Multicultural Affairs Editor
Leigh Faulkner News Editor
Lauren Kosky Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor
Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
David Parmenter Editorial Production Assistant
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Presses Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley–Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

New cover design to "snazz up" Spectrum

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

Ever dream of getting published? Spectrum, a literary magazine at the University of Massachusetts, gives students the opportunity to showcase their talents to the Five College community.

"Spectrum provides an outlet for students to show off their work," said Managing Editor Sarah Gillis. The magazine accepts work from Five College student, including poetry, prose and visual art. The visual art category includes slides, photographs and original art. The deadline for submissions is Feb. 12.

"We're always looking for more submissions," Gillis said.

In the past, Spectrum has hosted poetry and prose readings, "but we are always looking for new things to do," Gillis said.

Last year, Spectrum featured a plain green cover and this year, the editorial staff decided to try something different. The magazine held a cover design contest last semester.

"The contest was new. The last couple of years, we didn't have any artwork," Gillis said.

While Gillis and prose editor, Alison Jones, won't say much about the cover design, Jones said that the artwork by contest winner Tim Murley does a lot to "snazz up the magazine."

Spectrum, which describes itself as a high quality annual magazine, will publish 2,000 copies in April. The magazine, which will run about 56 pages, will feature 45 different writers and artists.

"We try to feature as many writers as we can," Gillis said.

Jones said that there were not many submissions for the prose section of the magazine.

"Prose can be fiction, non–fiction, short story," Jones said. "But there are space limits, so it can't be too long."

Also needed are submissions of visual arts.

"We're sadly lacking in visual arts," Gillis said, citing the vast amount of talented artists in the Five College area.

Spectrum will set up a table on the concourse in the coming week, for those interested in learning more about the magazine or getting involved.

"It's really good experience for publishing," Gillis said. She pointed out that working at the magazine not only provides experience in management and editing, but also provides hands–on skills in budgeting, grant writing, leadership and organization.

General meeting times and dates are posted at the Spectrum office. Currently, the magazine has an editorial staff of seven and total staff of 25 but "we're always looking for more people," Gillis said.

Those interested in submitting poetry, prose and visual art to Spectrum should bring their submissions to room 406E in the Student Union.

COURTESY SPECTRUM MAGAZINE

Visual art by Alison Cabaero

A look at what MTV doesn't show: videos

By Marty Keane
Collegian Staff

David Bowie — "I'm Afraid of Americans"

Just the thought of Mr. Ziggy Stardust, David Bowie, getting chased around the streets of Manhattan by Mr. Doom, Trent Reznor, is enough to make me soil my drawers... well, almost.

Bowie's triumphant return to his artistic heyday of the '70s is further cemented on this wonderfully deranged clip of another fine Bowie/Brian Eno–penned collaboration. The paranoid British rock star is seen running away from a completely freakish Reznor, sporting a full–on fu manchu and playing the part of stalker as only he could. Bloody brilliant. A

Daft Punk — "Around The World"

The second single off one of last year's finest releases, this hilarious lounge–in–cheek clip features a slew of outrageously costumed dancers shakin' their thing to the song's infectious beats. The trashy '70s disco vibe and cheesy cinematography all contribute to make this one of the better, more creative videos to come along in a while. A–

Green Day — "Time of Your Life"

One of the saddest stories in recent memory is this once "too cool" punk band's descent into the musical abyss known as Collective Soul Trench. The song itself is OK, but to see Billie Joe gently strumming an acoustic guitar with cuts of stop–motion shots and silly non–sequitur scenes of bandmates Tré Cool and Mike Dirnt is reason aplenty to grab the motion sickness bag.

After reaching the top of the hill with 1994's left field hit Dookie, this Berkeley trio is finding that the downhill trek is a slippery slope. C–

The Verve — "Bitter Sweet Symphony"

Yet another pretentious Britpop band sneering and swaggering throughout another video. sure, but who can deny Richard

Turn to VIDEO, page 6

COURTESY ENRIQUE BADULESCU

David Bowie stars as a paranoid Brit in his latest video, aptly titled "I'm Afraid of Americans."

write for arts

EMERGENCY MEDICAL TRAINING
•by Human Services Training Consultants, Inc.
•Part Time Evening
•Classes start February 9, 1998
•Call UMASS, Continuing Education at 545 – 0474

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS
Late Entrants should check for extensions in Boyden 215
Still time to enter:
Basketball (M/W/C)....A.S.A.P
Ice Hockey (M/W).....A.S.A.P
Get Those forms in by 2/2:
Wallyball (M/W/C)
Wrestling (M/W)

spring break fever
Need a break?
Cheap tickets. Great advice. Nice people.
Ft. Lauderdale $178
Cancun $304
Orlando $178
Los Angeles $355
Council Travel
CIEE Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main Street
Amherst
(413) 256-1261

COMPARE!
MORE MACHINES
• Stairmasters • Treadmills
• Lifecycles • Nordic Track • Kenser
• Nautilus • Tectrix • Olympic Free Weights
BETTER AEROBICS
• Hi/Low • Reebok Bench Step
• Area's Largest Aerobics Space • Yoga
• Cardio Kick Boxing • Suspended Wood Floor
"Big enough to own the best equipment, but small enough to know your name"
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 West St., Amherst

— Jewish Student Conferences —
Spitzer Public Policy Forum
February 22-24, 1998 in Ft. Lauderdale, Florida.
Join campus and community activists, student body presidents and officers, members of college community relations councils, College Democrats and College Republicans, Greek Leadership, Jewish political activists, journalists, and political science majors in strengthening Jewish involvement in political activism, community service and social change! Sponsored by over 18 national organizations including US Pirg, Rock the Vote, Oxfam America, and Hillel.
Total cost of registration and all meals and accomidations in the Registry Resort and Spa is $250, but registration and travel subsidies are widely available. Deadline February 12.
Yale Model Isreali Knesset
February 19-22, 1998 at Yale University
Don't miss this totally fun, incredible conference where you will be joining students from all over the Northeast in celebrating 50 years of Isreali independence by changing the answers to the questions that defined Isreal's statehood in 1948. Total cost of $45 includes registration, housing, and 3 meals. Subsidies available. You need to register right away!
AHAVA
February 20-22...National Leadership Conference for Gay/Lesbian/Bi-sexual and Questioning Jewish Students at U Michigan In Ann Arbor. Sponsored by Lights in Action. Registration $45, housing and meals available. Travel subsidies available from local and national level. For more info, call/ e-mail Lissa (see above), or contact LIA at 1-800-Jews-act/lialnc@aol.com. You need to register right away!
For info on registering, subsidies, or travel for these three conferences (or about other conferences coming up) call David or Lissa at 549-1710 or e-mail Lissa@external.umass.edu.

EVEN THE GROUNDHOG WILL COME OUT FOR THESE SPECIALS
LIQUORS 44 Don't Drink and Drive
COORS GOLD CASE 30-12 OZ. CANS $10.49 + DEP
MOLSON GOLDEN ICE LIGHT CASE 2-12 PK BOTTLES $13.49 + DEP
GENESEE CREAM ALE ICE BEER CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS SALE $9.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $6.49 + DEP
SAMUEL ADAMS ALL FLAVORS 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.49 + DEP
CIDER JACK ALL FLAVORS 4 PK. BOTTLES $4.99
GROLSCH 12 PK. BOTTLES $9.49 + DEP
ROLLING ROCK 1/2 KEGS $33.99 + DEP
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LT, BUD ICE, MICH, MICH LT, MICH AMBER BOCK, KIRKHOUSE, RED DOG, LITE $39.99 + DEP
WINE OF THE MONTH
Cavit CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, PINOT GRIGIO, CAB SAUV. 750 ML $5.99
FRANZIA CHABLIS, BLUSH, WHITE GRENACHE, RHINE, CHELSEA RED, CORTI'S BLANC, FRENCH COLOMBARD, WESTFIELD RED 5 LT BAG-IN-A-BOX $6.99
RENE JUNOT RED & WHITE 1.5 L $5.99
CORBETT CANYON WHITE ZINFANDEL 1.5 LT. $4.99
BOONES WINE ALL FLAVORS 750 ML $1.99
MERIDIAN CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML $7.99
JACK DANIELS SOUTHERN COCKTAILS 4 PKS. $3.69
POPOV VODKA 1.75 L $10.99
BACARDI LIMON 750 ML $8.99
Canadian Club 1.75 L $16.49
POLAND SPRINGS GIN 1.75 L $9.99
RON ROBERTO RUM LIGHT & GOLD 1.75 L $9.99
GIRO TEQUILA SILVER & GOLD 1 ML $6.99
JIM BEAM BOURBON 1.75 L $15.49
Discounts Available on Cases of Wine & Liquor. Ask For Details.
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 1.29.98 THRU WEDS. 2.4.98
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

■ video

continued from page 5

Ashcroft's brazenness as he constantly knocks into pedestrians while humming the words to 1997's most inevitable tune. Everything about "Bitter Sweet Symphony" is epic, from the cascading strings to the anguished vocal delivery and the stellar video it no different. A-

Prodigy — "Smack My Bitch Up"

The song — and video — that has everyone from MTV to the National Organization for Women up in arms, Prodigy's latest is a misogynistic embarrassment but the video is pretty interesting, not to mention perverse. The payoff at the video's sordid conclusion where the subject turns out to be a woman is reason enough to watch this arcane treat. B

Cornershop — "Brimful of Asha"

With an overly-cheery teen bobbing her head to-and-fro, Cornershop's "Brimful of Asha" video deftly augments the song's simple yet irresistible chorus and refrain. Having the girl play with her 45's is a nice touch as are the shots of the band superimposed on the record sleeves. Proof positive of simplicity's big allure. B+

Mase — "Feel So Good"

What is it about this guy? Puffy's latest protege typifies everything about the cocksure boastfulness emblematic of today's urban hip-hop scene but does so in a pleasantly lackadaisical way that it's forgivable. Endless posing and gratuitous outfits aside "Feel So Good" does manage to showcase one of rap's emerging stars in a video that is standard-fare for the genre but done with Puffy's Midas touch. B

Savage Garden — "Truly Madly Deeply"

Comparable to a Top 40 version of fellow Aussie's Silverchair, only worse. Much worse. I'll be kind and say that this is completely unwatchable drivel. F

Ben Folds Five — "Brick"

This video demonstrates the quandary of when an excellent song is matched together with a comparably boring, unexciting video. But then again, the introspective scenes and heartfelt moments still touched a chord, albeit a minor one. B-

Aqua — "Candyman"

A carbon-copy follow-up to their smash debut single, "Barbie Girl," "Candyman" features more driving, repetitive beats with cheeseball lyrical interplay between our heroine, Lene, and her loser bandmate with the weird hairdo. It was cute... the first time. C-

COURTESY DOUG CURRAN

A small problem...

Famke Janssen, Kevin J. O'Conner, Treat Williams, Wes Studi and Anthony Heald find themselves in a bit of a jam when the sea creatures attack their luxury cruise liner in Deep Rising. The film opens tomorrow.

Stars of screen and... Web?

By Chris Allbritton
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Sexy, sultry Pamela Anderson Lee, former "Baywatch" star, has 67. "Batman and Robin" co-star Alicia Silverstone, 91. Kate Winslet, star of the disaster epic Titanic, only five.

We're talking World Wide Web sites here. (What did you think we were counting?)

These are sites built by fans and cataloged by Yahoo!, one of the most popular search engines on the Web. Numbers were obtained through an informal count of Web sites for popular stars of music, television and film. Stars like Harrison Ford, Will Smith and Courtney Cox.

"On the Web, you can obsess 24 hours a day," said Jon Katz, media critic for HotWired, an online magazine. The Web is "a phenomenal medium for celebrity worship." While it might surprise some fans that Lee is not No. 1, neither is "Lois & Clark's" Teri Hatcher, a popular Net fixture for fan adoration, who has 53 sites.

No, the actress who earns the unofficial title of "Queen of the Net" is Gillian Anderson, who plays FBI agent Dana Scully on Fox television's enigmatic "The X-Files." By recent count on Yahoo!, Anderson has 99 sites devoted to her. That handily tops Lee, who has what some might consider the unfair advantage of being naked in many of her pictures.

Surprised?

"Anderson is all over the Net," Katz said.

Both Anderson and "X-Files" co-star David Duchovny have worked the Net — Duchovny to a lesser degree — granting online interviews to Web sites and to America Online, although neither was available for comment for this article, according to their managers.

Duchovny has 41 sites. The Artist Formerly Known as Prince has 46. Hanson, a teen-heartthrob band consisting of three brothers and the insanely catchy single "MMMBop," has 67.

Pair the instant communication of the Web with celebrity worship and you come up with a feast of eye candy for star-hunting netheads. Fans can toil for days to amass collections of pictures, interviews and recordings for their Web sites, all in homage to their favorite celebs.

Camille Paglia, author of several books on American pop culture, recalled her own days of star worship. As a teen-ager, Paglia collected 5x9 photographs of Elizabeth Taylor and harassed Barbra Streisand's arranger, Peter Matz, at home.

"If I was 13 now, oh my God!" she said, a little wistfully. "If I were young today, I would just go wild."

Going wild is what being a fan is all about. The Web is a 24-hour orgy of star worship, Katz said. Celebrity worship knows no borders or time zones. Fans scattered across continents can communicate, swap pictures or tell stories instantly.

Anderson and Duchovny have marketed themselves well on the Web, adding to their star status.

"They're as close to the king and queen of the Net as you can get," Katz said. The Web also made actress Jeri Ryan a star before she ever appeared as the Borg beauty, Seven of Nine, on television's "Star Trek: Voyager." Ryan was a little unsettled when she found an entire Web site dedicated to her just six days after she was cast.

"I was all over the Web before my first episode aired," she said: "It was flattering, but it was certainly a little shocking."

Katz said the new global medium offers opportunities for emerging stars to bypass television and magazine "big media." The Web, he said, "takes power away from the big celebrity machines and puts it in the hands of the fans." That might some day undermine traditional public relation agencies and break the stranglehold that a limited number of superstars has on the media's attention.

However, with the patchwork audiences of the Web, it will be harder to appeal to a mass audience, Esther Dyson, author of Release 2.0, said celebrities' handlers and agents "will have to be more clever."

"To get into People magazine will still be an amazing thing," she said.

Katz agreed. "Unlike in the mass media, people on the Web are seeing thousands of things instead of four or five of the same things. Very few people are seeing the same thing."

That works against established stars like Tom Hanks, John Travolta and Sharon Stone.

The Web also has a strong geek element that tends to focus not on leading men with big biceps but on the "thinking man's crumpet," as Gillian Anderson has been called.

Don Buckley, a senior vice president for theatrical marketing and new media at Warner Bros., said it's unlikely the Web will drive future Web celebrities to superstardom outside the Net.

"I think they need that base of broad awareness that only comes from movies or TV."

However, Paglia said the Web is dragging studios back to the glory days of Hollywood, when stars such as Marilyn Monroe and James Dean were the luminaries, not the movies.

"When the fans are allowed to speak there on their own, they gravitate to the personalities of the stars, even though the wattage is getting dimmer and dimmer," she said.

check us out on the web . .
www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

THE FINE ARTS CENTER SERIES

HARMONIC CONVERGENCE

SAINT LOUIS SYMPHONY
HANS VONK, CONDUCTOR
HILARY HAHN, VIOLIN

One of the world's premiere orchestras and one of its youngest and most gifted soloists perform Prokofiev's Violin Concerto. Also on the program is Harbison's Symphony No. 1 and Brahms' Symphony No. 1. A harmonic convergence not to be missed!

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 8PM, CONCERT HALL

PRESENTED WITH THE GENEROUS SUPPORT OF FIRST MASSACHUSETTS BANK, THE DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE, AND WFCR 88.5FM

GREAT AMERICAN THEATER

TRINITY REPERTORY COMPANY IN
FIRES IN THE MIRROR
BY ANNA DEVEARE SMITH

Rhode Island's Tony Award-winning theater presents a consummate play for our times, called by the New York Times, "Quite simply the most compelling and sophisticated view of urban racial and class conflict that one could hope to encounter."

TUESDAY & WEDNESDAY
FEBRUARY 10 & 11, 8PM
BOWKER AUDITORIUM

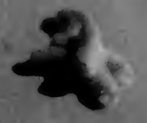
STAR SAXOPHONE

GARY LOUIE

A rising star in the music galaxy, alto saxophone virtuoso Gary Louie has performed at Lincoln Center, Jordan Hall, and the Kennedy Center, among many other world-class venues.

"Without a doubt, an astonishing player..." The LA Times

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 8PM
BOWKER AUDITORIUM
A THOMAS F. PARKER YOUNG ARTIST COMMUNITY RESIDENCY



Call 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS for tickets
Visit our Website at www.umass.edu/fac/fac.html

THE FINE ARTS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

CONNECT WITH YOUR CENTER!

TICKETS ONLY $5 FOR FIVE COLLEGE STUDENTS

The Student Value Package comes with Overdraft Protection. So go ahead. Buy the brand name macaroni and cheese.

Can you believe other banks charge you a fee every time you overspend a little? How lame is that? The Student Value Package from BankBoston gives you Overdraft Protection,† so you're free to pursue the finer things in life. And you'll save 20% at Papa Gino's when you show your BankBoston Card, student ID and one of our coupons.† To open your Student Value Package, stop by your local branch or call 1-800-2-BOSTON.

It's Amazing What You Can Do.®

Member FDIC. www.bankboston.com/student. †For qualified applicants only. You will pay interest on outstanding balances on overdraft protection. Offer valid through May 31, 1998. Not valid with any other discounts or specials. Tax not included. Limited delivery area. Delivery charge applies. $7.50 delivery minimum. Not valid on alcohol purchases.

Miniseries examines gender differences

By Lynn Elber
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Desmond Morris may want to consider using his keepsake premiere issue of Ms. magazine as a shield after the documentary miniseries "The Human Sexes" debuts.

Morris, who gained fame with his 1967 book The Naked Ape, is a zoologist who focuses on people. He takes a coolly scientific look at gender in this program on The Learning Channel and comes to this conclusion: Vive la difference.

Men and women evolved with different strengths and weaknesses, and to believe otherwise is to ignore what biology shows to be true, Morris contends in the cable channel's six-part series, showing 9-11 p.m. Monday through Wednesday. He is fully aware it's a provocative viewpoint.

"I must present sexual relations as they really are, not as one extreme pressure group or another might wish them to be," Morris tells us at the outset of the series.

But Morris, who in conversation applies the word "feminist" to himself, says differences do not mean sexual inequality. It's just a question of playing to your gender's strengths, he contends.

Women, for example, will never dominate championship chess because of the nature of their brain functions, he says. Men, on the other hand, rightfully should surrender wine-making to women because of the female's more acute sense of smell.

"To deny genuine differences is very counterproductive because there are certain aspects of behavior in which men are superior and others in which women are superior," Morris said in a phone conversation from his home in Oxford, England.

"The Human Sexes" tells us these differences evolved during our species' hunter-gatherer phase that lasted for perhaps a million years.

Among the film's tidbits: Men are better at single-minded pursuits because they honed the skill while pursuing wild game.

Women, who handled a variety of duties while remaining in the village, excel at juggling multiple tasks and are more verbal.

"If you deny those [differences] then, of course, you're not actually being biologically appropriate for the species," Morris said. You can fight your genetic makeup and win "but you're giving yourself a struggle."

Spoken like a true zoologist — but an entertaining one. His professorial air does not disguise his zest in dissecting the nature of the most complex of animals. "The Human Sexes" is packed with information without being dry.

Morris and his production crew ranged across the world to find colorful, sometimes unsettling examples of how men and women function in various countries and to record demonstrations of gender traits.

We see Scots tossing 17-foot long tree trunks and South Pacific islanders engaging in a fruit-carrying contest as illustrations of the male's superior strength. During New Orleans' wild Mardi Gras, women lift their blouses to win necklaces from men — proof that breasts are sexual as well as maternal, Morris says.

"I try to inject a bit of fun into my work because I think playfulness is one of man's highest achievements as a species," he said.

Some of the fun in "The Human Sexes" was edited out of the U.S. version. While European audiences were treated to more nudity and a visit to a sexual-aids factory (set to a "wonderful old Viennese waltz," Morris says), American audiences won't be.

There is a darker side to the film. Two years of research and travel made clear to Morris the oppression many women face. For example, he said, 100 million worldwide have been subjected to female circumcision to curtail their sexual pleasure.

"I was pretty horrified at the way women are treated in so many cultures today. You become increasingly feminist in your thinking," Morris said.

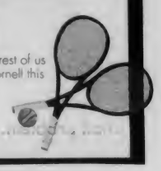
It's the modern, male-oriented urban society that has stripped women of the power they once shared, he argues. Still, he says, achieving the "primal equality that is their birthright" cannot come through blurring gender lines.

"I can sympathize with the idea of getting back to equality by suggesting no differences," he said. "But it's a complete folly and one that will lead to a lot of stress on both sexes.

"What I'm hoping the next millennium will see is a return to balance based on differences and not on imagined similarities."

COURTESY ROBIN MOULDOUR

Teeny pop heroes Aqua fail to deliver anything new on their second video, "Candyman."



Martin Scorsese
has directed such films as Mean Streets, Taxi Driver, Raging Bull and The Color of Money.
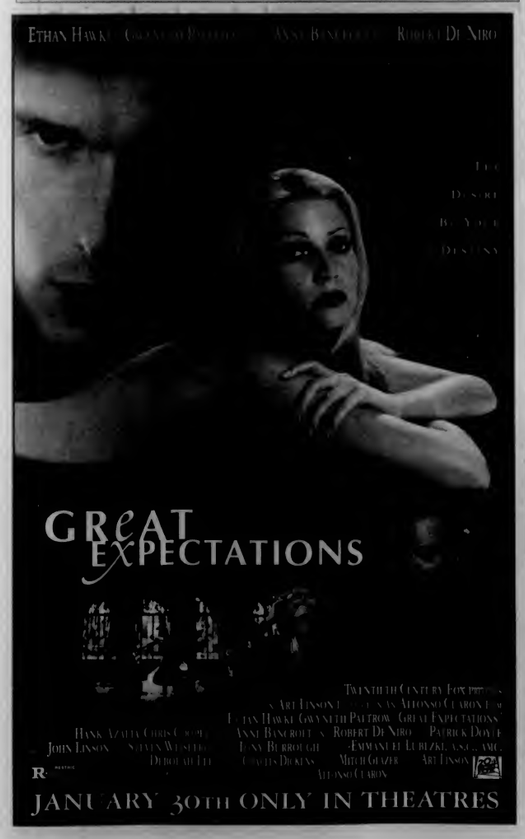
Martin Scorsese
has directed such "acting legends" as Robert De Niro, Harvey Keitel and Sandra Bernhard.

When Martin Scorsese tells you to write for Arts at the Collegian, you damn well better...



TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139
STUDENT SPECIAL
4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILOS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116 So. Amherst
256-0060

WELCOME BACK !
from UMass Women's Tennis

Ola s back at fullSpeed and the rest of us are close behind heading for Cornell this Friday.

We are a team
We are tough and
We know how to win!

gain

You'll gain as much as you give.

TEACHFORAMERICA

Take two years to teach in America's most under-resourced urban and rural public schools.
No previous education coursework required. Positions are full-time and paid.
1-800-TFA-1230 • www.teachforamerica.org also, find more information in your campus career service office.

The final application deadline is March 2, 1998.

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441

Featuring "Busch and Busch Light" 30-pk $10.49

The "12-Pack" Special!
Sam's "Winter Lager" Sam's "White Ale" Your Choice! $8.99
Michael Shea "Irish Amber" Dundee "Honey Borwn Lager" Your Choice! $6.99

Cider Jack $4.99 + tax (All Flavors)
Gallo W. Zinfandel 3 Bots. $9.99
Vodka 80° $8.99 1.75 Liter $5.99 Fifth Liter
Check Out Russell's Indoor Specials!

"MICRO MADNESS CONTINUES"
Catamount Harpoon Petes Saranac
ALL FLAVORS !
Mix & Match "TWO" 6-pks... $9.95
Wow!

• Delivery Available • OPEN 9:00AM to 11:00PM • Visa/Mastercard • All Beers Plus Deposit •

Reverse discrimination in Boston

By Dave Howland
Associated Press

BOSTON — To some it's a simple case of reverse discrimination — a white girl passed over for admission to a prestigious school in favor of minority children with lower test scores.

To others it's a matter of helping a once racially troubled school system exorcise the ghosts of segregation.

Yesterday in federal court, it became clear that the case pitting 14-year-old Sarah Wessmann vs. the Boston School Committee would put on trial the idea of diversity.

Wessmann, who is white, claims she was the victim of a racial quota system at the prestigious Boston Latin School, which taught the likes of Ralph Waldo Emerson, Cotton Mather and Ben Franklin. She was passed over for admission last fall for minority students who scored lower on entrance exams.

School lawyers said in opening statements yesterday that they would show that the policy is not a quota system and that in the long run diversity is good for students and for society.

To prove it, they plan to call parents, teachers, students and alumni to espouse the virtues of learning with people from different racial backgrounds.

Wessmann was one of 11 rejected students who would have been accepted into Boston Latin's 90-student ninth grade last fall had admission been based solely on grades and test scores. She now attends Latin Academy, another one of Boston's so-called exam schools.

"There was one reason and one reason only she remains at Boston Latin Academy," her lawyer Michael McLaughlin said. "There were too many of her kind in the class she was applying for."

McLaughlin said the case is a clear-cut violation of the U.S. Constitution and he warned Judge Joseph L. Tauro against heading down the "slippery slope" of defining the word diversity. Under the current policy, the first 50 percent of students selected for each entering class at the three exam schools — Boston Latin, Latin Academy and the John D. O'Bryant School of Mathematics and Science — are selected solely on the students' ranking based on entrance exam scores and grade-point average.

The remaining 50 percent are admitted according to rank at the percentage of an applicant's racial makeup in the remaining qualified applicant pool.

School district lawyer Frances Cohen said the policy is not based on quotas because it does not reserve a specific number of seats for minorities. She added there is no "meaningful basis" to compare the academic skills of minority and white students near the admissions cut-off because their test scores are so close. Cohen also said that the race-based admissions policy is a way to rectify past discrimination in the school system.

And she noted that Boston Latin's racial makeup is not reflective of the school district. District-wide, 48 percent of pupils are black, 25 percent Hispanic, 9 percent Asian and 18 percent white. At Boston Latin, about 54 percent are white. McLaughlin said the case is less about the merits of diversity than it is about Constitutional law. He said the admissions policy is illegal because it does not meet the "compelling interest" standard the U.S. Supreme Court has established to allow for race-based admissions.

The trial is something of a déjà vu for McLaughlin and the city. Two years ago, he forced the city to scrap a policy of setting aside 35 percent of the seats for minority students at the three exam schools after his daughter Julia was denied admission to the Boston Latin School despite ranking higher than 100 minority students who were granted admission.

Yasser Arafat threatens to resign if United States keeps up pressure

By IBRAHIM BARZAK
Associated Press Writer

GAZA City, Gaza Strip — Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat has threatened to resign if the United States pressures him to accept Israel's skimpy territorial offer, aides said yesterday, underscoring Palestinian gloom over the stymied peace process. It was not clear how serious Arafat's threat was or if he was simply using it as a negotiating tool. Arafat has not groomed a successor and his resignation would likely bring the peace process to a complete halt — a scenario the United States would not want to see happen.

In a blow to U.S. efforts to revive the process, Arafat also rejected a U.S. proposal for land to withdraw troops from West Bank land in very small steps, each followed by Palestinian compliance with Israel's demands on security and other issues. "The step-by-step formula for withdrawal is rejected," Arafat's spokesman Nabil Abourdeneh said in an interview yesterday. "There are agreements that have specific outlines and formulas — a three-stage withdrawal. Security is a different issue."

Abourdeneh appeared to contradict U.S. State Department spokesman James Rubin, who said earlier this week that Israel and the Palestinians had accepted the U.S. proposal in principle. Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said Israel was considering the plan, but has not yet accepted it.

Having returned empty-handed from last week's Mideast talks in Washington, the Palestinians are pushing for an Arab summit to put pressure on Israel.

"The Palestinians are in a difficult position and need to ask for the help of their Arab brothers, especially now that it is obvious the Israeli position is far from peace," Palestinian Cabinet secretary Ahmed Abdel Rahman said yesterday.

The Palestinians are frustrated over continuing delays in implementing the three West Bank troop pullbacks Israel promised a year ago. Vague wording in the agreement has created a huge gap of expectations.

The Palestinians, who have full or partial autonomy in 27 percent of the West Bank, believe the pullouts must leave them in control of nine-tenths of the territory.

But Israel offered only about 2 percent in a first stage that was rejected, reportedly less than 10 percent in a second and wants to cancel the third. Furthermore, Israel says any pullback is conditional on the Palestinians meeting a 12-page list of demands, most dealing with security.

Under a plan proposed to Arafat and Netanyahu by President Clinton last week, the second pullback reportedly would be broken down into smaller steps over 80 days, with the Palestinians responding to each troop movement with a security gesture; at the end, Israel would have pulled out of 12 percent of the West Bank. Abourdeneh said yesterday Palestinians have not yet been given a detailed U.S. plan.

Palestinian officials said Arafat told Clinton and Secretary of State Madeleine Albright he would resign if pressured to accept Israel's demands. Albright is scheduled to visit the region next week for talks with Arafat and Netanyahu.

One Palestinian official who was present during the Arafat-Clinton meeting said Arafat told Clinton that if Israel continues to avoid implementing the agreements and Washington presses him to accept an insufficient pullback, "I will just go back home and tell my people there is no peace process and I resign." The official spoke on condition of anonymity.

In the Gaza Strip, meanwhile, dozens of Palestinians gathered near the fence of the Katif bloc of Jewish settlements and threw stones at Israeli soldiers yesterday when they arrived, Israeli military sources said.

They said the troops shot and wounded one Palestinian who tried to light a firebomb and throw it at them.

Additional testimony sought by Starr's office

By John Solomon
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Aggressively pressing for evidence of an alleged presidential affair and coverup, prosecutors sought Secret Service agents' testimony, questioned President Clinton's former chief of staff and tried to clinch a deal for Monica Lewinsky's cooperation.

In a whirlwind day, investigators crossed the country yesterday to pick up possible evidence in a safety deposit box in Oregon while opening negotiations deep inside the Treasury Department. Officials told The Associated Press that Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr's office and Treasury officials were discussing how to gain testimony from Secret Service agents about whether they saw anything while protecting Clinton that would support allegations that he had an affair with Ms. Lewinsky.

The two sides were trying to work through Treasury concerns that forcing agents to breach their customary code of silence might jeopardize the effectiveness of his security detail, the officials said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Former chief of staff Leon Panetta spent most of the day at the federal courthouse and said he had been "largely detailing the operations of the White House and the physical setting of the White House."

He said he was unaware of "any improper relationship, sexual or otherwise," involving Clinton, and he added, "My fervent prayer is that for the sake of the president and the sake of this nation that this matter is resolved soon."

With Clinton keeping mum about the crisis, an anxious White House awaited word of whether prosecutors would provide Ms. Lewinsky immunity in exchange for her testimony before a grand jury.

Attorney William Ginsburg, who represents the former intern, said prosecutors have been in regular contact as they try to clarify various points in his client's formal offer earlier this week to testify.

"There is regular give and take," Ginsburg said in an interview with the AP. "We are clarifying points [in the offer] as they come up. And they have kept us pretty much in the loop. There's an open line of communication."

Asked if he was growing more hopeful, Ginsburg said: "In negotiations, it is not a matter of optimism, it is a matter of patience."

Ms. Lewinsky swore in an affidavit earlier this month in the Paula Jones sexual harassment case that she did not have an affair with Clinton. But prosecutors have custody of secretly recorded conversations in which Ms. Lewinsky tells a friend she did have an affair and was asked by Clinton and presidential friend Vernon Jordan to deny it.

FCC sides with Clinton on air time

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Heeding President Clinton's call, the FCC is drafting proposals to require broadcasters to give political candidates free air time or even deeper discounts on ads than currently available.

Federal Communications Commission Chairman Bill Kennard told reporters yesterday that a plan is in the works. His statement came one day after Clinton made the suggestion in his State of the Union address.

Kennard offered no specifics, but said the FCC will begin a proceeding in the next two months to offer a number of proposals to reform the campaign finance system. Broadcasters could face new requirements as a condition for receiving federal licenses at no charge.

The FCC, he said, is not likely to take any final action before November elections.

"The campaign finance system in this country is broken," Kennard said.

The FCC's proposals will cover federal and state candidates, and will focus on applying any new requirements to digital TV stations and to a lesser extent on existing analog broadcasters, Kennard said. Cable TV providers won't be covered by any of the FCC's proposal, but commercial radio will be. Kennard said he is undecided about including public TV and radio stations.

The broadcasting industry opposes free air time requirements. The FCC "has no authority to mandate free air time for political candidates," said Eddie Fritts, president of the National Association of Broadcasters. "This is solely and completely the purview of Congress."

Kennard disagreed. "Does the FCC have jurisdiction to proceed in this area? Absolutely." Kennard said he'd prefer Congress take the lead, but added: "If there aren't meaningful solutions on the legislative front, however, the FCC can and should be prepared to act."

Rep. Billy Tauzin, (R-La.), whose telecommunications panel has jurisdiction over the FCC, said if the commission moves on its own, "There will be a war on Capitol Hill."

Any proposal would require the support of at least three of the FCC's five commissioners.

Commissioners Susan Ness and Gloria Tristani said they support the FCC moving ahead, but would not say whether they would vote to force broadcasters to provide free time.

Commissioner Michael Powell said the FCC doesn't have the power to act. "It should not be the task of five unelected regulators without a specific grant of statutory authority."

Conspirators in Gandhi assassination found guilty

By Krishnan Guruswamy
Associated Press

POONAMALLEE, India— After six years and nearly 300 witnesses, a judge convicted 26 conspirators yesterday in the 1991 assassination of former Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi. The court ordered all 26 hanged.

Gandhi and 16 others were killed at a political rally near Poonamallee in southern India when a Sri Lankan suicide bomber offered him flowers, then set off a pound of plastic explosives packed with 10,000 metal pellets.

"The nation stands vindicated," said D.R. Karthikeyan, the federal police officer who led the investigation into Gandhi's killing.

The sentences, relayed to reporters by Karthikeyan, came hours after Judge V. Navaneetham announced the verdicts. Reporters were not allowed in the courtroom.

Although only two defendants were convicted of murder, all were tried under special terrorist laws that made the death penalty possible. Death sentences are rare in India, but those convicted in previous political assassinations were hanged.

Three leaders of Sri Lanka's Tamil rebels were accused of ordering the killing. The rebels, charged but never captured for trial, are believed at large in the jungles of Sri Lanka.

The defendants were silent during today's sentencing and betrayed no reaction, said Jacob Daniel, one of the prosecutors.

HEY!
Ski or Ride
just $21
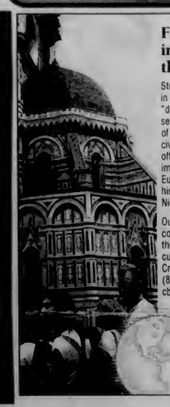
Bus + Lift Ticket Included
Daily Bus Leaves: UMass 9:55 am
Amherst Center 10:00 am
Arrive: Mt. Tom 10:35 am
Leave: Mt.Tom 4:30 pm
Arrive: UMass 5:10 pm
Mt. TOM Ski Area
Peter Pan

Hillel's One Credit Courses

Jewish Choral / A Capella Group (Kolot) JS 192B
Mondays 7-9pm, Hillel House Leaders: Avi Wolf & Louisa Shein
This will be an opportunity to learn and perform Jewish choral and a cappella music as part of a student singing group Kolot ("Voices"). Informal audition.

A Jewish-Christian Encounter JS 192A
Tuesdays 1-2:15, Room TBA Instructors: Rev. Christopher Carlisle, Rev. Kent Higgins, Ph.D., Rabbi Saul Perlmutter, and Elizabeth Tan, Ph.D.
Explore current critical issues between and within Jewish and Christian communities. Topics include sexuality, intermarriage, death, and immortality.

Divisions & Conflicts in Israeli Society: Gender, Race Culture Nationality JS 192D
Tuesday 4-5:30 pm, Hillel House Instructor: Shoshana Madmoni
This course will introduce students to the divides in Israeli society: men and women, sephardi (mizrachi) and ashkenazi, Arabs and Jews, religious and secular.



The Art of Biblical Narrative:Torah as Literature JS192F
Tuesday, 7:30pm, Hillel House Instructor: Richard Ellis
We will read Torah as literature with an emphasis on Genesis. These narratives challenge the reader to wrestle with the text, like Jacob with the angel, in order to wrest meaning from it. No Hebrew is necessary.

Portrayal of Jews Through Media JS 192I
Wed. 3:30pm, Hillel House Instructor: Karen Wolf
Explore portrayals of Jews through media with an emphasis on the communicative dimensions of issues such as humor, women, food, intermarriage and relationships.

Jewish Stories and Storytelling JS192G
Wed. 7-8:15pm, Hillel House Instructor: David Arfa
This course will focus on the oral tradition of Jewish storytelling. It will include Talmudic talkes, medieval folk and mystical tales, Yiddish stories, and our modern stories of immigration and living in America. We will have the chance to collect our family and community stories through oral history interviews.

Torah and Haftarah Cantillation JS 192E
By Arrangement Instructor: Saul Gladstone
This course will cover the theory and practice of the cantillation (trop) for Torah and Haftarah. Students will need a basic reading knowledge of Hebrew.

Faces: A Creative Workshop on Jewish Women JS192J
Tues.7-8:30pm Instructor: Lissa Loeb
An interactive creative workshop to explore the experiances and roles of Jewish women; students will use writing and theater techniques to express the stories of Jewish women past, present, and future. Attending the class on a no-credit basis is available as well.

Fairfield University invites you to explore the world!
Study the rich legacy of Britain and live in a 16th century abbey near Oxford's "dreaming spires." Spend a summer, a semester or a year studying in the center of the historic "cradle of Renaissance civilization" in Florence, Italy where we offer a dazzling variety of courses. Or immerse yourself in Russian and European art, music, dance, literature, history and politics during the White Nights of Summer in St. Petersburg.
Our programs offer the opportunity to combine a solid academic program with the chance to travel and experience new cultures. For more information call Cris Bowers, Tour Assistant, at (888) 254-1566 or e-mail her at cbbowers@fair1.fairfield.edu.
FAIRFIELD UNIVERSITY
Dolan House
Fairfield, CT
06430-5955
www.fairfield.edu/sce/studyabroad/studyabroad.htm

COMPARE!
MORE MACHINES
• Stairmasters • Treadmills • Lifecycles • Nordic Track • Kenner • Nautilus • Tecnu • Olympic Free Weights
BETTER AEROBICS
• Hi/Low • Reebok Bench Step • Area's Largest Aerobics Space • Yoga • Cardio Kick Boxing • Suspended Wood Floor
"Big enough to own the best equipment, but small enough to know your name"
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 West St., Amherst

amc Hampshire 6 *584-7550 Hampshire Mall
Showtimes, Directions, Silence is golden. Any child under 6 is only $2.00 (Cash only) Plus other rules.
Mt. Farms 4 *584-9153 Mt. Farms Mall
The Boxer (R) Today at 8:20
Phantoms (R) Today at (5:50@2:50) 8:30
As Good As It Gets (PG13) Today at (5:20@2:50) 8:10
Hard Rain (R) Today at (5:40@2:50) 8:30
Tomorrow Never Dies (PG13) Today at (5:30@2:50)
Half Baked (R) Today at (6:00@2:50) 8:30
Wag the Dog (R) Today at 8:30
Spice World (PG) Today at (5:50@2:50) 8:30
Titanic (PG 13) Today at (4:20@2:50) 8:10
Good Will Hunting (R) Today at (5:20@2:50) 8:20
Fallen (R) Today at (5:30@2:50) 8:20
Mousehunt (PG) Today at (5:40@2:50)
$3.50 (Tue-Thu) Show Daily Special Engagement no Passes or Coupons

Regency Hairstylists
253-9526
January White Sale
Has been extended to Feb. 7
20% of all tanning packages

■ basketball

continued from page 14

will be a golden opportunity to gain back some recognition.

"It's a conference game, they're always important," Flint said. "They are a great team, but we've been playing better every game. It'll be a great matchup."

The Rams feature an impressive core of guards led by a pair of seniors. Pre-season All-A-10 selection Tyson Wheeler (15.4 points per game, 6.3 assists per game) has emerged as one of the premier point guards in the nation and Cuttino Mobley (17.2 ppg) has stepped up his game and assumed the role of the go-to-guy. Flint said the Minutemen will have trouble winning the game if they cannot stop Mobley.

"Carmelo [Travieso] always did a good job on him, but this year it'll be a tough assignment. He's got a lot more poise and experience this year," Flint said.

Sophomore Mike Babul (4.0 ppg, 2.9 rebounds per game), one of the most improved from last season's freshman class and Flint's defensive stalwart, will be asked to shut down Mobley. Last Saturday at Virginia Tech, he shut down the Hokies Jenis Grindstaff, who is considered among the top freshmen in the conference.

Despite the pair of excellent guards the Minutemen will need to contend with, UMass does enjoy a slight size advantage with junior Lari Ketner (13.8 ppg, 7.9 rpg) in the middle and A-10 Player of the Week Tyrone Weeks (11.9 ppg, 10.1 rpg) at the four spot.

"UMass is very strong inside. Lari Ketner and Tyrone Weeks are both very good players," said URI coach Jim Harrick. "We have to keep them from getting offensive rebounds."

Harrick said if URI cannot contain Weeks and Ketner on the boards, they will switch to a zone defense.

The Rams boast a veteran lineup that has played together for several years. However, the results haven't quite been there before this season.

Much can be said about the job done by former coach and UMass alumnus Al Skinner, who resurrected the program and helped the Rams become an A-10 powerhouse over the past few seasons.

But after the departure of Skinner, who traveled north to fill the vacant head coaching position at Boston College, URI hired the much-maligned former UCLA coach, Harrick. With a national championship under his belt, Harrick brought his winning philosophy to Kingston and appears to have not only transformed URI into a potential A-10 tournament contender but a legitimate NCAA contender.

"Jim's a great coach, don't get me wrong," Flint said. "But Al deserves a lot of the credit for forming the team Jim has on the court now. When you come into a job and have guys like that to work with, it makes the coach look a lot better."

With Harrick at the helm, URI is primed to end its five- year drought against UMass, which has won the last nine meetings, and 17-of-18, dating back to 1993.

"We've had some great battles against those guys. None of them have been easy," Flint said. "We're just planning on making the trip down there and playing real hard."

Junior guard Charlton Clarke shares his coach's sentiments.

"We're just going to come out and execute our offense, play tough defense and try to win the ball game," Clarke said. "We'd like to put a gap between us and the rest of the A-10."

Jonathan DePina will likely shoulder some of the defensive duties when the Minutemen take on Rhode Island tonight.

America/Canada showdown as pro men's hockey reigns

By Beth Harris
Associated Press

It's not going to take another miracle for the U.S. men's hockey team to win Olympic gold.

The ragtag band of amateurs that stunned the Soviet Union in 1980 has been replaced by NHL professionals, competing for the first time in the Olympics.

The United States and Canada are favored to meet in the gold-medal game Feb. 22 in Nagano. And the Americans, led by Keith Tkachuk, Brett Hull, Chris Chelios and goaltender Mike Richter, are still filled with confidence from their 5-2 victory over a Wayne Gretzky-led Canadian team in the 1996 World Cup final.

That victory in Montreal, and an earlier one in the same tournament, upset the hierarchy of hockey. No longer was Canada on top and the rest of the world several notches below.

"It finally put us right up there," forward Mike Modano said. "It gave us a taste of what it is like to beat Canada and some of the other countries in the world."

But the Americans also know that Canada is still the team to beat.

"They've been known as the hockey power for years and I don't think one loss in the World Cup changes that," forward John LeClair said.

In that game, Tony Amonte scored the winning goal as the United States rallied from a 2-1 deficit with four unanswered goals in the final 3:18.

Richter made 35 saves and finished with a 2.43 goals-against average to earn most valuable player honors. His teammates and the Canadians still marvel at the performance.

"When you get down to the very end in high-level competition, the teams are so evenly matched sometimes one special athlete can take the bull by the horns and get you over the hump," Gretzky said. "Michael was exceptional in that series. He's a big-game goaltender and a guy that plays well under pressure."

Richter, who's struggled in the first half of the NHL season with the Rangers, will be joined in net at the Olympics by Guy Hebert and John Vanbiesbrouck.

Chemistry and goaltending were keys to winning the 1996 World Cup, as they will be during the 10-day Olympic tournament. All but six players from the U.S. World Cup team will play in Japan, making the Americans a cohesive group.

"We put together a talented bunch of guys who got along real well," Modano said of the World Cup team. "No one had a problem with ice-time or the power play or penalty killing. Everybody put those things aside for the team. That was a real big difference."

Because the NHL break doesn't start until Feb. 8, players will have just three practices with their national teams before competition begins. But most of them will arrive in Japan already having played more than 50 NHL games this season.

"The players are going to be in midseason form," U.S. coach Ron Wilson said. "We're going to have to use a couple of the games to fine-tune our team."

Wilson said he won't do any pre-Olympic scouting because he's too busy coaching the Washington Capitals. With so many players from the 14 competing nations already in the NHL, there won't be too many surprises.

COMPARE!
MORE MACHINES
• Stairmasters • Treadmills • Lifecycles • Nordic Track • Kenner • Nautilus • Tecnu • Olympic Free Weights
BETTER AEROBICS
• Hi/Low • Reebok Bench Step • Area's Largest Aerobics Space • Yoga • Cardio Kick Boxing • Suspended Wood Floor
"Big enough to own the best equipment, but small enough to know your name"
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 West St., Amherst

Join QPE
QUEER PEER EDUCATION
1, 2, or 3 credits available
Today
Need to add a class?
Do you like to give workshops?
Are you creative and energetic?
Are you committed to educating others about health and wellness issues?
How about hosting safer sex parties?
Want to make a difference for you and your peers?
If you answered yes to any of these questions, call QPE Laun tpday at 7-5252 or email laurie@educ.umass.edu
1, 2, or 3 credit independent studies are available.
Open to all 5-college students

The Boltwood Project-
Your life will NEVER be the same!
>> FALL 1997 <<
Recruitment Nights:
6:00PM (note: Prompt Starting Time)
February 2-Campus Center Rm.163c
February 3-Campus Center Rm.163c
February 4-Campus Center Rm.163c
Possibility of Earning Credits

A Healthy Investment in Your Future
Health Care. Those two words have been the source of much discussion recently. Probably because we as a nation know the importance of investing in a healthy future.
So do millions of patients who choose chiropractic as their preferred source of health care. The chiropractic beliefs in fitness, nutrition, prevention, and natural maintenance make good sense.
Wellness, you see, is the normal state of being.
New York State government agrees. They have recently passed the Insurance Equality bill that mandates insurance coverage for chiropractic care.
For over 75 years, New York Chiropractic College has upheld a tradition of excellence in chiropractic higher education. Our combined traditions, old and new, have built the base from which the chiropractic doctors of the future are created.
Choose New York Chiropractic College. A healthy investment for today and tomorrow.
Call us today at 800-234-NYCC (6922) to schedule a visit of our beautiful 286-acre campus in central New York.
NEW YORK CHIROPRACTIC COLLEGE
2360 Route 89 Seneca Falls, NY 13148-0900
Phone: 315/568-3040 or 800/234-NYCC (6922)
Fax: 315/568-3087
E-mail: enrolnow@nycc.edu

Affordable
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
Happy B'day Cards
Earrings
Rings
Bracelets
T-Shirts
Posters
Candles
Chains
Incense
Chinese Shoes
India Print Bedspreads
Sweaters
Dresses
Area Rugs
Socks
Leather Sole
Baskets
Skirts
Mugs
Sale
20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The Mercantile
GreatGifts
Visa / MC
Th.Fri.9PM
Sun 12-5
Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St.
Amherst-Carriage Shops

CELEBRATE WITH US!
30th Anniversary Gala Faculty Showcase Concert
Department of Music &
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST
TICKETS:
GENERAL PUBLIC / STUDENTS CHILDREN ELDERS
ROWS A-K $15 / $12
ALL OTHER ROWS $10 / $8
MAY BE PURCHASED AT THE FINE ARTS CENTER BOX OFFICE 413-545-2511 OR AT BOWKER AUDITORIUM ON JANUARY 31
14 ARTISTS PERFORMING SOLOS AND CHAMBER MUSIC.
CLASSICAL AND JAZZ
SATURDAY, JANUARY 31
8PM · BOWKER AUDITORIUM
CO-SPONSORED BY:
88.9 WFCR
WFCR ON 1430am
WRNX 100.9
DAILY COLLEGIAN

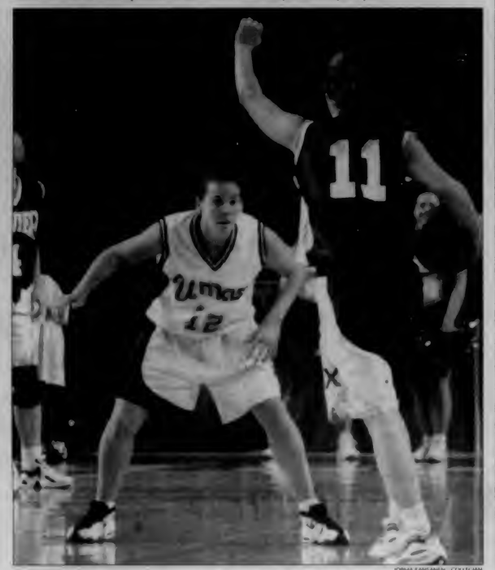
UMass sweeps in Philly over weekend

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's basketball team improved its division records last weekend with two consecutive wins over La Salle and Temple. UMass squared off with Temple first, fighting a hotly contested battle at the Apollo of Temple in Philadelphia, Pa. UMass won the game, 62–58. Junior forward Tez Kraft led the Minutewomen with 13 points, along with four assists and five rebounds.

On Sunday, the Minutewomen traveled across town to take on La Salle. UMass won the game handily, 67–52. Kraft continued her superb play, scoring a career-high 24 points to lead the Minutewomen. She shot 10–for–15 in the game. Junior Yolanda Rayside chipped in 14 points, 13 of them in the second half.

UMass used a series of runs throughout the game to continue building their lead and tough defense to hold on during several runs by La Salle. The Minutewomen had a 10–4 edge with 15:20 to go in the first half, after senior guard Sabritya Mitchell nailed her second three–pointer. UMass' defense held the Explorers scoreless from the 11:12 mark until Marjorie Rhodes finally hit a jumper at 4:51 to cut the lead to 22–14. La Salle ended the half with a 9–3 run to make the halftime score 25–21.



The Minutewomen built their lead to 42–30 at the 13:09 mark in the second half, with a jumper from Kraft, but La Salle then put together a 14–5 run to cut the lead to 47–43, with Jewett converting a three–point play.

The Minutewomen quickly turned things their way again, however, going on a 16–5 run and extending their lead to 65–49, the largest of the game. Kraft had six points in the run, with Rayside and sophomore Alison MacFarland also chipping in four.

MacFarland finished the game with 10 points. Mitchell also put in 10, along with six assists and five steals. The Explorers were led by Jewett, who finished with 10 points.

UMass shot 52 percent in the second half, and held a 41–27 edge in rebounds.

The Minutewomen are currently 4–4 in division play, and 10–8 overall. They will look to bring their division play over .500 this weekend when they take on Dayton Saturday at 1 p.m.

JORMA KANGANEN / COLLEGIAN
Kara Trent and the women's basketball team took a pair of weekend wins in Philadelphia.

Basketball rank rose Xavier play collapsed

By Joe Kay
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — When Xavier moved up to a No. 7 national ranking seven weeks ago, everyone from coach Skip Prosser on down wondered how the team would handle it.

The answer: not very well.

Since getting that No. 7 ranking and the only first-place vote in school history in the Dec. 8 poll, the Musketeers have lost five games and nearly fallen from the Top 25.

Worse, fans and critics alike have labeled them disappointment.

"Our travails have been well-documented," Prosser said. "At times, it's been frustrating for the kids. They've heard the "U" word this week — underachieving. That was disconcerting.

"Everybody is telling you how disappointing we are. I'm sure that wears on the kids' minds. I'm sure there's been some self-doubt. They've put pressure on themselves. But that's part of the deal; I'm not complaining."

A 93-82 loss at Dayton on Saturday nearly knocked Xavier out of the poll entirely — the Musketeers slid to No. 24 this week — and underscored their weaknesses.

By beating Duquesne 93-71 on Tuesday night, Xavier (13-5, 5-3 Atlantic 10) was up and running again. The question is whether the Musketeers can sustain it and reverse their season.

"It was important to get back on track like that," said Darnell Williams, who played through back spasms and scored 15 points. "We need to get back to playing like that."

Xavier's problem this season is that it saves its best for home. The Musketeers are 11-0 at Cincinnati Gardens, 1-4 on opponents' courts and 1-1 at neutral sites.

At home, Xavier turns up the full-court pressure, forces turnovers and piles up points off its formidable transition game. On the road, Xavier tends to wilt.

Players agree they weren't prepared for what a top 10 team faces on the road every night: a capacity crowd and a fired-up opponent treating the game as if it were a tournament. Crowds at Miami of Ohio, St. Bonaventure and Dayton flooded the court in celebration after beating Xavier.

"Every time we lose, fans storm the court," guard Lenny Brown said. "I'm getting tired of seeing it."

The question is why it keeps happening. There are a few theories:

• The Musketeers need more leadership. Backup guard Sherwin Anderson was the emotional leader last season, but he graduated and no one has filled the void.

• The Musketeers need a deeper bench. Outside of Xavier's top six players, no one has contributed consistently. Each of the top six players averages at least 24 minutes per game; no one else averages as many as nine. Given the Musketeers' pressing style, the lack of depth hurts.

• The Musketeers need a little more luck. Two of their road losses have been by a basket, another came in overtime. By contrast, they were 3-1 in overtime last season and won two other games by a basket.

Whatever the reasons, Xavier realizes there's no safety net left for a team that wants to remain among the elite. The bottom line is that the Musketeers must start forcing opponents to play at their pace.

"Hopefully everybody on our team sees that when we play like that, we're very good," Brown said. "That's when we're at our best. If we're not, we're going to struggle."

sports notice

Student ticket pickup for the Minutemen's game against La Salle (Saturday, Feb. 14) will be on Tuesday, Feb. 3 starting at 7 a.m. at Curry Hicks Cage. Call the [illegible] for information Regarding Temple and Dayton tickets for Sunday and Tuesday.

Valentin agrees to multi–year deal with Red Sox

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

BOSTON — John Valentin, who once vowed to leave the Boston Red Sox, is set to sign a four-year contract to stay after minor snags were ironed out, a source close to the negotiations said yesterday.

"It will be a significant signing," club spokesman Kevin Shea said, although he refused to confirm that a deal with the infielder had been completed.

A formal announcement is likely today, the source said. The contract is worth $25 million, including a $600,000 buyout if the club doesn't exercise its option to keep Valentin for a fifth season at $6.4 million.

Valentin made $3.8 million last year and had asked for $7 million in salary arbitration while the team offered $5.5 million. The contract includes a $1 million signing bonus, a $5.1 million salary in 1998 and $6.1 million in each of the next three years.

The signing had been expected a week ago before a hangup, believed to involve the team obtaining insurance on the contract, surfaced. Last Thursday, general manager Dan Duquette said agreement had been reached on the value and length of the deal.

"John has a very strong connection with Boston and certain institutions in the city," his agent, Dick Moss, said yesterday. "His wife, Marie, is happy to have him playing in Boston."

But several times in the past 12 months, it seemed he might leave the Red Sox.

"It was touch and go for a long time," Moss said.

Valentin, upset that he didn't have a chance to compete for his job against rookie Nomar Garciaparra, walked out of training camp last year.

He vowed to leave the Red Sox and, since last season ended, he has been the subject of trade talks.

But he is a key to Boston's offense and, with the signings of pitchers Pedro Martinez and Dennis Eckersley indicating a strong push to contend for the AL East title this season, his return would be significant.

Garciaparra won the AL Rookie of the Year award last season. Valentin started it at second base and moved to third after Tim Naehring suffered a season-ending elbow injury in July. Naehring isn't expected to be ready for the start of the season.

In six seasons with Boston, Valentin has a .296 batting average with 83 homers and 378 RBIs. Last year he led the AL in doubles and had career highs of 176 hits, 47 doubles, five triples and 287 total bases despite batting .160 for the first month. He finished with a .306 average, 18 homers and 77 RBIs.

"He's adapted to wherever he's been moved. He's a versatile player," Moss said.

Now he'd like to see the Red Sox re-sign Vaughn, his college teammate at Seton Hall whose contract expires after the 1998 season. The Red Sox reportedly have offered the first baseman a guaranteed three-year contract, but Duquette said Vaughn wants a longer deal.

7 Grammy Award Nominations!
Paula Cole
Live in Concert ~ with special guests
THE DEVLINS
SUN. FEB 22 - 8:00 PM
CHAPIN AUDITORIUM
Mt. Holyoke College, S. Hadley, MA
Advanced Tickets at B-Side Records in Northampton, For The Record in Amherst, Tix Unlimited at U. Mass, Strawberries Record Stores, and all ProTix outlets.
To charge by phone call ProTix at (413) 732-0762
Presented by MassConcerts www.webtrix.com/massconcerts

NOW OPEN IN AMHERST
UNFINISHED FURNITURE
CUBES · BOOKCASES · DRESSERS
FUTONS · COUNTER STOOLS
ENTERTAINMENT CENTERS · TABLES
CHAIRS · WOODEN DRYING RACKS
ARMOIRES · COMPUTER DESKS
* Member C.I.S.
FREE LOCAL DELIVERY
LA WOOD
401 Main St., Amherst • 259-1100
(formerly Video To Go) OPEN: 9-5 Mon-Sat 12-5 Sunday

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM BOSTON
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $145 $264
PARIS $219 $403
MADRID $228 $419
ROME $259 $477
Scheduled flights.
Fares to worldwide destinations.
Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave., NY NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

UMASS DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION
Something for Everyone
Workshops offered evenings, daytime, weekends, off and on campus
Nearly 100 noncredit workshops
Including:
• Mask Making
• Network Marketing
• Web Page Design
• Chocolate
• Songwriting
• Art Therapy
• Retirement Planning
• Genealogy
• UFOs
• Playback Theatre
• Bartending
• EMT Training
Spring semester workshops begin February 9
For a free course catalog, call 413-545-0107 or e-mail contined@admin.umass.edu
www.umass.edu/contined/
a quality education at an affordable price
• DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION •
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

COMPARE!
MORE MACHINES
• Stairmasters • Treadmills • Lifecycles • Nordic Track • Keiser • Nautilus • Tectrix • Olympic Free Weights
BETTER AEROBICS
• Hi/Low • Reebok Bench Step • Area's Largest Aerobics Space • Yoga • Cardio Kick Boxing • Suspended Wood Floor
"Big enough to own the best equipment, but small enough to know your name"
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0060 460 West St., Amherst

Spirit Haus
YOU HAVE TO SEE IT TO BELIEVE IT!
LIQUOR SPECIALS
Parrot Bay Coconut Rum $9.99/750 ml
Slava Ukrainian Vodka $5.99/750 ml
Jagermeister $14.99/750 ml
Mt. Gay Eclipse Rum $12.99/750 ml
MICRO BREWS
Wachusett $9.99/12 pack Nut Brown, Irish Ale, I.P.A., Porter, Pale ale + dep
Middlesex Brewing Co. $4.99/6 pack Rasberry Wheat, Pale Ale, Brown Ale
Sam Adams $8.99/12 pack Bottles + dep Winter Lager
Saranac $4.99/6 pack All Flavors
BEER SPECIALS
Coors extra Gold $10.99 + dep 30-Pack Cans
Miller Lite $6.99 + dep 12-Pack Bottles
Michelob + Michelob Light $9.99 + dep 18-Pack cans
Rolling Rock 1/2 keg
Micro Kegs In Stock
DISCOVER, VISA, MASTERCARD ACCEPTED · OPEN 9am to 11pm
RT. 9 EAST / 338 COLLEGE ST (413)253-5384 / TAKE I-91 TO EXIT 19 / RT. 9 east
Full Redemption Center

US speedskater beats CFS to win spot for Nagano

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

First came the endless headaches, followed by the frustration of feeling utterly exhausted but unable to fall asleep.

If that wasn't enough evidence that something was wrong with Amy Peterson, for the first time in 10 years she failed to make a U.S. speedskating travel team.

She was diagnosed with chronic fatigue syndrome last spring and her career as one of America's premier short-track speedskaters came to a crossroads Nov. 10 when she went to camp two months away and Peterson, a medalist at the past two Winter Olympics, was not skating fastenough to even qualify. Some days she didn't want to get out of bed. Even on her good days she couldn't always complete her workouts.

"She was in my room crying, wondering whether she should quit," Maxwell recalls. "I tried to remind her of all the things she had accomplished in the sport, all the experience the younger skaters didn't have."

What happened over the next two months baffled them all. Skating faster than ever, Peterson went from the brink of retirement to the top qualifier for the women's U.S. short-track team.

"I never thought that I'd be in the position I'm in right now," she said. "Skating well again has given me back who I am, what I do."

How stunning was her turnaround?

She was timed in 1 minute, 42 seconds over 1,000 meters during practice two days before Christmas. Maxwell had her cut back on weights and prescribed a heavy dose of rest.

On New Year's Day, she finished the nine laps in 1:35, an incredible seven-second difference in a sport where first and second place can be determined by mere tenths of a second. It also was two seconds faster than her personal best.

"I sat there and couldn't believe it," Maxwell said. "We did a four-lap time trial about 20 minutes later, and she broke her personal best again. At that point, I said, "Holy Cow, Amy is going."

Was she ever.

In the 1,000-meter pursuit time trial, in which only the top 16 can compete in the rest of the trials, Peterson won by setting an American record of 1:34.421. The previous record was 1:35.7, set four years ago by two-time Olympic gold medalist Cathy Turner. The rest of the trials were a blur. Her technique as sound as ever, Peterson never missed a stride during the four days of trials. When they were over, she had qualified for the 500 meters and 1,000 meters, and at this rate will probably anchor the 3,000-meter relay.

"She bounced back to where she was prior to the illness, maybe even to another level," said Andy Gabel, a training partner and the top men's qualifier. "It's been remarkable. She showed she's a true competitor and a true champion."

At 16, Peterson was part of the U.S. Olympic team when short track was a demonstration sport in Calgary. She won a silver medal on the relay team in 1992, and a bronze in the 500 meters and the relay at Lillehammer in 1994.

About a year later the fatigue began.

"I was on a roller coaster all year," she said. "There were good weeks when I could do some of the workouts, and weeks where it didn't seem I could finish any workout."

The headaches would last days, sometimes even weeks, and the fatigue caused wild mood swings and a lack of concentration. "I didn't know what to do. She didn't know what to do," said Gabel, her coach when the chronic fatigue surfaced. "Her body was just kind of falling apart on her."

Once she was diagnosed with chronic fatigue syndrome, Peterson spent almost as much time reading up on it as she did on the track. "One of the biggest things that has helped is I've tried to control it instead of it controlling me," she said. "Because it controlled me every single day."

Peterson still has days when her energy level is down. While the rest of the short-track team has gone to Colorado Springs, Colo., to finish preparations, she is staying behind in New York, fearful the altitude may set her back.

"Technically, physically, everything, I'm skating faster. My times are better," she said. ""I medaled four years ago in the Olympics and I think I'm skating a lot better now."

The 34-year-old Turner, who slipped often during the trials, qualified only for the relay team and will not have a chance to equal Bonnie Blair's six career medals in the Winter Games. Surprisingly, that opportunity now falls to Peterson. Maxwell said she is strongest in the 1,000 meters, but is skating better in the 500 than when she won the bronze in Lillehammer.

■ hockey

continued from page 14

mark put the Eagles up by a two goal margin, and a 4–2 deficit faced UMass going into the third period. However, sophomore Nathan Sell quickly cut the game to 4–3 at the 0:48 mark of the third period on an unassisted goal.

The upset bid ended at the 9:01 mark, though, and Chris Masters gave BC the 5–3 edge on a goal assisted by Matt Mulhern. Masters scored his second goal of the game at the 17:29 mark, and the insurance tally completed the final of 6– 3. As already stated, the makeup date for last Friday night's postponed game at the Mullins Center will be March 4.

Freshman goalie Markus Helanen made his fourth start of the season, stopping 37 shots on net to Clemmensen's 29 saves. Mallen has been impressed with Helanen's steadily developing play after a year layoff while he served his mandatory stint in the Finnish army.

"He is really gaining some valuable experience in net right now," Mallen said. "He made some spectacular saves, but he also got caught out of position on two of the goals. But, this experience for him is huge, and he's making a lot of improvement in what is really a catchup year for him."

JORMA KANGANEN / COLLEGIAN
Brad Norton isn't worrying about his class schedule right now. The defenseman has taken a job with the Detroit Vipers of the IHL.

US women's hockey faces rival Canada

By Margaret Lillard
Associated Press

The U.S. women's ice hockey team stood glumly on Canadian ice 10 months ago as its northern rival was draped in gold medals and glory — as usual.

But that Women's World Championship was the closest ever, and exhibition games and a tournament since then have given the Americans hope that the first Olympic gold medal for women's ice hockey will go to them not perennial champion Canada.

While women's ice hockey is making its first appearance at the Olympics, the rivalry between its top two competitors goes back to 1916, when teams from the United States and Canada played a tournament in Cleveland.

More recently, Canada has dominated since the first sanctioned Women's World Championship in 1990, while the United States and Finland have been second and third.

The Americans have narrowed the gap since losing the championship last spring in the teams' first overtime game, winning several exhibition matches and the Three Nations' Cup in December. Many games have been decided by one goal.

"The USA and Canada are pretty even, as we've demonstrated so far," U.S. coach Ben Smith said. "Poise under fire, things like that, are probably going to be some of the key differences. I don't think there are going to be too many physical differences."

Canada is led by hotshot forward Hayley Wickenheiser and goalie Manon Rheaume, who made history as the first woman to play in the NHL when she took the ice for one period in a Tampa Bay Lightning exhibition game.

While the competition between the top three teams should be close in Nagano, viewers can expect some blowouts in the round robin, which will include Japan, Sweden and China. Intentional body-checking is a penalty in women's hockey — though some sneaks in — and the games can be fast, furious and filled with finesse. It's more than a gold medal at stake. The sport has long been overshadowed by its male counterpart even though women have been playing just as long. A daughter of Lord Stanley, founder of the Stanley Cup, was photographed playing hockey in 1890.

SPRING BREAK
BEST CANCUN PARTIES FROM BEST PRICE
Call Today 9am to 5pm
1 800 648-4849
On campus and Alumnae Orders (561) 586-2167

BRITISH AMERICAN DRAMA ACADEMY
With the Guildford School and University of California at Los Angeles
MIDSUMMER IN OXFORD
July 10 – August 9, 1998
The Chance of a Lifetime
Based at Balliol, one of Oxford's oldest colleges, Midsummer in Oxford offers a total immersion program in classical acting, taught by Britain's most illustrious actors and directors. 1997 participants included Fiona Shaw, Ben Kingsley, Alan Rickman, Derek Jacobi, Mark Wing-Davey, Diana Quick, and Earle Gister.
Attend Midsummer in Oxford and benefit from classes in Shakespeare, Comedy, Modern Drama, Voice, Movement, Physical Acting (taught by members of Théatre de Complicité), and Audition Technique. Masterclasses and one-to-one tutorials expand your experience even more.
This fully accredited program, now in its fifteenth year, includes courses for students of all levels – undergraduate to professional.
Limited financial assistance is available.
Admission by audition only (video by arrangement).
For full details, contact: Jennifer Rockwood, BADA, 900 West End Ave., #15F, New York, NY 10025. Phone/Fax: 1-212-749-0120.

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139 STUDENT SPECIAL 4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILOS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB Rte. 116 So. Amherst 256-0060

Ani DiFranco
live in concert!
SAT. APR. 4 - 8:00PM
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst
General Admission - $20 Advance
Tickets available at the Mullins Center Box Office and all TicketMaster locations. To charge by phone call TicketMaster at (413) 733-2700 or (860) 525-4500. Purchase online at www.ticketmaster.com. For information call the Mullins Center at 545-0545.
Tickets on sale Sat. Jan. 31 at 10:00 am
Presented by MassConcerts www.webtrix.com/massconcert

WELCOME BACK!
Get into the Swing of Spring Semester With Smart Savings at Hampshire Mall!
GET YOUR STUDENT DISCOUNT CARD TODAY!
STUDENT TUESDAY DISCOUNT CARD
Hampshire Mall Advocate
Shop and Save Every TUESDAY at the HAMPSHIRE MALL! Route 9, Hadley, MA
A Student Reward Program!
Discounts Valid Only at Participating Merchants for Students With Valid Student I.D. No legal or prior purchases, layaways or gift certificates. Can not be combined with any other discounts or promotional items. Expires May 31, 1998
SAVE AT OVER 25 STORES EVERY TUESDAY JUST FOR BEING A STUDENT!
Student Tuesday Discount Cards Available At the Customer Service Booth.
Student I.D. Required.
Some Restrictions May Apply
Hampshire Mall Route 9, Hadley, MA (413) 586-5700
Route 9 Hadley (413) 586-5700

Scott's LIQUORS
Thank You for Your Patronage
Mon - Sat 9am-11pm
549-2583
Rotters University Drive Alumni Stadium
SCOTTS Victory Market
Bud Light 30 packs $14.99 +DEP
Magic Hat 6 packs $5.99 +DEP
Rolling Rock 12 packs $6.99 +DEP
Ice House 30 packs $11.99 +DEP
Harpoon IPA 12 packs $8.99 +DEP
Sierra Nevada 6 packs $5.99 +DEP
Cider Jack 6 packs $4.99 +dep
Check OUT our other Great in Store Specials
15% OFF ANY 6 BOTTLES OF WINE
(SALE ITEMS EXCLUDED)
BOXED WINES 3 FOR $6.00
BAILEYS 750 ml $12.49
CAPTAIN MORGAN 1 ltr $12.99
ABSOLUT VODKA 750 ml $13.99
SOUTHERN COMFORT 750 ml $8.49
JAGERMEISTER 750 ml $14.49
Bud, Bud Light, Bud Ice 1/2 kegs $39.99 +DEP
MasterCard AMERICAN EXPRESS VISA

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

FYSH ELECTIONS First Year Students of Hillel elections for three positions: Meeting, Outreach, Program Coordinators. Feb 2, Hillel House, 7:30pm 549-1710

APARTMENT FOR RENT

3rd Floor 2 bedroom apartment available Feb 1. Heat/Hot Water + Cooking Gas included. $815/month. Please contact Andrew Newcomb 549-0600

AUTO FOR SALE

88 Chevy Cavalier Good running car. Very reliable. Has new brakes, tires, radiator. Replaced engine and rebuilt alternator about 2 years ago. Selling for $1200 ($300 below NADA) Call 546-3842

91 VW Golf GT Standard, 93k, A/C Excellent condition $5500 549-0892

87 Chevy S-10 Pickup Many new parts. $1400. Call 253-5435

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795

COMPUTERS

7200/90 Power Mac 2 SCSI hard drives, 32 MB RAM, 4 MB VRAM, 17 inch 1705 Apple Monitor $1500 Contact Jay @ 545-0989

EMPLOYMENT

Drivers and Kitchen Help Wanted Apply at D P Dough Downtown Amherst

EMPLOYMENT

NEW STUDENTS PROGRAM seeks extroverts from '98-'00 Class with 2.5+ GPA. May 27 to July 18. Salary, room, meals, health coverage. Apply 307 Admissions Center. Deadline Feb 6.

Delivery Drivers Needed Apply at Bell's Pizza 65 University Dr

CRUISE SHIP & LAND-TOUR JOBS Discover how to work in exotic locations, meet fun people, while earning a living in these exciting industries! For more information 517-324-3092 Ext C50012

EXCEPTIONAL SUMMER OPPORTUNITY— Camp Wayne, NE PA (3hrs/NYC)— Sports oriented Counselor/Specialists for all Land/Water Sports including Tennis, Camping, Climbing/Ropes, Mountain Biking, Rocketry, Roller Hockey, Sailing/Waterskiing, A & C, Drama, Radio, Video. Campus Interviews Tuesday, March 3rd. Please call 1-888-737-9296 or 516-883-3067. Leave your name, phone number and mailing address.

Counselors for co-ed Northeast PA, overnight Jewish camp- 3 hours from NYC- general, sports, drama, H20 & arts. 1-800-973-3866

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742

FOR RENT

SUMMER RENTALS CAPE COD GROUP Summer Rentals- Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Diamond Real Estate (508)477-1900

GREEK ANNOUNCEMENTS

Start Your Own Fraternity! Zeta Beta Tau is looking for men to start a new chapter. If you are interested in academic success, a chance to network and an opportunity to make friends in a non-pledging brotherhood, e-mail joe@zbtnational.org or call Joe Allidi at (317)334-1898.

LOST & FOUND

Ring found near Mullins Sterling Silver. 548-8986

MISCELLANEOUS

EARN $750-$1500/WEEK Raise all the money your student group needs by sponsoring a VISA Fundraiser on your campus. No investment & very little time needed. There's no obligation, so why not call for information today. Call 1-800-323-8454 x 95

STUDENT REPS- Enjoy meeting new people? Have a couple of days free from classes during the week? Positions available for students willing to work hard promoting credit cards on campus. Great job opportunity. $6/hr. Must be flexible. (800)592-2121 x 147

MUSICIANS

Epiphone Accoustic Electric Guiter Excellent condition. Great sound and great pickup- with HARD CASE. $400 Call Dru 549-7540

ROOM FOR RENT

ATTENTION JEWISH STUDENTS Spaces available in Living Community of Hillel House. Call Jason for details. 549-1710

Rooms For Rent Very close to campus. Females Only. $1200/semester. Call 549-7146 or (508)655-5922.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Looking for roommate to share three bedroom apartment. Call 549-5596

Roommate Wanted in two bedroom apartment in Brandywine. Live with three others. Rent $200. Call 549-5079

One bedroom in two bedroom apartment. Sugarloaf Estates. On PVTA. Utilities included. $300-$345 Available NOW. 665-3295

CAR & STEREO EQUIP

Car Stereo Equipment Kenwood Detach Face- 1 year old, paid $350. 1 amp 100x2, paid $150. 1 amp 100x4, paid $100. 1 pair Pioneer 6x9 speakers, 100w, paid $110. Whole system sounds great, needs nothing. Selling as package deal for $300. Call 546-3852

CAR & STEREO EQUIP

Tescam Multitrock Recorder 4 track mixing board and recorder. Only 8 months old. Received a 24 track as a gift over break. Will include: 1 mic, never been used; 4 professional recording tapes. Paid $550, will sell for $330. Call 546-3842

TRAVEL

Spring Break '98 Get Going!!! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida. Group Discounts & Free Drink Parties! Sell 5 & go Free! Book Now!!! Visa/MC/Disc/Amex 1-800-234-7007 http://www.endlesssummertours.com

SPRING BREAK 98 Free food and drinks! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica and Florida from $399. Organize a small group and travel FREE! Highest commissions and lowest prices. Call Surf & Sun Tours to become a campus representative (800)574-7577

Spring Break Cruise Soak up the sun. Play in the sand. Dance in the moonlight. And, oh yeah... PARTY!!! Don't be left at the dock. Book your cabin now. The price is right. Call 1-888-411-7447. Get your free gift.

Have you waited this long to make Spring Break plans? It's not too late! Choose Sunsplash Tours- Call Michelle 256-8217

TRAVEL

Miami only $79 O.W. Mexico/Caribbean or San Juan $200 R.T. Europe $179 O.W. Other worldwide destinations cheap. ONLY TERRORISTS GET YOU THERE CHEAPER! Air-Tech (212)219-7000 (800)575-TECH www.airtech.com

Best Hotels, Lowest Prices All Spring Break locations Florida, Cancun, etc. From $89. Register your group or be our Campus Rep. Inter-campus Programs (800)327-6013 www.icpt.com

Have you waited this long to make Spring Break plans? It's not too late! Choose Sunsplash Tours- Call Michelle 256-8217

Immediate Openings

Office Hours: 10 AM to 2 PM & 4 PM to 9 PM. Saturdays & Sundays also available

- Fun Atmosphere
- No Experience Required
- On Bus Line
- Flexible Schedule
- Only Minutes From Campus

Call 584-0215 For Interview

Coming Soon

The Valentine's Day Special Issue

SELL YOUR BOOKS HERE!

SELL YOUR USED BOOKS IN THE CLASSIFIEDS. IT'S EASY AND CHEAP!

STUDENTS 20¢ / WORD
NON-STUDENTS 40¢ / WORD

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be submitted to Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthdays of congratulations personals as well as over the hurt name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO 549-[illegible] OR 545-[illegible].
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals this means dormitory numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Patients may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, rent roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

NEW Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
AUTO PARTS
CHILDCARE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
COMPUTERS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FURNITURE
GREEK ANNOUNCEMENTS
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HEALTH & BEAUTY
HOUSES FOR RENT
HOUSES FOR SALE
HOUSESITTING
JEWELERY
INSTRUCTION
LOST & FOUND
(5 DAYS FREE)
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MISCELLANEOUS FOR RENT
MOTORCYCLES
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
MUSIC LESSONS
MUSICIANS WANTED
PERSONALS
PETS FOR SALE
RESUMES
RIDES WANTED
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SPORTS
STEREO & CD EQUIP.
SUMMER SUBLET
TELEVISIONS FOR SALE
TICKETS
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
TUTORING SERVICES
TUTOR WANTED
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED GENERAL
WORLD WIDE WEB
YARD SALES

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, JAN. 29

Talk– The music program of Hampshire College is hosting a talk by ethnomusicologist Mark Slobin entitled The Spirit of Yiddish Folklore, at 4:15 p.m. in the auditorium of the National Yiddish Book Center on the Hampshire College campus. For more information, please contact Linda McDaniel at 582-5362.

FRIDAY, JAN. 30

Reading– Richard Dyer, professor of film at Warwick University, United Kingdom, will read from his new book White at 12:30 p.m. in Campus Center 162. There will be a book signing after the talk.

Elections– First Year Students of Hillel (FYSH) elections will be held for three positions: Meeting, Outreach, and Program Coordinators, at Hillel House, at 7:30 p.m. For more information, call 549-1710.

Exhibit– The Augusta Savage Gallery at the University of Massachusetts will host an exhibit of portraits by former UMass professor Jack Coughlin entitled "A Brush With the Blues". The opening reception will be held from 5–7 p.m.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 4

Meeting– The UMass Theatre Guild's first meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center 162. All are welcome and audition information for Jesus Christ Superstar will be provided. For more information, contact Lindsey Bovaird at 256-4158.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

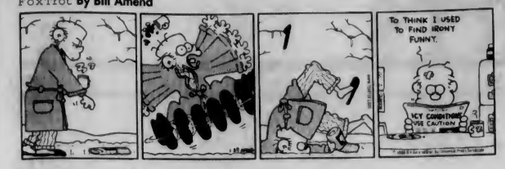
welcome back

from the Wednesday night staff



HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	17	HSCN Programming
3	CBS/3 Hartford	18	TV–19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	22	NBC/22 Springfield
6	PBS/57 Springfield	23	CNN
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	24	CNN SI
8	UPN/20 Hartford	25	Headline News
9	Weather Channel	26	UCTV
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
		33	Much Music

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — JANUARY 29, 1998

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		National Parks of the West		Mystery! "Cadfael" "The Rose Rent" (In Stereo)		Keeping Up		Wait for God	This Old Hse.
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV	Promised Land "Purple Heart"		Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Promised Land "Purple Heart"		Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Prey "Pursuit" (In Stereo)		"Circle of Deceit" (1998, Drama) Janine Turner, Esai Morales.		News		Nightline
WLVI	6	Full House	BoyWorld	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★½ "Tightrope" (1984, Suspense) Clint Eastwood.				News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Seinfeld	Veronica's Cl.	ER "Carter's Choice" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Cheers	Med Abo. You	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Honey, I Shrunk the Kids		Fame L.A. "Duet" (In Stereo)		News	Grace Under	Vibe
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Herd Copy	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Seinfeld	Veronica's Cl.	ER "Carter's Choice" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Fraser	Between Bros.	Ask Harriet	New York Undercover		News		Simpsons	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Seinfeld	Veronica's Cl.	ER "Carter's Choice" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Thre Old Hse.	Bre-Cell	Mystery! "Cadfael" "The Rose Rent" (In Stereo)		Murder-Horrid		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Fraser	Prey "Pursuit" (In Stereo)		"Circle of Deceit" (1998, Drama) Janine Turner, Esai Morales.		News		Nightline
WSBK	38	Med Abo. You	Med Abo. You	Seinfeld	Fraser	★½ "Delta Force 2: The Killing Game" (1991) Chuck Douglas.				News		Cheers
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Andy Griffith	Andy Griffith	Thunder				★½ "Cyborg" (1989, Science Fiction) Jean-Claude Van Damme.
A&E	17	Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Indifference"		Biography "The du Pont's" (R)		New Explorers		Unexplained "Extraterrestrials"		Law & Order "Virus"
CNN	29	World View		Moneyline		World Today		Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	18	Premium	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Sten e Money	★★ "Class" (1983, Drama) Rob Lowe, Jacqueline Bisset.				Premium	Make-Laugh	Daily Show	Sten e Money
DISC	52	Wings Strange Planes (R)		Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery: Snow Leopard		Strange-True	Movie Magic	Wings "Instant Thunder" (R)		Justice Files (R)
ESPN	43	Up Close	Sportscenter		College Basketball:	Massachusetts at Rhode Island. (Live)				College Basketball: Louisville at Cincinnati. (Live)			Sportscenter
LIFE	20	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"A Mother's Instinct" (1996, Drama) Lindsay Wagner.				Almost Perfect	Golden Girls
MTV	53	MTV Live (In Stereo)		My So-Called Life "Betrayal"		Music Videos	Rock N Jock Superbowl		Rock N Jock Superbowl II (In Stereo)			Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	55	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Secret of Alex	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	I Love Lucy	M.T. Moore	Text	Newhart
SCIFI	59	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Sequest DSV	"Snowdown"	Sightings (In Stereo)		Forever Knight "Black Buddha"		Robocop, The Series "Nuno"		Sequest DSV	"Splashdown"
TLC	72	Renovation	Renovation	Home Again	Home Again	Medical Detect	Without Warn.	Bigfoot (R)		Killer Bees (R)		Medical Detect	Without Warn.
TNT	54	Love & Clark-Superimpos		Babylon 5		★★★ "White Men Can't Jump" (1992, Comedy-Drama) Woody Harrelson.						★★★ "White Men Can't Jump" (1992)
USA	69	Baywatch "Tower of Power"		Highlander: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger		★½ "Parent and Bone" (1993, Drama) Dennis Quaid, Meg Ryan. (In Stereo)				Silk Stalkings
HBO	50	(5:45) ★★ "My Fellow Americans" (1996) PG-13		★★ "Down Periscope" (1996) Kelsey Grammer.		★★★ "Searching for Bobby Fischer" (1993) Joe Mantegna. PG		★★ "Profile for Murder" (1997) Lance Henriksen.				"Last Scout"
MAX	65	(4:00) ★★ "Crossworlds" (1996) Rutger Hauer.		★★★ "Searching for Bobby Fischer" (1993) Joe Mantegna. PG		★★★ "Searching for Bobby Fischer" (1993) Joe Mantegna. PG		★★ "Profile for Murder" (1997) Lance Henriksen.				"Last Scout"
SHOW	70	(5:20) ★★★ "Star Wars" (1977) Mark Hamill.		Hard Rain (R)		★★ "Alaska" (1996, Adventure) Thora Birch. (In Stereo) PG		"The Corporate Ladder" (1997, Suspense) Anthony Denison. (R)

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Vegan Cheese By Elise Chechile

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Proboscus, Etc. By B. Crellin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Attention student cartoonists!

THIS MAY BE YOUR LAST CHANCE TO SECURE A REGULAR SPOT ON THE COMICS PAGE FOR THIS SEMESTER. BRING A SAMPLE OF YOUR STRIP TO LAUREN STARK, MANAGING EDITOR, AS SOON AS POSSIBLE FOR CONSIDERATION. THERE IS A MAILBOX MARKED "CARTOON SUBMISSIONS" IN THE COLLEGIAN NEWSROOM, 113 CAMPUS CENTER.

STRIP CARTOONS MUST BE DRAWN TO FIT IN A 2-INCH BY 6 1/4-INCH SPACE. IN BLACK INK; PAINT, FELT TIP MARKERS AND FLAIR PENS WORK BEST — BALLPOINT PENS ARE BANNED BECAUSE THEY PHOTOCOPY HORRIBLY. NO. 2 PENCILS WORK BETTER, BUT WILL ALSO ACCEPT CARTOONS ON DISK FOR MACS SAVED IN CANVASMAKER OR QUARKXPRESS TYPE AS AN EPS OR TIFF.

SUBMISSIONS WILL BE JUDGED ON HUMOR, ORIGINALITY, GOOD TASTE AND ARTWORK QUALITY. IT IS HELPFUL IF YOU HAVE AN ADVANCE IDEA OF HOW MANY STRIPS YOU WOULD LIKE TO RUN PER WEEK.

Horoscopes

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You may be waiting for a sign today before giving someone an important piece of information. Make your intentions clear; don't hide them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — You may have to work harder than expected today to fit the pieces of a puzzle together and solve a formidable professional problem.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — The one thing you must remember at this time is that the success of current projects depends upon productive interaction with others.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — What you try to do entirely on your own isn't likely to pay off as handsomely as expected. You are going to have to rely on others.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — To a certain extent, you will have to be on your own throughout the day. You may feel as though the burden you carry right now is getting heavier.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Qualitative concerns should take precedence today over those that are merely quantitative. Your definition of value may have to change slightly.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — Others will be interested in hearing your reasons for behaving in certain ways today. Say too much, however, and the game is lost!

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — The best way to approach a difficult endeavor is to hook up with someone who shares your peculiar interests and the desire for self-improvement.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You have a great deal to accomplish before you can say that a project is completed today. You have been neglecting one particular detail.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — Your well-known resistance to fatigue may not be today what it was in the recent past. You are going to have to take time out for some rest.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You must be sure to do all the research and preparation you can today before tackling a new phase of a long-term project. Do not try to wing it!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You may be trying to be a little to forceful with those whose commitment level is less than your own. Be more amiable, understanding.

Quote of the Day

"Everybody needs a bosom for a pillow;"

–Cornerships
"Brimful of Asha"

Close to Home By John McPherson

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Texas Chili
Meatball Grinder
Quiche Lorraine

DINNER
Greek Style Lemon Chicken
Veal Parmesan
Breek Rice Pilaf

Worcester

LUNCH
Turkey Burger
Chili Con Carne
Sesame Noodles & Pea Pods

DINNER
Duchess Meat Pie
Greek Style Lemon Chicken
Hot & Spicy Vegetable Pasta
Pastabilities
Hot & Spicy Vegetable Pasta

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Turkey Bacon Swiss Folded Pita

DINNER
Greek Style Lemon Chicken
Veal Parmesan

Berkshire

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Ruben Sandwich on Rye
Sesame Noodles & Pea Pods

DINNER
Boneless Pesto Chicken
Veal Parmesan
Garden Chili
Pastabilities

Collegian Staff

Night Editor — Laura Stock
Photo Technician — Ken McDonald
Copy Editor — Luke Meredith
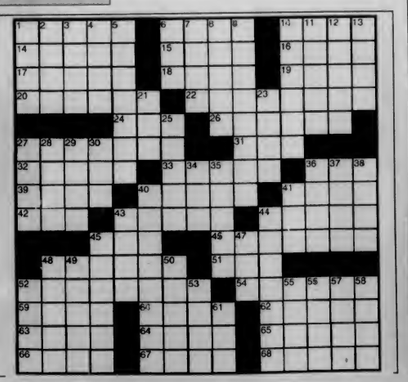
Production Supervisor — Joe Savitch Production Staff — Jeremy Brothers, Jocelyn Burrows



ACROSS
1 Brazilian dance
6 Way of walking
10 Indonesian island
14 Bay window
15 Bronte's governess
16 Work on text
17 African language
18 Prom attender
19 Heart
20 Puts out vapor
22 Place for a nosher
24 Act like a shrew
26 Repeated sounds
27 Certain artillery fire
31 Writer Fleming
32 Marry in haste
33 Director Ridley —
36 Mrs. Cantor
39 Paper amount
40 Literary work
41 Lumberjack's commodity
42 Topaz or ruby
43 Absorbs
44 Actress Hunt
45 Zip
46 Door part
48 Elizabeth's husband
51 Drain
52 Kitchen utensil
54 Spiral-horned antelopes
59 Melody
60 Give the cold shoulder
62 Be of use
63 Questions
64 Novelist Ferber
65 Boldness
66 Robin's home
67 Cummerbund
68 Tree nymph

DOWN
1 Boohoos
2 Smell —
3 Ore source
4 Alpha, —, gamma
5 Some graduates
6 Obtain
7 Votes in favor
8 "Goodnight" girl
9 Determination
10 Summon
11 Sundried brick
12 Italian coins
13 Roman road
21 Droop
23 Gab
25 Artist's plaster
27 Golf great Patty —
28 Not sweather
29 Wander
30 45 or 78
34 Milwaukee time
35 Kilns for hops
36 Charged particles
37 Extinct bird
38 First man
40 Ovals
41 Get the gold medal
43 Liver's output
44 Arctic region
45 Most congenial
47 "Norma —"
48 Hesitate
49 Handsome guys
50 Teddy bear look-alike
52 Basketeer Musiel
53 Sisters
55 Affirm
56 — a: not any
57 Prima donna
58 Winter vehicle
61 Scrooge's word

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

12-29-97 © 1997, Unived Feature Syndicate

Mack leads the pack as UMass heads to Rhody

First year Mack is top scorer; as UMass battles in A–10 East

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

Sophomore guard Monty Mack's plans coming into the 1997–1998 were similar to those of any first–year player. After sitting out his freshman year because of NCAA academic requirements, Mack just wanted to play his role, do what UMass coach Bruiser Flint wanted him to do and play his game.

Like any first–year player.

But Mack proved early on that he's not like most first–year players. Nineteen games into his college career, he's already UMass' leading scorer at 14.1 ppg., and one of the main reasons Massachusetts (14–5, 6–0 A–10) has run off eight straight wins heading into tonight's pivotal A–10 East matchup with #21 Rhode Island at the Providence Civic Center.

With three All Atlantic–10 Rookie of the Week honors under his belt, Mack is on track to become only the second Massachusetts player (Marcus Camby, 1994) to win the A–10's Rookie of the Year. His ability to score, despite his inexperience, and his overall play have exceeded the expectations even Mack had for his first season.

"I think I'm playing better than I thought I would, but my expectations of my play are high," Mack said. "So I'm always trying to better myself, and just go out there and play hard."

Flint came into the season knowing that much of the Minutemen's success would hinge on the play of his young backcourt. He knew he could count on solid play in the post from junior center Lari Ketner and senior forward Tyrone Weeks, but his young guards would have to grow up in a hurry if UMass was to be a player in the A–10 race.

Mack was given the starting job at shooting guard, without having to worry about being pulled from the starting lineup after a bad game. Mack said it was the coaching staff and the team's belief in his abilities that has helped him stay focused throughout his rookie season. The confidence is there, thus the production.

"The games where I didn't play well, or didn't shoot well, the coaches always told not to worry about it," Mack said. "They told me just to go out there and play my game, and if the offense isn't there then play better defense and just help the team get a victory."

When Mack has been on, he's been spectacular. In the conference opener at St. Joseph's on Jan. 3, Mack scored 18 points in the first half, sending an always raucous Hawk Hill into silence. Against Boston College on Dec. 14, Mack lit up the Eagles for 20 points, leading UMass past BC for the third straight year. He hit five three's against George Washington on Jan. 10, and scored 19 points against Kansas. And though the focus of the attack this season has been inside, Mack's often superb play has helped to open up the offense during the current eight–game win streak.

But Massachusetts will face its toughest challenge since the streak began tonight against Rhode Island, with first place in the A–10 East at stake. Mack says the intensity has picked up during conference play, because the team feels they need to make a statement.

"I think we have a point to prove, because a lot of teams were doubting us in the conference," Mack said. "I think we want to show the A–10 that we're back and we're ready to play."

Although they're 6–0 in conference, UMass knows it'll be a tough fight to win back the A–10. Getting back a title they believe is theirs has been on the minds of the coaching staff and the players, and they know Rhode Island is among those teams they need to beat to get it.

"It's on a lot of our minds, not just the coaches but the players, who keep telling us we need to get our title back. We just need to work hard to do it," Mack said.

But with Mack playing above expectation and Charlton Clarke giving his usual solid performance, Massachusetts can now bank on their backcourt heading into the home stretch and a possible NCAA tournament birth, one that seems a lot more plausible than it did a month ago.

"I'm just going out there to play. It really doesn't matter if I get it our not. I'm just trying to have a good season, and help me take my team as far as I can."

Minuteman Notes...

Tonight's game will be broadcast nationally on ESPN... This has been a big week for Tyrone Weeks. In addition to being named A–10 Player of the Week for the first time, Weeks and Massachusetts women's basketball player Sabriya Mitchell were featured in yesterday's USA Today in a story focusing on the NCAA's Prop 68 ruling. Both Weeks and Mitchell earned a fourth year of eligibility after losing it their freshman year because of academic requirements... Massachusetts returns home on Sunday at 2:00 p.m. for a date with Dayton (13–6, 5–2 A–10), fresh off a 93–82 upset win over Xavier, and the annual grudge match with hated Temple next Tuesday at 9:30 p.m.

PAUL BLOCKARD / COLLEGIAN

Tyrone Weeks is one of URI coach Jim Harrick's concerns for tonight's game at the Providence Civic Center.

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Monty Mack has been a significant contributor — both defensively and offensively — in UMass' rise to the top of the A–10.

Minutemen look to push further ahead in league

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts basketball team's dominance over its Atlantic 10 opposition this season can be seen in the fine print.

While outscoring its conference challengers by an average of more than 15 points per contest and outrebounding them by more than five, UMass (14–5, 6–0 A–10) has taken six games in six tries and now sits alone atop the A–10 East Division, a spot many thought would be occupied by the Rhode Island Rams.

But coach Bruiser Flint knows his team's greatest challenge will come tonight when the Minutemen travel to the Providence Civic Center to take on the No. 21 Rams, who will no doubt be hoping to dethrone their rival on national television. Tip–off is set for 7:30 p.m.

"They're going to come out fighting," Flint said. "We just have to be ready. Not many teams win on the road in this conference. Teams are beating teams. We just hope we can sneak a few games out."

Rhode Island (13–4, 5–1) is Massachusetts' fifth ranked opponent this year, with the Minutemen dropping the previous four. But UMass had impressive showings in three of the four games and now while in the midst of an eight– game winning streak and on the brink of cracking the Top 25 poll for the first time this season, Flint thinks tonight's game

Turn to BASKETBALL, page 9

UM's Brad Norton leaves team for IHL

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

In a coach's decision before last Saturday night's game against No. 9 Boston College at the Mullins Center Forum, senior defenseman and co–captain Brad Norton was not in the lineup for the Massachusetts hockey team (3–16–2, 0–11–1 in Hockey East).

After 80 consecutive starts on the UMass backline, good enough for the school record, that decision to not suit him up for action was apparently the last straw for Norton. Last Monday afternoon, Norton packed his bags for the Detroit Vipers of the International Hockey League, and is due to sign a standard player agreement with the team this week.

Speculation has centered on Norton's possible jump to the pro ranks ever since the end of last season, as his propensity for tough, physical play is more oriented towards the IHL or the NHL than college hockey. Norton now joins former teammates such as Rob Bonneau (who plays for the Portland Pirates of the American Hockey League), Warren Norris (the AHL's St. John's Maple Leafs), and Dennis Wright (the AHL's Worcester Ice Cats) in the professional ranks.

For UMass coach Joe Mallen, this was a case that if the move was going to happen, this was the right time for both Norton and the team to make that move.

"We certainly wish him the best," Mallen said. "But we've noticed this season that Brad has not been completely focused on his game, and at times, it looked that he was being easily distracted. At this point of the season, this is the best move for both Brad and the team."

After this weekend's 6–3 loss to the Eagles, Norton still held the team lead in both points and assists, with two goals and 13 assists (15 points). The 47 career assists for the Acton native ranks him in tenth place on the career list behind Dan Reidy (51 assists).

With an assist in the BC game, fellow senior co–captain Tim Lovell now holds second place in team scoring with five goals and nine assists (14 points).

Junior defenseman Brendan Shaw took Norton's place in the lineup last weekend, and will most likely pair up with freshman Kevin Tucker this weekend as the Minutemen face off against Providence College at the Mullins Center on Friday night (7 p.m.), and Merrimack College at the Volpe Complex on Saturday night (7 p.m.).

Mallen also stated that this move for Norton will give players like Shaw a chance to crack the regular lineup, and will place the added responsibility of leadership on his other more experienced defenseman.

Minutemen hockey drops one to BC, 6–3

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

After last Friday night's game at the William D. Mullins Center against No. 9 Boston College (15–6–3, 9–5–2 in Hockey East) was postponed until March 4 because of bad weather, the Massachusetts hockey team (3–16–2, 0–11–1 in HE) travelled to Conte Forum Saturday night for the second half of the home–and–home series.

In the end, a closer–than–it–looked 6–3 loss to a nationally ranked team was a tough one to swallow, but other issues going into the game were tough to swallow as well.

Distractions filled the air for UMass on both sides of the ice, as Minuteman senior defenseman and co–captain Brad Norton was cut of the lineup for the first time in 80 games and Eagles goaltender Scott Clemmensen was on the verge of setting a new regular season NCAA mark for consecutive minutes without allowing a goal.

In the end, Clemmensen set the new record at 254:39 when senior Chris Fawcett scored on the freshman goalie at the 12:49 mark of the first period. But on the UMass side of things, the coach's decision to not dress Norton prompted the former Cushing Academy star to make the jump to the professional ranks with the Detroit Vipers of the International Hockey League.

Two losses in one game was hard for UMass coach Joe Mallen, but in his mind, the team kept up with the highly touted BC team for a majority of the contest. The continuing inability to take care of their scoring chances hurt the Minutemen, and that will have to be cured for their matchup against Providence College tomorrow night at the Mullins Center (7 p.m.).

"In the first period, we had some great chances to prevent Clemmensen from setting the record, but he made some great saves," Mallen said. "But truthfully, I told the team that setting that new record was their business, and it had nothing to do with us.

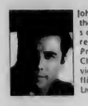
"Our biggest problem this year has been our lack of capitalizing on our scoring opportunities, and that hurt us once again."

After Fawcett's goal to put the Minutemen up 1–0 on the eagles, BC reeled off three consecutive goals. Tony Hutchins tied up the game at the 19:14 mark of the first period with a power play goal, and Marty Reasoner and Kevin Caulfield made the game 3–1 with scores at the 2:37 and 10:58 marks of the second period, respectively.

UMass continued their quality play on the man–up situation as of late with senior Mike Gaffney's goal at the 13:53 mark of the second frame, which was the first power play tally against BC in 20 tries.

But once again, a late goal hurt the Minutemen. Jamie O'Leary's shorthanded goal at the 17:59

Turn to HOCKEY, page 11



JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Kris Wallis and the Minutemen had a tough time breaking through Merrimack's defense a week ago, and a tougher time against Boston College Saturday.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVIII Issue 2 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Friday, January 30, 1998

Mr. President?

John Travolta plays the President in the soon–to–be–released movie Primary Colors. Check out our preview of upcoming flicks (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Leader of the Pack!

Neil Concepcion leads the men's indoor track team to victory over Holy Cross and New Hampshire (see Sports, page 12).

WORLD

Duma speaker calls for coalition government

MOSCOW (AP) — The communist speaker of the Russian Parliament called yesterday for the creation of a coalition government — a proposal immediately rejected by President Boris Yeltsin.

Speaker Gennady Seleznyov said in his five–page proposal to Yeltsin that Russia's current Cabinet does not reflect the public's range of political views.

He suggested forming a new one based on the relative strength of political parties in Parliament. Such a Cabinet would be dominated by communists and other hard–liners who control the powerful State Duma, parliament's lower house.

The hard–liners oppose many of Yeltsin's economic reforms, and their parliamentary battles have repeatedly stalled important legislation. Parliament has also passed laws contradicting Yeltsin's policies.

Seleznyov and communist leader Gennady Zyuganov long have argued for the formation of a "government of national trust" that would include opposition representatives.

The Kremlin gave no indication that it was willing even to consider the idea. Yeltsin rejected it after a regular Kremlin meeting with Seleznyov, the speaker of Parliament's upper house, Yegor Stroyev, and Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin.

NATION

Microsoft says that Justice case flawed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Microsoft Corp. urged a federal appeals court yesterday to overturn a lower court's ruling that it separate its Internet Explorer software from its Windows 95, saying the Justice Department's case is fundamentally flawed.

In the latest move in the complex legal battle, Microsoft is arguing the Justice Department's lawsuit last October was based on a misreading of a 1995 court agreement aimed at preventing the company from engaging in anti–competitive business practices. Microsoft argued the 1995 agreement "explicitly preserves Microsoft's freedom to develop 'integrated products'" such as blending Internet Explorer into Windows 95.

"The principle at stake in this case is whether Microsoft — and every other software company — has the right to continually improve its products and add new innovations for consumers," Robert Herbold, Microsoft's chief operating officer, said in a statement. The assertion came in a 51–page brief Microsoft filed with the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. The company is asking the panel to overturn a Dec. 11 preliminary injunction by U.S. District Court Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson that ordered separation of Internet Explorer from Windows 95.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 38 LOW: 24	HIGH: 35 LOW: 20	HIGH: 40 LOW: 24

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics.....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 12

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

UM student reports assault to police dept; investigation pending

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

A female student from the University of Massachusetts reported she was accosted and assaulted in the area of University Drive and Fearing Street early Thursday morning, according to a public safety alert issued by campus police.

The victim, who has not been identified, reported at approximately 1:20 a.m. she was accosted by three men in a vehicle on University Drive.

The female said one of the men from the vehicle grabbed her.

"The victim was able to run from the area and subsequently reported the incident," the public safety alert stated.

Although unharmed, UMass Chief of Police John Luippold said, "clearly she was shaken up."

According to the description the victim was able to give, Campus police are searching for "a small gray sports car, possibly an older model Toyota Celica or Honda Accord."

In addition, she gave a brief description of the three males in the vehicle.

"The driver of the vehicle is a white male, large in stature, with facial hair. He was wearing a maroon hat, and a gray flannel shirt. Two other occupants of the vehicle have also been described as white males, large in structure," the statement said.

The Community Disorders Unit (CDU) is investigating the incident. Anyone who may have been in the area at the time of the crime early Thursday morning or has information regarding a description of the vehicle or one of the three males should contact the CDU at 545–0893.

According to Luippold, campus police departments in the Five College area and the town of Amherst police department have been notified of the incident.

Campus police want students to exercise caution while walking on campus alone late at night.

"Students should take precaution and walk in groups and utilize the escort service," Luippold said.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Plowing Through

Dennis O'Neal of the athletic department plows the snow off Garber Field yesterday afternoon.

Renovated pool hall reopens in SU; Rubeck prepares for championships

By Jason Eiseman
Collegian Staff

Union Billiards, the newly renovated pool hall, located across from the Hatch in the University of Massachusetts Student Union, is now open and ready for the return of students.

Union Billiards, which used to be called Old Game Room, is under the supervision of student manager Strider Rubeck, a pool hall veteran. Rubeck is taking UMass students to the national championships.

Rubeck, a graduate student in Ancient and Medieval Politics, said he left the Old Game Room, because he wasn't happy there, but has returned to manage Union Billiards.

"It was dirty, dusty, just unkept," Rubeck said. "A very joyless and unhappy place to be."

Rubeck is working to change that.

"The place is clean. The tables are conducive to success," Rubeck said. He said the billiards tables are 50–year–old Gold Crown, Brunswick tables.

Rubeck himself has been playing billiards for most of his life.

"About 47 years," he said. "Ever since I was about 7 or 8 years old."

When it comes to billiards, Rubeck becomes philosophical

"I consider pocket billiards a metaphor for life," he said. "The metaphor is that we go to high school to get into the position to go to a good college. This is a game of position and angles."

Rubeck used to teach a class on pocket billiards, but it was dropped from the physical education program. Rubeck said if you teach the game as a metaphor for life, then it should be a part of the physical education program.

"I've actually stopped playing the game, now I just shoot around a little bit," he said.

Rubeck finished fourth in the Association of College Unions International(ACUI) Billiards Nationals in 1995, and this year he is bringing six students to the ACUI competitions in billiards and table tennis in New Hampshire on Feb. 21.

According to Rubeck, Jane Chui, who plays table tennis at Union Billiards, is ranked 14th in the country in table tennis, and ranked 4th in the under 21–year–old category. She is one of the students that Rubeck will accompany to the ACUI competition.

The table tennis qualifying matches begin next Saturday and the entry fee is $2.

Union Billiards will be open every day 1–11 p. m. According to a press release from the store, "If the University's open, we're open!"

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Tim Perry a sophomore sociology and criminal justice major, plays a game of pool in the newly renovated Union Billiards, located in the Student Union.

Prosecutor petitions judge to halt Paula Jones' lawsuit

By Pete Yost
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Monica Lewinsky's lawyer met briefly with Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr yesterday and signaled negotiations for an immunity deal have gone sour. The prosecutor then asked a judge to stop evidence–gathering in the separate Paula Jones lawsuit.

Two people close to the Jones lawsuit said U.S. District Judge Susan Webber Wright was halting the collection of all evidence pertaining to Ms. Lewinsky. The judge notified the attorneys of her decision, and was expected to formally release her decision yesterday afternoon, the individuals said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Starr said it was necessary to put evidence–gathering in the Jones lawsuit on hold because lawyers in that case were interfering with his criminal investigation of the Lewinsky matter by pursuing the same witnesses and evidence.

Both sides in the Jones suit "are attempting to take strategic advantage of the ongoing criminal investigation to their own benefit — with the inevitable effect of disrupting that investigation," Starr wrote in a motion filed in Little Rock, Ark. Donovan Campbell, Mrs. Jones' attorney, issued a statement saying that he would appeal Webber's decision, saying it was "clearly erroneous and represents plain error and an abuse of discretion."

In Washington, a court released details about the basis for the Lewinsky investigation.

In a document released by the judges who appointed Starr, Attorney General Janet Reno said that Ms. Lewsinky was captured on tape by Starr's investigators stating that she would lie in the Jones suit and encouraging a friend to do likewise.

"In a taped conversation with a cooperating witness, Ms. Lewinsky states that she intended to lie when deposed. In the same conversation, she urged the cooperating witness to lie in her own upcoming testimony," Reno wrote in seeking permission to turn the investigation over to Starr.

"I have determined that it would be a conflict of interest for the Department of Justice to investigate Ms. Lewinsky for perjury and subborning perjury as a witness in this civil suit involving the president," she wrote.

Starr's motion accused Mrs. Jones' lawyers of "shadowing" his investigation — on Wednesday, they delivered a subpoena to former White House chief of staff Leon Panetta while he was testifying before Starr's grand jury. Starr also said President Clinton's attorneys "have even subpoenaed information directly from" the prosecutor's office.

His dramatic request to halt the civil case that spawned Starr's investigation of an alleged presidential affair and coverup came after Ms. Lewinsky's attorney sounded a down note about his latest meeting with the prosecutor over an immunity deal.

"If you asked if we made any progress, we are making progress today on preparing Monica a defense," attorney William Ginsburg told The Associated Press. At midday, he and Ms. Lewinsky left her apartment at the Watergate complex together.

Ginsburg said his face–to–face

Turn to LEWINSKY, page 2

UMass & town of Amherst collaboration to benefit relations within community

By Samantha Poulten
Collegian Staff

The Select Board of Amherst and University of Massachusetts Chancellor David K. Scott announced Monday that the University and the town of Amherst will continue their plans to improve relations within the community.

"We will now be working together as partners to create a plan that will help us become one strong, integrative community," a press release from Scott said.

According to Sarah Ovenden, Director of Community Relations at UMass, a written agreement was made almost three years ago between the University of Massachusetts and the town of Amherst.

This agreement contained many specific actions created to best serve all members of the community including a university reimbursement to Amherst for ambulance services, and university provided technical assistance for Amherst, Ovenden said.

"We have built a strong relationship since the agreement, a relationship that has developed into a partnership," Scott said.

The University and Amherst are in the process of developing future plans that will benefit both the University and the town.

Ovenden said that the two groups are in the process of developing issues concerning Amherst and the University.

"We will be working aggressively over the next few months finding issues for the University and the town of Amherst to work on," she said.

"The plan will focus of how we can work together in a mutually dependent and supportive collaboration, in order to best serve all the members of our community," Scott said

The written agreement expires in June, and the two groups have decided not to renegotiate a new written agreement.

The Amherst Select Board and UMass encourage students and town members to share any thoughts and ideas about issues which should be addressed by both sides.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Post it!

José Santos a junior economics major looks through piles of posters in the Student Union ballroom yesterday.

Bomb blast at Alabama abortion clinic kills one

By Jay Reeves
Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — An explosion caused by a bomb ripped through an abortion clinic yesterday morning, killing an off-duty police officer and critically injuring a nurse. It was believed to be the first fatal clinic bombing in U.S. history.

Authorities evacuated students at nearby dormitories of the University of Alabama at Birmingham out of concern a second bomb could detonate.

The blast at the New Woman All Women Health Care clinic came just a week after the nation marked the 25th anniversary of the U.S. Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion.

The dead man, whose name was not immediately released, was a city policeman who also worked as a guard at the clinic, Police Chief Mike Coppage said.

The injured woman, a nurse, was in critical condition, said University of Alabama Hospital spokeswoman Laura Mansfield. Brian Lett of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms confirmed that the explosion was caused by a bomb. No second explosive device was immediately found, but the area around the clinic remained secured at midday, officials said.

"We still have a hot scene. We're being very cautious because of what happened in Atlanta," Lett said.

A year ago, two bombs went off an hour apart at a clinic in Atlanta; all seven injuries were in the second blast. That bombing is still unsolved.

The search for a possible second bomb was complicated because dogs sniffing for the scent of a bomb kept finding remnants of the one that exploded.

At late morning, authorities used a robot to examine what appeared to be a small box-shaped item found near the clinic. There was no immediate word on what the item contained.

Five people have been shot to death at abortion clinics, one in 1993 and four in 1994. While many clinics around the country have been bombed over the years, no fatalities are known.

"This is the first death that we have seen from a bombing of an abortion clinic," said Vicki Saporta, director of the National Abortion Federation. The ATF also said there have been no bombing deaths since the bureau began tracking abortion clinic violence in 1982.

President Clinton condemned the bombing as "an unforgivable act that strikes at the heart of the constitutional freedoms and invidual liberties all Americans hold dear."

Windows in the two-story clinic were blown out and an awning over the door was ripped apart. Black debris was blown into the street, and windows of an office building across the street were shattered.

Mentzor Chadwick, a regular anti-abortion protester at the New Woman clinic, was across the street when the explosion happened and was questioned about what happened, said David Lackey, an anti-abortion leader who went to the scene. He called the explosion a "heinous act."

■ Lewinsky

continued from page 1

meeting with Starr lasted less than an hour and declined to provide further details.

Fox News quoted Ginsburg as saying that Starr felt his client was "holding back" information and that when Ginsburg said he had nothing else to offer, the talks broke down. Fox also reported that Ginsburg said Ms. Lewinsky would now be a reluctant witness who would likely take the Fifth Amendment.

Ginsburg denied making those statements.

On Wednesday, Ginsburg had said that if talks designed to reach an immunity deal for Ms. Lewinsky in exchange for her testimony broke down, he would turn to preparing a defense for the former White House intern.

Ginsburg previously confirmed his client was told by prosecutors she was a target who is likely to be indicted.

Ginsburg and Starr's investigators had been in regular contact in recent days as they tried to clarify points in her formal offer earlier this week to testify.

There was no immediate comment from Starr's office.

Prosecutors also are setting their sights on Secret Service agents as possible witnesses into whether Clinton had sex with Ms. Lewinsky.

Officials say Starr's office and Treasury officials were discussing how to gain testimony from the agents — a step that would breach their customary code of silence.

Starr is trying to determine whether there is any corroboration for the accusation that Ms. Lewinsky, a former White House intern, had a sexual relationship with Clinton and then was urged by the president and longtime Clinton confidant Vernon Jordan to lie about it.

Biography featured in S. Africa;

UMass prof. portrays Bram Fisher's fight against apartheid

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts English Department chairman Stephen Clingman's new biography of anti-apartheid leader Bram Fischer will be featured during the second annual memorial lecture in Fischer's honor in Johannesburg, South Africa on Feb. 3.

The biography, which is "a history of an extraordinary individual during the anti-apartheid years," Clingman said in a press release, will be available during the lecture presented by Chief Justice of South Africa, Ismail Mohammed.

Clingman was interested in writing the biography because Fischer was "someone who could change his own self without abandoning it," Clingman said.

Bram Fischer: Afrikaner Revolutionary took a decade to write, Clingman said. He used letters, records and spoke to Nelson Mandela and others who worked with Fischer, to research the biography.

"When I started writing it the person [Bram Fischer] was someone you could hardly talk about. He was sentenced to life imprisonment," Clingman said.

"It covers more than 100 years of South African history and shows how some whites in that country were committed to the cause of equality," Clingman said in a press release.

"He [Bram Fischer] was a very interesting figure. A white man who allied himself with black South Africans. He responded to a historical need with his own life," Clingman said.

Fischer was an Afrikaner, a descendant of the white, Dutch-speaking people who put Apartheid in place in South Africa 40 years ago.

Fischer was born in one of the most prominent Afrikaner families. He had a distinguished law career where he worked with Nelson Mandela. In 1956-61 he participated in the defense of 156 individuals accused of treason.

In 1965 he led the defense of Mandela in the infamous Rivonia trial.

Fischer became a fugitive from the law in 1965, evading police for 10 months. He was eventually captured and sentenced to life imprisonment. He was released 1975 when he was dying of cancer.

The biography has received considerable advance praise among writers and scholars.

"The contradictions of his [Bram Fischer] situation as a white man and Afrikaner is told with honesty, deep intelligence, and admirable skill worthy of the subject. He has no monument in stone but this book is testimony that his life continues in his great contributions to the free South Africa now realized," said Nadine Gordimer, South African novelist and 1991 winner of the Nobel Prize for Literature.

Clingman's colleagues in the English Department have been "very supportive and pleased from what I can tell. I've never received less than full support from my colleagues," Clingman said.

"He got a standing ovation after reading a very moving chapter from his book at a colloquium," said Ernest Gallo, Associate chairman of the English Department.

American economy only beginning to experience effects of Asian crisis

By Dave Skidmore
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The American economy has just begun to feel the impact of the financial storms swirling through Asia and will slow noticeably "before spring is over," Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said yesterday.

"We have as yet experienced only the peripheral winds of the Asian crisis," Greenspan told the Senate Budget Committee in his first congressional appearance in three months.

But, he said, before spring ends sharp currency devaluations in Asia will show up in this country through "reductions in demand for our exports and intensified competition from imports."

"All of this suggests that the growth of economic activity in this country will moderate from the recent brisk pace," he said. Economists said Greenspan's remarks confirmed that the Federal Reserve has no plans to raise interest rates.

"They imply there's not a chance of a tightening move because, at the very least, Asia is weakening the economy enough to eliminate any threat of inflation," said economist David Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. in New York. "And it raises the possibility of an interest rate cut sometime around mid year." That cheered Wall Street. Bond prices surged, pushing down the yield on the benchmark 30-year Treasury bond to 5.87 percent from 5.94 percent late Wednesday. The Dow Jones average of industrial stocks was up 44 points to 7,960 by late yesterday morning.

Greenspan's last congressional appearance came in late October just days after the Asian crisis provoked a record 554-point drop in the Dow.

At that time, he said it was conceivable the crisis could prove a "salutary event" for the American economy, slowing growth enough to keep inflation in check but not so much as to threaten the nearly 7-year-old expansion. He stuck with that view yesterday.

"A moderation (in economic growth) would appear helpful at this juncture," he said. "The likelihood that we shall be seeing some lower prices on imported goods as a result of the difficulties in Asia may afford some breathing room from inflation pressures."

As recently as early October, Greenspan was warning that labor shortages created by last year's robust economic growth threatened to put the economy on "an unsustainable track."

However, yesterday, he cited risks to the economy from both inflation and from too-rapid disinflation.

Lower import prices "will not permanently supress the risks inherent in tightened labor markets," he said. The risk is that labor shortages will drive wages up faster, forcing businesses to raise their prices more rapidly.

However, the central bank chairman cautioned, "We have no guarantee that the projected surpluses will actually materialize." Unless steps are taken to put the Social Security trust fund on a sounder footing, Greenspan said, the budget "will almost inevitably turn to large and sustained deficits as the baby boom generation moves into retirement."

PEACE CORPS
Five-College Minor Recruitment Awareness Campaign
Feb 2-5
"Coming to a campus near you"
(413) 545-2105
Peace Corps Five-College Recruitment Office

Attention Graduating Seniors and Juniors
Seniors, unsure about your plans after graduation? Peace Corps has hundreds of summer positions (during between June and September) available in business, education, health/nutrition, agriculture and the environment. ALL MAJORS WELCOME.
Juniors, start planning early for next year. Start back to school next fall with your post-graduation plans already set. For more information, stop by while we are on campus.
Info. Tables — Feb. 4&5 @ 10-3 pm — Campus Center
Info. Session — Feb. 5 @ 7 pm — Hasbrouck Lab. #124

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139
STUDENT SPECIAL
4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116 So. Amherst
256-0080

Save on general books
EVERY DAY at UStore's
NEW Book Department
New York Times Bestseller
Hardcover ..... Save 35%
New York Times Bestseller
Paperback ..... Save 25%
All Other Books
Hardcover Fiction ...20% Off
Any other book* ..... 10% Off
Sale Books and Special Orders
University Store
On the UMass Campus Center Concourse
Hours:
M-F 9 to 5
Sat. 11 to 4
(413) 545 - 2619
We accept AMEX, Discover, MasterCard, Visa, and the UCard!
The NEW Union Billiards
NEW NAME, NEW LOOK, NEW ATMOSPHERE!
STOP IN BETWEEN 1PM AND 11PM ANY DAY OF THE WEEK TO SEE THE NEW UNION BILLIARDS. WE'D LOVE TO SEE YOU! COME BY AND MEET STRIDER AND THE GANG. WE'RE RIGHT ACROSS FROM THE HATCH IN THE OLD GAMES ROOM.

A special Series of Free Campus Events
http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/calendar.htm
Kevin Kline In & Out
"...A RED-HOT THRILLER..." THE PEACEMAKER
:00pm
Saturday; and Su to February 1
ter Audi
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Saddam ready to fight despite antiwar claims

By Leon Barkho
Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraqis will defend their country "with expertise, faith and perseverance" if the United States attacks, President Saddam Hussein declared yesterday — adding that there was no reason for the United States do to so.

While the Clinton administration and Congress were laying groundwork for possible U.S.-led airstrikes on Iraq, Saddam was quoted as saying his army will fight "in a manner that will be a subject of admiration."

"They don't have any national interest or any justification to come thousands of miles to attack us," Saddam said. "[But] if the devil pushed these enemies to commit an evil act and an aggression on us, we will be forced to fight them with all our capabilities, expertise, faith and perseverance. ...Their aggression is against God."

His comments, reported by the official Iraqi News Agency, came at the start of Eid al-Fitr, a three-day holiday that marks the end of the Muslim holy month of Ramadan. Saddam spoke as he met with members of the ruling Baath Party, the Revolutionary Command Council and his Cabinet, the agency said.

Iraq and the United Nations are in a standoff over U.N. inspections intended to ensure that Iraq has eliminated its weapons of mass destruction. Baghdad was forced to accept the inspections at the end of the 1991 Gulf War, and tough U.N. sanctions imposed in 1990 are unlikely to be lifted until inspectors certify the programs have been dismantled.

Washington demands Baghdad provide U.N. experts with unconditional access to any site they wish to inspect, including Saddam's palaces, or face air and missile attacks.

Russia has had some success in mediating disputes between Iraq, the United States and the United Nations, and Russian Foreign Minister Yevgeny Primakov said he is optimistic a peaceful solution will be found.

Primakov, speaking in Madrid, Spain, said a military attack on Iraq would be "very serious and very negative."

Primakov was to discuss the situation with Secretary of State Madeleine Albright in Madrid on Friday during her visit to Europe to explain the U.S. position to its allies.

Her visit was to begin in Paris, where Foreign Ministry spokesman Yves Doutriaux declined to say yesterday whether France would try to block any U.S.-led air strike. However, he repeatedly called the Iraqi stand "unacceptable" and an air strike "undesirable."

Defense Secretary William Cohen said in Washington that the United States still was seeking a diplomatic solution to the impasse. On Capitol Hill, however, lawmakers were considering a resolution to "take all necessary and appropriate actions to respond to the threat posed by Iraq's refusal to end its weapons of mass destruction programs."

Iraq's state-run newspapers said yesterday that fighting the United States was part of Iraqis' national duty.

Al-Thawra, newspaper of the ruling Baath party, said President Clinton would reap only humiliation if he ordered a military strike. Babil, an influential newspaper owned by Saddam's eldest son, Odai, said God had honored Iraq to "face the most oppressive power" in world history.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for U.N. weapons inspectors in Baghdad said the United Nations had chosen its experts for Iraq's arms evaluation talks scheduled for Sunday.

The talks — with the participation of experts from the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council as well as Germany — will assess Iraq's progress in eliminating its weapons of mass destruction.

Spokesman Alan Dacey said the first group of 23 experts, under veteran Russian missile expert Nikita Smidovich, would arrive Saturday in Iraq. The second, under German inspector Horst Reeps, would arrive Sunday.

Iraq needs a clean bill of health from the inspectors before U.N. sanctions can be lifted.

Smidovich and his experts will ask Iraq to provide further clarification on the number of missiles it produced, Dacey said. They also will demand Iraq account for warheads it filled with biological and chemical agents.

Reeps and his 17 experts were expected to urge Iraq to provide documents illustrating past activities to produce the chemical warfare agent VX.

Dacey said the United Nations has not yet named its team of germ warfare experts to biological talks scheduled for Feb. 7.

U.N. inspectors say the biological program is the most problematic area in their efforts to disarm Iraq. They still suspect Baghdad may be hiding biological agents.

LAUREN KOSBY / COLLEGIAN

Good job hunting

Jodi Vinick a sophomore biochemistry major and James Barnes a sophomore in the Stockbridge school look for job opportunities outside the student employment office in Whitmore Thursday.

The Collegian is currently accepting applications for the following editorial positions:
• Developing Nations Editor
• Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender Issues Editor
• Jewish Affairs Editor
Experience with writing and reporting with concentration in the applicable community is preferred for these paid staff positions.
To get involved in any other aspect of the Collegian newsroom, stop by 113 Campus Center and speak to Managing Editor Laura Staab or the editor of the desk you'd like to write for, Sunday-Thursday, 6000-9 p.m.

AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Express Healthcare Corporation
Lifetime Total Fitness Facility
S. Amherst
www.amherstathletic.com
256-0080

Regency Hairstylists
253-9526
JANUARY WHITE SALE
has been extended to FEB. 7
20% off all tanning packages

WANT A SODA OR SNACK FROM THE VENDING MACHINE?
USE YOUR UCard
UCARD VENDING IS COMING FOR APRIL 1998 AT THE:
Campus Center Student Union
Lederle GRC
Conte
Bartlett
Whitmore
Herter
SOM
and selected residence halls
WITH YOUR UCARD, NO CHANGE OR BILLS NEEDED
IT TAKES JUST $10 TO OPEN A UCARD DEBIT ACCOUNT
VISIT THE UCARD OFFICE @ FRANKLIN DINING HALL OPENING WEEK HOURS, M-TH 8:30-7, F 8:30-5
CALL 545-0197 FOR MORE INFORMATION

YEAH. LIKE YOU'VE GOT TIME TO GO TO THE MALL.
Why Bother?
At University Store, you can get mall pricing and selection, and no hassle!
Computers- Software, hardware, and more! Lots of Academic discounts!
Health & Beauty- Great selection, many items at or below Discount store prices!
School Supplies- Paper, pens, lamps, storage bins, pencils, notebooks, tape, staples, and tons more stuff!
Computers- Software, hardware, and more! Lots of Academic discounts!
Art Supplies- Paint, pastels, paper, canvas, matboard, pencils, brushes, and more. Many items priced lowest in area!!!
Planners- Wide selection of annual and academic planners! Academic planners 40% off!!!
University Store
University Store
On the UMass Campus Center Concourse
Hours:
M-F 9 to 5
Sat. 11 to 4
(413) 545 - 2619
We accept AMEX, Discover, MasterCard, Visa, and the UCard!
The NEW Union Billiards
NEW NAME, NEW LOOK, NEW ATMOSPHERE!
STOP IN BETWEEN 1PM AND 11PM ANY DAY OF THE WEEK TO SEE THE NEW UNION BILLIARDS. WE'D LOVE TO SEE YOU! COME BY AND MEET STRIDER AND THE GANG. WE'RE RIGHT ACROSS FROM THE HATCH IN THE OLD GAMES ROOM.

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Let Clinton get to work

It's happened again.

Somebody must have a personal vendetta against Bill Clinton. During his first campaign for office the issues were pot smoking, dodging the draft and an affair with Gennifer Flowers. Clinton survived. The American public sent a message that they did not care about the personal shortcomings of Bill Clinton, because he had good ideas for the future of America.

In his first term as president, Bill Clinton was hounded by the press, investigators over Whitewater and lost FBI documents. Clinton survived, and, after years of investigation, no evidence of wrongdoing on his part has been found.

His second term as president has been rocky at best. First it was Paula Jones, now it's Monica S. Lewinsky. Kenneth Starr, independent counsel to investigate the Whitewater affair, said that Clinton may have asked Lewinsky to lie about an affair they had when she was an intern at the White House. That would be obstruction of justice — a serious and impeachable offense.

"Do we really want to impeach President Clinton? Do we really want to slaughter our golden goose?"

Jason Eiseman

First of all, the president, like any other American, is innocent until proven guilty. Second, he did not obstruct justice by shredding files or making death threats against federal investigators — his only offense is that he may have asked Lewinsky to lie about their affair. So what? Should he be impeached because he did not want investigators to know about his sex life?

Although many think the accusations against him are serious, I do not think that having an affair with another consenting adult is comparable to breaking into your opposing party's campaign headquarters and trying to steal the files — which is the comparison now being made between Clinton and Nixon.

Let's not discount the timing with which these charges were made. Starr supposedly gathered hours of tape of Lewinsky speaking about her affair with the president, but these accusations came out days after the Paula Jones deposition.

It seems as if Starr has become an unwitting accomplice to Paula Jones' lawyers and the Republican Party. He was investigating Whitewater — why all of the sudden is he interested in the sexual activity of the president?

How can we expect Clinton to get his job done, when all we do is drag his name through the mud? I don't think anyone has a right to know anything about the president's sex life.

Some people say that these affairs prove that Clinton is immoral, unethical and unfit to be president. We have had many immoral and unethical presidents. The Constitution does not say that a president has to be moral. It also does not say in the Constitution that the president has to faithful to his wife.

Now, I'm not saying that Bill Clinton should be having affairs. Is Bill Clinton a jerk to Hillary? Apparently he is. Are some of his actions morally questionable? Yes, some of his actions are morally questionable. But there is one thing that no one has considered in all of this. Bill Clinton is a good president, maybe the best president this country has seen in over 30 years.

The economy is strong, it has been gaining strength since Clinton took office. While people screamed about balanced budget amendments and budget deficits, Bill Clinton has strengthened our economy to the point where we now have a budget surplus.

Unemployment is down, inflation is under control, the stock market is booming, and wages are up — all since Clinton took office.

Do we really want to impeach President Clinton? Do we really want to slaughter our golden goose?

Bill Clinton has successfully fulfilled his duty as president. The president's responsibilities include being the chief executive of the United States, and Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy.

Somewhere along the way, being president began to mean being a moral leader. That is not what is required by the Constitution. Our forefathers believed that the president was no more important than Congress or our Supreme Court. This country is a representative democracy, and Bill Clinton is in effect a representative of the people of the United States. He must effectively serve the needs of the public, not necessarily set a moral example, and Clinton has effectively served the needs of the public.

Clinton has made mistakes, and he appears to be a shady character, but he is a good president and that is his job.

Let's just leave the man alone. He has done a good job so far, and if we keep pestering him we're going to distract him from what he has to do. How can the president seriously deliver the State of the Union address with these charges hanging over his head?

There is much more important news than the president's sex life. Apparently the pope visited Cuba last week. Big deal, you'd think they didn't have religion down there. And some guy named Yassir Arafat visited the Holocaust Museum, but I'm really not sure what the significance of that is. Let's let the president get back to work, and focus on what is really important.

Jason Eiseman is a Collegian staff member.

Letters to the Editor

Vote no on garage

To the editor:

It would be difficult, of late, to have lived in Amherst and not have heard something about the parking garage debate and referendum scheduled for Feb. 3. A no-vote would overturn the decision by town meeting to build a 3-level parking garage in downtown Amherst.

A garage would increase congestion and pollution in town, partially due to the proposed site, Boltwood Walk. Access streets are not equipped to handle a large volume of traffic. The resulting congestion, in addition to the concentration of vehicles in the garage, would increase pollution and likely have health consequences for many people, especially those elderly residents who live near Boltwood Walk.

There are alternatives. One is surface parking on the periphery of Amherst with shuttle buses to town. Alternatives to the garage were not explored in depth.

The town of Amherst has recently started working on a master plan for its future. If the plan was complete, the town could logically decide whether a parking garage fits within it.

Part of the appeal of this garage is that the state will give Amherst $3 million toward its construction. Some may believe that we must build the garage soon (before the master plan is finished) in order to receive this money. That's not true. We can apply for the funds until the year 2001. This means we should wait for the final master plan, which should include a comprehensive, neutral study of the parking situation in our town.

There has not been a reliable study, so far, that demonstrates a need for the garage. In fact, the most comprehensive study to date shows that parking is almost always available at various sites including the public section of the lot behind CVS.

So, why build a parking garage for which no need has been established and which would jeopardize people's health, create congestion and increase pollution? I, for one, am going to vote "no" on Feb. 3 and I urge you to do the same.

Hwei-Ling Greeney
Amherst

The doublethink of the '90s

American Newspeak
Wayne Grytting

"Organic" gets a face lift

Hats off to the U.S. Agriculture Department for withstanding the attacks of wild-eyed extremists and stepping in to answer the question "What is organic food?"

Thanks to their creative efforts, food that is irradiated, genetically engineered or raised on Municipal sewer sludge (American sewer sludge, I might add) can proudly bear the label "organically grown." Despite the presence of metals and toxic substances in what is more politely termed "biosolids," none other than the Environmental Protection Agency defended their inclusion because they are "more natural than commercially produced fertilizer."

But it was in the fine print where our Agriculture Department really shined, eliminating a whole slew of extraneous labels that were just adding complications. These include the terms "produced without synthetic pesticides," "pesticide-free farm," "humanely-raised," "ecologically produced" and "no drugs or growth hormones used." Better to have just one label, don't you think? (Washington Post, Jan. 1).

There be joy in mudville

If you are like me, whenever you hear a phrase like "Corporate executives are generally ecstatic," a small place in your heart begins to warm up. In this case, the cause for happiness is the fine work being done by the World Trade Organization in cutting down barriers to trade.

The New York Times reports international agreements "on everything from drug testing procedures to food safety standards are driven largely by business interests most affected." But what are the remaining obstructions?

Paula Stern, former chair of the U.S. International Trade commission, provided the answer in testimony to the Congress. Ms. Stern pointed to "obstacles" like "strong grass-roots citizens organizations and their Congressional champions" who are both "retarding or even blocking regulatory reform" (New York Times, Jan. 9).

Status upgrades

Chicago's educational channel, WTTW, has been fined by the FCC for airing some improper underwriter spots. Or to put that in the industry parlance, they were caught broadcasting "enhanced" underwriter credits.

The 30 second quasi-ads even raised concerns with the editorial writers at Advertising Age, who in an editorial granted an equally "enhanced" status to public broadcasting. Listen to this: "Preserving distinctions between public TV and commercial TV is still important for public TV's future — both as an entertainment medium and as an advertising medium."

At your local public station's next pledge drive, you might recommend they rewrite their charters to reflect their emergence as a important commercial vehicle (Advertising Age, Dec. 18).

McPrison raises its standards

The Corrections Corporation of America has quietly emerged as the McDonald's of private prisons. CCA is now worth $3.5 billion, is among the top 5 performing stocks on the New York Stock Exchange and accounts for nearly half of the 77,000 prisoners who have been purchased for housing by private corporations.

Much of this success is due to the philosophy of co-founder Thomas Beasley, who says in the prison business, "You just sell it like you were selling cars or real estate or hamburgers." This refreshing candor has of course invited criticism that private prisons cut too many corners and lower their standards to increase profits.

Fortunately, a spokeswoman for CCA named Susan Hart has shown that the high standards of our penal system are being upheld, at least in their hiring practices for guards. In her words: "it would be inappropriate, for certain positions, (to hire) someone who said, 'Yes, I beat a prisoner to death.' That would be a red flag for us." But just for "certain positions..." (The Nation, 1/5).

Special thanks this week to the eagle eyes of Dan Parry.

Wayne Grytting is a syndicated columnist. More American Newspeak can be found on the Internet at http://www.scn.org/newspeak.

Coming to a TV near you

Seema Gangatirkar

With all the attention focused on Bill Clinton and his alleged affair with 21-year-old White House intern, Monica Lewinsky, I believe it's time to get down to the most important issue: when will the made-for-tv movie hit the airwaves?

Think it won't happen? Well, consider that the United States is a country where the three major networks all aired their own versions of the Amy Fisher story — and she wasn't even the President.

Clinton's latest scandal has all the makings of a Monday night flick. There's sex, lies and even some videotape. While right now, it's kind of hard to see what all the fuss is. So the President may or may not have had an affair. Should anyone but Hillary or Chelsea really care?

But we Americans love our scandals, and, as journalists would say, this particular one has got legs and is walking right out the door.

There are so many angles this story could take on but unfortunately the networks just aren't running with it in an interesting fashion. Given the endless parade of talking heads in expensive suits all spewing complex opinions, it might be more exciting to watch grass grow.

But in the hands of a couple of television network guys with a low budget and a creative license, who knows what could happen? Add a car chase or two, a blackmailer and a couple of shady CIA operatives and the movie could be a ratings bonanza.

Every made-for-television movie needs to have a sexy- scary type title to titillate the viewer. Examples could be the provocative but staid The Other Woman or something oxymoronic along the lines of True Lies. But following in typical John Grisham fashion, I propose the concise title of The Intern.

Directing the television version of The Intern will be Oliver Stone. After all, which other director would not only be able to substantiate Hillary Clinton's claims of a right- wing conspiracy against her husband and actually prove that a conspiracy does indeed exist?

Michael Douglas lands the lead role for two simple reasons; he's already played a shiny, happy Commander-in- Chief in The American President and he's had practice cheating on his wife in Fatal Attraction. Not only does Douglas ooze the smooth-talking charm to carry off the role, he also comes off almost as slick as Clinton himself.

While Emma Thompson took the unforgiving role of the First Lady in the feature film, Primary Colors, Joan Allen gets the part in the television movie. With plenty of practice as a long-suffering and expressionless wife (The Crucible, Face/Off), Allen is perfect for appearances on a variety of morning shows — showing just how well she can stand by her man. Add The Pretenders' "I'll Stand By You" as background music every time Allen hits the screen, just to emphasize the point.

All of Clinton's alleged and potential paramours have one thing in common: big hair. Given that, the role of Paula Jones goes to Elizabeth Berkley. After the Showgirls' debacle and her "Saved By The Bell" past, it's hard to take Berkley in any role seriously — a dismal quality the actress shares with Jones.

And of course, no made-for-television movie would be complete without Tori Spelling, Kelly Martin or Yasmine Bleeth. These stellar actresses make the rounds of such fabulous television movies like "Seduced By Danger" or "Living In Sin." Given credentials such as these, the role of Monica Lewinsky would be a cinch.

My personal pick for Lewinsky would be Spelling for two reasons. First, Lewinsky hasn't yet spoken publicly about the allegations, rendering Spelling's role completely silent. Second, with Spelling in the opening credits, it would be easy to get Dad — Aaron Spelling — to finance the whole operation.

So watch for it: The Intern, coming to a television near you.

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Co-Opinion Editor
Tamar Carroll Editorial/Opinion Co-Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Albertina Fernandes Multicultural Affairs Editor
Leigh Faulkner News Editor
Lauren Kusky Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor
Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
David Parmenter Editorial Production Assistant
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jscilyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jscob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

A preview of upcoming movie releases

COURTESY KEN REGAN

Tom Hanks stars in Saving Private Ryan, a new movie about a WWII soldier directed by Steven Spielberg.

By Bryan McAllister
Collegian Staff

Let's flashback to this time in 1997 for a minute. Last January, Tom Cruise and Nicole Kidman were shooting Stanley Kubrick's Eyes Wide Shut in London. There were two big-budget disaster movies about volcanoes in the works. A giant lizard sequel was the talk of Memorial Day. And a great '70s trilogy was about to be re-released.

Fast-forward back to the present, 1998. Can we be sure it's a new year? Tom's still shooting with Kubrick in London. Two big-budget disaster movies about comets are on the horizon. A giant lizard is the talk of Memorial Day. And Grease is coming back! Of course, there's a lot more under the tree from Hollywood. Although details are sketchy, here's a look at some of what to expect in movies for the first half of the year:

The Best:

• Godzilla — There's a myth surrounding Hollywood that the reason studio executives and filmmakers need to make their movies to gargantuan is because of their childhood inferiority complexes. They were the ones smashed in the nose in dodgeball. Now, they have a little vendetta against the rest of the working world. So here comes the biggest movie of the summer, from the creators of Independence Day. You know the story and the star is a big giant lizard, so there's not much surprise factor here. Godzilla will most likely be a rip-off of every monster movie from King Kong to Jurassic Park, but it can boast its pure size. And like the tag line says, size does matter.

• The Mask of Zorro — Antonio Banderas and Anthony Hopkins team up in this big screen version of the popular television show. It's a wonder it took Hollywood so long to make this film, because it promises so many great elements — swashbuckling adventure, over-the-top comedy and passionate romance. Banderas was so perfect as a mysterious rogue in Desperado, you can just see him donning the black garb for this role.

• Primary Colors — The story of Bill Clinton's rise to the presidency is even more inviting after his latest mishap. Here's the movie based on the novel by "Anonymous" — really Newsweek journalist Joe Klein. It chronicles Clinton's adventures in Arkansas and fight to be leader of the free world, as well as his relationships with his wife, advisors and other women. Do we really want to see more of this? The answer is yes, because of the talent involved. John Travolta does his best Clinton accent, Emma Thompson is the spirited Hillary and Billy Bob Thornton is an advisor in the mold of James Carville. Primary Colors is in the hands of brilliant Mike Nichols and writing partner Elaine May, who last gave us The Birdcage.

• Saving Private Ryan — Tom Hanks turned down the lead role in Primary Colors because he was too friendly with Clinton and didn't want to ruin their relationship. Instead he made this film about a WWII soldier's attempt to cross enemy lines to save his fellow patriot. Some of the best filmmaking talents are mixed together in this summer release — in the director's chair, Steven Spielberg. A script rewrite was done by Shawshank Redemption filmmaker Frank Darabont. Hanks, a director himself, plays the brave soldier. Writer-director-actor Ed Burns (The Brothers McMullen) takes on a supporting role. And playing Ryan himself is Hollywood's hottest new star and screenwriter, Matt Damon.

• Sphere — If there's any hope to sink Titanic, it's this film set to be released on Feb. 13. Dustin Hoffman, the almost-forgotten Sharon Stone and Samuel L. Jackson star in the sci-fi thriller, based on the novel by Michael Crichton. This was one of Crichton's first novels, and one of his most intriguing. It combines psychological tension with alien mystery, and has enough twists and turns to keep anyone interested.

The Worst:

• Armageddon — Didn't Hollywood learn anything last year when they released two pitiful movies about volcanoes? Dumb question. Heads up — here comes two movies about comets that threaten to destroy the earth. In Armageddon, scientists led by Bruce Willis are Apollo 13ed to space to somehow get rid of the comets or divert them or whatever. It's all very patriotic.

• Deep Impact — See above. Subtract Bruce Willis.

• The Truman Show — Unknown to Truman, he's grown up in an entirely fake world, one that was choreographed precisely, to be shown on television. It's kind of like if the "Real World" cast didn't know they were being videotaped. The question the movie proposes is how Truman will turn out. The answer is, somewhat like Jim Carrey, who plays a somewhat serious role. Abnormal man affected by television? Carrey trying to be dramatic? We saw this movie already. It was called The Cable Guy.

• Lost In Space — The old television show was campy comedy, this big screen version is all special effects and action. But Lost In Space looks more weird than interesting, something The Fifth Element knows all too well. I also propose a boycott on any movie that stars Matt LeBlanc.

• Mighty Joe Young — As if another Godzilla movie wasn't enough, the late summer brings the loveable Joe Young, a King Kong supergorilla to the big screen. The makers of this fluff figure that as long as Joe is destroying cities, he might as well be cute and cuddly. Aww, how thoughtful.

COURTESY KEVIN MAZUR

The Artist releases a compendium of scattered tracks from 1982–97 on Crystal Ball, available exclusively at Best Buy.

Music news and notes

By Marty Keane
Collegian Staff

In addition to forthcoming releases from the likes of Pearl Jam, Ani DiFranco and others next month, this spring promises to feature many of music's biggest names returning with all-new material.

• First and foremost, the Beastie Boys are hard at work on the long overdue follow-up to the multi-platinum Ill Communication. According to their publicists at Nasty Little Man, a tentative mid-summer release is planned.

• A Tribe Called Quest hits back with The Love Movement, an album filled with just that — love — sometime in late May or early April. Band members describe the new material as a stripped-down affair.

• Madonna's new album (March 3 on her own Maverick label) entitled Rav Of Light features 13 songs about love, freedom and following one's heart.

• The Artist has just announced that his 4-CD set Crystal Ball on his own NPG label will be exclusively distributed by the retail chain Best Buy, beginning March 1. With 41 tracks culled from various sessions over the 1982-97 period — including an entire disc of acoustic music — longtime fans will no doubt be pleased to what the ex-Mr. Prince Rogers Nelson has to say.

• Returning with his first album of all-new material in a decade, Eric Clapton's Pilgrim (March 10) features two songs in tribute to his son who died after falling out a Manhattan high-rise apartment window in 1991.

In other Eric Clapton news, Lexus (yes, the car company) has agreed to sponsor his upcoming North American tour this summer in an unprecedented multi-million dollar agreement.

• In other tour news, Pearl Jam's widely speculated summer tour has been confirmed. It is set to begin in mid- June and will visit cities throughout the United States and Canada.

• Almost immediately upon being released from the hospital for health complications, the Godfather of Soul, James Brown, was arrested for possession of marijuana and unlawful use of a firearm.

• Also having problems are England's newest hitmakers, Chumbawamba. After lead singer Alice Nutter made some comments on Bill Maher's "Politically Incorrect" last week in which she advocated stealing the album from high-priced retail chains, Virgin Megastores pulled the double-platinum album from their shelves. Go figure.

WRITE FOR ARTS— ARTS

REACHING FOR DIVERSITY

A CONFERENCE FOR MINORITIES INTERESTED IN LAW

Join us to find out how to make aspirations of a legal career a reality for minorities. If you are a high school or college student interested in someday becoming an attorney, or you provide career guidance to young people, join us for this important event and help us reach for greater diversity in the legal profession.

The Value of Diversity in the Classroom:
A panel presentation by law professors

Can/Should I Become an Attorney?
A panel discussion with current lawyers and law students

Saturday
Feb. 7, 1998
11a.m. to 3p.m.

Western New England College
School of Law
1215 Wilbraham Road
Springfield, Massachusetts

Lunch will be provided free of charge.
Pre-registration is preferred.

Call (413) 782-1406

Western New England College
School of Law
Springfield, Massachusetts

ONE LOVE. ONE HEART. ONE GREAT PARTY!!!

IT'S THAT TIME OF YEAR WHEN THOUSANDS OF STUDENTS COME TO JAMAICA TO FEEL ALRIGHT - FOR AN UNBELIEVABLE PRICE!!!

PACKAGE INCLUDES:
• Round-Trip Airfare
• 7 Nights Hotel Accommodations
• Round-Trip Airport & Hotel Transfers
• Free Welcome, Beach & Evening Parties
• Free Admission to Night Clubs
• Discounts on Restaurants, Water Sports & Ride Excursions
• Deep'S Packages Available from $499
• Professional On-Site Tour Reps
• Complete Weekly Activities Program Offering Optional Sunset Cruise, Dunn's River, Toga Party & More!
• Free Dunns Party Pass

SUN SPLASH TOURS
1 800-426-7710

STUDENT TRAVEL SERVICES
1 800-648-4849

Prices per person based on quad occupancy. NY (NW/Wash. Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus, Nashville, New Orleans, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh departures. Other cities may qualify for reduction or require surcharge. US and Jamaica departure taxes (currently $57) and $9 handling charge additional. Add $30 for 3/6,7 &/08 bookings. Rates increase $30 on 12/15/97. Peak week surcharge/off-week discounts may apply. Restrictions and cancellation penalties apply. Limited availability. Subject to change without notice. Call for full details on hotel selection and availability.

UMASS DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

Something for Everyone

Workshops offered evenings, daytime, weekends, off and on campus

Nearly 100 noncredit workshops

Including:
• Mask Making
• Network Marketing
• Web Page Design
• Chocolate
• Songwriting
• Art Therapy
• Retirement Planning
• Genealogy
• UFOs
• Playback Theatre
• Bartending
• EMT Training

Spring semester workshops begin February 9

For a free course catalog, call 413-545-0107 or e-mail contined@admin.umass.edu

www.umass.edu/contined/

a quality education at an affordable price

• DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION •
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

Forgive Metallica for poor music video

By Kevin Monahan
Collegian Staff

Metallica — "The Unforgiven II"
Can we say "mid-life crisis" everyone? With their once superior brand of speed metal declining in quality with every single, Metallica is getting more than a bit rusty. The song sounds as if it were thrown together overnight and the video follows in its footsteps. Not to mention the fact that it's deja vu all over again. C–

Our Lady Peace — "Clumsy"
Derivative experimentation with light and shadows and sloppy editing sink this video. Every image is similar to the last one and nothing new is attempted. In a nutshell, the video drowns in a glass of water. D+

Sarah McLachlan — "Sweet Surrender"
Some trippy stuff here. This video exhibits excellent use of tracking shots, color and focusing effects. Although the song itself is not one of McLachlan's best, the video offers eye candy with every shot. B+

Aerosmith — "Pink"
Should have been called "Puke." Looking as decrepit as ever, geriatric rockers Areosmith try once again to create another classic video. Unfortunately, it's as bland as its white background. D

Backstreet Boys — "As Long As You Love Me"
Britain's male version of the Spice Girls (or the updated version of the New Kids on the Block, whichever way you choose to look at it) manage to communicate absolutely nothing to their audience with this one. The visual effects and bad dancing attempt to take your mind off how bad it really is, but to no avail. Director Nigel Dick even blurs the edges of the frame to try to create a dreamlike image. Actually it's more nightmarish. F

Fatboy Slim — "Goin' Out of My Head"
Amusing video tells the story of a boombox that gets circulated through an urban jungle as if it were a dollar bill. Clever photography and editing. A–

Marcy Playground — "Sex and Candy"
Somewhere along the line Marcy Playground confused strange with interesting. Visually stimulating, this video leaves itself open for interpretation at every angle. Great sets and symbols. A–

COURTESY ANTON CORBIJN
Metallica's latest video features a cameo from Marianne Faithfull.

COURTESY ALBERT SANCHEZ

The DIY princess hits the Valley

Tickets for Ani DiFranco's April 4th show at the Mullins Center go on sale tomorrow at all TicketMaster locations and over the phone at (413) 733–2500. The show is all ages and tickets are $20.

Attention all new and returning writers: The Arts & Living section will be holding a meeting on Thursday, Feb. 6 at 6 p.m. for all those interested in writing this semester. Any questions? Call Seema Gangatirkar, Arts & Living editor, at 545-1361.

COMPUTER ENGINEERING • COMPUTER SCIENCE • PHYSICS • CHEMICAL ENGINEERING
MATH • ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING • MECHANICAL ENGINEERING • BUSINESS ANALYSIS
TAKE TECHNOLOGY TO THE NTH POWER.
When something is too extreme for words, it's to the Nth degree. And that's the level of technology you'll experience at Raytheon.
Raytheon has formed a new technological superpower–Raytheon Systems Company, composed of four major technological giants: Raytheon Electronic Systems, Raytheon E-Systems, Raytheon TI Systems and Hughes Aircraft. The new Raytheon Systems Company is driving technology to the limit. And we're looking for engineers who want to push the envelope. Break new ground. Make their mark.
At Raytheon, you'll take technology–and your career–to the highest possible level. You'll take it to the Nth. We'll be visiting your campus soon. Contact your career placement office now to schedule an interview, or check out our website at www.rayjobs.com. If you are unable to meet with us, please send your resume to: Raytheon Staffing, P.O. Box 655 474, MS-201, Dallas, TX 75265. We have many exciting opportunities available and we would like to talk to you.
Internet: www.rayjobs.com • E-mail: resume@rayjobs.com
U.S. citizenship may be required. We are an equal opportunity employer
Raytheon
EXPECT GREAT THINGS

FREE
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
FREE

SPRING BREAK
BEST PARTIES CANCUN JAMAICA FLORIDA BEST PRICE
1 800 648-4849

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139
STUDENT SPECIAL
4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116 So. Amherst
256-0060

UM ski teams finish in top 3 at Plymouth

By Aaron Saykin
Collegian Staff

Before the start of the 1998 men's skiing season, 38-year Massachusetts coaching veteran Bill MacConnell predicted that his Minuteman squad would "slug it out" for one of the top three spots in the Eastern College Ski Conference, along with powerhouses Boston College and Plymouth State.

A mere two meets into its 1998 campaign, MacConnell's men's team has turned their coach into a prophet, finishing second and third in the slalom and giant slalom respectively at last weekend's two-day Plymouth State Tournament. In fact, the only three teams to notch top three finishes are none other than the teams MacConnell identified.

Pacing the Minutemen was two-time All-American junior Thomas Holden, capturing the individual crown in Saturday's slalom event, and boasting the top UMass finish at 12th in Sunday's giant slalom. Two-sport athlete Todd Fowler, who doubles as a goalie for the men's soccer team when not skiing in the third spot for the Minutemen, finished 14th overall in Saturday's slalom, and 21st in the giant slalom.

In addition to a solid showing from the men's team, MacConnell's Minutewomen also performed admirably at the Plymouth State Tournament with a fifth–place finish in the slalom, and an impressive fourth–place showing in the giant slalom.

COURTESY BILL MACCONNELL
Jordan Kingdon

UMass was powered by senior captain and former two– time All–American Leah Muliero, who took sixth place in Sunday's giant slalom in only her second meet after recovering from last year's season–ending knee injury. Freshmen Margaret LaBombard also sparked the Minutewomen as their top finisher in Saturday's slalom, and placed 17th in Sunday's giant slalom, the team's second best to Muliero's finish.

Hoping to continue their impressive streak to open the new season, both of MacConnell's squads head to Loon Mountain, N.H. for this weekend's Brown/UConn Tournament, where the men's team looks to post a top three finish for the third consecutive weekend.

Abdul-Jabbar may attend counseling

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Retired basketball star Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, accused of attacking a man during a traffic dispute, was ordered yesterday to obtain anger management counseling so that a court may consider a civil compromise of criminal charges, a city attorney's spokesman said.

West Los Angeles Municipal Court Commissioner Gary I. Bindman ordered the NBA's all-time leading scorer to obtain 36 hours of counseling and pay $5,000 to Jeopardy, a Los Angeles Police Department program for at-risk youth, said spokesman Mike Qualls. Robert Shapiro, Abdul-Jabbar's attorney, did not immediately return a phone call for comment. Abdul-Jabbar was not required to attend the hearing and wasn't in court.

Abdul-Jabbar had been scheduled for arraignment on misdemeanor charges of battery and false imprisonment, but that was postponed. Shapiro made the motion for civil compromise, a court-approved agreement between a defendant and a victim to settle a case. Deputy City Attorney Mitchell Fox objected, saying the count of false imprisonment constitutes potentially felonious conduct which could make the case ineligible for a civil compromise, Qualls said. The commissioner agreed to reconsider the motion during arraignment rescheduled for March 19, after Abdul-Jabbar complies with the court orders, Qualls said.

Jerry Cohen, a Universal Studios music editor, accused Abdul-Jabbar of attacking him on April 20 after a traffic dispute. Last week, Cohen and Abdul-Jabbar settled a civil lawsuit. Terms of the settlement were not disclosed.

According to prosecutors, the incident began when Cohen was waiting to turn his car into a driveway at a mini-mall and Abdul-Jabbar, behind Cohen, began honking.

Abdul-Jabbar allegedly stopped, got out of his car and attacked Cohen, pushing his face against a plate glass window, then shoving him to the ground. Cohen was taken to a hospital and treated for bruises.

Abdul-Jabbar said previously that the incident occurred as the result of "a misunderstanding between myself and Mr. Cohen during a difficult personal time for myself and my family."

The maximum penalty for battery is six months in jail and a $2,000 fine. The maximum penalty for false imprisonment is one year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Under civil compromise, criminal proceedings are permanently stayed in return for satisfaction of the victim's claims or damages.

hockey

continued from page 12

the nation. It makes you really wonder why Merrimack has not won more games than they have, but the casual bystander just needs to look at the Warriors defensive situation.

After years of having a solid defensive corps, led foremost by goalie Martin Legault, coach Ron Anderson has readily admitted that his team does not "live in that New York City no more."

Cris Classen has seen the most time in net for the Warriors this season, compiling a 8–12–1 record on a less–than– impressive 4.70 GAA (5.40 in HE games), and a .870 save percentage (.850 in HE games).

BU hockey coach recovers from surgery

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

BOSTON — Jack Parker has won more games than any hockey coach in Boston University history. The school has won more Beanpot tournaments than any other school.

But Parker, recovering from a procedure to clear a blocked coronary artery, may not be back for the annual event that begins Monday night. And his team is no shoo-in in the highly competitive field.

"Monday is a little bit of a day-to-day thing," said assistant coach Brian Durocher, who is running the team in Parker's absence. "We'll let nature take its course."

Northeastern coach Bruce Crowder, who faces BU in the opener of the doubleheader, has little doubt Parker will be behind the bench.

"He'll be there. He was at practice [Wednesday]," Crowder said. "Jack's the grandfather of this thing."

Boston College faces Harvard in Monday night's second game of the 46th annual Beanpot featuring the area's four major hockey schools. Parker, 52, did not suffer a heart attack and is expected to be at the championship and consolation games the following Monday at the FleetCenter.

BU has won 20 of the previous 45 Beanpots, the last three and six of the last eight. Harvard in 1993 and Boston College in 1994 prevented an eight-year sweep.

But this season BU leads Hockey East with a 9-3-2 record and BC and Northeastern are close behind, tied for second at 9-5-2. Harvard is fourth in the ECAC at 6-5-1.

Durocher said he didn't expect Parker to coach Friday night at Merrimack, BU's last game before the Beanpot. And he expects the team to play well even if Parker has to miss the tournament opener. "The only thing he needs to do now is rest for this time, but he'll keep in phone contact with us and give us some of his thoughts," Durocher said. "The great foundation he's built over the days, weeks, months and years will hopefully last for four, five, six days, one game, two games, whatever it may be." Durocher said Parker had felt some chest pain and had it checked Monday. The procedure was done Tuesday and he was released from Beth Israel/Deaconess Medical Center on Wednesday.

Plaque that had built up in the artery, restricting the flow of blood, was removed with the implantation of a stent, a metallic device that is inflated inside the blood vessel.

"The doctors indicate you could go out three days later and run five miles," Durocher said. "His heart was not damaged at all." As a BU player in the 1960s, Parker won three Beanpots. And in his previous 24 seasons as coach, he won 13. If the Terriers win on Monday, with or without him, he could be behind the bench for another championship game a week later.

"He's kind of the mainstay" of the tournament, Crowder said. "I'll probably bet my house that he'll be there" for the opener.

Don't let go!

LAUREN VOTEY / COLLEGIAN
The men's swim team hope to make a big splash this weekend at Rutgers.

Zampese hired to head Pats' offense

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

FOXBORO — Ernie Zampese was named yesterday to coach a New England offense that's similar to the Dallas offense he coached last season — inconsistent, injury-prone and lacking a strong ground game.

Zampese, who spent the last four seasons as offensive coordinator for Cowboys coach Barry Switzer, replaces Larry Kennan in that position with the Patriots.

Coach Pete Carroll, who ended his first season as Patriots coach with an AFC semifinal loss at Pittsburgh in which his team failed to score a touchdown, said he expected Kennan to remain on his staff in another capacity.

Kennan might have kept his job if Zampese were not available, Carroll said. Zampese had a year left on his Dallas contract, but Switzer resigned after the season. Cowboys owner Jerry Jones gave Patriots owner Robert Kraft permission to talk with Zampese earlier this week, Carroll said.

"We couldn't pass it up if we could pull it off," Carroll said. "This is such a nice fit for us."

The Cowboys missed the playoffs for the first time in seven seasons. Blocking back Darryl Johnston was sidelined most of the season and running back Emmitt Smith struggled all season. The Patriots, not a powerful running team to begin with, sank further as Curtis Martin was sidelined for the last three regular-season games and both playoff contests. Terry Glenn, New England's top wide receiver, also was hobbled by injuries all season.

Zampese, 61, was offensive coordinator for four seasons at San Diego and seven with the Los Angeles Rams before joining Dallas in 1994, when the Cowboys were the second highest scoring team in the NFL and lost in the NFC title game in Switzer's first season. The next season, the Cowboys won the Super Bowl with the league's fifth-ranked offense.

"He has kind of fathered this [offensive] system," Carroll said. "We've been stealing pages out of Ernie's playbook for a long time."

He said the offensive terminology for Dallas and New England is similar. And both teams have drop-back quarterbacks — Troy Aikman and Drew Bledsoe — and speedy wide receivers — Michael Irvin and Glenn.

Asked what he knew about Bledsoe, Zampese said, "I haven't studied any of the players here other than some of the defensive guys... Drew Bledsoe is one of the real, real talents in the league."

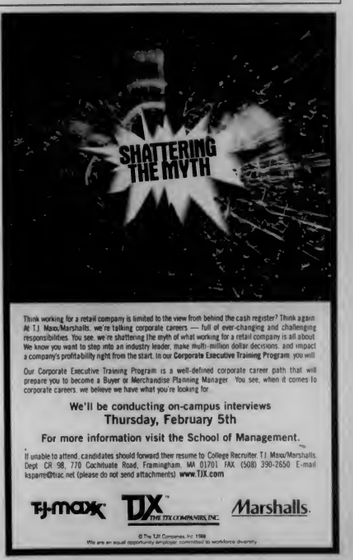
Miami coach Jimmy Johnson, who preceded Switzer in Dallas, reportedly was interested in hiring Zampese as his offensive coordinator. But Zampese said he chose New England after being contacted Tuesday night because "this football team has a chance to win the whole thing."

Although Bledsoe posted impressive numbers, the Patriots were criticized — sometimes by their own players — for abandoning the running game too early in games.

"You've got to be physical if you're going to win. That means you have to run the football or attempt to run it," Zampese said. Dallas had the 20th ranked running game in the NFL as Smith rushed for only four touchdowns. New England was even worse — ranked 26th.

Sam Gash, an outstanding blocking back who rarely was used in that role, was critical of the offense after the 7-6 playoff loss to Pittsburgh. He's a free agent.

"Sam's definitely in our plans at this time," Carroll said. "But, being a free agent, we have to work to get that done." It will be up to Zampese to work Gash, or whoever replaces him, into a more balanced attack than the one the Patriots had last season.



Asked if he accomplished all he could with the Cowboys, Zampese said, "they felt I did."

Carroll thinks there's plenty Zampese can do for the Patriots. "We want a running game that people will have to deal with," Carroll said.

WRITE COLLEGIAN ARTS NOW

Affordable
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
Happy B'day Cards
Earrings
Rings Bracelets
T-Shirts
Posters
Candles
Chains Incense
Chinese Shoes
India Print Bedspreads
Sweaters
Dresses
Socks Leather Sole
Area Rugs
Baskets
Skirts
Mugs
Sale
20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The GreatGifts Mercantile
Visa / MC
Th.Fri.9PM
Sun 12-5
Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St.
Amherst-Carriage Shops

Winter (indoors, of course)
Sidewalk Sale
Jan. 28 to Feb. 1
downtown Amherst

SHATTERING THE MYTH
Think working for a retail company is limited to the view from behind the cash register? Think again. At TJ Maxx/Marshalls, we're talking corporate careers — full of ever-changing and challenging responsibilities. You see, we're shattering the myth of what working for a retail company is all about. We know you want to step into an industry leader, make multi-million dollar decisions, and impact a company's profitability right from the start, in our Corporate Executive Training Program, you will.
Our Corporate Executive Training Program is a well-defined corporate career path that will prepare you to become a Buyer or Merchandise Planning Manager. You see, when it comes to corporate careers, we believe we have what you're looking for.
We'll be conducting on-campus interviews
Thursday, February 5th
For more information visit the School of Management.
If unable to attend, candidates should forward their resume to College Recruiter TJ Maxx/Marshalls, Dept. CR-98, 770 Cochituate Road, Framingham, MA 01701 FAX: (508) 390-2650 E-mail: tsparris@tjx.net (please do not send attachments) www.TJX.com
TJ maxx TJX Marshalls
© The TJX Companies, Inc. 1998
We are an equal opportunity employer committed to workforce diversity.

Men's track capture NE Cup; look to take on UNH and HC

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

This weekend at the University of New Hampshire, the Massachusetts men's indoor track team will try to follow up their victory at the New England Challenge Cup Trials with another overall win against the host New Hampshire Wildcats and the Crusaders of Holy Cross.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Junior Carlos Peralta and the Massachusetts men's indoor track team face Holy Cross and New Hampshire this weekend.

The Minutemen cruised to a decisive 16-point triumph at the New England Challenge Cup Trials at Dartmouth on Jan. 17.

Following their victory, UMass traveled to Boston where the squad didn't fare quite as well.

"We finished fifth," junior 400m sprinter Neil Concepcion said. "We didn't have as good a performance as we would've liked."

Concepcion did note, however, that the team is strong across the board this season.

"The freshmen are very good this year. We're very deep in each of our events," the junior said.

UMass will need to prove that depth this weekend in New Hampshire, as they will be without Concepcion, senior 200m school record holder Scott Price, junior Tom Toye, who held the 200m record previous to Price's run at the Cup Finals, and freshman standout Marc Sylvander. The foursome is headed to Boston University for the Terrier Classic, where they will attempt to achieve NCAA qualifying time in the 4x400m relay. The BU indoor track has both curves on either ends raised on an incline, thus increasing the runners' times when they run back down the deciline. It is considered by some to be the fastest in the nation.

"Our odds are really good for getting a good time," Concepcion said. "This weekend we aren't running any other events like we usually do, so we can concentrate on the relay."

Senior distance runner Ryan Carrara, junior hurdler Ben Biraldi, and school pole vault record holder Albie Vazquez will be left to lead the team against the Wildcats. Carrara turned in an IC4A qualifying time while placing second in the 3000m at the New England Challenge Cup Finals. Biraldi won the 55m hurdles in the Cup Trials with a time of 7.70 seconds. Vazquez cleared 15'0" in the pole vault at the Finals, shattering the previous record by three inches.

"They'll be able to hold their own really well. If everyone does their job, they'll be able to win the meet," Concepcion said.

Men's swim take UConn; return for Rutgers' meet

LAUREN KUSEY / COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts' men's swim team are set to battle Rutgers on Saturday.

By Jamie Jee
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team will look to continue their winning ways tomorrow afternoon as they travel to the Sonny Werblin Recreation Center to take on Rutgers for a 1 p.m. meet. The Minutemen will enter Saturday's contest with a perfect 8-0 record and will have to face a small but potent Scarlet Knight squad.

"Rutgers definitely has a good team," coach Russ Yarworth said. "They may not be that deep, but they have several strong swimmers."

Rutgers is led by senior captain Matt Tevald, and junior diver Michael Jarosz. The team is coming off a Big East victory over rival St. John's where Tevald took first in the 200m Freestyle and butterfly while Jarosz won both the 3m and 1m diving events. Jarosz recently set a new school record at the 1m height with a 332.85 point showing as he qualified for the NCAA regionals in the process.

A blackout last Saturday caused the Jan. 23 meeting with the University of New Hampshire to be postponed but the Minutemen returned strong this week. UMass has continued to ride the wave to an unblemished record, the last victim being cross state rival Connecticut. The Minutemen downed the Huskies 177-66 at home last Sunday afternoon.

"Our attitude has really been a tremendous lift to our performance," Yarworth said. "Everyone on the team has worked extremely hard to allow us to produce the results that we have."

Massachusetts's Junior Brian Wisniewski managed to beat the surge, sneaking in a 200 IM victory. Wisniewski finished first in the 200 IM as well against UConn, also adding a 200 back win to the day's performance. Pitching in for the medley relay team as well, Wisniewski helped bring home a first place finish in the 400. That came after he posted four wins in the team's victory over Dartmouth.

Also performing well against the Huskies was sophomore diver Ed Hefferon, who returned to his home state to win both the one and three meter events. The matchup between Hefferon and Jarosz could prove to be one of the most interesting parts of the meet as Hefferon became only the third UMass diver ever to score over 300 points in a dual meet competition. He also set a personal best with 314.95 total points.

Minuteman junior B.J. Brannan cruised to a two-victory performance as well, taking the 200 and 500 free competitions.

After Rutgers, UMass will return home for a meet against Atlantic 10 foe Fordham on Feb. 7 at 12 p.m. at Joseph R. Rogers, Jr. Pool. The Minutemen will gear up for the A-10 Championships held in Buffalo, N.Y. this year from Feb. 19-21. A win at Buffalo would mean a third straight conference crown for Yarworth and UMass.

"I'm not sure if you could call us the favorites or not," Yarworth said. "There's still several strong teams out there that we can't quite count out yet, including Virginia Tech, St. Bonaventure and George Washington who are all certainly still in it."

■ women's swimming

continued from page 12

in the 200 freestyle relay from Julie Dragon, Julie Alexander, Amy Mullen and Spencer. Another bright spot on the afternoon was the strong diving performance of junior diver Kim Schadt.

"Winning the 100 fly was a big step for Andrea. It was her fastest time of the season. She broke the minute mark, and that was a big swim for her," Newcomb said. "Kim had her best meet at UMass against UConn. Coach [Pollino] has been extremely pleased with her hard work. She's been doing an outstanding job."

Against Dartmouth, Spencer was the key stalwart for the Minutewomen, winning three events. Hickey and Hupp also won a pair of events in the 166.5-132.5 victory.

UMass took the Rhode Island Invitational over LaSalle and URI. Lia Lansky, Spencer, Sarah Newell and Shannon Rowell each won an event to propel the Minutewomen to victory.

Next up on the slate for UMass will be a dual meet against Rutgers tomorrow afternoon at 1 p.m. in Piscataway, N.J. The Scarlet Knights started out their season 3-0, but have since lost to Army and West Virginia. Sophomore Elizabeth Engle, senior Laura Lehrer, and freshman Patricia Olson will be the key swimmers for Rutgers.

"They have a new coach and there are a whole lot of things that are different there now," Newcomb said. "But we're going down to the second best facility in the East, and we're hoping to swim some fast times."

UMass will then round out its dual meet schedule on Feb. 7 when it will host Fordham at 3 p.m. at Rodgers Pool. The Atlantic 10 Championships will then take place in Buffalo, N.Y., Feb. 19-21.

WELCOME BACK!
Get into the Swing of Spring Semester
With Smart Savings at Hampshire Mall!
GET YOUR STUDENT DISCOUNT CARD TODAY!
STUDENT TUESDAY DISCOUNT CARD
Hampshire Mall Advocate
A Student Reward Program!
SAVE AT OVER 25 STORES EVERY TUESDAY
JUST FOR BEING A STUDENT!
Student Tuesday Discount Cards Available
At the Customer Service Booth.
Student I.D. Required.
Some Restrictions May Apply
Hampshire Mall
Route 9 Hadley (413) 586-5700

The Boltwood Project-
Your life will NEVER be the same!
>> FALL 1997 <<
Recruitment Nights:
6:00PM (note: Prompt Starting Time)
February 2-Campus Center Rm.163c
February 3-Campus Center Rm.163c
February 4-Campus Center Rm.163c
Possibility of Earning Credits

AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
www.amherstathletic.com
Kaiser • Nautilus • Stairmaster
Lifecycles • Treadmills • Aerobics
Nautilus • Free Weights
S. Amherst 256-0080

CELEBRATE WITH US!
30th Anniversary Gala Faculty Showcase Concert
Department of Music & Dance
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST
TICKETS:
ROWS A-K: General Public $15, Students/Children/Elders $12
ALL OTHER ROWS: General Public $10, Students/Children/Elders $8
May be purchased at the Fine Arts Center Box Office 413-545-2511 or at Bowker Auditorium on January 31
14 ARTISTS PERFORMING SOLOS AND CHAMBER MUSIC, CLASSICAL AND JAZZ
SATURDAY, JANUARY 31
8PM · BOWKER AUDITORIUM
Co-Sponsored by: 88.5 WFCR, WFCR 1430am, WRNX 100.9, DAILY COLLEGIAN

Bucci
Voted Best of 1997
HAIRCUTS always $10.

HEY!
Ski or Ride just $21
Bus + Lift Ticket Included
Daily Bus Leaves: UMass 9:55 am
Amherst Center 10:00 am
Arrive: Mt. Tom 10:35 am
Leave: Mt.Tom 4:30 pm
Arrive: UMass 5:10 pm
Mt. TOM Ski Area
Eastern

Women's hoop can't look past UD

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's basketball team, already well into its division schedule, will continue its quest for an Atlantic 10 title tomorrow when it takes on the Dayton Flyers. With game time scheduled for 1 p.m., the Minutewomen will look to improve their conference record to 5-4.

The Minutewomen are coming off two straight conference wins, having swept Temple and La Salle last weekend. Despite having lost their leading scorer to injuries early in the season, the Minutewomen are still looking to achieve their preseason goal of bringing the A-10 title to Amherst.

"The A-10 is crazy, it's up and down," coach Joanie O'Brien said. "Some teams win and lose games that you just shake your head at sometimes when you look at the scores. So we feel we're in the middle of the pack with just about everybody else. We have eight games left and we're just going to take them one at a time."

JORMA KANJANEN / COLLEGIAN

The women's basketball team are hosting Dayton of the Atlantic 10 on Saturday at 1 p.m. at the Mullins Center.

On paper the Flyers do not appear to be a strong team. Dayton will be coming into the William D. Mullins Center this Saturday on game two of a three-game East Coast road trip. The Flyers took on Rhode Island last night, no doubt hoping to improve their dismal road record of 0-9. Dayton has also struggled with in the A-10, with a record of 1-7. Their overall record is 5-13, including a nine game losing streak that was finally snapped with a 66-62 win over Fordham on Jan. 22. Statistics, however, do not always tell the whole story.

The Flyers are a young team in the midst of a rebuilding process. The majority of their key players are sophomores and freshman.

"Their record does not indicate anything about the type of team they are," O'Brien said. "They probably have some of the best young talent in the league. That's the part that scares you as a coach, because your team may look at their record and think, well, they're not that good, and then you look at them on film and you see that they have a chance to be very good."

Dayton is on the brink of turning its young squad into a competitive team. It returned this season with four of last year's top five scorers, including those who led UD in scoring 22 games out of last year's 27 games. The Flyers are being led this season by sophomore Christi Hester. A 5- foot-11 guard out of Louisville, Ken., Hester leads the Flyers in scoring with 13 points per game. She is coming off of a great freshman year where she had averaged a team best 14.4 points. She was a pre-season first team All- Atlantic 10 selection, and was named to the 1997 A-10 All- Newcomer team last season.

Also making strong contributions are sophomore forward Janelle Ristau, who leads the team in three-point field goal percentage, and senior forward Keeoma Wardford, who is the team's leading rebounder. Ristau hit 25 three's last season and has totaled 18 so far this season, with a percentage of .367. Wardford, a transfer from the University of Kentucky who was brought in to help shoulder the rebounding load, is currently averaging 5.7 boards a game.

"If we take them lightly they will come in here and take it to us on our own court. " O'Brien said. "And that's something that we're going to have to fight against. We are going to have to match their intensity."

■ hoop

continued from page 12

made a bit easier. With the win over Rhody, the idea that UMass couldn't beat a ranked team — it was 0-4 coming into tonight — was put to rest. But there is still a lot of work to be done, and the Minutemen know it.

Dayton comes in Sunday, fresh off wins over Xavier and Temple, and is 14-6, 6-2 in the A-10. Then Tuesday, UMass has Temple on its hands. After being ranked early in the season, the Owls have dropped out of the polls but are still one of the Minutemen's main obstacles to earning back a conference title, which has been priority No. 1 for this team all season.

"We still have a long way to go," Flint said. "We still made mistakes, it's still early. It's still a tough league. Everybody is beating everybody. On any given night you can go out and [get blown out.] We just have to keep working hard, guys have to keep getting better."

Though both the players and Flint don't want to get too excited about the win and the nine-game win streak, this may have been the game that proved to both themselves and to a once very skeptical following of how good this team has become.

And if anyone knows than now, it's the University of Rhode Island.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

PAUL BELOOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Do-si-do!
The men's basketball team tangled with the Rams of Rhode Island last night in Atlantic 10 action.

Daily Collegian got milk?

AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
www.amherstathletic.com
Kaiser • Nautilus • Stairmaster
Lifecycles • Treadmills • Aerobics
Nautilus • Free Weights
S. Amherst 256-0080

THE CLUB
Tennis & Fitness Center
549-3638 659 Amherst Road, Sunderland
DOUBLED IN SIZE
STATE OF THE ART FITNESS CENTER
NEW CARDIO EQUIPMENT LOCATED ON OUR NEW BALCONIES
• Treadmills Life Stride, Star Trac, and Trotters
• Stairmasters New 4400s!
• Recumbent Bikes by Stairmaster
• Precor EFX Crosstrainer a Cardio Workout without any weight impact on joints
• Weight Training Machine Circuits including the GRAVITRON
• Nautilus Equipment
• Complete Free Weight Area Doubled in Size! New benches & bars; New plates & weights; Now let pull down, leg press, & T-bar; New STRIVE Plate loading machines & much more!
• Let's not forget the AREA'S ONLY TREADWALL an enclosed rock climbing wall - WHAT A WORKOUT! You'll love it!
• Also introducing POWER PACING the area's only Exercise Bike Classes that are guaranteed to burn 700 calories! Classes offered 10-15 times a week by certified Power Pacing Instructors. Pick up your schedule today!
NEW AEROBICS CLASSES INCLUDING EARLY A.M.
JOIN OUR MEMBERS' CLUMB TO MT EVEREST ON THE TREADWALL!
POWER PACING PACKAGES AVAILABLE YOUR FIRST RIDE IS FREE!

WELCOMING BACK STUDENTS
RETURN YOUR TEXTBOOKS WITH YOUR RECEIPT FOR A "NO QUESTIONS ASKED" REFUND THROUGH MONDAY FEBRUARY 9TH, 1998.
Beginning TUESDAY FEBRUARY 10, 1998 textbooks from dropped courses may be returned with a sales receipt and an updated course schedule.
The schedule may be obtained from the [illegible] in Whitmore do not wait for them to mail
New books must be in new condition. No marks, writing, water damage etc
Any incorrect titles purchased after TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 10TH must be returned within 48 hours of purchase. Schedule, syllabus or other proof of incorrect purchases must be presented, along with sales receipt
Remember the last day to return textbooks with no questions asked is MONDAY, FEBRUARY 9TH.
www.aux.umass.edu/textbookannex
Textbook Annex
AMHERST
www.aux.umass.edu/textbookannex
University Store • Textbook Annex
SAVE YOUR RECEIPT
Our Refund Policy
If you purchase an incorrect title you may return it for a refund within 7 calendar days of the first day of classes. Thereafter, incorrect titles may be returned within 48 hours of purchase providing the book is new and unmarked.
1. Textbooks from dropped courses may be returned during the month of September. Present your sales receipt and a copy of your updated course schedule obtained from the Registrar. Any new book must be unmarked.
2. Keep your receipt(s). Refunds on textbooks cannot be made unless the sales receipt(s) accompanies the book.
3. Always have as many options available. There is required to any refund transactions.
The return of unsold books to the publisher begins seven weeks after the beginning of the semester. After the seventh week you might not be able to purchase the books you need.
textbook annex Fall '97 Schedule
We accept cash, personal check, Ucard, Visa, MasterCard as forms of payment.
We begin to return unsold books to the publishers in the middle of the semester. Students are encouraged to get the books they need for the semester as soon as possible after official enrollment in a course.
buyback
FIRST WEEK - January 26-31
Thursday 9am - 5pm
Friday 9am - 5pm
SECOND WEEK - February 24
Monday-Friday 9am - 5pm
Thereafter, Monday-Friday 9am-4pm at the Textbook Annex, beginning February 9, 1998
annex rush
Spring 1998 Book Rush Hours
Thursday, January 29 9am - 8pm
Friday, January 30 9am- 6pm
Saturday, January 31 11am - 5pm
Monday, Feb. 2 -Friday, Feb. 6 9am - 6pm
Thereafter - Monday - Friday 9am - 4pm

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

3rd Floor 2 bedroom apartment available Feb 1. Heat/Hot Water + Cooking Gas included. $815/month. Please contact Andrew Newcomb. 549-0600

AUTO FOR SALE

88 Chevy Cavalier Good running car. Very reliable. Has new brakes, tires, radiator. Replaced engine and rebuilt alternator about 2 years ago. Selling for $1200 ($300 below NADA). Call 546-3842

91 VW Golf GT Standard, 93k, A/C. Excellent condition. $5500. 549-0892

87 Chevy S-10 Pickup Many new parts. $1400. Call 253-5435

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795

COMPUTERS

7200/90 Power Mac 2 SCSI hard drives, 32 MB RAM, 4 MB VRAM, 17 inch 1705 Apple Monitor. $1500. Contact Jay @ 545-0989 or evenings @ 253-3692

EMPLOYMENT

Now hiring part-time workers in Downtown Amherst. $7 an hour. Applicants must be outgoing. Call Sean 253-0583

EMPLOYMENT

Looking for Mary Poppins 8-12 hours per week. Mon, Wed, Fri afternoons. Occasional weekend hours. References, experience, car a must. 549-7788

NEW STUDENTS PROGRAM seeks extroverts from '98-'00 Class with 2.5+ GPA. May 27 to July 18. Salary, room, meals, health coverage. Apply 307 Admissions Center. Deadline Feb 6.

Delivery Drivers Needed Apply at Bell's Pizza, 65 University Dr.

Drivers and Kitchen Help Wanted Apply at D.P. Dough, Downtown Amherst

EXCEPTIONAL SUMMER OPPORTUNITY— Camp Wayne, NE PA (3hrs/NYC)— Sports oriented Counselor/Specialists for all Land/Water Sports including Tennis, Camping, Climbing/Ropes, Mountain Biking, Rocketry, Roller Hockey, Sailing/Waterskiing, A & C, Drama, Radio, Video. Campus Interviews Tuesday, March 3rd. Please call 1-888-737-9296 or 516-883-3067. Leave your name, phone number and mailing address.

Immediate Openings

Office Hours: 10 AM to 2 PM & 4 PM to 9 PM Saturdays & Sundays also available.

- Fun Atmosphere
- No Experience Required
- On Bus Line
- Flexible Schedule
- Only Minutes From Campus

CRUISE SHIP & LAND-TOUR JOBS Discover how to work in exotic locations, meet fun people, while earning a living in these exciting industries! For more information: 517-324-3092 Ext C50012

FOR RENT

SUMMER RENTALS CAPE COD GROUP Summer Rentals- Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Diamond Real Estate (508)477-1900

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742

FOUND

Ring found near Mullins Sterling Silver. 548-8986

GREEK

Start Your Own Fraternity! Zeta Beta Tau is looking for men to start a new chapter. If you are interested in academic success, a chance to network and an opportunity to make friends in a non-pledging brotherhood, e-mail: joe@zbtnational.org or call Joe Alfidi at (317)334-1898.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Joy-
Happy Birthday!
I hope you have a great day, you deserve it! I'm sorry I won't be around to party with you, but I promise I will make it up to you!
Have fun!
Love ya,
Jen

LOST

Green Fountain Pen Sentimental value. Lost near Library Tower. Please call 253-1577

MUSICIANS

Epiphone Accoustic Electric Guitar Excellent condition. Great sound and great pickup- with HARD CASE. $400. Call Dru 549-7540

ROOM FOR RENT

Rooms For Rent Very close to campus. Females Only. $1200/semester. Call 549-7146 or (508)655-5922

ROOM FOR RENT

ATTENTION JEWISH STUDENTS Spaces available in Living Community of Hillel House. Call Jason for details. 549-1710

ROOMMATE WANTED

Looking for roommate to share three bedroom apartment. Call 549-5596.

Roommate Wanted in two bedroom apartment in Brandywine. Live with three others. Rent $200. Call 549-5079

One bedroom in two bedroom apartment. Sugarloaf Estates. On PVTA. Utilities included $300-$345. Available NOW. 665-3295

STEREO & CAR EQUIP

Car Stereo Equipment Kenwood Detach Face- 1 year old, paid $350. 1 amp 100x2, paid $150. 1 amp 100x4, paid $100. 1 pair Pioneer 6x9 speakers, 100w, paid $110. Whole system sounds great, needs nothing. Selling as package deal for $300. Call 546-3852

STEREO & CAR EQUIP

Tascam Multitrack Recorder 4 track mixing board and recorder. Only 8 months old. Received a 24 track as a gift over break. Will include: 1 mic, never been used; 4 professional recording tapes. Paid $550, will sell for $330. Call 546-3842

TRAVEL

Spring Break '98 Get Going!!!
Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida Group Discounts & Free Drink Parties! Sell 5 & go free! Book Now!!! Visa/MC/Disc/Amex 1-800-234-7007, http://www.endlesssummertours.com

Best Hotels, Lowest Prices All Spring Break locations. Florida, Cancun, etc. From $89. Register your group or be our Campus Rep. Inter-campus Programs (800)327-6013. www.icpt.com

Have you waited this long to make Spring Break plans? It's not too late! Choose Sunsplash Tours- Call Michelle 256-8217

Get Your MONEY'S WORTH

Sell your books in The Classifieds

It's EASY and CHEAP

students 20¢ / word

non-students 40¢ / word

THE CLASSIFIEDS
Imagine the Possibilities

Personals Policy

1. Personals must not be used in personals.
2. The personals section is not personals only. The personals section is not personals only. The personals section is not personals only

SPORTS

Friday, January 30, 1998 — The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The focus is on Martin & skater Tonya Harding

If you are not all-to-familiar with the Professional Golf Association, you may not be familiar with the plight of golfer Casey Martin. The story, as it stands currently, does not have happy ending. Yet.

Martin was born with a rare circulatory disease in his leg which makes it impossible for him to walk a golf course for any tournament he enters. The PGA has rules, though, stating that no player can use a cart in any of the tourneys it sanctions.

Which means Martin can't play. At least not on the PGA tour. So he has taken the PGA to court. where he is suing for the right to use a cart in its events based on the Americans with Disabilities Act. He has run into some opposition, however. The Association has argued to judges in Martin's hometown of Eugene, Ore. that it is a private entity and not subject to federal law. And several of professional golf's biggest names are supporting the PGA. Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus among them.

Casey Kane

In the meantime, Martin is playing on the Nike Tour, where two weeks ago he won the first tournament of 1998. In addition, Nike has signed him as a main component of its new "I Can" ad campaign.

Yesterday, Martin received support from Bob Dole and Iowa Senator Tom Harken, the two men who co-wrote the Act Martin is using to sue the PGA.

What Martin is arguing is that using a cart does not affect his golf game in such a way that it gives him an unfair advantage over others. The fact that he has the talent and ability to even make it to the professional ranks despite his disability speaks volumes about his determination and character, and should make the PGA jump at the chance to induct him into its ranks.

• Tonya Harding and Nancy Kerrigan will face each other on national television for the first time since the 1994 Olympics when Fox airs "Breaking the Ice: The Women of 1994 Revisited" on Thursday.

On Wednesday, the Boston Globe had an interesting look at the directions in which the two women had headed since "The Incident."

Not surprisingly, Kerrigan's story was one of happiness and success, the perfectly tailored tail for the "Princess of Olympus." Harding, who has become an outcast in her own Oregon hometown, on the other hand has apparently developed an affinity for video poker and Marlboro Lights.

It will be interesting to see how the two interact when the camera is rolling. Of course, the show has already been taped. but no segments have been released yet. On the show, Harding, Kerrigan and several other skaters will give an on- ice performance that was recorded several weeks ago. Not surprisingly, Harding's segment was taped at a separate arena from everyone else.

• Staying slightly with the Oregon theme (Martin, Harding, etc.), Latrell Sprewell and P.J. Carlesimo met face-to-face for the first time Wednesday since the former player attacked the Golden State coach. The two were together in Portland, Ore. as the NBA began investigating whether or not Sprewell's punishment is too severe.

The arbitration sessions, for which Fordham Law School Dean John Feerick has issued a gag order, will conclude their Portland portion today and continue next week in New York.

• For the first time in six years the Celtics have an All–Star. And people said Rick Pitino couldn't turn things around in just one season. Granted the C's are far from their glory days of the 1980s, but Pitino has infused a young team with spirit, and dare I say...determination.

These two things are only going to benefit the Boston club. With players who are young enough to remember the coach has got to have some control (even though the NBA is a player's league). With athletes closer to their 21st birthday than social security, Pitino can lay a solid foundation for success. Sure, the rookies are green, but down the road a few years there may be another banner hanging in the FleetCenter.

Antoine Walker, a mere 21-years–old, was selected in a ballot by the league's coaches for a reserve spot on the team. Walker, who beat out Chris Webber and Juwan Howard and others for the spot, is one of the main reasons for Celtic optimism. The talented former–Kentucky player is the first person since Dana Barros three years ago to be named to an All–Star team.

Larry Bird will make a return to the fanfare–filled weekend game, despite a somewhat reluctant attitude. The rookie coach of the Indiana Pacers has proven this year that he can succeed at both ends of the bench, as his team is currently battling for the top spot in the Eastern Conference's Central Division.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

Ajmal Basit the key as UMass sinks URI

PAUL BEDARD / COLLEGIAN

Charlton Clarke and the Masssachusetts' men's basketball team traveled to Rnode Island last night to face the Atlantic 10 Rams.

Basit subs in for Lari Ketner & keeps up the intensity for 34 minutes; Mike Babul successful in shutting down URI's Cuttino Mobley

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

PROVIDENCE — With only 2:29 gone in the first half of last night's Atlantic 10 bout against Rhode Island, Massachusetts basketball coach Bruiser Flint was already ranting and raving on the sidelines.

Center Lari Ketner was whistled for a questionable offensive foul, his second foul of the game, and Flint was forced to call upon sophomore Ajmal Basit to fill the shoes of the dominating big man in the biggest conference game of the season.

But Flint's worries quickly faded away as Basit's unmatched intensity and reckless pursuit of the ball ignited a 19–2 run that subdued the capacity Providence Civic Center crowd of 12,412 and ended any URI hopes of ending its nine–game drought against the Minutemen. UMass (15–5, 7–0 A–10) rolled to victory, 74–57.

"They flat out beat us," said URI coach Jim Harrick, whose team drops to 13–5, 5–2. "They tore our heads off, and the body can't live without the head."

With Ketner and Tyrone Weeks on the bench for much of the game with foul trouble — both eventually fouled out — Basit played a career–high 34 minutes and cashed in with 15 points and a career–high 19 rebounds.

Flint was excited about his team's triumph and Basit's enormous presence on the floor.

"I'm surprised he made it 34 minutes," Flint said. "But I know he can play this way. The way he played tonight is the way he plays against Lari everyday in practice."

"I just wanted to keep the intensity up," Basit said. "When I do that and I'm having fun, I play better."

The Minutemen guard trio of Charlton Clarke, Jonathan DePina and Monty Mack shut down the high scoring Rhode Island backcourt of Tyson Wheeler and Cuttino Mobley.

Mobley, who averages over 17 points a game, scored only 12 points in 36 minutes with sophomores Mike Babul and Chris Kirkland in his face. And Wheeler scored just eight, most of which came in the final few minutes of the game.

Flint said it was no surprise that Babul was successful in shutting down Mobley.

"I've been saying all along that he's the best defender in the league," Flint said. "He had a great game."

Once again, Mack was the silent leader for the Minutemen, racking up a game–high 22 points on 8–for–15 shooting with a pair of three–pointers.

"I have a lot of confidence in my game," Mack said. "But I know there are still some areas I can improve on."

Antonio Reynolds–Dean was the hot hand for Rhode Island with 12 points, followed by sharp shooter Josh King with 11. King was noticeably upset by his team's lack of success against UMass over his career.

"It hurts. It really hurts," he said. "This is the best team we've had at Rhode Island in years."

Despite an incredible 59 percent first half shooting, UMass won the game on the defensive end of the court. Leading 43–29 at halftime, UMass put the clamps on Rhode Island, forcing them to only 30 percent shooting in the second half and causing nine turnovers for the game.

UMass also owned a considerable rebounding edge, 45–34, with 12 coming off the defensive glass from Basit.

"They are a very good, physical team," Harrick said. "They gave us a lot of problems."

Both teams came out firing in the opening minutes of the ball game. Neither team led by more than two points until the 11:23 mark when DePina slashed through the lane for a lay–in to give UMass a 20–16 edge.

King's second three–pointer of the game at 13:00 gave Rhode Island their final lead at 16–14 before UMass broke away with a 12–0 run.

Flint played down the win against the No. 21 Rams, calling it just another game the team needs to win in order to get into the NCAA tournament.

"Championships are won on the court," Flint said. "Wins will take care of everything."

"This is a league game. We're trying to win the league. All of the games are important, it doesn't matter if the team is in the Top 25 or not."

UM proves legitimacy with ninth–straight

Luke Meredith

PROVIDENCE — If anyone had doubts about how good the Massachusetts men's basketball team can be, they should be gone by now.

What UMass (15–5, 7–0 Atlantic 10) did to No. 21 Rhode Island (13–5, 5–2) last night was quite remarkable. The Rams had every reason to be fired up — they had just lost on the road to Cincinnati, and come home to find UMass, a team that had beaten them nine straight times. First place in the Atlantic 10 East was at stake, and if there was ever a time where Rhody was to break the UMass jinx, it was last night.

But when it was all said and done, UMass had proved beyond a shadow of a doubt that, right now, it's the best team in the Atlantic 10. The Minutemen didn't just beat URI, they demoralized the Rams, 74–57, in front of their home crowd, prompting URI coach Jim Harrick to say the Minutemen tore their heads off.

Provided it beats Dayton on Sunday, Massachusetts will almost certainly jump into the Top 25 on Monday. And if the Minutemen keep playing this well, it could be years before they fall out again.

"UMass is a very fine basketball team," said Harrick, who saw a few decent teams in his reign at UCLA. "They came in and played exceptionally well. Everything that happened out there happened because UMass made it happen."

The funny thing was junior center Lari Ketner and senior Tyrone Weeks, the first two guys you'd expect to tear heads off, sat most of the game on the bench with foul trouble. Ketner fouled up with 7:50 left, with only four points and two rebounds.

Tonight it was the role players who made the statement. In many ways, it was like watching these kids grow up right before your eyes. The growing pains of November and December are gone, replaced by a group of youngsters who have learned from their mistakes, improved and made UMass basketball fun again.

There was Chris Kirkland, hitting open shots, playing smart aggressive basketball. There was Mike Babul, giving UMass coach Bruiser Flint another night of exceptional defense, which has quickly become this team's trademark. There was Jonathan DePina, making plays and containing URI star guard Cuttino Mobley.

And the biggest kid of all, sophomore center Ajmal Basit, played the best game of his young career. Basit, 81 inches of smiling, fist–pumping, towel–waving exuberance, stepped in and scored 15 points and pulled down an incredible 19 rebounds. Basit, who said he had a bit of a stomach ache before tip–off, ended up giving a sell–out crowd of 12,412 an ill feeling as it left the Providence Civic Center.

With a Top 25 ranking appearing imminent, UMass gave its now nine–game win streak serious legitimacy by beating the Rams so decisively. The Minutemen are peaking at the right time of the season, and though they tried to downplay the win, there is no denying about the statement they sent across not only the A–10, but the nation.

"We're not worried about being ranked," Weeks said. "We're just worrying about winning ballgames. We have a lot of tough games left on our schedule. We have to worry about ourselves. If we come to play every night, we are a very good team."

The road ahead has now been

Turn to HOOP, page 9

Must–win situation looms for hockey

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

The Minutemen look to sweep by the Friars of Providence tonight at 7 p.m. at the Mullins Center.

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

In a continuing series of cross–road weekends for the Massachusetts hockey team, this upcoming one will be the most important of them all. After losing two games to Merrimack College on the weekend of Jan. 16 and dropping a game to No. 9 Boston College last Saturday, the Minutemen have to start to take charge of their post–season fate, and this will be the weekend to do just that.

UMass (3–16–2, 0–11–1 in Hockey East) will take on Providence College tonight at the William D. Mullins Center, and then travel to North Andover on Saturday night for a game against the Warriors of Merrimack. Game times for both games are 7 p.m.

To get back in the race for the final playoff spot in HE, the Minutemen will need to sweep this weekend's games, or at least gain a victory over Merrimack. UMass has shown in its previous two games with both teams that it can compete with them, but not defeat them.

Two 6–4 losses to the Warriors (9–14–1, 4–10 in HE), and two 5–3 losses to the Friars (12–9–2, 6–7–1 in HE), have been the conference season for the Minutemen in a nut–shell — so close in the final results yet so far away in the conference standings. For UMass coach Joe Mallen, this weekend will be the key to whatever success his team can propel themselves toward for the rest of the season.

"Yeah, it seems like we've had a couple of those crossroad weekends lately," Mallen said. "However, if we are going to gain any momentum for the rest of the season, this is the weekend to gain that momentum. Our previous games against Providence and Merrimack were real close, which shows there is a lot parity in the league this year.

"But from our standpoint, we really need these wins if we want to get to the postseason... period."

After a strong start to the season, Providence has been on a very cold streak the last month. Up until Josh MacIvin's score in last Friday night's 2–2 tie with Lowell, the Friars were held scoreless for a span of 228:18. Since Dec. 27, PC has gone 1–6–1, while only scoring four goals in those six losses.

Freshman goaltender Boyd Bailard (10–7–1, 3.29 GAA and a .893 save percentage) has cooled off since his fiery performance the weekend of Nov. 21 against the Minutemen, where he recorded 77 saves in two games. Ballard let up a total of 14 goals in two defeats to BC the weekend of Jan. 16 before being replaced by Mark Kane in last Friday's tie with Lowell.

Merrimack did exactly what UMass wanted it to do last weekend against Northeastern — that is, lose both games. For the Minutemen to get the last playoff spot in the conference, the Warriors need to take a lot of losses on the chin, while UMass needs to finish the season with two more conference wins in total — that is, if it beats Merrimack tomorrow night.

The Warriors are led by a stellar trio of scorers in Kris Porter (28 goals, 14 assists, 42 points), Martin Laroche (18– 24–42) and Rejean Stringer (7–34–41), who are all in the top five in scoring in

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

Women's swimming's successful break not forgotten after loss to Connecticut

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

The women's swim team will travel tomorrow for a meet with Rutgers.

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

While most of the student body of the University of Massachusetts was at home relaxing over the winter break, the Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team was hard at work.

Throughout the five–week span, the Minutewomen enjoyed a dual meet victory over Dartmouth and a sweep in the Rhode Island Invitational. However, the break ended on a sour note in a 187–113 loss to rival Connecticut.

Nevertheless, the Minutewomen are still flying high with a 6–3 dual meet mark heading into the final month of the season. And for coach Bob Newcomb, UMass is right where it needs to be at this junction in the road.

"We're doing great as a group. The team is really starting to come together as a unit," Newcomb said. "The month of January can be tough and draining, but the team did very well. We're going to let them rest for the next couple of weeks. The team is really excited about the last few weeks of the season."

UMass was paced in the meet against UConn by sophomore Andrea Spencer, senior Barbara Hickey and sophomore Marci Hupp. Each swimmer contributed one first–place finish apiece against the Huskies.

"No, I wasn't disappointed with the result against UConn. Other than a couple of events it was a very good meet with good races," Newcomb said. "UConn is a very good team and the fact that we were right there with them was good."

In addition to the individual finishes, the Minutewomen also received a first place finish

Turn to WOMENS SWIMMING, page 8

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVIII Issue 4 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Monday, February 2, 1998

"Hot for Teacher"

Back in the States after touring Australia and Japan, Ween hit the Roxy in Boston. Check out our review (see Arts & Living, page 5).

At long last

Tom O'Connor registered 5 assists as the UMass hockey team went two this weekend (see Sports, page 10).

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Dizzy!
Sarah Merry, a fifth grader at Woodland Hills Elementary School takes a ride on the gyrospace in the Hampshire Mall Saturday afternoon.

WORLD

Imelda Marcos urged to run for presidency

MANILA, Philippines (AP) - Hundreds of supporters urged former first lady Imelda Marcos yesterday to run for president, but she ignored the plea and instead aired her side of a graft conviction that could put her in jail.

The widow of the late dictator Ferdinand Marcos made her first public appearance after the Supreme Court upheld a graft conviction that brought her closer to possible imprisonment.

"Why is it a crime to build hospitals for the poor?" Mrs. Marcos asked about 500 rowdy supporters in Manila's slum district of Tondo, contending some of the money in the graft case was used to build a hospital for the poor.

On Thursday, the Supreme Court upheld a lower court's 1993 conviction of Mrs. Marcos on a corruption charge stemming from the leasing of property owned by a government–run commuter railway. She faces nine to 12 years in prison.

NATION

Search on for clinic bombing witness

FRANKLIN, N.C. (AP) — Dozens of federal agents searched this remote region of the southern Appalachian Mountains on Saturday for a man they believed could help them locate the bomber of an abortion clinic.

The man being sought, Eric Robert Rudolph, was wanted as a witness and not as a suspect in Thursday's fatal bombing in Birmingham, Ala., U.S. Attorney Doug Jones said.

FBI agents questioned several people believed to have been friends or acquaintances of Rudolph. However, no sightings of Rudolph or his truck were reported.

A pickup truck registered to Rudolph, 31, was seen near the site of the bombing that killed an off-duty police officer and critically injured a nurse.

"We want to talk to this guy really bad," said Earl Woodham, a spokesman for Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms in Charlotte. The bureau said the nail bomb was intended to maim and kill, not cause damage to the building. A witness reportedly saw a man wearing a wig flee the area after the explosion and hop into the pickup truck.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 45 LOW: 40	HIGH: 55 LOW: 40	HIGH: 65 LOW: 45

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News.....page 2
Sports .....page 10

ON THE INTERNET
www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Parking referendum open to student vote on campus tomorrow

By Victoria Graves & Paul Hayes
Collegian Staff

Students could play a large part in deciding if a parking garage will be built in Amherst center by casting their ballots in a special referendum vote tomorrow.

The referendum is being held as an opportunity for the town at large to overturn the Town Meeting (TM's) approval of a parking garage to be located at Bolwood Walk in Amherst center.

Those students living in Southwest, who are registered to vote in Amherst, can cast their ballots on campus in Hampden Dining Commons.

"The garage issue impacts student workers and shoppers, if students want more parking they need to show that in the ballot box," said TM member John Furbish of precinct 10, which includes part of Southwest.

This is the second year Southwest residents have been granted this increased access to the polls. It comes as the result of the towns subdividing Southwest into TM precincts 4a and 10b. Previously it had been parts of TM precincts 10 and four, and students had to cast their votes off campus.

According to representatives from Commuter Services, student participation in this vote could not be more critical.

"Right now, students living in Southwest need to vote... they need to have their voices heard on this issue," said David Hammer, Commuter Services community intern.

Commuter Services is working with the Student Government Association (SGA) to publicize the election though neither group is encouraging voters to support or oppose the parking garage.

"Anything coming out of Commuter Services is not going to be pro one side or the other. We're interested in insuring that the polling place is successful so that it's available for state and national elections.

"We want people to vote regardless of how they're going to vote," Hammer said.

It is hoped more students will vote this year, after a pitifully small turnout at the Southwest polls last year.

"In this second election at Hampden, students have to show they are willing to become active politically," Furbish said.

Some TM members said there are clear reasons why students are not always interested in town issues.

"Students are busy with school and their own interests, the town is on the periphery of their lives," said TM precinct four member Benson Bowditch, "and Town Meeting votes normally don't have a direct impact on students."

There is also a lack of encouragement by the town for the students to vote.

"I don't know that there's been any [effort by the town to encourage student voting]," Bowditch said. "I think a lot of us [in the town] forget there are 26,000 kids here."

Student voting will be especially

Turn to VOTE, page 2

Students react to UC 2000

RSO's question space allocation in new student union

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

The University Center 2000 (UC 2000), a plan to renovate the Student Union and Campus Center in 2000, has sparked controversy between some Registered Student Organization's (RSO) and the UC 2000 commission.

Members of the Game Hobbyist League and Science Fiction Society feel the UC 2000 commission is not working to serve the needs of their RSO's.

The UC 2000 commission is a joint effort between the Student Government Association (SGA) and the Student Center for Education Research and Advocacy (SCERA).

"A lot of our members are trying to get involved in the process but we're getting the run around. It seemed the UC 2000 commission felt 'We don't care what you say as an RSO. We want you here so we can say we had student involvement'," said Keith McCormic, member of the League.

"We have talked to over 50 RSO's...surveyed 500 students over the phone and held dozens of workshops," Mark Kenen, director of SCERA said. "We have widely publicized these workshops. We have tried very hard to involve as many students as we can in the process."

One of the complaints the League and Society had about the commission's handling of the planning was the survey given to 500 students.

"The survey was poor,... we needed [questions] something open–ended not a list of [responses] answers" McCormic said.

"We're restricted from using only open–ended questions by Project Pulse. The survey had both multiple choice and open–ended questions," Kenen said.

A copy of the survey given to the Collegian had four open–ended questions and 36 multiple choice questions.

There were five workshops held last semester. Each had a different focus, retail, food, study spaces, cultural centers and business.

Members of the League and the Science Fiction Society feel the Commission is not doing enough to involve RSO's and students this planning is going on.

"I had no idea this was going on until Keith told me,"

Turn to UC, page 3

UMass profs first to clone calves

By Jason Eiseman
Collegian Staff

James Robl is a professor in the University of Massachusetts animal science department. He teaches classes in research animal management, an honors class, a biotechnology lab, a graduate course, and tries to teach a graduate course in Lisbon every January.

The office right next to Robl's belongs to Dr. Steven Stice, a UMass faculty member in the animal science department, and the chief scientific officer of Advanced Cell Technology(ACT), a biotechnology company.

Together Robl and Stice created ACT, which works closely with the University. Also Robl and Stice, together, created a sensation, a media frenzy, when they announced two weeks ago that they had successfully cloned two genetically modified, or transgenic calves, named George and Charlie.

The two scientists produced the embryos which produced the calves on campus, in Paige laboratory. They said what makes their calves so unique is that they were not the clones of an adult animal, but that the scientists reprogrammed a cell and cloned it.

Stice said that the researchers use the University facilities, and they have an agreement where the University owns the technology, but ACT retains the right to practice it. For this right ACT pays a royalty to the University.

"It helps get the word out that the University faculty are doing some very innovative things and are really at the cutting edge of a number of technologies," Stice said. "This is just one area that the University is doing very well in, and it happens to be in an area that gets a lot of publicity," he said.

Robl said he did not expect the response from the press that they received. The news of the cows was front page news in many papers across the country.

"The nice thing about it was the fact

Turn to CLONE, page 2

Everywoman's Center to offer a variety of support groups to help students

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

In response to student requests and gaps in the support systems on campus, The Everywoman's Center (EWC) is offering a variety of support groups this semester according to Carol Wallace, Director of the EWC.

There are six new groups offered in addition to two that are offered every semester.

"We get people calling looking for different groups. Based on these requests and input from the students we'll put a group together.

The Rape Survivors group and the Survivors of Childhood Sexual Assault are offered every semester because there is always a demand for them," Wallace said.

For the following two groups prospective participants are asked to call the EWC at (413) 545–0800 by Monday, Feb. 9 to register for a screening interview.

Rape Survivors group, Wednesdays from 7:30–9:30 p.m.;

Survivors of Childhood Sexual Assault group, Thursdays from 7:30–9:30 p.m.

For the following six groups prospective participants are asked to call (413) 545–0883 by Friday, Feb. 13 to register for a screening interview.

A Goddess In My Shoes: Increasing Self–Esteem Through Honoring the Feminine, Mondays from 7–9p.m., beginning March 2, for eight weeks. Meets at the EWC, Wilder Hall.

Adult Daughters of Alcoholics Group, Mondays from 6:30–8:30p.m., beginning March 2, for eight weeks. Meets at the EWC, Wilder Hall.

Coming Out Group for Lesbian

Turn to GROUP page 2

If guilty, Nixon counsel urges Clinton to confess

By Leslie Miller
Associated Press

BOSTON — Watergate figure Charles Colson has some advice for President Clinton: If he's guilty of any improprieties, he should admit them all now and ask the American public for forgiveness.

"If Nixon had done it, he'd have finished his presidency. If Clinton would do it, he'll finish his," said Colson, the special counsel to Nixon who served 207 days in prison for obstruction of justice.

Before addressing a convention of Evangelical Christians Saturday, Colson compared Watergate to the current White House scandal.

"As Yogi Berra says, 'There's deja vu all over again,'" said Colson.

Although Watergate began with burglary and Clinton's problems began with allegations of a sexual affair, Colson said today's White House is dealing with the same problems that surfaced 25 years ago: a president in trouble, allegations of obstruction of justice, paralysis in the Executive Brausch, the same pressures and the same feeding frenzy.

"They're digging the same ditch

Turn to CLINTON, page 3

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

On thin ice
While waiting for a bus at Haigis Mall, Tyler Chase and Taylor Curtis pass the time kicking a hockey puck.

Saudi Arabia resists U.S. request for aid in Iraqi offensive

By Anwar Faruqi
Associated Press

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — America's closest ally in the Persian Gulf — Saudi Arabia — also could be its toughest challenge in building support for a military attack on Iraq.

Saudi resistance, spelled out in comments yesterday by a senior Saudi official, complicates U.S. efforts to get full cooperation from countries in the region at a time when Secretary of State Madeleine Albright was arriving to consult on the stand–off between the United Nations and Iraq.

"Saudi Arabia will not allow any strikes against Iraq, under any circumstances, from its soil or bases in Saudi Arabia, due to the sensitivity of the issue in the Arab and Muslim world," the Saudi official told The Associated Press, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Even U.N. Security Council approval of an attack would not change the Saudi position, the official said.

The United States has plenty of fighter jets and troops afloat in the Persian Gulf, but it relied heavily on Saudi and Turkish bases during the 1991 Gulf War.

These days, Turkey, too, is reluctant to allow itself to be used as a launching pad. Ankara announced yesterday it would send Foreign Minister Ismail Cem to Baghdad to help negotiate a diplomatic end to the standoff over U.N. weapons inspections.

Iraq has been sparring with U.N. inspectors and the United States over access to suspected weapons sites, and U.S. calls for military strikes have been getting louder in recent weeks.

Turn to IRAQ, page 3

clone

continued from page 1

that the story that was being presented was a very positive story, looking at what the applications are of this as opposed to what are the contro versial, ethical, moral issues involved with it, in terms of cloning humans," Robl said.

Human Cloning

Before Stice and Robl had made their announcement, Dr. Richard Seed said that he was going to attempt to clone humans. Stice was skeptical of Dr. Seed's motives.

"To me, Dr. Seed is just an opportunistic person, in that he is taking a very controversial subject and trying to make some publicity for himself," Stice said. "The motives there are questionable to me."

Stice said that even with the breakthroughs that have been made in cloning, cloning a human being may still be out of our reach, because of the technology which is involved with the cloning of a human.

"The technical hurdles are huge. I don't think it's going to happen. But, yes, if somebody set out and had all the resources they needed, certainly the technology could be used in humans, but by no means should it," he said.

Robl takes a practical view on the issue of cloning humans. He said that he has gone to workshops discussing the cloning of humans and what public policy should be enacted in response to cloning humans.

"I think that we should talk about it," Robl said. "It is our duty to say, what is the potential? And provide information so that the appropriate decision making bodies can make a logical and rational decision, based on sound information."

Roadblocks

George and Charlie were not the first attempt that Stice and Robl made at cloning calves, but some of their earlier efforts were not as successful.

"We did have an earlier birth, the calf lived about a week, it had lung problems," Stice said. "Some of the animals do have abnormalities. We're looking at ways of improving it, so that we don't have that problem," he said.

Stice also said that a large percentage of the animals are healthy, and that they are working on ways to minimize these health problems.

He said that about one in every 50 embryos goes on to produce an offspring. He said that in the laboratories they can produce a few hundred eggs in a day.

The Pig Race

The race is on. Now that scientists have accomplished the cloning of sheep and cattle, the next species many scientists are working on is pigs.

"There's no question that the species are just going to be kind of ticked off as things go on," Robl said. "The pig is the next one that there's a lot of interest and effort in, because the pig is another species of great value."

Robl said that there are other groups also working on cloning pigs, and the UMass professor is trying to stay ahead of the curve.

"The Scottish group is working on pigs. There are a few other research groups in the United States working on them," Robl said. "Certainly we have to keep track of where things are with the pig, and there's no question that it's a race, and we'd like to be the first ones for that achievement," he said.

Stice said that the UMass team has already modified embryos to contain a "marker" gene, and cloned them. Now they are looking to create pregnancies to produce the offspring. Stice said that they expect to have cloned, transgenic pigs within the year.

Practical Matters

The calves were modified to contain "marker" genes, to confirm that they are the product of cloning and transgenics.

"The marker gene is just a gene that codes for protein that you can easily recognize," Stice said.

The protein which is used as a "marker" gene would have to be a gene that does not appear naturally in the animal. When Robl and Stice clone their pigs, they will look for the "marker" genes they engineered.

"We are talking with other companies that do have a particular gene of interest that they'd like to put in pigs," Stice said.

ACT already made an agreement last year with Genzyme Transgenics Corp. to produce human serum albumen by genetically modifying cows, but don't expect products produced by genetically engineered animals to be on the market soon.

"In the next year we will have calves that will have the gene in them, female offspring. It will then take another two years beyond that to actually get the protein out of the milk," Stice said.

He said it takes nine months to produce a calf. 14 months for that calf to reach sexual maturity, and another nine months before that cow can have a calf of it's own so it can produce milk with the protein in it.

Stice said that the first way in which the transgenic, cloned pigs will be used is for xenotransplantation. That is when an organ is taken from an animal, in this case a pig, and put into a patient who needs an organ.

He said that by genetically modifying a pig he can prevent a transplanted organ from being rejected, and can prevent the possible spread of disease through this process.

The Future

"In the next five years or so, we may find that the first genetically modified animal comes on to the market," Robl said. "This is going to be a huge event, trying to get a transgenic animal to be approved for human food consumption, because people are nervous about genetic modifications," he said.

Robl said that he considers genetically modified animals to be a "natural" way to keep products safe for people. He also said that by experimenting with genes and cloning we will learn more about our own genes and how to manipulate them, and this will be a growing concern for people in the future. He said that cloning will effect countless industries and areas of research.

Stice does not see his work changing much and would still like to work with cattle and pigs.

"One of the things I would like to do is to work on Mad Cow disease, and take out the gene for that, and make cattle safer," he said.

"There's a lot of different things we can do with the technology to improve both agriculture and medicine," Stice continued. "There's a lot of basic questions that need to be answered."

The Team

Robl and Stice are the leaders of the UMass team that cloned the calves, but much of the actual work is done by Ph.D and masters students. Robl also said that he has a technician who has been working with him for 12 years who gets much of the work done.

"The reason it gets done is not because of me," Robl said. "The reason it gets done is because of all the people in the lab that are actually doing the work."

Robl also gave credit to the fact that he and Stice work so well together. Stice came to UMass over ten years ago to work on his Ph.D. Together Stice and Robl cloned a rabbit in 1987.

"We each have our own talents," Robl said. "He does things very well that I would be a disaster at. I do some things well, that he probably wouldn't want to do, or would not do as well," he said.

Robl said the good chemistry between the two scientists comes from being comfortable with working together.

vote

continued from page 1

important in this election, because there is no clear indication of which side will win. Most TM members asked said it was too close to tell whether or not the garage would be approved.

Two thirds of those voting tomorrow have to vote in favor of the garage for it to be approved.

For the garage to be defeated, over one-third of those voting have to vote against it. The catch is this – the one- third voting against the garage would also have to constitute 20 percent of all registered voters.

With roughly 15,000 registered voters in Amherst, It would take over 3,000 no votes to overturn the Town Meetings approval of the garage.

While the Amherst TM voted in favor of the garage last Fall, there is some disagreement between members about how the town will be affected.

Vince O'Connor, member of Town Meeting representing Precinct 2 is opposed to the garage because he believes that there are other alternatives that would better serve the community such as enforcing more metered parking and rearranging employee parking.

"If they did all those things, we would actually gain more spaces than a garage would provide... you do the simple, low cost things first and then preserve what parking we have," O'Connor said.

There are no streets that run parallel to the center of Amherst, another reason that O'Connor feels a garage will add to traffic congestion, and in turn harm the environment.

"Don't devise a parking solution that will lead to traffic congestion. The better solution is to have highly visible parking as you approach the center from all four directions.

"I think the community is much less in favor [of the proposed parking garage] than Town Meeting is... this election will be a gauge of how many people are dedicated to public transportation and the environment," O'Connor said.

Select Board member Hill Boss disagrees with O'Connor and believes that the addition of the garage is essential and will actually reduce the exhaust from cars that is released into the environment.

"We need the additional spaces. It just makes sense that the way to ease traffic flow would be to give people a place to go.

"Most backup is caused by people looking for a parking space. It's the idling that produces pollution. [The garage] will remove 100 cars from the streets looking for a parking space," Boss said.

The proposed garage, known as the Kitchell plan, will consist of underground and ground level parking areas and cost an estimated $4 million and will be constructed to allow for the possibility of upward expansion.

The voting sub-stations in the Hampden Dining Commons will be activated for districts 4A and 10A, from 2-8 p.m. Students who are registered to vote in the town of Amherst and are living in Southwest residential area are eligible to vote at this station.

Students not registered to vote in these precincts can vote in the following places: Precinct 1, North Congregational Church, North Pleasant St.; Precinct 2, North Fire Station, East Pleasant St.; Precinct 3, Immanuel Lutheran Church, North Pleasant St.; Precinct 4, 5 and 10, Bangs Community Center, Boltwood Walk; Precinct 6, Fort River School, South East St.; Precinct 7, Crocker Farm School, West St. (Rt. 116); Precinct 8, Munson Memorial Library, South East St.; Precinct 9, Wildwood School, Strong St. If students do not know where they are registered to vote, they may call the Town Clerk's office at 256-4035.

group

continued from page 1

and Bisexual Women, Tuesdays from 7-8:30 p.m., beginning March 3, for eight weeks. Meets at the EWC, Wilder Hall

Latinas and Self-Esteem, Thursdays from 4:15-6:15 p.m., beginning March 5, for eight weeks. Meets at the EWC, Wilder Hall.

Learning to Accept and Love Our Bodies Through Expressive Arts, Thursdays from 4-6 p.m., beginning March 5 for eight weeks. Location to be announced.

Post-Abortion Support Group, Wednesdays from 5:30-7 p.m., beginning March 4 for four weeks. Meets at the EWC, Wilder Hall.

The groups are usually full and there is often a waiting list. Interested students should call as soon as possible.

"We offer groups to victims and friends of victims. Anyone who needs to talk to can call the 24-hour hotline at (413)545-0800," Wallace said.

BLACK AFFAIRS NEEDS YOU! THE BLACK AFFAIRS PAGE IS LOOKING FOR WRITERS AND REPORTERS TO CONTRIBUTE TO THE PAGE. IF YOU ARE INTERESTED PLEASE CONTACT EDGAR A. BARROS AT 546-5397 OR THE DAILY COLLEGIAN AT 545-1851. YOU CAN ALSO EMAIL EDGAR A. BARROS AT EBARROS@STUDENT.UMASS.EDU. THE FIGHT CAN'T CONTINUE WITHOUT YOU.

HURRY!
GET YOUR SENIOR INDEX YEARBOOK PHOTO NOW!
Campus Center Rm. 177-178
All this week!
Schedule a free sitting
(800) 836-0558
This is your last Chance to appear in this year's yearbook!
the INDEX

Scholarship Applications
Scholarship Applications Now Available
Attention all UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS affiliated with:
CCEBMS
UALRC
BCP
MEP
DIMES
Are you providing some service to your UMass or hometown community the demonstrates leadership, caring or initiative?
or
Do you have a special talent, gift or skill?
and
Do your grades reflect positive academic achievement?
if so,
You may qualify for a scholarship for the academic year 1998-1999.
Inquire or pick up an application at:
CCEBMS, New Africa House, 545-0031
UALRC, Knowlton Building, 545-1844
BCP, Wilder Hall, 545-1987
MEP, Marston Hall, 545-2030
Dimes, School of management Building, 545-5618
Enrolment Services, 208 Whitmore, 545-0425
All completed applications must be submitted by Monday, March 9, 1998

UC

continued from page 1

said Jai Wolfe, Head Librarian of the Society.

"We gave a notice to every RSO that has a student activities mailbox,...Each [workshop] meeting doesn't have to do with all RSO's. Some [workshops] meetings they wouldn't have an interest in. It really doesn't address them," said Kenen.

Members of the League feel that the commission has been trying to keep the [workshops] meetings inaccessible to students.

"They were holding the [workshops] meetings from 5-7 p.m., about the time people need to eat and in a hard to access room and there was not enough room [to fit a significant number of students] in the room,...We didn't find out about this until this fall and they had meetings in the spring,...They didn't inform us of changes in [workshops] meetings. The less people they have the better because they can call the shots," McCormic said.

"He's [McCormic] been invited [to the workshops]. We've extended invitations to him," Heather Makes, member of the Commission and SGA Secretary of the Registry, said.

Members of the Science Fiction Society are concerned that without their input in the planning they would be moved into a space unsuitable for the specific needs of their RSO.

"This is the third largest science fiction library in the country and nobody has told me I'm moving. I can't be in a room with windows because it will destroy the books. This collection is so heavy it could go right through the floor. I need to have a very specific space," Wolfe said.

"UVC needs a kitchen, the Collegian and Craft Center have certain needs, we are aware that RSO's have specific needs," Scott Conlin, a member of the Commission said.

Both the UC 2000 commission and the Department of Space Management stress that the proposal is tentative.

"This is the idea gathering stage. Nothing is decided, absolutely not... We have two meetings with auxiliary services then we go back to SGA and SCERA to get their input. Right now there is no plan," Judith Steinkamp, principle planner for master planning in the department of Campus planning and Space Management, said. The department is working with the UC 2000 commission in planning the renovation.

"This is just a preliminary plan. Once we figure out something we think might work. This semester we'll have an open forum for students to come see a model on several occasions," Jason Vecchio, student director of SCERA said. "There will be several campus presentations, some with faculty, staff and administration where they can address concerns."

"We knew... that it was a tentative plan. But then in the bureaucracy of this University tentative gets set in stone," McCormic said.

"Some of the rumblings you've heard are exactly what we're asking people to do,"Steinkamp said.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

A little something for the birds. . .

Carlos Garcia, a dining services employee from North Amherst, and his children Anthony, Carlos, and Sacha, feed the ducks on the campus pond yesterday afternoon.

Clinton

continued from page 1

as Watergate," he said, adding that if Clinton is guilty, he should come clean and finish out his presidency.

Colson, a lawyer, said if it's true that President Clinton asked White House intern Monica Lewinsky to lie about an affair with him, then he has committed an impeachable offense.

Colson highlighted another similarity between Watergate and the current crisis: both scandals impeded the White House's ability to function.

In December 1973, said Colson, "It was like the bunker in Berlin in the last days of Hitler's regime."

Now, he said, in light of difficulties with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, "It's tragic to have the presidency crippled." One difference between the two scandals: Watergate took much longer to unfold. Two full years passed before the surfacing of the so-called "smoking gun" tape that showed Nixon obstructed justice.

Obstruction of justice allegations against Clinton emerged in one week, Colson said.

Since he converted to Christianity in a friend's driveway in Weston, Mass., 25 years ago, Colson said he has never been a part of the Christian right.

Still, he criticized Hillary Rodham Clinton's comments that the scandal is the product of a "vast right-wing conspiracy." "It was the unfortunate wanderings of a mind when you ought to be doing what's in front of you and not looking for boogie men under beds," he said.

Colson said it's essential in a Democracy for the president to exert moral leadership, and he chastised those who say Clinton's personal behavior is nobody's business.

Iraq

continued from page 1

Bill Richardson, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, said yesterday that he has received commitments from two countries to publicly support the United States should it decide to attack Iraq

"The United States will not be alone," Richardson said during a world forum in Davos, Switzerland. He refused to identify the countries.

The U.N. inspectors must certify Iraq has destroyed all of its weapons of mass destruction before the U.N. Security Council will lift tough economic sanctions imposed after Iraq invaded neighboring Kuwait in 1990, prompting the Gulf War. The Security Council insists on unfettered access for its inspectors; Iraq contends access to some sites, including presidential palaces, would violate its sovereignty.

Albright was to begin explaining the U.S. position last night with talks with the emir of Kuwait, Sheik Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah. She was to consult tomorrow with leaders of Saudi Arabia and Bahrain, then fly to Egypt.

The United States has more than 4,000 troops and dozens of warplanes at bases in Saudi Arabia. Saudis, however, have been increasingly uncomfortable about their close ties with Washington since the June 1996 bombing of a U.S. military barracks in eastern Saudi Arabia. Nineteen American servicemen died in the attack, blamed on Muslim extremists.

U.S. bases in Saudi Arabia and Turkey were used extensively during the Gulf War, when an American-led coalition drove Iraq out of Kuwait. But the last U.S. missile strike against Iraq — a 1996 attack to punish President Saddam Hussein for sending troops into a Kurdish "safe haven" in northern Iraq — was launched from U.S. warships in the Persian Gulf.

Today, the United States has more than 24,400 troops aboard two aircraft carriers, the USS George Washington and the USS Nimitz, and their escort ships in the gulf. About half of the 342 warplanes in the gulf also are sea-based.

To many in the Arab world, a military strike on Iraq seems pointless, given that Iraqi citizens already are struggling from the seven years of economic sanctions. There also is distrust of Washington for its unwavering support for Israel.

The Collegian is currenlty accepting applications for the positions of Multicultural Affairs, Developing Nations, and Jewish Affairs editors.
Stop by 113 Campus Center or call 545-3500 for more information.

WELCOMING BACK STUDENTS
UNIVERSITY ST
Textbook Annex
AMHERST
www.aux.umass.edu/textbookannex
University Store • Textbook Annex
SAVE YOUR RECEIPT
Our Refund Policy
RETURN YOUR TEXTBOOKS WITH YOUR RECEIPT FOR A "NO QUESTIONS ASKED" REFUND THROUGH MONDAY FEBRUARY 9TH, 1998.
Beginning Tuesday, February 10, 1998 textbooks from dropped courses may be returned with a sales receipt and an updated course schedule.
The schedule may be obtained from the registrars office in Whitmore or do not wait for them to mail.
New books must be in new condition. No marks, writing, damage etc.
Any incorrect titles purchased after Tuesday, February 10th must be returned within 48 hours of purchase. Schedule, syllabus or other proof of incorrect purchases must be presented along with sales receipt.
Remember the last day to return textbooks with no questions asked is Monday, February 9th
www.aux.umass.edu/textbookannex
textbook annex
Spring '98 Schedule
We accept cash, personal check, Ucard, Visa, MasterCard as forms of payment.
We begin to return unsold books to the publishers in the middle of the semester. Students are encouraged to get the books they need for the semester as soon as possible after official enrollment in a course.
buyback
SECOND WEEK - February 2-6
Monday-Friday 9am - 5pm
Thereafter, Monday-Friday 9am-4pm at the Textbook Annex, beginning February 9, 1998
annex rush
Spring 1998 Book Rush Hours
Monday, Feb. 2 -Friday, Feb. 6 9am - 6pm
Thereafter - Monday - Friday 9am - 4pm

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Pope's visit inconclusive

According to The New York Times, last week the word on the streets of Havana during Pope John Paul II's visit was: "Cuando se vaya el Papa, se va la papa" (When the Pope goes, so do the potatoes). Potatoes, Pontiffs, and politicians aside, what remains after this meeting between the Pope and Fidel Castro?

Chris Stamm

Not much, besides the fact that the nation is teetering on the verge of instability.

Members of the Catholic faith were allowed to join the Cuban Communist Party in 1991. In 1992, Castro declared Cuba a secular state. However, many critics claim that the Comandante's Catholic tolerance has come as a way to legitimize trends in Cuban culture. When black market American dollars found their way into the economy, Castro legalized them. Religion can be seen in the same light.

As government workers constructed giant murals of Jesus Christ on one end of the Plaza of the Revolution, building– high Cuban flags and murals of Che Guevara juxtaposed the communist mission which still clings to the nation.

As for the men themselves, on one level, the Pope's agenda was clear: spread the word of God and bolster the Catholic world. In his speeches, John Paul II criticized the increased abortion rate in Cuba and called for the release of political prisoners. In terms of foreign policy, he spoke out on the dangerous excesses of capitalism and encouraged the end of the United State's embargo on the island, claiming that in today's global economy, no nation can survive if isolated.

Though the Pope may or may not have any direct impact on foreign policy in Washington, D.C., his flock of 1 billion Catholics cannot be overlooked. Remember his influence in wiping out communism in Eastern Europe? However, it is doubtful that the Pope can promptly spur the types of reforms in Castro's Cuba which would result in changes in U.S. policy.

As for Castro, the outcome can not be seen in terms of pluses or minuses but rather question marks. The anti-capitalism, end the U.S. embargo slants to the Pontiff's speeches not only beefed the Comandante's own agenda, but also drew parallels between christianity and communism. However, the parallels were hardly straight and narrow.

Government agencies circulated pamphlets to the crowd explaining who the Pope was. Business man, politician, paid visitor — many people just didn't know, even those who consider themselves part of the 40 percent Catholic population. Combined to this religious confusion is the resurgence in the Afro–Cuban religion Santeria which close to half the population adhere to. A mix between traditional African religion and Catholicism, this religious question mark corresponds to larger questions at hand.

In the 39 years since the revolution, one thing has been clear: Castro is a cult of personality. Taking center stage with the Pope plays to the people — even if some Cubans don't know who the Pope is or what he stands for, they know he's big and Castro has his ear.

The bottom line is, while the world got to see Christianity in a communist land and Castro could once again play to his ego and confirm his own importance, change will not be seen for some time.

At 77, Castro's successor has yet to be officially named. One potential candidate is Ricardo Alcarcón, president of the National Assembly of People's Power. Will Castro step down before he dies? Will he officially name a successor? Nobody knows for sure, but there is no doubt that the nation's political stability is on the brink of change.

Cuba is changing socially as well. Job security, "cradle–to– grave" health care, and education, all of which were formerly accolades of the Castro revolution, are slipping away. If the political situation does not change on its own, without a doubt the people will play a part.

Alcarcón has publicly stated that while Cuba's future may lie with democracy, that does not mean capitalism. Combine this with the fact that the majority of the government is under 40 years old and cannot remember first–hand the days of the revolution. When power passes from Castro's grip, peacefully or naturally, ideological change is almost certain.

Though the Pope's potatoes have come and gone, clearly there are much larger potatoes which loom on the horizon.

Chris Stamm is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Says vote yes on parking garage

To the Editor:
Your coverage of the garage controversy last semester included lots of student workers and shoppers speaking in favor of a garage in downtown Amherst. Now is the time for students to let their voices be heard at the ballot box.
Amherst deserves a central garage. Our town is a shining spot on the map, and people should be able to aim their automobiles and bicycles here — and then just follow the signs to hours, days, or weeks of parking — while they bus or bi–ped around Amherst. Our current streetscape is bleak, too many lots and buildings. Our public character is deadened and pedestrian culture decreased. A garage would add to the people places in the center of Amherst, and give more opportunities for bike and pedestrian projects.
The Kitchell plan puts people first, and enhances the visual environment. It places most parking underground, as an extension of the Bangs Center. At the tip of this iceberg is a pedestrian plaza of greenery and walkways that connects to two sides of the Bangs Center. Another walkway rings the garage and connects with Lessey, Main, and North Pleasant Streets. The Kitchell garage–plus–plaza establishes a "spine of green" in downtown Amherst, from the Common through Kendrick Park, which provides lungs that will let us amble and breathe no matter how high the buildings get. The garage part will serve up to 190 cars and 30 bikes (with both lockers and racks), but the plaza part will give great shortcuts and good lingering spaces, and could serve thousands per day.
If you like this idea, now is the time to act on your opinions by voting yes in the special referendum on Tuesday, Feb. 3, from 2–8 p.m. Students living on campus who are registered to vote in precincts 4 and 10 can conveniently vote at Southwest's Hampden Common.

John Furbish
Amherst

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.

Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words long, and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes.

They can be submitted by mail to Ed/Op Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst MA 01003; by email to letters oitvms.oit.umass.edu; or by fax to (413) 545–1592.

The Collegian reserves the right to edit letters for length, clarity, and style.

Upcoming topics:

The Ed/Op page will be focusing on the possible U.S. attack on Iraq as events develop. We need to hear your views on the subject.

We also want to run a Point/Counterpoint feature next week on the recent cloning of twin genetically–engineered cows by UMass faculty members. Tell us why this is or isn't a good thing.

Editorials should be 600–800 words long. They can be submitted to Tamar Carroll or Dan Bodah at the Collegian offices, by fax (545–1592), or by email (letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu).

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Rating plan is bogus

More than a decade after congressional hearings prompted by the Parents Music Resource Center (headed by Tipper Gore), the labeling of certain albums for adult language and themes continues to cause controversy and uproar. Just ask Nirvana, Prodigy and even Sheryl Crow, who have all had their albums pulled off shelves at major chains such as Wal–Mart.

Now legislative efforts to limit youngsters' access to popular music may be shifting to the concert arena.

That's right, if some conservative lawmakers have their way, concerts by rock and hip–hop artists may soon carry the same ratings and age restrictions as "R" and "NC–17" movies.

Prompted, no doubt, by the antics of shock–rocker Marilyn Manson, whose tour last summer included graphic and violent imagery, state legislators in Michigan, South Carolina and Oklahoma are working on bills that would force promoters to place parental warnings on concert tickets and require them to limit attendance to certain ages, as with movies.

While I do agree that a Marilyn Manson concert is not something for everyone's eyes and ears, the motivation and practicality of such a measure leaves a lot to be desired.

Besides, don't we already have restrictions like "18+" and "21+" attached to most concert tickets? Why not simply refine those requirements and utilize them more often? There is a very good reason why a Letters To Cleo show is "All Ages" and a performance by The Jesus Lizard is "18+."

One of the key differences between rating movies and, say albums or even potentially concerts, is that the film industry has a recognized board (the MPAA) and complex criteria for rating movie content.

No universally accepted standards exist in the music industry, and the decision to label albums is left entirely to the discretion of individual record companies. No one has said who would be responsible for rating concerts if such a system were adopted and what criteria would be applied.

"The very essence of live music is both spontaneity and improvisation. I implore these legislators to answer this question: How does one place a qualitative assessment on a concert based purely on speculation and reputation of the performer?"

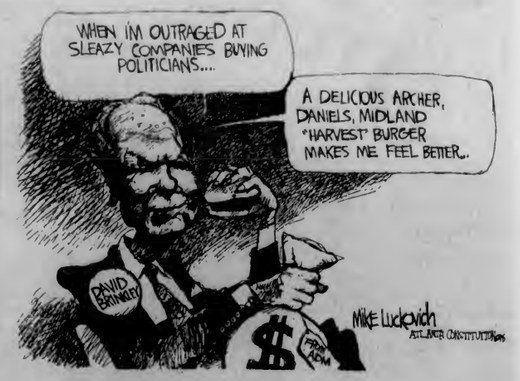
Marty Keane

Sure, movies are rated, but every time Titanic plays, it is the exact same movie. Not so in the concert world. As anyone who has been to a two or three–night stand of Phish or The Grateful Dead can attest, every show is different — a characteristic inherent in anything done "live," be it an opera, a musical, or a rock concert.

In fact, the very essence of live music is both spontaneity and improvisation. I implore these legislators to answer this question: How does one place a qualitative assessment on a concert based purely on speculation and reputation of the performer?

What about a multi–act festival with a variety of acts on the bill. Do you rate the entire festival or do you rate each band? Clearly, this is an open invitation for the prejudicial and misguided agendas of politicians to infringe on our First Amendment rights by acting in an arbitrary and capricious manner.

Anyway, how is such a policy to be enforced? Are we to expect promoters at a 10,000–seat venue to check ID's at the door? Get serious.



If, as some have suggested, a set of criteria similar to the Motion Picture Association of America guidelines were used, a Garth Brooks concert would have to realistically be rated "PG–13" because several of Brooks' tunes in his set deal with subject matter ranging from spousal abuse ("Thunder Rolls") to the joys of free–flowing alcohol ("Friends In Low Places"). A Garth Brooks show is among the most innocuous concert–going experiences one could even imagine.

Not surprisingly, the American Civil Liberties Union has already come out against any such rating proposals. They point to the First Amendment and question the constitutionality of governmental attempts to impose a mandatory rating system for concerts, or anything for that matter.

Hey, while we're at it, let's place warning labels on pieces of art that have devious undertones or naked subjects. Same thing, right?

Somebody tell me this is just a bad dream.

Marty Keane is a Collegian columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Co-Editor
Tamar Carroll Editorial/Opinion Co-Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Leigh Faulkner News Editor
Lauren Konky Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor
Joeseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
David Parmenter Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Gala celebrates arts; proceeds benefit FAC

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Correspondent

GALA ANNIVERSARY CONCERT
Campus Center & Bowker Auditorium
Jan. 31

A 30th anniversary gala event took place Saturday night in celebration of 30 years of great music and performances from the University of Massachusetts Department of Music and Dance.

A formal dinner at the Campus Center preceded the evening events, in which guest speaker Chancellor David K. Scott, voiced his support of continuing and improving arts programming. He urged attendees to think of the arts as life and not as a form of living.

"The arts contribute to life in three ways: arts in education, arts in policy and the arts in the campaign To Dream, To Act, To Lead," Scott said.

The arts in education is an understanding of the liberal arts as a way of seeking knowledge that serves as a model in all of education.

To reach this goal, Scott emphasized learning from the heart. "The best way to learn by the heart is through a love for the arts."

In most cases, performance art shows planning, decisions, discipline, risk, and organization is the key to success in policy making of all aspects, according to Scott.

"The music department deserves a building that is on the same level as the polymer science building for polymer science majors," Scott said.

With such a goal in mind, Scott announced that the University will provide an additional $150 thousand dollars if its goal of $300 thousand dollars is reached by the end of 1998. Plans to build an atrium to provide for more recital space is also a goal the department hopes to reach in a few years.

Scott ended his speech by proclaiming, "President Clinton announces all of his initiatives, so why can't I?"

Following the dinner, crowds flocked to Bowker Auditorium to show their support for the music department. A wide variety of talented musicians and full–time faculty members performed various classical and jazz selections.

Musicians such as Paulina Stark, Nigel Cose, Jeffrey Holmes and Frederick Tillis took to the stage to perform selections by Gershwin, Mendelssohn, Liszt, and Gillespie. Selections such as "Horizons," performed and composed by Jeffrey Holmes, captured the audience in heavenly awe with its soothing effect. Some works even proved to be inspirational, such as Tillis's "This Little Light of Mine" whose harmonious tune displayed his loving dedication to his grandmother.

The night ended with a performance of "Night in Tunisia," performed by Tillis, Sporny, Holmes, Ramsey and accompanied by student Genevieve Rose on the bass.

All of the individuals' efforts and contributions that helped make the evening possible show the growing interest in music and the importance of supporting the arts.

Proceeds from the concert were donated to the Bezanson Recital Hall renovation fund in hopes of providing for an improved music hall. Other contributions included a new Steinberg grand piano for Bezanson Recital Hall, donated by Dorothy G. annis.

Soap operas & Monica Lewinsky

Soap Chat
with Jacob Fanning

Unless you've been living under a rock for the past few weeks, I'm sure you're all too aware (more so than you'd like to be) of the Bill Clinton–Monica Lewinski scandal. What does this have to do with soaps you ask? Well, last week I caught a glimpse of some profile on Monica (one of the trillion or so out there) and they just happened to mention, out of nowhere, that she was an avid fan of soaps ("Days of Our Lives" in particular). My friend, who was also watching the bit, had the misfortune of responding with the quip, "Well, that explains it!"

That's when I knew it wasn't just a case of paranoia. Whether or not the bit meant to, the context in which it was mentioned somehow implied that she was, what exactly? Unbalanced, slightly out of touch with reality, not above stretching the truth, etc. You know, the average soap fan! It was used, or at least that's what my friend and I got out of it (by the way, he's not a soap fan), to question her credibility. There was no mention of her favorite movies, music, what her hobbies were, etc., only that she was an "avid fan of soaps" and it was completely out of left field (of absolutely no relevance to the matter at hand).

I'm so sick and tired of this "BS," this blatant ignorance on the part of some of these anti–soap factions. First it was implied that I was un–intelligent for watching soaps and now the media (of all people) are implying that I am somehow out of touch and standing on some morally shaky ground. So I guess that means that some of my professors , who have admitted to watching soaps on occasion, are somewhat lacking in those departments as well, eh?

Soap fans come from all walks of life, my friends (they aren't just housewives). What I watch isn't necessarily a reflection of anything other than my personal preferences as far as entertainment goes. Here's a letter I wrote to myself (it's a good method of venting without the consequences) in response to one of my ex–neighbor's claim that soaps were "mindless dribble" and that I was lacking in the brain department for watching them. I think it sums up what I'm trying to get at.

First of all, I'd like to thank so and so for pointing out the ignorance that I often have to deal with. I'm not sure exactly what you were trying to prove with your argument (I use the term loosely) but, as far as I can see, you've only helped mine. To polarize an entire medium and furthermore, it's entire viewing audience, shows me just how narrow–minded you are. You haven't even seen one (by your own admission) and yet you have the audacity to criticize their content. I wouldn't presume to criticize something I had absolutely no knowledge of. That is why you have no argument. Watch a few episodes of the beautifully written and complex soap "One Life To Live" and then feel free to tell me that soaps are mindless dribble (at least then you'd have a somewhat educated opinion and not just the old stereotypes of what soaps are like). You want to talk content? How about the infamous Stone and Robin saga on "General Hospital," a breathtaking love story that dealt with a partner dying of AIDS and the couple's struggle with it. The story has been honored by several charities for promoting AIDS awareness and for it's accurate portrayal of someone living with the illness. Is that crap?

I'm personally offended (the drama queen in me) by your presumptuous attitude that I'm less intelligent than you because of the shows I choose to watch. I think everyone should be. Feel free to blindly attack the genre but don't you dare presume to criticize the intelligence of me and of the other million or so fans out there.

A few final notes: this is the last time I'll be discussing the subject. I think it's better that I just ignore it. The stigma has always been there, probably always will be (that's why there's so many closet fans) but I'll continue watching them in the Bluewall for all the world to see. Me and the "All My Children," ladies and gentleman shall stand proud with our heads held high (I can't even say that without bursting into hysterics but there it is, for your amusement). Soaps are fun, plain and simple. People just need to lighten up and enjoy them for what they are. They're meant to entertain (occasionally teach but it's more the exception than the rule). Even if you laugh at how ridiculous they are, a smile is still a smile.

I have a few new things I'd like to add to the column, the first being a section called "set those VCR's." The section is meant to prepare you for any major happenings during the week, scenes that you can't miss (and should therefore tape). Usually I'll just mention the day that the event is going to occur so you won't be scrambling to tape an entire week's worth.

This week: Most likely on Friday, on "General Hospital," Bobbie finally finds out the truth about Carly. After 21 months the wait is over and the payoff promises to be huge. "Days," Monday's a must as John and Marlena confront Roman but Friday may prove to be just as interesting. I heard Hope (the woman seems to be involved in everything) falls victim to Peter's jungle madness (don't ask). Sometime this week, probably Friday, although it doesn't say, Teague and Ben square off in an attempt to save Jack and Carly on "As The World Turns."

I'm going to save my Sink or Swim's until next week but I do have a few that my "Days" friend brought to my attention and would like me to mention.

Jeremy's Sink or Swim (and a new addition, entitled "treading water")
Swim:
- To Laura and Abe's scenes on "Days." Meow! Who does Laura think she is? Taking police matter into her own hands. It's time to take her back to the mental institution.

Sink :
- Peter's "jungle madness" on "Days." Enough already.

Treading Water :
- The truth is finally out with the Marlena/Roman/John thing (how unlike "Days" to reveal it so soon) but how long will precious "Doc" need before she makes up her mind?

Jacob Fanning is a Collegian columnist. Soap Chat appears on Mondays. E–mail any questions or comments about this column to jfanning@student.umass.edu.

Ween show at Roxy intoxicates

By Dan Knox
Collegian Correspondent

WEEN
The Roxy
Jan. 31

BOSTON— Ween ended their world tour on Saturday night at the Roxy night club. After terrorizing Australia and Japan for the last few months, the band brought it back home. The Boston area fans, realizing this was the last time they'd be seeing Ween for an indefinite period of time, came out in force and numbers. The line for tickets started forming at 4 p.m. and by the time the doors opened at 6 p.m., at least one over–zealous fan had collapsed.

The venue itself was a lesson in opulence that even Puff Daddy could appreciate. Resplendent with leather appointed couches and five bars on two floors, the Roxy was a little more luxurious than the average concert goer is used to. After a little over a half hour of reggae, the roadies began preparing the stage for the band by placing Budweiser's strategically around the stage. The band opened with the first track off their newest album The Mollusk, "Dancing in the Show Tonite" but did not dwell on any one of their five albums.

The band jammed out on several songs, notably "Voodoo Lady" and "Don't Get too Close to My Fantasy." Crowd favorites "Dr. Rock" and "Piss Up a Rope" whipped the crowd into a frenzy. Even the crowd surfers, though considered by most Ween fans as an unwanted distraction from the band, only seemed to heighten the festive atmosphere of the show.

The best parts of the show were the unexpected additions to Turn to WEEN, page6

Save on general books
EVERY DAY at UStore's
NEW Book Department

New York Times Bestseller
Hardcover ..... Save 35%

New York Times Bestseller
Paperback ..... Save 25%

Other Books
Hardcover Fiction ... 20% Off
Any other book ..... 10% Off

The University Store
University of Massachusetts Amherst
University Store
On the UMass Campus Center Concourse
Hours:
M-F 9 to 5
Sat. 11 to 4
(413) 545 - 2619
We accept AMEX, Discover, MasterCard, Visa, and the UCard!

The NEW Union Billiards
UMass Student Union
NEW NAME, NEW LOOK, NEW ATMOSPHERE!
STOP IN BETWEEN 1PM AND 11PM ANY DAY OF THE WEEK TO SEE THE NEW UNION BILLIARDS. WE'D LOVE TO SEE YOU!
COME BY AND MEET STRIDER AND THE GANG. WE'RE RIGHT ACROSS FROM THE HATCH IN THE OLD GAMES ROOM.

Subscribe to:
The Boston Globe

@ 40% off the newsstand price!!!

To get The Boston Globe delivered to your dorm or office, please fill out this form and drop in campus mail with payment to:

John Riley
College News Service
UMASS Amherst, Campus Center Hotel
Amherst, MA 01035

Please check desired service:

Spring Term
7 Days MON-SUN	☐ $37.35
6 Days MON-SAT	☐ $22.50
5 Days MON-FRI	☐ $19.20
SUNDAY ONLY	☐ $14.85

The above prices reflect subscriptions starting on 2/9/98

Name _____ Campus Phone _____
Campus Address _____
If you are paying by credit card, please complete: ☐ VISA ☐ MC ☐ AMEX ☐ DISCOVER
Card Number _____ Exp. Date _____
Cardholder Name _____ Signature _____

The Boston Globe

Have you seen the Globe Today?

■ Ween

continued from page 5

the song the "Blarney Stone" and a brilliant cover of Van Halen's "Hot For Teacher." The "Blarney Stone" was dedicated to all the Irish drunkards in the audience. Seldom seen group member Mean Ween sang and drank Jack Daniels out of the bottle; guitarist Dean Ween added a very colorful new verse dedicated to this year's tour and the whole crowd became a swaying, surly mass clutching on to one another for support. "Hot For Teacher" displayed the technical mastery of the bands musical abilities as the drummer, Claude, both sang David Lee Roth and played the complex back beats of one of our generation's hottest rock anthems.

It seemed that throughout the show there was as much a party going on back stage as there was in the audience. The group gave it their all for their final performance putting in over two and a half hours of stage time. Their intoxication was infectious, which isn't surprising from a band that credits Scotch Guard for inspiration. Dean Ween summed it up when a desperate fan requested water; he replied "We're not Fugazi, We don't give out water..."

COURTESY TOM NICHOLS

Dean Ween (left) and Gene Ween performed at the Roxy Saturday night.

■ women's

continued from page 10

it caught us by surprise."

Coyner was the bright spot of the day for Massachusetts as she shot 5-for-8 for 15 points including a 3-of-5 day in three-pointers. Tez Kraft was the only other UMass player in double digits with 10, but her total came with a 4-for-18 showing.

Dayton's defense suffocated any life that was in UMass as the Minutewomen forced passes to the posts and rushed outside shots at the buzzer. At the half the Flyers led, 29-20, and O'Brien's troops showed little frustration knowing they had a whole other half to turn it around.

But their expectations dwindled as they fell further and further behind. Dayton sophomore sensation Christi Hester, last year's team MVP, scored 10 points while adding a team-high 5 assists. The Flyers' confidence soared as they took advantage of their opponent's scrambling offense.

Dawson had been averaging 9.5 points but last week she had stepped it up for 22 against Rhode Island and yesterday she had 18.

"I don't think it had anything to do with me individually," Dawson said, "It was the motion offense. After the first pass, we made a lot of baskets and I just got lucky."

In ending, it seemed to be the beginning of the coming out party for Dayton who prove how close-knit and strong the A-10 is. For UMass, it just reiterated a day where shots didn't fall and rebounds found their way into enemy hands.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Tez Kraft scored 10 points, but UMass could not find a way past upstart Dayton Saturday.

■ PGA

continued from page 10

miles per hour on the dirt path nearby.

The PGA's argument would be different if its competitors were forced to carry their own bags. Then, Martin would have an advantage. But nobody, from Greg Norman to Davis Love III to Colin Montgomerie, traipses from tee to tee without a caddy. So that argument is moot.

Yes, this situation would be different is Martin was attempting to play another game. Bob Ryan in Saturday's Boston Globe made the analogy of Martin trying to play baseball. If he were a great batter should he be allowed a surrogate runner, Ryan asked.

Golf is different.

People would laugh in his face if he was trying to run track and asked for a two-minute head start in the mile. People would be up in arms if he wanted to just stand in the endzone waiting for the touchdown pass without having to step up to the line of scrimmage.

Golf is different.

In baseball, football, track and a myriad of other sports running is essential. Even walking will not do. But not in golf. Walking is a part of the game, but unlike running in football or track, it is not an essential element. If it were, country clubs wouldn't have hundreds of pastel-clad too-wealthy-for-their-own-good suburbanites trampling the club's flowers with their overgrown lawn mowers.

Martin has his supporters, people who see that the PGA is wrong to force a walking way of tour life. Bob Dole, one of the writers of the Americans with Disabilities Act — which Martin is using to sue the PGA Tour — supports him. So do legions of fans. Unfortunately, as of right now, golf's higher-ups have yet to be convinced.

Casey Martin didn't ask for all this to happen. Riding in a cart is the result of a disability, not a decision. He should be held up as an model of will power and determination and a testament to the power of following a dream.

He has the potential, the ability and the desire to play golf on the professional level.

Now all he needs is the chance.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

Attention all Collegian sports staff members:

There will be a mandatory meeting in the Collegian office on Wednesday night at 6 p.m. If you can not make the meeting, call Casey at 545-0719. New writers are welcome.

UMASS DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

Something for Everyone

Workshops offered evenings, daytime, weekends, off and on campus

Nearly 100 noncredit workshops

Including
- Mask Making
- Network Marketing
- Web Page Design
- Chocolate
- Songwriting
- Art Therapy
- Retirement Planning
- Genealogy
- UFOs
- Playback Theatre
- Bartending
- EMT Training

Spring semester workshops begin February 9

For a free course catalog, call 413-545-0107 or e-mail contined@admin.umass.edu

www.umass.edu/contined/

a quality education at an affordable price

• DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION •
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

check us out on the web . . .
www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

SPRING BREAK
BEST PARTIES CANCUN JAMAICA FLORIDA BEST PRICE
Call Today! Space is Limited
1 800 648-4849
On campus call Shanelle Orkin @413-545-3147

COMPUTER ENGINEERING • COMPUTER SCIENCE • PHYSICS • CHEMICAL ENGINEERING
MATH • ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING • MECHANICAL ENGINEERING • BUSINESS ANALYSIS

TAKE TECHNOLOGY TO THE NTH POWER.

When something is too extreme for words, it's to the Nth degree. And that's the level of technology you'll experience at Raytheon.

Raytheon has formed a new technological superpower - Raytheon Systems Company, composed of four major technological giants: Raytheon Electronic Systems, Raytheon E-Systems, Raytheon TI Systems and Hughes Aircraft. The new Raytheon Systems Company is driving technology to the limit. And we're looking for engineers who want to push the envelope. Break new ground. Make their mark.

At Raytheon, you'll take technology - and your career - to the highest possible level. You'll take it to the Nth. We'll be visiting your campus soon. Contact your career placement office now to schedule an interview, or check out our website at www.rayjobs.com. If you are unable to meet with us, please send your resume to: Raytheon Staffing, P.O. Box 655 474, MS-201, Dallas, TX 75265. We have many exciting opportunities available and we would like to talk to you.

Internet: www.rayjobs.com • E-mail: resume@rayjobs.com
U.S. citizenship may be required. We are an equal opportunity employer

Raytheon
EXPECT GREAT THINGS

Receptionist
Part-time

Elaine Health and Rehab, is seeking a Receptionist to assist us 3:30-8pm, Mon-Fri. Excellent interpersonal skills, as well as computer data antry experience are required. The successful candidate will be dependable, posseass a pleasant phone manner and be able to work in a fast paced environment. Interested candidates may either complete application on premisea, or may aend reaumea to:

JoAnn Cavanaugh
Payroll/H.R Coordinator,
Elaine Health and Rehab,
20 N. Maple St.
Hadley, MA 01035;
(413) 584 5057, EOE AA,m/f/d/v.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

Senior Dan Juden added a pair of goals later in the period to seal the deal for the Minutemen. Merrimack would add a goal late in the third period to make the final 6-2 in favor of UMass.

"When we get production from everyone, we can beat anyone. Tonight was the first time that we've scored more than four goals in a Hockey East game," Mallen said. "Whenever we do that we should get the goaltending and defense that we need to win."

Although UMass played superbly in all areas of the game, each night produced a different strength that emerged. Regan was at the top of his game on both nights, but Friday night a a smothering defense kept Providence in check. Saturday night the offensive attack was the story, scoring a season- high six goals.

UMass was the victim of an early goal on Friday night as well. Mike Mader redirected a Mike Farrell shot to put PC ahead 1-0 at the 2:55 mark.

Lovell, however, knotted the score at 6:01 on another spectacular goal. The senior gathered a pass from O'Connor in neutral ice, gained the PC blue line and abused Friar defenseman Jay Leach, pulling the freshman to his right while snapping a quick shot low to the stick side of PC goalie Mark Kane to even things up.

The Minutmen would take the lead for good at 1:38 of the second on a Nathan Sell goal. Sell broke in alone on Kane and was denied, but stuck with the puck and slid the rebound under the Providence netminder.

Lovell would then provide the insurance later in the frame on the rebound of an O'Connor shot. Regan and the Minutmen defense would take care of the rest, ensuring the first Hockey East win of the year for UMass.

Next up for UMass are matchups at New Hampshire on Friday night at 7 p.m. and home against UMass-Lowell on Sunday at 2 p.m. Needless to say this will be another couplet which will determine the post-season fate of the Minutemen.

"I told the team that when you hit February you have to be playing your best hockey. And because of some good teamwork, I think that we're starting to see that now," Mallen said.

■ seniors

continued from page 10

"We've been in almost every conference game this year, and now we're getting the breaks that we didn't get at the start of the season," Lovell said. "Our line has been clicking pretty well, and Jeff has been keeping it simple, and Dan has that senior experience. As of late, its been getting real good between the three of us."

UMass coach Joe Mallen knew that he hasn't had Lovell running on all cylinders, but now he thinks his lone senior captain will assume the role at full speed.

"Tim Lovell is now near 100 percent with that ankle, and his confidence is up," Mallen said. "When he is producing points, his leadership ability really comes out, and that's what we've been seeing lately."

If Lovell helped put the team up in both games, the team defense was what won both games in the end. After allowing early goals in both wins, Regan shut down the Friars on Friday night with a 23-save performance, and allowed only one late goal against the Warriors after the team was already up 6-1.

It has been a seesaw in net for Regan the past few weeks, and the veteran has been sharing time between the pipes with freshman Markus Helenen. A long layoff during intersession got Regan out of his game, but now New Milford, Conn.'s favorite son is getting the feel back in his game.

"The biggest thing to do is not get down on yourself after you let up an early goal like that, and just concentrate on your fundamentals," Regan said. "We came back strong in both games this weekend, and that is a step in the right direction for the team right now.

"Us seniors realize that time is ticking away on us, and it's unfortunate with a great guy like Brad [Norton] leaving the team this week, so the rest of us knew we had to step our play up, and we did."

Stepping right into the big spot left behind by Norton were two of his classmates, and Gaffney and O'Connor turned the corner this weekend away from recent bad times on the backline.

On one hand, Gaffney (four goals, four assists on the season) once again was able to put on his inimitable ability of carrying the puck out of the defensive zone, gaining the Merrimack zone at will, and with almost reckless abandon. And on the other hand, O'Connor (two goals, 12 assists on the season) has already picked up the assist slack left with the departure of Norton, putting in his own bid for HE Player of the Week with five assists on the weekend.

For O'Connor, it was a matter of accepting the challenge given to him by Mallen.

"When Brad left, the coach called me into his office to have a talk with him," O'Connor said. "He told me it was my time to step up and take charge of this defense. Tim is our captain now, and Brian is our No. 1 guy in net, so we all have to get behind them and do the job."

Mallen remarked after Friday night's win over Providence that a possible assistant captaincy might be in the works, with the "A" most likely going on O'Connor's left shoulder. He was not only impressed with his play, but with his team.

"Tom was doubtful going into this weekend, and he really put his body on the line for us," Mallen said. "Both him and Mike Gaffney really picked their play up. All of our guys on defense are banged up, so they deserve the credit."

As for now, UMass is a winner, but this Friday holds a tough road game against No. 4 New Hampshire.

So, we'll see... watch and wait.

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

■ basketball

continued from page 10

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Ajmal Basit tangles with a Dayton defender as he gets a shot off in UMass' win yesterday.

points, buried a pair of three's to push the lead to 59-44, and Ketner made it a 63-46 game with an emphatic dunk at the 8:26 mark.

The extra bounce in their steps, brought on by a 10-game winning streak, has this edition starting to remind mans of the glory years, and not last season's 19-14 campaign. Massachusetts has been playing with confidence lately.

"It's a lot of fun when you're winning," Ketner said. "[For the guys who were on last year's team], we didn't have a good year, and we didn't want that to happen again. Guys are working hard, and it's paying off. That's why we have the streak."

Ketner celebrated his 21st birthday by scoring a career- high 33 points on 13-of-17 shooting. Massachusetts coach Bruiser Flint, surprised the Flyers attacked Ketner man to man, went to Ketner more often than usual, and he responded with the best game of his career.

Ketner, long tagged with the term "unlimited potential," delivered the game it seems everyone thought he had in him. Off the opening tip, Ketner finished an alley-oop from Charlton Clarke, setting the tone for Ketner's big day. From then on he blitzed Dayton center Mark Ashman with a flurry of dunks and perimeter jumpshots, a decided departure from the four point, five foul game he suffered through against URI on Thursday.

"[The opening dunk] really got me into the game, as well as the [other] players," Ketner said. "I wanted to come out and play well, because I didn't play well in the Rhode Island game. I thought I would have to stay in the game and play good defense for us to have a chance because Dayton isn't really a big team."

The Minutemen jumped out to a 14-4 lead by spreading out the floor, getting baskets from four of the five starters in that stretch. After the Flyers cut the lead to five, UMass went on an 8-0 run to push the margin to 25-12 midway through the first half. Massachusetts led 39-30 at the break.

Junior guard Charlton Clarke scored 15 points and dished out six assists. Massachusetts shot 60 percent from the field, as no player shot under 50 percent. Sophomore forward Chris Kirkland, whose improvement has been drastic during this 10-game winning streak, chipped in with eight points and three rebounds.

■ men's

continued from page 10

hard. I didn't think I'd score that many points," he said.

Seeing his first complete-game single-coverage since the Kansas game, Ketner abused Dayton with an arsenal of hook shots, medium range jump shots and a seemingly unstoppable turnaround jumper.

"I've been working hard at shooting from the high post," he said.

Ketner's 13-for-17 shooting was paired on the defensive end by four blocks, a horde of shot disruptions and three rebounds, six total.

"He had a presence everywhere," Dayton coach Oliver Purnell said. "We had no answer for him."

It was an all too familiar scene for Purnell who still remembers his team's last visit to Amherst in 1996. Then, All-American Marcus Camby posted a Mullins Center record-high 38 points to lead UMass to a 78-58 win.

"He was Camby-ish almost," Purnell said. "I hope next time we play against him, it won't be his birthday."

Ketner's teammates played one of its most sound games this season around him. Spreading the floor and creating high percentage opportunities for each other, UMass followed up a 58 percent shooting first half (15-for-26) with a 62 percent second half (15-for-24).

Junior guard Charlton Clarke saw the majority of the time at point guard, distributing the ball to his teammates for easy looks at the basket.

"That's why Jonathon [DePina] didn't play much," Massachusetts coach Bruiser Flint said. "I didn't want to take Charlton out. I thought he had a great game."

"Now we're starting to gel, and today I felt like that," said Clarke, who chipped in with 13 points and six assists on the afternoon. "I feel like I always know where Monty [Mack] and Lari are out there."

After the game, Clarke's biggest fan was Mack whom Clarke fed for two second-half three-pointers that shut the door on Dayton after they had cut the Minutemen lead to nine.

"I rewarded him for the shots I made," Mack said. "I just spotted up and let it fly."

Flint also raved about the consistent play of second-year forward Chris Kirkland. The Pittsburgh-native has been seeing considerable action the past few weeks and has surprised the coaching staff with his energy on the court.

"Chris Kirkland has done a great job at the four spot for us," Flint said.

When asked if his roster was deep now, Flint said they were "deep enough to win."

The only question remaining after the game was whether UMass would be appear in the Associated Press Top 25 ranking come Monday. Flint, however, was not concerned about it.

"If they don't put us in, then we'll just keep on winning. And then they might just have to," Flint said.

BACK TO SCHOOL SPECIAL

Pentium 166MMX Complete System Starting at $999
with 32MB Ram & 14" Color Monitor

- Custom Configured Systems
- Upgrades and Components
- Network Cards starting at $28
- $5 off any Network Card with this ad

Looking for a Computer?

Green Leaf Computers
413 . 256 . 6110

PEACE CORPS

Attention Graduating Seniors and Juniors

Seniors, unsure about your plans after graduation? Peace Corps has hundreds of summer positions (departing between June and September) available in business, education, health/nutrition, agriculture and the environment. ALL MAJORS WELCOME.

Juniors, start planning early for next year. Start back to school next fall with your post-graduation plans already set. For more information, stop by while we are on campus.

Info. Tables — Feb. 4&5 @ 10-3 pm, Campus Center

Info. Session — Feb. 5 @ 7 pm, Hasbrouck Lab, #124

Five College Mass Recruitment Awareness Campaign Feb. 2-5

"Coming to a campus near you."

(413) 545-2105
Peace Corps
Five College
Recruitment Office

STUDENT VOTERS
VOTE "NO" ON FEBRUARY 3
at the referendum on the Town Meeting parking garage motion.

Garages in small communities put towns under financial stress. Then parking fees downtown and on campus may rise still more. If Amherst urges more use of autos we go counter to the global mandate to reduce pollution.

AMHERST NEEDS YOUR VOTE for the referendum to count.

Where to vote?
You're registered where you lived spring 1997:
Southwest = Hampden Dining Commons | Northeast & Sylvan = Lutheran Church
Central = Wildwood School | Orchard Hill = North Fire Station

Political Advertisement paid for by Becky Holmes, Berkshire Terrace, Amherst

HEY!
Ski or Ride
just $21
Bus + Lift Ticket Included

Daily Bus Leaves:	UMass	9:55 am
	Amherst Center	10:00 am
Arrive:	Mt. Tom	10:35 am
Leave:	Mt. Tom	4:30 pm
Arrive:	UMass	5:10 pm

Mt. TOM The Area's Ski Mountain
Peter Pan

THE CLUB
Tennis & Fitness Center
549-3638 659 Amherst Road, Sunderland
DOUBLED IN SIZE
STATE OF THE ART FITNESS CENTER

NEW CARDIO EQUIPMENT LOCATED ON OUR NEW BALCONIES

- Treadmills Life Stride, Star Trac, and Trotters
- Stairmasters New 4400pt's
- Recumbant Bikes by Stairmaster
- Precor EFX Crosstrainer a Cardio Workout without any weight impact on joints
- Weight Training Machine Circuits including the GRAVITRON
- Nautilus Equipment
- Complete Free Weight Area Doubled in Size! New benches & bars; New plates & weights; New lat pull down, leg press, & T-bar; New STRIVE Plate loading machines & much more!
- Let's not forget the AREA'S ONLY TREADWALL an assimilated rock climbing wall - WHAT A WORKOUT! You'll love it!
- Also Introducing POWER PACING the area's only Exercise Bike Classes that are guaranteed to burn TONS of calories! Classes offered 10-15 times a week by certified Power Pacing Instructors. Pick up your schedule today!

NEW AEROBICS CLASSES INCLUDING EARLY A.M.

JOIN OUR MEMBERS' CLIMB TO MT EVEREST ON THE TREADWALL!

POWER PACING PACKAGES AVAILABLE YOUR FIRST RIDE IS FREE!

Anyone interested in Broadcasting ie: News, Entertainment, Sports, Etc.

COME CHECK US OUT!

WMUA 91.1 F.M.
NEWS STAFF

105 Campus Center (next to collegian)

THERE IS A MEETING ON WED. FEB. 4 @ 6:30PM IN THE SUFFOLK ROOM IN THE STUDENT UNION
ALL NEW INTERESTED PEOPLE ARE WELCOME TO ATTEND

Ask for [illegible] or call 545-2876

Join QPE
QUEER PEER EDUCATION
1, 2, or 3 credits available
Today

- Need to add a class?
- Do you like to give workshops?
- Are you creative and energetic?
- Are you committed to educating others about health and wellness issues?
- How about hosting safer sex parties?
- Want to make a difference for you and your peers?

If you answered yes to any of these questions, call QPE Laun today at 7-5252 or email laurl@educ.umass.edu
1, 2, or 3 credit independent studies are available.
Open to all 5-college students.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

PERFORMING ARTS DIVISION offers Group and Private Instruction in Music, Theater, and Dance. PAD is located in the New Continuing Ed Bldg. on the corner of Fearing and N. Pleasant Streets, rooms #208 and 210. Info call (413)545-0519

APARTMENT FOR RENT

3rd Floor 2 bedroom apartment available Feb 1. Heat/Hot Water + Cooking Gas included $815/month Please contact Andrew Newcomb. 549-0600

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Pontiac Bonneville Great condition, many new parts. Must sell. $1200. Call anytime. 546-6342

88 Chevy Cavalier Good running car. Very reliable. Has new brakes, tires, radiator. Replaced engine and rebuilt alternator about 2 years ago. Selling for $1200 ($300 below NADA) Call 546-3842

91 VW Golf GT Standard, 5Sk, A/C. Excellent condition. $5500. 549-0892

87 Chevy S-10 Pickup Many new parts. $1400 Call 253-5425

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795

CHILDCARE

Childcare Needed for bright, easy-going 13 month old girl in our home for 8-9 hours a week. Close to campus. 548-7061

COMPUTERS

7200/90 Power Mac 2 SCSI hard drives, 32 MB RAM, 4 MB VRAM., 17 inch 1705 Apple Monitor. $1500 Contact Jay @ 545-0989 or evenings @ 253-3692.

EMPLOYMENT

Part-Time Waitstaff
Immediate Openings
Office Hours: 10 AM to 2 PM & 4 PM to 9 PM
Saturdays & Sundays also available.
- Fun Atmosphere
- No Experience Required
- On Bus Line
- Flexible Schedule
- Only Minutes From Campus

Call 584-0205 For Interview

Counselors for co-ed Northeast PA, overnight Jewish camp- 3 hours from NYC- general, sports, drama, H20 & arts. 1-800-973-3866

EMPLOYMENT

Receptionist Part-time

Elaine Health and Rehab. is seeking a Receptionist to assist us 3:30-8pm, Mon-Fri. Excellent interpersonal skills, as well as computer data entry experience are required. The successful candidate will be dependable, possess a pleasant phone manner and be able to work in a fast paced environment. Interested candidates may either complete application on premises, or may send resumes to:

JoAnn Cognosagh, Payroll/H.R. Coordinator
Elaine Health and Rehab.
20 N. Maple St.
Hadley, MA 01035
(413) 584-5057
EOE/AA m/f/d/v.

Activist JOBS FOR THE ENVIRONMENT

Work with the Sierra Club on an urgent endangered species campaign.
Part-time available
Great for students
$50-$75 a day.
Call Kate 256-6434

Now hiring part-time workers in Downtown Amherst $7 an hour. Applicants must be outgoing. Call Sean 253-0583

Looking for Mary Poppins 8-12 hours per week Mon, Wed, Fri afternoons. Occasional weekend hours. References, experience, car a must. 549-7788

EMPLOYMENT

NEW STUDENTS PROGRAM seeks extroverts from '98-'00 Class with 2.5+ GPA. May 27 to July 18. Salary, room, meals, health coverage. Apply 307 Admissions Center. Deadline Feb 6.

Delivery Drivers Needed Apply at Bell's Pizza. 65 University Dr.

CRUISE SHIP & LAND-TOUR JOBS Discover how to work in exotic locations, meet fun people, while earning a living in these exciting industries! For more information 517-324-3092 Ext C50012

Drivers and Kitchen Help Wanted Apply at D.P. Dough, Downtown Amherst

FOR RENT

SUMMER RENTALS
CAPE COD GROUP
Summer Rentals- Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools.
Falmouth area, Diamond Reel Estate (508)477-1900

Fridge Rentels Free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

TI-85 Calculator For Sale Only used for one semester. $80 Call 546-4662

FURNITURE

Futon Twin size, brand new $100 (413)256-3527, 5-5547

GREEK ANNOUNCEMENTS

Start Your Own Fraternity! Zeta Beta Tau is looking for men to start a new chapter. If you are interested in academic success, a chance to network and an opportunity to make friends in a non-pledging brotherhood, e-mail joe@zbtnational.org or call Joe Affidi at (317)334-1898.

LOST

Green Fountain Pen Sentimental value. Lost near Library Tower. Please call 253-1577

MISCELLANEOUS

FREE T-SHIRT + $1000 Credit Card fundraisers for fraternities, sororities & groups. Any campus organization can raise up to $1000 by earning a whopping $5.00/VISA application. Call 1-800-932-0528 ext 65. Qualified callers receive FREE T-SHIRT.

MUSICIANS

Epiphone Accoustic Electric Guitar Excellent condition. Great sound and great pickup- with HARD CASE. $400. Call Dru 549-7540

MUSICIANS WANTED

No haircutting involved, just solid acapella singing. Call Daniel 665-7581

PERSONALS

"I've got you, babe!"- Cher, Beavis & Butthead. Free love and valentines at www.studentadvantage.com/qpid

ROOM FOR RENT

ATTENTION JEWISH STUDENTS
Spaces available in Living Community of Hillel House. Call Jason for details. 549-1710

Rooms For Rent Very close to campus. Females Only $1200/semester. Call 549-7146 or (508)655-5922

ROOMATE WANTED

Looking for roommate to share three bedroom apartment. Call 549-5596.

SERVICES

Rental Problems Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

STEREO & CD EQUIPMENT

Car Stereo Equipment Kenwood Detach Face- 1 year old, paid $350. 1 amp 100x2, paid $150. 1 amp 100x4, paid $100. 1 pair Pioneer 6x9 speakers, 100w, paid $110. Whole system sounds great, needs nothing. Selling as package deal for $300. Call 546-3842

STEREO & CD EQUIPMENT

Tascam Multitrack Recorder 4 track mixing board and recorder. Only 8 months old. Received a 24 track as a gift over break. Will include 1 mic, never been used; 4 professional recording tapes. Paid $550, will sell for $330. Call 546-3842

TRAVEL

Spring Break- Cancun and Nassau from $399. Air, hotel, transfers, parties and more! Organize a small group and earn free trips plus commissions! Call 1-800-Spring Break 1-800-777-4642

EARLY BIRD SPECIAL EUROPE- SUMMER '98
Northeast Dep's- $329 R/T
Caribb/Mexico- $199 R/T
Florida- $79 O/W
Puerto Rico- $99 O/W
Call (800)326-2009
http://www.airhitch.org

Spring Break '98
Jamaica Cancun
Panama City Daytona
Beach Padre Bahamas
CALL FOR FREE INFO PACK
Free Beach Travel 1-800-426-7710

Spring Break '98 Get Going!!!
Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida. Group Discounts & Free Drink Parties! Sell 5 & go free! Book Now!!! Visa/MC/Disc/Amex 1-800-234-7007. http://www.endlesssummertours.com

TRAVEL

Best Hotels, Lowest Prices All Spring Break locations. Florida, Cancun, etc. From $89. Register your group or be our Campus Rep. Inter-campus Programs (800)327-6013 www.icpt.com

Have you waited this long to make Spring Break plans? It's not too late! Choose Sunsplash Tours- Call Michelle 256-8217

USED BOOKS

ENGIN TEXTBOOKS for Chem 111-112, Chem 225, Chem 261-262, Physic 151-152, Engin 191A, ResEc 102 & notebooks. 546-3116

STOP
running around campus plastering flyers

Relax, kick back, and let the Collegian Classifieds work for you.

Take the escalator down to our friendly office TODAY

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthdays or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. (No exceptions. Even numbers as small as 1 or 2 are not allowed.)
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or negative nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the correct signature and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad. Failure to do so will result in the ad not being published. A valid driver's license and the correct signature must be requested on the classified order. Use of false identification in order to purchase a classified is subject to prosecution under M.G.L. Ch. 269 s. 14A.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse any ad for any purpose that does not meet the Collegian's standards or is in violation of the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

NEW Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
AUTO PARTS
CHILDCARE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
COMPUTERS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FURNITURE
GREEK ANNOUCEMENTS
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HEALTH & BEAUTY
HOUSES FOR RENT
HOUSES FOR SALE
HOUSESITTING
JEWELERY
INSTRUCTION
LOST & FOUND
(7 DAYS FREE)
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MISCELLANEOUS FOR RENT
MOTORCYCLES
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
MUSIC LESSONS
MUSICIANS WANTED
PERSONALS
PETS FOR SALE
RESUMES
RIDES WANTED
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SPORTS
STEREO & CD EQUIP.
SUMMER SUBLET
TELEVISIONS FOR SALE
TICKETS
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
TUTORING SERVICES
TUTOR WANTED
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED GENERAL
WORLD WIDE WEB
YARD SALES

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, FEB. 2

Election— First Year Students of Hillel (FYSH) will be holding elections at Hillel House at 7:30 p.m. For more information call 549–1710.

Opening— An exhibit of portraits by former UMass professor Jack Coughlin entitled A Brush With the Blues will have an opening reception from 5–7 p.m. in the Augusta Savage Gallery.

Slide Show — The UMass Outing Club will be presenting a multi–media slide show at 7 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom for anyone interested in Outing Club activities.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 4

Meeting— The UMass Theatre Guild's first meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in Campus Center room 162. For more information contact Linsey Bovaird at 256–4138.

THURSDAY, FEB. 5

Class — Weekly yoga and meditation classes will be held in Burfield Residential Area lounge for the next three thursdays. Classes start at 8 p.m. and will be facilitated by a visiting yoga monk. For more information, call 253–9553.

Speech– — Paul Bonin Rodriguez, Alberto Antonio Araiza and Michael Marinez will be speaking on : The AIDS Pandemic; 3 Queer Latino Artists Share the Evolution of their Work. The event will be held in Campus Center room 803 at 12:30 p.m. For more information, contact the Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

FRIDAY, FEB. 6

Auditions— Auditions for the UMass Theatre Guild's production of Jesus Christ Superstar will be held at 7 p.m. in Campus Center room 101. For more information call Kristina at 545–0415.

SATURDAY, FEB. 7

Auditions— Auditions for the UMass Theatre Guild's production of Jesus Christ Superstar will be held at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. in Campus Center room 101. For more information call Kristina at 545–0415.

NOTICES

PSAs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PSI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Writing — Spectrum Magazine is taking submission for the next edition of the magazine. The deadline is Feb. 12. For more information, call the office at 545–2240 or come by in the Student Union, room 406E.

Need to sell your stuff?
Need to find a roommate?
Want your name in the paper?
Take out an ad in the Collegian!

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Ch.
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 International
15 UMass Academic TV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV–19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN SI
25 Headline News
28 UCTV
27 TBS
28 BET
29 TV Land
30 Univision
31 Comedy Central
32 Cartoon
33 Much Music

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 2, 1998

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	Antiques Roadshow (In Stereo)		American Experience		★★★ Smuggler in Steel (1998)		Connecticut Journal
WFSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV	Cosby	Raymond	George & Leo	Style	Brooklyn South (In Stereo)	News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Cosby	Raymond	George & Leo	Style	Brooklyn South (In Stereo)	News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Funniest Home Videos		20/20		Practice "Yes That Bind"	News	Nightline
WLVI	6		Full House	BoyWorld	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	7th Heaven "Red Tape"		Three		News	Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Sudden-Susan	Sudden-Susan	Caroline	Naked Truth	Dateline (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WTXX		8	Cheers	Mad Abo. You	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	Good News	Sparks (R)	News	Grace Under	Vibe
WVIT		10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Sudden-Susan	Sudden-Susan	Caroline	Naked Truth	Dateline (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	8	11	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	Melrose Place "Mama Mia"		Ally McBeal "Body Language"		News	Simpsons	Deep Space 9
WWLP	9	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Sudden-Susan	Sudden-Susan	Caroline	Naked Truth	Dateline (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WGBY	10	14	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Antiques Roadshow (In Stereo)		American Experience		★★★ Smuggler in Steel (1998)	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	29	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Funniest Home Videos		20/20		Practice "Yes That Bind"	News	Nightline
WSBK	38		Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	Good News	Sparks (R)	News	Cheers	M*A*S*H
WTBS	23		Family Matters	Family Matters	Andy Griffith	Andy Griffith	Elvis on Ice				Elvis on Ice (R)
A&E	42		Northern Exposure		Law & Order		Biography: Nat King Cole		Poirot "The Lost Mine"		Sherlock Holmes Mysteries		Law & Order
CNN	43	23	Worldview		Moneyline	Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		World Today	Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	44	16	Night Stand	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stain's Money	★★★ "Blind Date" (1987, Comedy		Bruce Willis, Kim Basinger.		Comedy-Viewers' Choice	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	45		Wings "Stories"		Gimme Shelter (R)		Wild Discovery		Beyond T. Rex		Ultimate Guide: Elephants (R)	Justice Files	"Behind Bars" (R)
ESPN	46		Up Close	Sportscenter		College Basketball: Villanova at Connecticut (Live)				College Basketball: Texas at Texas A&M (Live)			Sportscenter
LIFE	47		Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"When Husbands Cheat" (1998, Drama) Patricia Kalember			Almost Perfect	Golden Girls
MTV	48		MTV Live (In Stereo)		My So-Called Life (In Stereo)		Music Videos	Beavis-Butt.	All-Time Top 10 (In Stereo)		Road Rules	Daria (R)	Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	49		Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Sanford & Son	Flip Wilson	Julia	I Spy "Cops and Robbers"	Arsenio Hall	Newhart
SCIFI	50		Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Seaquest 2032 (In Stereo)		Sightings (In Stereo)		Forever Knight (In Stereo)		VR.5 "SO" (In Stereo)	Seaquest 2032 (In Stereo)
TLC	52	28	Renovation	Renovation	Home Again	Home Again	Extreme Machines		Human Sexes		Human Sexes	Extreme Machines (R)
TNT	54		Lois & Clark-Superman		Babylon 5 (In Stereo)		WCW Nitro (In Stereo Live)					★½ "Hit Man" (1972)
USA	62		Baywatch "The Red Knights"		Highlander: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger		WWF Raw (In Stereo)		WWF War Zone (In Stereo)	Silk Stalkings (R) (In Stereo)
HBO	301		★½ "Groundhog Day" (1993, Comedy) Bill Murray. 'PG'				★★★ "Romeo & Juliet" (1996, Drama) Leonardo DiCaprio. 'PG-13'		Replacement		★★½ "Oracle of My Heart" (1996) 'R'
MAX	321		★★½ "The Cable Guy" (1996, Comedy) Jim Carrey. 'PG-13'				★★★ "Carmen Jones" (1954, Musical) Harry Belafonte. (In Stereo)				★★★ "A Time to Kill" (1996, Drama) Sandra Bullock. 'R'
SHOW	340		★★½ "The Eighth Day" (1996, Drama) Daniel Auteuil. 'NR'				★★½ "Powder" (1995, Drama) Mary Steenburgen. 'PG-13'				★★★ "Waiting for Guffman" (1996, Comedy) 'R'		"Camoeur 3"

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Fox Trot By Bill Amend

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Non Sequitur By Wiley

Bork By V. D'Agostino

Grix of the Bus Stop By Brendan & Kevin Doherty

Deadpon Taxi By C. Jones

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan 20.–Feb. 18) — Do not let anyone think that you are ill–prepared for what lies ahead. Though you don't show it off, the fact is that you're ready!

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — Today will bring a combination of things that you do and don't want, and it will be up to you to keep what is desirable and discard the rest.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You may receive several offers today that seem attractive to you. Consider more than the financial as you try to decide what to accept.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — Someone in charge will want you to stick around a while longer today, even after your efforts are complete. You contribute a positive energy.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Do not get so far ahead of yourself today that you can not assess your current situation accurately. It is important to mainain a proper perspective.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You must be prepared to alter your plans as you go today. Not everything will work out the way you had anticipated, so you must be flexible.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — It may be difficult for you to rise to the occasion today, but a keen awareness of the past should provide you with the inspiration you need.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Give due consideration to quality control today. It is not enough simply to get things done– you must get them done will, too!

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You can work within the system today so as to maximize your gains while sacrificing a minimum of integrity or independence.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — Messages you receive throughout the day may not be straightforward, but you can get just enough information from them to see you through.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — It very likely will be up to you today to decipher a warning of sorts that comes to you out of the blue and in a manner that is unconventional.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You may have trouble sticking to the rules throughout the entire day. Take care, however; some simply must not be broken at this time.

Quote of the Day

"America is a melting pot; when you bring it to a boil, all the scum rises to the top."
–From the film Down by Law

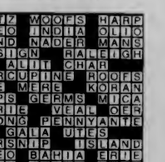
Close to Home By John McPherson

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Turkey Tetrazzini
Grilled Steak Sandwich
DINNER
Chicken Breast with Rice Stuffing
Spaghetti/Italian Sweet Sausage
Italian Tofu Balls & Sauce
Quarter Pound Burger
Quarter Pound American Cheese Burger

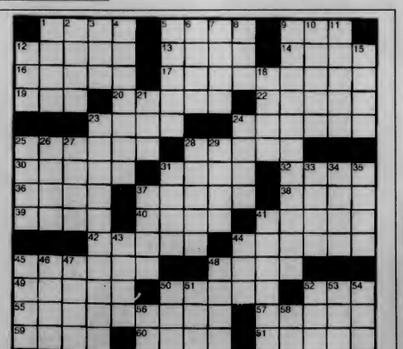
Worcester
LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
American Chop Suey
Spaghetti with Sauce
Macaroni, Lentil & Tomatoes
Grilled Cheese on Branola
DINNER
Chicken Breast With Rice stuffing
Black Eyed Peas with Ham Hocks
Pasta's

Hampshire
LUNCH
Beef
Potatoes
Lettuce
Scrod
DINNER
Hamburger on a Roll
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Tukey Tetrazzini



Berkshire
LUNCH
Turkey Tetrazzini
Hamburger on a Roll
Lentil Chili
DINNER
Chicken Breast with Rice
Shrimp & Sausage Jambalaya
Black eyed Peas w/Ham Hocks
Pasta's

Night Editor: Chris Stamm
Photo Technician: Brian McDermott
Copy Editor: Victoria Groves
Production Supervisor: Matt Wolaver
Production Staff: Jocelyn Barrows, Susan Ely



ACROSS
1 Coarse file
5 Molten rock
9 Test tube's place
12 "Ahoy,—!"
13 Aida of "M*A*S*H"
14 Earthenware jar
16 Choral group
17 Heavy pot
19 Guys
20 Steering mechanisms
22 Type of liu
23 Portend
24 Happenings
25 Indian and Arctic
28 Yens
30 Labors
31 Hosiery mishap
32 Branch
36 Actress/singer Adams
37 Ribs of a leaf
38 Traveled by horseback
39 Caribou or elk
40 Member of the opposition
41 Country estate
42 Uses abrasive paper
44 Strongbox
45 Cowboy's seat
48 Tree trunk
49 Actor Flynn
50 Fortuneteller's deck
52 Caviar, actually
55 Part of the elbow
57 Cool in manner
59 Rice wine
60 Actress Chase
61 Fairy-tale character
62 Craving
63 Happy
64 Sicilian volcano

DOWN
1 Run
2 Envelope abbr
3 Visit
4 Large snakes
5 Dipper
6 Grad
7 Tanks
8 Mandela's org
9 Purple —; marsh herb
10 Famous chipmunk
11 Barnyard sound
12 Pop's mate
15 Beattie and Reinking
18 " — you any wool?"
21 McMahon and Asner
23 Thirteen
24 — Benedict

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

25 Had bills
26 Secret language
27 Pennsylvania port
28 Squadrons
29 Hindu princess
31 Dispatch
33 Zoo animal
34 Not working
35 Paraphernalia
37 Wind indicator
41 Electrical measurement
43 Pal
44 Bill's partner
45 Mix fractions
46 Assortment
47 Male duck
48 Sandwich need
50 Highway fee
51 "Diana" singer
52 Reddish-brown horse
53 A Chaplin
54 Salamander
56 Huge
58 Set fire to

SPORTS weekend

Monday, February 2, 1998 — The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

PGA prognosis: Denying Martin just plain wrong

I'm sick of this. I'm really starting to get tired of all the rigamarolll surrounding Casey Martin and his fight for inclusion on the PGA tour. I've had enough of everybody whining.

It's time for the PGA to do what's right.

Let Martin play.

For weeks now, the Professional Golf Association has been at odds with

Casey Kane

Martin, a young player who's ready to make a name for himself on the pro tour. One problem: The tour won't take him.

The reason? Why it's simple. Martin can't walk the golf course with the rest of the competitors. Can't, not won't. He's not protesting anything or trying to make the game go faster (although that certainly would be nice for the majority of the viewing public).

He just can't. He has a disability that affects the circulation in his leg and forces him to use a cart when playing golf.

Because of this, because he must ride on a cart, the powers that be on the PGA Tour won't let him play. That is ridiculous.

Martin has proven his ability. He has already won an event on the Nike Tour this year. And he has gotten as far as he has because of his ability to play golf, not because of the supposed advantage his disability allows him.

But no. Everyone must walk the course, the PGA says. Everyone must be on equal footing. Well then, let everyone ride in a cart. The main reason people walk between greens and tees is because it allows the home viewer time to see Hale Irwin's drive at No. 15, analyze Ernie Els' chip shot out of the bunker on the 13th hole and adore Tiger Woods for yet another nanosecond.

By allowing Martin to participate in tour events while riding a cart he would get to his next shot faster. Big deal. So he has to wait seven or eight minutes before he can shoot again. Tell him to stash a book or a magazine on his cart. I'm sure waiting around for a couple of minutes will be a small price he is willing to pay for his dream.

And what about the supposed advantage riding in a cart gives him? Golf is about hitting a ball into a little cup (the description's a bit simplistic, I know). It is not about who can walk to their next shot the fastest. It's about drives and putts and irons and woods (Tiger and otherwise). It's not about whether or not somebody ambling on the grass or trucking along at three

Turn to PGA, page 6

Hockey breaks slump for pair of wins

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

NORTH ANDOVER — Leave it to the seniors on the Massachusetts hockey team to step things up in their squad's hour of need.

In a weekend with huge conference implications, the rejuvenated Minutemen came through with a pair of wins. UMass upended Providence College 3–1 on Friday night at the Mullins Center and steamrolled over Merrimack College 6–2 Saturday night at the Volpe Complex in North Andover.

Massachusetts	3
Providence	1

"To be honest with you, the big zero was weighing heavy on the team. We put together two good team efforts this weekend and came out with two wins," Massachusetts coach Joe Mallen said following his team's victory over Merrimack. "We hadn't had a game all year where we had built a lead. It's been a long time since we haven't been in a one or two goal game."

Massachusetts	6
Merrimack	2

Facing the departure of Brad Norton to the Detroit Vipers of the International Hockey League and a key weekend ahead of them, the Minutemen (5–16–2, 2–11–1 Hockey East) were looking for someone to pick up the slack, both on and off the ice.

All eight seniors contributed to the team's sudden resurrection, but the trio of captain Tim Lovell, defenseman Tom O'Connor, and goaltender Brian Regan were the stalwarts on both nights. Lovell enjoyed a six-point weekend (three goals, three assists), while O'Connor added five assists and Regan was spectacular between the pipes for UMass.

"We've been in every game this year, but now we're starting to get the breaks that we weren't getting earlier in the season," Lovell said. "We've had some trouble putting teams away, but tonight Merrimack knew that they were done after the second period. We have some confidence now and we're building momentum, so we're looking forward to next weekend."

On Saturday night Merrimack jumped out to a quick 1–0 lead at the 0:43 mark on a goal by sophomore Sandy Cohen. For a moment you almost had to wonder if the Minutmen were going to suffer a letdown after Friday night's win, but UMass turned things around quickly and lit up Merrimack goalie Cris Classen like a sieve before he was eventually pulled after the second period.

The Minutemen got on the scoreboard just about two minutes later on a goal by senior Dean Campanale. The left winger took a feed from Jeff Blanchard on a two-on-two break and beat Classen to even the game at 1–1.

Freshman Matt Smith then put UMass on top at 9:26 when he corralled a deflected pass and blistered a slap shot past Classen to give the Minutemen a 2–1 lead.

But the high-flying UMass attack wasn't done yet. Senior Mike Gaffney netted his fourth of the year at 17:02, capitalizing on a 5-on-3 power play and bolstering the lead to 3–1.

The second-ranked power play in Hockey East continued to run on all cylinders in the second period. O'Connor threaded a beautiful cross-ice pass to Lovell at the right faceoff circle, who snapped it over Classen to up the advantage to 4–1.

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Goalie Brian Regan gets a hug as a teammate celebrates hockey's second win in a row on Saturday.

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Tim Lovell missed this shot, but it was one of the few times the senior didn't find the back of the net in UMass' two wins this weekend.

Four seniors step up to big challenge

NORTH ANDOVER — There are not words, statements or metaphors to express how huge this past weekend's success was for the Massachusetts hockey team — even from an immensely over-verbose keytapper like myself.

After a week that saw the Minutemen's senior co-captain Brad Norton make the jump to the professional ranks, and with their postseason fate hanging on a tight rope that would make Ringling Bros. Barnum and Bailey proud, UMass (5– 16–2, 2–11–1 in Hockey East) came up with its first conference and home wins of the season.

A 3–1 win over the Friars of Providence Friday night at the Mullins Center, and a 6–2 obliteration of the Warriors of Merrimack at the Volpe Complex on Saturday, heralded the first weekend sweep for the Minutemen since Dec. 6–8, 1996.

And it couldn't have come at a better time for the team.

UMass is now back in the race for the final postseason playoff spot, and stands three points behind Merrimack in the conference standings, with two games in hand. Thanks for the reemergence of the word "win" in the Minuteman vocabulary — in the plural form to boot — can be given to the team, but for the sake of space, four seniors took their play to another level this past weekend.

And it couldn't have come at a better time for them.

With time ticking away on their college careers, forward Tim Lovell, goaltender Brian Regan and defensemen Mike Gaffney and Tom O'Connor formed the four-man nucleus of success that culminated on the Volpe Complex ice surface.

It's been a tough month and a half for Lovell, as he suffered an ankle injury against Princeton (Dec. 12), and has been trying to get back into the flow after missing three starts. Lovell (8 goals, 12 assists on the season) showcased the offensive repertoire the Minuteman faithful have waited for all season, compiling six points on the weekend that included a one–goal–three–assist effort against Merrimack.

This type of performance, with kudos going to his linemates in freshman Jeff Turner (one assist against Merrimack) and senior Dan Juden (two goals against Merrimack), should lock up this week's HE Player of the Week selection for the Norwood native.

Jorma Kansanen

Turn to SENIORS, page 7

UMass flattens Dayton Flyers 85-69

Minutemen look to step into NCAA rankings

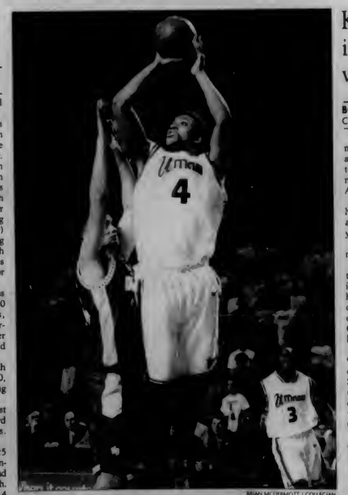
By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

It looks like the Top 25 will be welcoming back an old friend today.

The Massachusetts men's basketball team continued its stretch of hot basketball yesterday by beating a much improved Dayton (14–7, 6–3 A–10) team 85–69 at the William D. Mullins Center.

Massachusetts	85
Dayton	69

UMass dismantled Dayton in the same way it has been beating everyone during its 10–game win streak, with defense, hustle and a killer instinct— one UMass coach Bruiser Flint has been looking for since November. The Minutemen (16–5, 8–0 A–10) are running like a well–oiled machine, and after starting the week ranked No. 29, yesterday's win— combined with Thursday night's dismantling of No. 21 Rhode Island— is expected to propel to Minutemen back into the Top 25 for the first time since December 1996.



But more importantly, at least in the eyes of the UMass camp, they've pulled further away from the Atlantic 10 pack. With an Atlantic 10 title its main focus, Massachusetts remains the only unbeaten team in conference play at 8–0. Yesterday's sold–out Mullins Center crowd — only the second so far this season— started chanting "We want Temple" late in the second half.

The Minutemen head into tomorrow night's game with hated rival Temple as not only the best team in the A–10, but one of the hottest in the country. Momentum, along with a fast–filling bandwagon, is on UMass' side.

"I think right now UMass is probably playing the best basketball of anyone in the A–10," said Dayton forward Ryan Perryman, who led the Flyers with 27 points. "They're a very good team."

Massachusetts left nothing to chance with a Top 25 ranking at its fingertips, racing past Dayton for 40 minutes. The Flyers got as close as nine, 53–44, in the second half before a 10–2 UMass run put Dayton out of reach. Sophomore guard Monty Mack, who finished with 14

Turn to BASKETBALL, page 7

BRIAN MCDONNOTT / COLLEGIAN

Lari Ketner dropped 33 points on Dayton as UMass sent the Flyers home with a 85-69 loss.

Ketner shines in latest win with 33 points

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

Lari Ketner was the invisible man in Massachusetts' gigantic win at Rhode Island Thursday thanks to early foul trouble and a superhuman effort by fellow wide body Ajmal Basit.

So, it was understandable that he wanted to make an early impact against the upstart Dayton Fliers yesterday at the Mullins Center.

Five seconds was what he had in mind.

While Charlton Clarke secured the opening tip, Ketner — celebrating his 21st birthday — separated himself down the court from Flyers center Mark Ashman and threw down an alley–oop pass from Clarke before the Dayton defense knew what hit it.

The dunk, which electrified the 9,493 fans in attendance, was the opening act of the Lari Ketner Show, a 33–point domination (career–high) that raised the games of his teammates and helped lift the Minutemen by the Fliers, 85–69.

"I didn't play that much the other night, so I was real excited," Ketner said. "I thought I'd have to stay in the game to help our team because Dayton has knocked off some good teams this year."

"I just wanted to go out and play

Turn to MEN'S, page 7

UMass surprised by A-10 celler dweller

By Kathleen Rolls
Collegian Staff

Expectations.

Great, grand and gory, they were everywhere Saturday afternoon at the William D. Mullins Center.

The Massachusetts women's basketball team hadn't expected to struggle so diligently against Atlantic 10 cellar dweller Dayton and end up losing, 67–55.

Dayton	65
Massachusetts	55

The Minutewomen hadn't expected to post a mere .385 field goal percentage, including a 5–for–17 afternoon from behind the arc, instead of their respectable .432 in conference.

They hadn't expected Dayton's shiny new scoring spark in junior Kizzy Dawson, who more than doubled her scoring average. Nor had the Minutewomen been prepared for the versatility of the 6–foot–1 sophomore Jenelle Ristau, who also doubled her offensive output with a repertoire of treys and second chance shots from inside the paint.

It was to be a game of matched offense, but pure inspiration decided the ending. From the start, UMass just didn't have any sort of touch around the rim, an offense that was effective nor any input in controlling the upbeat tempo of the game.

"They [Dayton] have been struggling, but they are one of the most talented teams in the conference," Massachusetts coach Joonie O'Brien said. "But if we shoot the ball poorly, we're going to do poorly."

Dayton's young talent was duly recognized by UMass but the Flyers confidence and ability to control an experienced team like UMass was unexpected. While in the early minutes of the first half it seemed that the two teams would evenly battle for 40 minutes, missed shots and misfortune immediately cast a dark shadow on the Minutewomen.

Massachusetts point guard Subriya Mitchell stole the ball and raced to the other end to convert the easy two, while Allison MacFarland drained a three as the Minutewomen were off to a quick start. But Dayton kept the pace as Ristau connected for two three–pointers and Dawson found herself drifting alone along the baseline as UMass crowded the inside in an effort to win rebounds. But Dawson didn't miss and the Dayton guards continued to outwit the Minutewomen with their outside shooting and trapping defense.

"[They] took a lot of time off the shot clock to get the pass through," UMass guard Kathy Coyner said, "In the first half

Turn to WOMEN'S, page 6

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVIII Issue 5 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Tuesday, February 3, 1998

These five are still alive

Pearl Jam returns with Yield, thier most cohesive and rewarding album yet (see Arts & Living, page 5)

Let's get ready to rumble!

Tyrone Weeks and the Massachusetts men's basketball team take on the Temple Owls tonight at the William D. Mullin's Center (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Arab trading part of peace agreement

BAHR EL GHAZAL, Sudan — At the end of a long journey, a caravan of camels loaded with flour, garish fabrics and clanking pots comes to a dusty halt at the point of an automatic rifle. Arab trader exchanges greetings with armed rebel, then displays his travel pass, goods list and wares at a makeshift checkpoint on a front that separates Sudan's warring factions.

Everything in order, the northerner is waved through to a busy market where southerners trade cattle for imported goods.

The routine seems remarkable given that Arab Muslims from Sudan's north and black Christians from the south have been at war for three of the past four decades.

But in defiance of the national government in Khartoum, Arab tribesmen of the Rizeigat and Misiriyah clans signed peace agreements in 1991 with southern Dinka chiefs covering broad stretches of rebel-controlled Bahr El Ghazal province.

NATION

Will winter ever end?

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. — Balmy weather in February made it seem like spring was not far off. But the final word on that was due to come yesterday morning when Punxsutawney Phil emerged from his lair. If Phil succeeded in not seeing his shadow at sunrise, then spring is right around the corner.

But the whiskered meteorologist has seen no shadow just 12 times in 111 years, leaving some locals to hope he'll lie if things turn out otherwise.

"He can say he doesn't see his shadow," Marty Dunlap of Greenville said. "Or, it's six more weeks of winter."

Records from the National Climactic Data Center in Asheville, N.C., show Phil's accuracy rate since 1980 to be about 59 percent. But this could be a no-shadow year, since an average February day in Punxsutawney hovers around 26 degrees — about half of Sunday's balmy 50.

Folks take the rotund critter seriously in Punxsutawney, 80 miles northeast of Pittsburgh.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 60 LOW: 40	HIGH: 55 LOW: 40	HIGH: 53 LOW: 45

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News.....page 2
Sports .....page 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Raccoons spotted, rabies alert issued on UM campus

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

Alarmed about the number sick raccoons being reported to the University of Massachusetts Police Department, public safety officials issued an alert to members of the University.

Since last Thursday, UMass Police have responded to more than 10 reports of sick or rabid raccoons wandering around campus during the day.

"Public safety cautions all members of the campus community not to approach any wild animal especially raccoons," the alert stated.

"The police have been receiving reports of individuals attempting to approach raccoons who were displaying signs of distemper. These animals are out in the daytime and appear to be unafraid of humans," the alert said.

According to the UMass police logs, the sick raccoons have been sighted at numerous locations around campus: the Franklin Dining Commons, Fine Arts Center, Gunness Lab, Textbook Annex, South College, Tillson Farm Road and Campus Center Way.

At least three raccoons have been dispatched by the responding police officer according to the Thursday, January 29 and Monday, February 2 police logs.

"We are very concerned about the number of raccoons being reported who appear sick. We strongly recommend that anyone who sees a raccoon acting strange contact public safety immediately," UMass Chief of Police John Luippold said.

Raccoons who are nocturnal do not normally approach people and stay away from populated areas.

Environmental Health and Safety (EH&S) officials removed a raccoon from MacKimmie Residence Hall lobby on Thursday afternoon.

EH&S officials were not available for comment.

According to a web site which answers frequently asked questions (www.willow.ncfes.umn.edu/raccoon/table.htm) on rabies, humans can obtain rabies from a raccoon or any other mammal through bites, scratches, saliva and brain or spinal cord tissues which may enter a wound.

Any contact between individuals and the raccoons should be reported immediately to University Health Services.

Anyone who sees a raccoon which appears to be sick should stay away from the animal and contact the Public Safety department immediately at 545–2121.

Saudis back threat, stall on use of bases

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Saudi Arabia backed the United States yesterday in warning Iraq of "grave consequences" if weapons sites were not opened to U.N. inspectors. But leaders of the oil-rich monarchy held back on assuring use of its military bases for launching an attack in the event diplomacy failed.

Crown Prince Abdallah, filling in for ailing King Fahd, met with Secretary of State Madeleine Albright for more than six hours in a lush desert retreat and saw "eye to eye" with her on Iraq's responsibility to permit unconditional inspections, she said afterward.

"I had excellent discussions with the crown prince," Albright told reporters, ticking off their shared views about the blocked inspections.

"It is essential for Saddam Hussein to reverse his course and allow full and unfettered access to UNSCOM (the U.N. special commission) to any place it wishes to go, including the presidential and sensitive sites," she said.

However, she sidestepped whether Abdallah had agreed to permit U.S. F-16 fighter bombers to take off from Saudi bases to strike at the sites or other targets.

"I did lay out some of the military issues for the crown prince," she said. "He took them all on board. He wanted to consult with members of his government. Based on my excellent discussions with the crown prince, I have full trust and confidence in the Saudi government."

Abdallah and the foreign minister, Prince Saud, assured Albright they

Turn to SAUDI ARABIA page 3

DANIELLE GILARDI / COLLEGIAN

Stop and smell the orchids

Kate Russillo, an English major, takes time out to enjoy a bit of summer in the Durfee Conservatory yesterday afternoon.

Death caused by heart condition

A rare congenital heart condition in the right coronary artery was listed as the cause of death for Anthony S. Nzlegbunam, 28, a University of Massachusetts graduate student who died last February, according to a press release issued by the State Medical Examiner yesterday.

According to UMass Chief of Police John Luippold, the heart disease caused the artery to narrow under stressful conditions such as exertion stated the press release.

Nzlegbunam, of Nigeria, collapsed and died in parking lot 71 at approximately 11 a.m. on Feb. 22, 1997. He was given CPR by medical personnel from the Amherst Fire Department and taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton where he was pronounced dead at the scene.

He entered the UMass political science department in the fall of 1996 and was also an intern at the Daily Hampshire Gazette in Northampton.

Lewinsky denies affair to prosecutors

Monica said she never had sexual relations with Pres. in statement

By Pete Yost
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Whitewater prosecutors got copies yesterday of the sworn statements that President Clinton and Monica Lewinsky gave in the Paula Jones sexual harassment lawsuit — statements at odds with Ms. Lewinsky's tape-recorded talk of a sexual relationship with Clinton.

Both the president and the former White House intern denied in the statements — a Clinton deposition and a Lewinsky affidavit — that they had had sexual relations, according to sources familiar with the documents.

However, Ms. Lewinsky spoke of such relations in tape recordings made by her one-time friend Linda Tripp. Those recordings, turned over to Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr, sparked the current controversy.

Clinton's deposition, taken by Mrs. Jones' lawyers last month, and Ms. Lewinsky's affidavit were turned over by Mrs. Jones' legal team to the federal grand jury hearing evidence in the case, a source close to the lawsuit said.

Meanwhile, with Ms. Lewinsky refusing to cooperate, prosecutors are trying to gather evidence of an alleged presidential affair and cover-up from a Clinton administration that has a history of sometimes failing to produce key evidence promptly.

AP PHOTO

President Clinton

Clinton administration lawyers hope to meet with prosecutors this week over how to respond to subpoenas in the Lewinsky controversy. White House officials are publicly pledging cooperation while privately complaining that Starr's requests are too broad.

Starr said Monday that "we've been focused hard on some of the questions and issues," but he declined to elaborate.

"We're continuing to move forward," Starr told CNN.

On one issue, the Secret Service already is raising concerns about the kinds of questions that Starr might want to ask agents. And a senior Clinton adviser says that, although no final decision has been made, administration lawyers are prepared to fight any effort by Starr to subpoena Secret Service agents.

A federal judge agreed with the Secret Service last week that complying with subpoenas in Mrs. Jones' lawsuit might expose critical information on how the agency functions.

The Secret Service's position is less likely to prevail in the face of a Whitewater grand jury subpoena. But contesting the matter in the courts could seriously delay the investigation, said John Barrett, a former prosecutor in the six-year Iran-Contra investigation.

Delay would be nothing new for the Whitewater investigation. The White House fought for a year to keep some notes of its lawyers out of the hands of investigators.

And Vincent Foster's lawyer is still seeking Supreme Court review of a case in which the attorney may be compelled to turn over to prosecutors notes the lawyer took during a conversation with Foster shortly before his death.

In addition to court battles, the investigation has been slowed by the late turnover of important documents:

• Subpoenaed in late 1993, Hillary Rodham Clinton's law firm billing

Turn to CLINTON page 2

DANIELLE GILARDI / COLLEGIAN

Simple silhouette

A sunny Monday afternoon at the Clark Memorial behind Van Meter Residence Hall.

Students sought for employment by University police force

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

For students who are interested in becoming a University of Massachusetts police officer, recruiting has begun.

Applications may be picked up at the University employment office or at the table sponsored by the Public Safety Department on the Campus Center concourse.

Police officers will be available thru Friday in the concourse to provide more information for those who are interested in becoming a part of the UMass Police Force. Applications must be turned in by Feb. 20.

On April 4th applicants are required to take a written test, as well as a physical fitness test in June.

Upon successful completion of both the written and physical tests, applicants will be interviewed by a panel composed of students, staff and University officials.

Following the interview, all applicants will be ranked according to their scores and performance.

The UMass Public Safety Department will hire police officers for the next two years from the list in order of rank.

Once hired, trainees must participate in a 24–week training session at the Municipal Police Officers Academy.

After the Academy, recruits will be assigned to a field training officer at UMass and evaluated for three months.

Following the three month evaluation, the new officers will be assigned to a shift.

UMass Chief of Police John Luippold said the department offers a competitive salary against other police departments in the area as well as full benefit packages.

In addition, for officers interested in continuing their education, tuition waivers are offered.

So far over 200 applicants have applied.

Currently the UMass police force has 43 officers and two positions open.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
Jan. 30
A minor accident occurred on Hasbrouck Road.
A minor accident occurred on University Drive.

Animal Complaint
Jan. 29
A raccoon displaying signs of distemper was reported near the Franklin Dining Common. The animal was captured near the Fine Arts Center and taken to Pest Control and dispatched by Officer.
A sick raccoon was reported near Gunness Lab. Officers searched the area but were unable to locate animal.
A sick raccoon was reported under a vehicle near the Textbook Annex. Police officers searched the area but were unable to locate the animal.
A sick raccoon was reported near South College, no animal was found.
A raccoon was reported in the lobby of MacKimmie Residence Hall. The animal was removed by Environmental Health and Safety.
Jan. 30
A sick raccoon was dispatched by an Officer on Campus Center Way.
A sick raccoon was dispatched by an Officer on Tillson Farm Road.

Annoying Behavior
Jan. 28
An unauthorized person was reported trying to enter John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.
Jan. 31
An unwanted guest was removed form Cance Residence Hall.
An individual was trying to climb outside of Van Meter Residence Hall.

Disturbance
Jan. 31
Amherst Police Department was notified of a large fight in progress on Sunset Avenue.
A large party was dispersed on the second floor of Van Meter Residence Hall.

Fraud
Jan. 28
An individual reported books billed to his credit card from the Textbook Annex.

Health and Safety Hazard
Jan. 30
Environmental Health and Safety checked a burning odor in Marcus Hall.

Larceny
Jan. 29
A telephone was reported stolen from an office in Thompson Hall.
A individual from Kennedy Residence Hall reported his television stolen.
A locker was broken into in Boyden Gym. Contents were stolen.
A book bag and contents was stolen from the Textbook Annex.
Jan. 30
A backpack was reported stolen from the Textbook Annex.
Feb. 1
An individual reported his bicycle stolen from Stockbridge Road. Estimated value $365.

Motor Vehicle Theft
Jan. 29
A vehicle was reported stolen from parking lot 26 on Governors Drive.

Suspicious Person/Activity
Jan. 31
Gregg Nelson, 21, of 46 South Rd., Hampden, was arrested on Windmill Lane for trespassing.

Warrant Service
Jan. 28
Tyrone Freeman, 35, of 360 Mill Valley Apartments, Amherst, was arrested at the Textbook Annex with a warrant.
Jan. 29
Malo L. Brown, 24, of 117 Balboa Dr., Springfield was arrested on a warrant.

Vandalism
Jan. 28
An individual from McNamara Residence Hall reported malicious damage to his computer and CD player.
Jan. 29
Individuals throwing snowballs at the Old Forestry Building on Stockbridge Road broke a window.
Jan. 30
Swastika graffiti was removed from a door in Brett Residence Hall.
Jan. 31
A glass window in the front door of Cashin Residence Hall was broken.
Four vehicles parked on Thatcher Way were damaged.
A bottle was thrown through the window of a vehicle parked on Washington Road.
The bathroom in Hampden Munchies Store was vandalized.
Three vehicles in Parking Lot 33 on University Drive were damaged.
Two vehicles in Parking Lot 22 on University Drive were damaged.
Feb. 1
Pornographic drawings on a wall in Thoreau Residence Hall were removed.

Clinton

continued from page 1

records were found in the White House family residence and produced to prosecutors in 1996.

• Two years into the Whitewater investigation, the White House turned over to investigators a memo indicating the first lady was behind the firings in the White House travel office.

• Foster's notebook referring to Mrs. Clinton's role in the travel office affair was not turned over to Whitewater prosecutors until a year after his death.

• A note by Foster was pulled from the bottom of his briefcase four days after the Justice Department was barred by presidential aides from searching Foster's office.

"When you have the immaculate appearance of Mrs. Clinton's billing records and you have the Justice Department being kept away from Foster's office by the White House, no one can second-guess a prosecutor for being suspicious," said Joseph diGenova, a former independent counsel as well and U.S. attorney.

Ms. Lewinsky's lawyer said she would be going back to California this week to visit her father. That could take a bit of the steam out of the story in Washington, where Democrats already are saying hopefully that public attention seems to be fading.

The American people are "fed up and they've given up" trying to sort out "revelations and counter-revelations...and inaccuracies and inconsistencies" in the story, said Senate Democratic Leader Tom Daschle.

The country's attention is on the budget and wants Congress "to complete the work of the president," Daschle said.

In California, meanwhile, the UCLA Daily Bruin reported that a college student who worked as a Pentagon intern had said Ms. Lewinsky told him last summer she had a sexual relationship with Clinton. Dennis Lytton, a political science major at the University of California, Los Angeles, said he briefly dated Ms. Lewinsky after they met at the Pentagon last July.

DANIELLE GILARDI / COLLEGIAN

Shadowy figure
The infamous W.E.B. Du Bois library looms in the distance, framed by trees near Orchard Hill.

The Collegian is currently accepting applications for the following editorial positions:

Developing Nations Editor
Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender Issues Editor
Jewish Affairs Editor
Multicultural Affairs Editor

Experience with writing and reporting with concentration in the applicable community is preferred for these paid staff positions.

To get involved in any other aspect of the Collegian newsroom, stop by 113 Campus Center and speak to Managing Editor Laura Stock or the editor of the desk you'd like to write for, Sunday–Thursday, noon–5 p.m.

HURRY!

This is your last Chance to appear in this year's yearbook!

All this week!
Schedule a sitting
(800) 836-0558

GET YOUR SENIOR INDEX YEARBOOK PHOTO NOW!

Campus Center Rm. 177-178

Subscribe to:
The Boston Globe

@ 40% off the newsstand price!!!

To get The Boston Globe delivered to your dorm or office, please fill out this form and drop in campus mail with payment to:

John Riley
College News Service
UMASS Amherst, Campus Center Hotel
Amherst, MA 01035

Please check desired service:

Spring Term
7 Days MON-SUN	☐ $37.35
6 Days MON-SAT	☐ $22.50
5 Days MON-FRI	☐ $19.20
SUNDAY ONLY	☐ $14.85

The above prices reflect subscriptions starting on 2/9/98

Name _____ Campus Phone _____
Campus Address _____
If you are paying by credit card, please complete: ☐ VISA ☐ MC ☐ AMEX ☐ DISCOVER
Card Number _____ Exp. Date _____
Cardholder Name _____ Signature _____

The Boston Globe
Have you seen the Globe Today?

DANIELLE GILARDI / COLLEGIAN

This end up
Windsor, a 7-year-old English sheep dog rolls around in the snow on campus yesterday.

Albright negotiating for use of Saudi bases

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Secretary of State Madeleine Albright said yesterday Saudi Arabia sees "eye to eye" with the U.S. position on inspecting Iraq's weapon sites, but apparently hasn't agreed to allow American warplanes to use Saudi air bases if U.S. military action is taken.

Reiterating Clinton administration demands that Iraq rid itself of chemical and biological weapons, Albright said Saudi Arabia and other countries in the region are in danger of attacks from Iraq. But after talks with Saudi officials in a desert retreat, she sidestepped whether the Saudis had approved use of air bases here for American warplanes.

"If we had gotten a yes, she would have said so," said a senior U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Saudi leaders will weigh the issue of U.S. use of air bases here while Albright is in Bahrain Monday before going to Egypt then home on Tuesday.

In Moscow, a Russian news agency reported Sunday that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein is ready to receive the chief U.N. weapons inspector and name up to eight presidential sites for inspection. A spokesman for President Boris Yeltsin said Russian Foreign Minister Yevgeny Primakov called Yeltsin to tell him of Saddam's offer, ITAR-Tass reported.

But hours later, Iraq denied there was any agreement.

Albright said Primakov discussed a similar proposal with her in Madrid when they met last week, but she was skeptical of the offer and it fell far short of U.S. demand for unconditional inspections, said the U.S. official.

Twice declaring herself still "skeptical" of Hussein's intentions, Albright said today that it was up to Richard Butler, chairman of the U.N. commission on inspections, to decide "whether he sees any reason" to go Baghdad.

President Clinton, meanwhile, called Yeltsin to discuss "the serious situation concerning Iraq's noncompliance" with U.N. mandates, a White House official said. "President Clinton stressed the need for unity among Security Council members."

Clinton agreed with Yeltsin on the desirability of a diplomatic solution "but said Saddam's continued defiance and refusal to allow adequate (U.N.) inspections were unacceptable," the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Albright conferred with Saudi officials after a two-hour, five-course luncheon in a royal tent 60 miles from the Saudi capital.

Saudi officials said in a statement they agree with "the necessity of total and unconditional compliance by the Iraqi government" in permitting unfettered inspections. If diplomacy fails it "would lead to grave consequences whose responsibility would lie exclusively on the Iraq government," the statement said. Earlier, Albright insisted the Arab world does not oppose the hard-line U.S. stand against Iraq.

"That's not true," she said, arriving from Kuwait for talks with Crown Prince Abdallah and Prince Saud, the foreign minister. "That's really not so."

saudi arabia

continued from page 1

would continue the discussion through diplomatic channels. But a senior U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said, "If we had gotten a yes she would have said so" at the news conference.

On her six-day trip, which ends today with talks in Bahrain and Egypt, Albright has sought European and Arab backing for a U.S. military attack as a last option, with mixed results.

The Saudi government issued a statement agreeing with the United States on "the necessity of total and unconditional compliance" by Iraq on inspections and on exhausting diplomatic means to resolve the crisis. Failure, the statement said, "would lead to grave consequences whose responsibilities would lie exclusively on the Iraqi regime."

But elsewhere in the region, opposition was growing to any U.S. military strike, including from Jordan and Turkey as Arab leaders sought to launch new mediation efforts with Iraq.

The Arab League said that Secretary-General Esmat Abdel-Meguid would try to intervene with Saddam, who has been persona non grata at the League since his 1990 invasion of Kuwait.

Meanwhile, Turkey said Foreign Minister Ismail Cem would travel to the Iraqi capital later this week. "We don't want our children to be under the threat of weapons of mass destruction," Cem said. "But we are also trying to prevent a new war near us."

Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat also dispatched an aide to Baghdad with a letter for Saddam, and Egyptian newspapers reported that Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak sent a rare message late Sunday to the Iraqi leader urging restraint.

Russia also has been engaged in eleventh-hour diplomacy, hoping to prevent a U.S. strike.

Pickax killer's plea rejected; Tucker to be executed today

By Michael Holmes
Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas — A state board unanimously rejected Karla Faye Tucker's bid for clemency yesterday, leaving only the Supreme Court and the governor with the power to halt the pickax killer's scheduled execution today.

Despite pleas of mercy, including from Pope John Paul II, the gruesome nature of her crime left the Board of Pardons and Paroles with no qualms, the chairman said. They turned down Ms. Tucker 16-0, with two members abstaining.

"There is no question as to their vote. There is no question as to how they feel," said chairman Victor Rodriguez. "I, myself, have absolutely no quarrel with the decision to deny Ms. Tucker's request on all fronts."

Ms. Tucker, 38, a former teen-age prostitute who found religion in prison, would be the first woman executed in Texas since the Civil War. Her execution is scheduled for Tuesday at 6 p.m. CST. In her appeal before the Supreme Court, Ms. Tucker's attorneys contend the commutation process is flawed and unconstitutional in part because of the consistent lack of favorable rulings.

All 76 requests since 1993 have been rejected, including 16 last year when the state executed a record 37 convicted killers. "Texas has no mercy," said David Botsford, Ms. Tucker's lawyer. "The clemency process in this state is a farce." He added that Ms. Tucker was still hopeful that the Supreme Court would hear her appeal.

"She's upbeat," he said.

Rodriguez said neither her gender nor her newfound religion played a role in the board's decision. The board also rejected her request for a 60- or 90-day reprieve to allow courts time to consider her challenge to the state's clemency process.

Botsford said Ms. Tucker made a videotape in prison Saturday night, asking Bush for a one-time, 30-day stay of execution — the only action a Texas governor may take independently in death penalty cases.

Bush said he won't make a decision until after the Supreme Court has ruled.

Ms. Tucker was sentenced to die for bludgeoning a man and woman to death with a companion in 1983. The last woman executed in Texas was Chipita Rodriguez, who was hung in 1863. The last woman executed in the United States was Velma Barfield in North Carolina in 1984.

Preparations for her execution continued Monday, with Ms. Tucker being flown from the female death row at a prison in Gatesville to Huntsville, 175 miles away, where executions are carried out.

ONE LOVE. ONE HEART. ONE GREAT PARTY!!!
IT'S THAT TIME OF YEAR WHEN THOUSANDS OF STUDENTS COME TO JAMAICA TO FEEL ALRIGHT - FOR AN UNBELIEVABLE PRICE!!!

PACKAGE INCLUDES:
• Round-Trip Airfare
• 7 Nights Hotel Accommodations
• Round-Trip Airport & Hotel Transfers
• Free Welcome, Beach & Evening Parties
• Free Admission to Night Clubs
• Discounts on Restaurants, Water Sports & Ride Excursions
• Resort Packages Available from $450
• Professional On-Site Tour Reps
• Complete Weekly Activities Program Offering Optional Sunset Cruise, Booze Cruise, Toga Party & More!
• Free Booze Party Pack

SUN SPLASH TOURS
1 800-426-7710

STUDENT TRAVEL SERVICES
1 800-648-4849

Price is per person based on quad occupancy. NY 9W/Wash. Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus, Nashville, New Orleans, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh departures. Other cities may qualify for reduction or require surcharge. US and Jamaica departure taxes (currently $97) and $6 handling charge additional. Add $30 for 3/6 - 3/98 bookings. Rates increase $30 on 12/15/97. Peak-week surcharges/off-week discounts may apply. Restrictions and cancellation penalties apply. Limited availability. Subject to change without notice. Call for full details on hotel selection and availability.

UMASS DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

Something for Everyone

Workshops offered evenings, daytime, weekends, off and on campus

Nearly 100 noncredit workshops
Including:
• Mask Making
• Network Marketing
• Web Page Design
• Chocolate
• Songwriting
• Art Therapy
• Retirement Planning
• Genealogy
• UFOs
• Playback Theatre
• Bartending
• EMT Training

Spring semester workshops begin February 9

For a free course catalog, call 413-545-0107 or e-mail contined@admin.umass.edu

www.umass.edu/contined/

a quality education at an affordable price

• DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION •
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

Miss the bus?
Why Bother?

Next time, shop at the University Store between classes. Weíre right in the Campus Center, so it wonít take three hours to get here.

UStore
· We're not like a mall - - We're better.

The University Store
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST
University Store
In the UMass Campus Center
Hours:
M-F 9 to 5 Sat. 11 to 4
(413) 545 - 2619
AMEX, MC, Visa, Discover and UCard cheerfully accepted!

— The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian —

Lashing out in desperation

Hussein Ibish

The United States is preparing to once again lash out against the people of Iraq in a desperate effort to salvage American imperial control of the Middle East.

Following the Gulf War in 1991, the United States sought to create a new order in the Middle East, a "Pax Americana," in which most of the Arab states along with Israel and Turkey would be united under American dominion. The aim of this new alliance was to be the consolidation of a stable U.S. imperium in the Middle East and a concerted stance against Iran, leading eventually to the overthrowing of the Islamic Republic and the discrediting of Islamist politics throughout the Middle East.

Over the past seven years, however, each and every one of the major policies that were supposed to create this new order have failed, with the sole exception of a continuing vast U.S. military build-up in the Gulf region.

The pacification of the Palestinians and the normalization of the Israeli role in the Middle East which were to be accomplished by the Oslo peace accords are dead in the water. So is the goal of integrating the regional economies under U.S. and Israeli leadership. The goal of bringing Syria and Lebanon into the U.S. sphere by means of an Israeli/Syrian peace accord, which would also pacify south Lebanon and, most importantly, split Iran from Syria, its principle ally in the Arab World, remains a distant fantasy.

Meanwhile, Saddam Hussein remains firmly in power in Iraq, in spite of every American effort to unseat him. And the policy of isolating Iran as an international pariah has only succeeded in isolating the United States.

These policies were based on a coherent and integrated analysis advanced by the military-intelligence complex and the pro-Israel establishment. However, this analysis, based as it was on an unsophisticated understanding of Middle East realities and a slavish devotion to the ambitions of Israel, produced policies which have been a fiasco for U.S. interests. As a result, the U.S. position in the Middle East has steadily deteriorated, even since the last "Iraq crisis" three months ago.

Witness the contemptuous behavior of extremist Israeli Prime Minister Bibi Netanyahu, who came to Washington to shmooze with quasi-Fascist Christian fundamentalists and spit in the face of American government requests that he honor Israel's treaty obligations to the Palestinians.

The policy melt-down has also been exacerbated by the success of reformist Iranian President Khatami's international "charm offensive," which has made the demonization of Iran even more threadbare than ever. The U.S. has even failed to enforce its own declared but illegal policy of sanctions on foreign corporations, such as Total of France, which are doing a booming trade with Iran, and American oil companies are lobbying hard not to be left out of lucrative emerging oil markets linked to Iran.

This has been coupled with a wide-ranging diplomatic restructuring of the Middle East, as the United States' Arab dependencies have recently started to abandon the absurdly ineffective American non-policies, and consequently are forging their own approaches to Iran, Syria, and each other.

There has even been growing talk of how to reintegrate Iraq into the region as governments increasingly recognize that all efforts to unseat Saddam Hussein are likely to fail.

Iraq has also been extremely effective in demonstrating to the world the genocidal nature of the sanctions which have murdered over a million innocent Iraqis.

The Iraqis have recently exposed the U.N. "weapons inspectors" as including U.S. military intelligence officers and teams comprised almost exclusively of American and British "inspectors." Chief "inspector" Richard Butler voluntarily came out of the closet as a propagandist and war monger by claiming without evidence that Iraq had enough biological weapons to "blow away Tel Aviv," a comment transparently designed to incite war hysteria in the west and which created panic in Israel out of thin air.

The whole "weapons inspection" regime, with its fabricated claims of Iraqi exotic weapons programs and evil intentions, has been exposed for the pathetic fraud that it is.

The across-the-board collapse of U.S. Mid-East policy is so profound at this stage that this country really has only one place to turn short of the long-overdue revision of policy so bitterly opposed by the national security and the pro-Israel establishments — the rule of the gun. The bombing of Iraq is designed to terrorize the Arab World, remind everyone of the fading lessons of 1991, and insist that no matter how preposterous its policies are, the United States still has the ability to murder and rampage at will.

The obvious hope is that many craven Arab leaders will be cowed into line. The even more desperate hope is that this will finally cause the overthrow of Saddam Hussein, or that somehow he will be murdered by a U.S. bomb. Sure.

Instead, this bombing will be seen for what it is, the lashing out of a failed policy based on a phony analysis which refuses to recognize its own bankruptcy. The backlash is likely to be swift and profound.

Hussein Ibish is a UMass graduate student.

Time to set limits

Yesterday's science fiction is today's reality. Aldous Huxley dreamed of cloned humans in "Brave New World," and today we can clone... sheep and cows. OK, we haven't cloned humans yet, but it is completely conceivable given our current technology.

Cloning has gotten a bad rap primarily because of the possibility of cloning humans. Fewer people object to cloning sheep than humans — after all, who can really tell a bunch of sheep apart, anyway?

Alexis Pushkar

But the negative image of cloning humans persists in our culture. The basic idea in most people's minds goes something like this: late one dark and stormy night Dr. Evil was busy working in his lab. He was just preparing to mix the chemicals when he heard a noise behind him. With a great crash the door to the inner room was ripped off its hinges and one hundred copies of Adolf Hitler marched out in perfect military formation. Dr. Evil sensed an apocalypse was near...

People assume that because we could clone humans, some ego-driven scientist would want to. Although a few — truly mad, in my opinion, — scientists have those aspirations, most scientists understand the implications of tinkering with the complexity of nature. They are the ones who remind us there is a hole in the ozone and depleting the swordfish populations through long-line fishing will eventually render them extinct.

The arguments for cloning humans are weak, and currently, interest in cloning is focused on using animals to benefit humans. But there is a definite fear among many people that someday someone will think that making a human clone is a good idea.

Two prevailing ideas have been used to justify the prospect of human cloning. Some people believe an acceptable reason to clone a human is to provide an organ for someone who is sick. The second idea is the human improvement idea — creating better people and a better species by cloning.

Both of these ideas are horrific.

The first idea of creating a child to provide a sick child with a kidney or bone marrow is nauseating at best. It is one thing to have a second child if the first child is sick in the hopes that the sibling will be able to provide the first child with bone marrow, but it's quite another to clone a child for the sole purpose that he or she will duplicate something for someone who is already alive.

The clone's whole life would be shaped by an identity crisis. Most people have enough problems with the "Who am I?" question without other issues. Would the clone emulate the sibling or rebel? More importantly, would anyone have wanted the cloned child if he/she had not been needed for a specific purpose? What happens to the cloned child after the transplant?

The other idea — improving the human species — is also a really bad idea. I have heard people say that it would be a good idea to clone an Einstein or a Beethoven for each generation, although individuals who have been dead for a long time cannot be cloned.

Do we really need to clone Bill Gates and Bill Clinton to ensure the success of humanity? Will their talents be of any use two hundred years from now? Do you know? Does anyone know?

The types of people we would want to clone are the geniuses of our time or the egoists. Geniuses live on the fringes of society and in many ways there is a fine line between being a genius and being insane. In another era Hemingway might have committed suicide when he was 20. Instead of later in life. Could we dictate to our clone what he/she could and could not do regarding his/her own life?

If we could clone Chopin, do we really need him? We have geniuses on the piano, although they may wear tight dresses and play spread eagle in concerts and sing about rape. Will the next century value Tori Amos more than Chopin?

Leaving humans aside, there are definite biological issues with cloning animals. The strength of any species, humans and cows alike, comes from the diversity of genes that allow the most fit individuals to survive in the given environment. Cloning cannot be widespread because a species could be decimated if all its members were alike and none could survive a disease or a disaster.

Despite said reservations, I still believe that what the scientists here at the University of Massachusetts have done by pioneering animal cloning techniques is great. I think the medical implications of harvesting human organs from pigs are tremendous and exciting, and creating milk with proteins or drugs in it could be useful to world health.

This knowledge that we now possess and the new techniques that we have to clone children from adults instead of embryos cannot be unlearned. We can — and must — only move forward. The crucial question is whether we, as a species, can use our diversity of thought to decide what should be done with the knowledge we possess, and prevent a Dr. Evil apocalypse.

Alexis Pushkar is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Don't believe the hype!

To the editor:

You ask "what hype is that?" Well, I refer to the "hype" as the idea that politicians and moral values can not mix. In Thursday's (Jan. 29) edition, I read C. Taylor Conner's opinion article. Conner makes a good point that, "The reason Clinton should go down if he's guilty is because he lied illegally." However, Conner then devalues the severity of the issue that may have caused Clinton to lie illegally — that he was unfaithful.

The idea that his infidelity has no bearing on his guilt is ridiculous. I can not believe that if these allegations are true (which they appear to be) his wife and daughter see his cheating as the lesser of the two wrongs. Conner then goes to the ole' history card, saying that leaders have always had affairs and always will. So according to Conner's way of thinking, we are to assume our leaders will be dishonest cheats, and look away, like there is nothing wrong.

I for one do not accept that idea. If we fail to hold our officials to the same or higher standards than we hold our own spouses and relations to, we are asking for trouble. In an age of divorce and single parents, we need a positive influence from our leaders, not the image of a broken marriage and family.

The concept that it is a "whacked-out" idea that we have honest and moral leaders is a very dangerous way of thinking. In today's very liberal world, where many wrongs are accepted and chalked-up to "tolerance," we as a society can not afford to give any further ground to the immoral. We tolerate everything from delinquent children who commit adult crimes to doctors who kill babies, so why should infidelity be any different? We must not forget that these are acts that should be looked at as wrong and dishonest. We as a society can not be afraid to take the "high ground" and look down on those who choose to commit these wrongs.

With every passing year the level of morality in this country drops more and more. We must remember that morals are not restricted to the beliefs of one religious group or another. They are commonly held ideas of what is right and wrong. It is not okay to cheat on your spouse. If we continue to listen to certain members of the press and people like C. Taylor Conner we are headed for a future of moral chaos. The fact that our elected leader has chosen to relax his morals does not mean we need to do the same.

Erik Mitchell
Belchertown

Upcoming topics:

The Ed/Op page will be focusing on the possible U.S. attack on Iraq as events develop. We need to hear your views on the subject.

We also want to run a Point/Counterpoint feature next week on the recent cloning of twin genetically-engineered cows by UMass faculty members. Tell us why this is or isn't a good thing.

Editorials should be 600–800 words long. They can be submitted to Tamar Carroll or Dan Bodah at the Collegian offices, by fax (545–1592), or by email (letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu).

Attention all interested writers:

There will be a meeting Thursday night at 7 p.m. for prospective columnists in the Collegian offices at 113 Campus Center Basement. We are especially looking for writers who can have a specialization or background, such as campus/local news, multicultural issues, international politics, science, etc...

Let our page be as broad and varied as the University is by coming down and getting involved. Please bring a sample column, approximately 600–800 words long, with you.

Call Dan Bodah or Tamar Carroll at 545–1491 for more information.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor-in-Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Co-Editor
Tamar Carroll Editorial/Opinion Co-Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Leigh Faulkner News Editor
Lauren Kosky Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor
Joeseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
David Parmenter Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Anmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Pearl Jam's return to greatness

Pearl Jam gets back to basics with their most mature effort to date.

COURTESY ANTON CORBIJN

By Marty Keane
Collegian Staff

YIELD
Pearl Jam
Epic

The biggest-selling American rock group of the '90s, Pearl Jam, has returned with Yield (Epic), an album filled with all their trademark stylistic trappings, only re-kindled with renewed vigor and enthusiasm. Perhaps they should have named this album Vitality.

Having alienated a good deal of their fans over the course of two trying and often frustrating years — tour troubles, a self-imposed media blackout — many in their once-obsessive fanbase have been dissuaded by the lesser likes of Matchbox 20 and Live.

However, lest anyone question Pearl Jam's commitment to their craft — think again.

Whereas their previous two efforts (Vitalogy and the superb No Code) both saw the band expanding their sonic palette, Yield is a considerably more straightforward effort beginning to end. It's dominated by punchy guitars and lyrics that are abstract on paper but within the songs' context, the shaded and multi-textured meanings slowly become unpeeled listen-by-listen.

In a similar vein as '70s "rawk" gods Led Zeppelin, Pearl Jam have chosen — however subtly — to embrace the music and spirituality of the East and India as they continually mature and move away from the anthemic arena- ready tunes that permeate their early catalog. Lead single "Given To Fly" pillages Jimmy Page's signature riff from "Going To California," but in a twisted, interpretive sort of way and "Wishlist" is simply an understated (read: restrained) delight.

Of course there's also a few silly, off-handed instrumentals a la Vitalogy's "Hey Foxymophandlemama, That's Me" and "Aye Davanita" that help give Yield its endearingly amateurish charm: one being a song notated only with a red dot played by drummer Jack Irons.

Thematically, Pearl Jam render themselves laudable through assured-ness and a wickedly skewed sense of humor — as always one of their defining characteristics. Nowhere is Vedder's savage wit more evident then on the raucous opener, "Brain of J" in which he ponders "Who's got the brain of JFK...What's it mean to us now?" Not since the overt politicism of Vs.' "W.M.A." has Vedder aimed his lyrical arrow straight to the heart.

Turn to Pearl, page 6

Spiceworld plays to young fans

New film a disturbing mixture of short skirts and no attitude

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Staff

SPICEWORLD
Directed by Bob Spiers
with The Spice Girls, Richard E. Grant, Mark McKinney playing at Hampshire Six Theaters

The Spice Girls have forgotten what made them popular and it will cost them dearly. Long before there were dolls and Pepsi commercials, there were reports of hotel rooms being trashed, bellhops being sexually harassed and alcohol — lots and lots of alcohol.

It was this rock and roll lifestyle that made The Spice Girls infamous. Not Rolling Stones infamous, but infamous nonetheless. The near-legendary topless spread of "Ginger" Spice in the British tabloids helped with that as well, and made her thus known as "Sexy Spice." What made The Spice Girls great was their cheeky indifference to all things proper, all the while shouting "Girl Power."

Luckily no one ever asked what "Girl Power" meant. If they did, we might have been better prepared for Spiceworld. I had always assumed that "Girl Power" had something to do with living life to its fullest, as any male rock and roller would, unapologetically. Grabbing the Prince of Wales' butt and charming the socks off Nelson Mandela are cute antics for a 30-second blurb on "Entertainment Tonight," but if you're going to ask people to sit through approximately an hour and a half feature film, you'd better have something more than cute antics.

This is the basic failure of Spiceworld — the ribald antics the Spice Girls are known for in reality are missing from the film. The film sanitizes the Spice Girls for their younger fans, for the hoards of screaming girls that compose their fan base. The film follows the girls for several days before their first live concert at The Royal Albert Hall in London in a wacky and surreal manner, which suggests early Beatles. Spiceworld uses these techniques to emphasize the importance of friendship... and short skirts.

The aspect of Spiceworld that is disturbing is the short skirts and the lack of attitude that goes with them. The Spice Girls' attempt at being wholesome is weak and pathetic. It doesn't need to be said that no one is calling Ginger "Sexy Spice" in Spiceworld. They have not been marketed as wholesome in the past few years, and picturing them as role- models for children is laughable. If little girls across the world soon start turning to their mothers in malls and saying, "Mommy, I want to dress like a streetwalker, but you should know that friendship is really important to me...," we shouldn't look far for the cause.

Director Bob Spiers should have been able to do better. After directing the decadence drenched Brit sit-com hit, "Absolutely Fabulous," a Spice Girls' vehicle seems like the next logical step. But instead of swilling vodka, popping pills and bedding bell hops, Spiceworld seems resigned to play homily to the Saturday morning set.

Even the points that come up in Spiceworld that shouldn't be awful are. Richard E. Grant (Withnail and I, The Player) who plays the Girls' stressed-out manager, has proven that he can thrive in almost any film

Turn to SPICE, page 6

The Spice Girls fail to live up to the Beatles' A Hard Days Night in their movie debut.

COURTESY ALEX BAILEY

VOTE YES FEB. 3rd

A Viable Downtown Makes A Better Amherst
Yes to Parking Compromises!

Polls open 2pm - 8pm

Students Vote in Hamden Dinning Hall

FEB 3rd

Vote YES

Paid Political Advertisement

STAY CONNECTED WITH THE COLLEGIAN

Great Service! Great Products!
Nutrition Express
"For Your Fastest Gains"
Supplements, Personal Training, Nutrition Programs

Designer Whey Protein	$26
Creatine 400g	$29
Met Rx 20 ct.	$38
Diet Fuel	$21
Androstenedione!

Fat Burners, Food Bars, & More
Ask for Garrett
253-1850

Amherst Ballet Centre
celebrating 26 years of professional ballet training
Therese Brady Donohue, Director
29 Strong Street, Amherst, MA 01002
OFFERING 10-WK. ADULT COURSES: (Starting February 3rd)
Beginner Ballet Wed. 5:30 - 6:30
Intermediate Ballet Tues. &/ or Thurs. 6:30 - 8:00
Call 549-1555

spring break fever
Need a break?
Cheap tickets. Great advice. More people.
Ft. Lauderdale $178
Cancun $304
Orlando $178
Los Angeles $355
Council Travel
44 Main Street
Amherst
(413) 256-1261

CANCUN BAHAMAS
CANCUN
5 FREE BREAKFASTS
5 FREE DINNERS
24 HOURS OF FREE DRINKS
BAHAMAS
DRINK FREE!
21 HOURS OF FREE DRINKS!
USA SPRING BREAK

Anyone interested in Broadcasting ie: News, Entertainment, Sports, Etc.
COME CHECK US OUT!
WMUA 91.1 F.M. NEWS STAFF
105 Campus Center (next to collegian)
THERE IS A MEETING ON WED. FEB. 4 @ 6:30PM IN THE SUFFOLK ROOM IN THE STUDENT UNION
ALL NEW INTERESTED PEOPLE ARE WELCOME TO ATTEND
Ask For Lizzie Birch or call 545-2876

For Fast Easy Delivery Call 256-4110
La Cucina di PINOCCHIO of Amherst 30 Boltwood
#1 Delivery in Town
COLLEGE BASKETBALL SPECIALS!!!
Back by popular demand: Specials running Monday thru Thursday!
1 Large Cheese Pizza $6.95
PLUS 10 Free Buffalo Wings
Please Add $1.50 for Toppings and $3.00 for Double Toppings
Any Two Calzones
$7.00+TAX
Delivery Only. Not Valid in Restaraunt
Must Mention Ad When Ordering Offer Expires 5/31/98

Battle cry for hip hop community

This column is intended as a battle cry for the hip hop community. I mean real hip hop, not candy coated tracks that are more mindless than the plots for Laverne and Shirley. You will find this column devoid of "MCs" who boast of how fat there pockets are, but couldn't deliver a decent rhyme if they read it off of a cue card. I am offering this column to MCs, DJs, graffiti artists and anyone else who offers intelligence and heart to the hip hop culture. If you are still confused, think of it this way: I prefer Company Flow to the Firm.

Adam Dlugacz

In this debut column, I will begin by reviewing some mix tapes. If you are unsure of what a mix tape is, please skip the rest of this column and wait for the LOX review some time next week.

While I prefer the East coast to the West (cold weather makes for better pizza), there is no denying that the fleet junkies and the Invisible Scratch Pickles have shown us how the West was won. While DJ Rectangle is not associated with either of those crews, I was forced to wear oven mitts while purchasing his tape "Deadly Needles." The Scratch-A- Tonic side has one of the greatest intros in which Rectangle clubs up 30 seconds of just about every hip hop hit that dropped in '97. He throws on enough to get your taste buds dripping, but cuts it off before you have flashbacks of the other three million times you heard the track. The Nightclub side is for the end of the home runs; he's a player who is better then the rest. Recent years have shown Touch freestyling on his tapes and he begins this one with a joint effort between him and Doo Wop, but the one on the flipside where they re-do "Phone Tap" is much better. The first two songs "I Put In Work" by Gang Starr and "New York" by Rakim, quickly remind you why this guy has released 55 tapes. True to form he throws on a lot of tracks that you won't find here, but I guess you'll have to get the tape to find out more. Doo Wop holds his own with a little bit more of a commercial side. The highlight of Doo Wop's side is the KRS/Common freestyle and the DMX blend. The opening samples from Scarface just reinforce how quickly this tape will cut you. "Say hello to my little friend."

For all the DJs out there Q-Tip just released an EP on an independent label under the alias Young Rider. In next week's column I will give you a list of some more underground releases.

Quote of the week: "I treat MCs like they want to be treated and most of them are acting like they want to be defeated." Comment from a freestyle session on Hot 97.

Adam Dlugacz is a Collegian columnist.

COURTESY CAMPUS ACTIVITIES

Grant Hill's long lost brother?

Comedian Kivi Rogers kicks off the "Something Every Friday" series at the Student Union ballroom this Friday at 8 p.m.

■ pearl

continued from page 5

Interesting then that Yield is much more a collaborative effort than anything else they've ever done. While Vedder co-writes the majority of tracks, guitarist Stone Gossard and bassist Jeff Ament both contribute solid tracks, including "No Way" and "Pilate" respectively.

The real star of Yield though is lead guitarist Mike McCready who not only checks in with his tightest playing, but showcases his emerging skills as a tunesmith. On the Monster-era R.E.M. gem "Do The Evolution," Eddie Vedder triumphantly proclaims "Yeh...it's evolution baby!" over McCready's meaty guitar line, clearly echoing the exultant mood of his bandmates. While a bit too incoherent at times("MFC"), Yield is still Pearl Jam's richest and most rewarding album, as well as their most human.

While they may be maturing in a fairly conventional manner, this Seattle quartet has yet to run out of ways to re- state old truths, a feat unmatched by any of their contemporaries. A-

■ spice

continued from page 5

— look at Hudson Hawk. Grant, a talented man who should have been able to bring some amount of humor to his character, fails because there is nothing for his character to do but "be stressed" and there are only so many ways he can make a face like he just crapped himself. When a character doesn't have anything interesting to say or do, facial tics only go so far. friend."

Mark McKinney (former member of Canadian comedy troupe, "The Kids in the Hall," also seen on "Saturday Night Light") seems to be in the same situation as Grant — once seemingly talented — in this film, desperate and reaching. McKinney and Grant share one of the only amusing moments of the film: McKinney is pitching an idea for a Spice Girls' movie and here's the pitch: the Girls are late for their concert at the Royal Albert Hall and they get into all sorts of adventures along the way. What follows is a sequence notiag more than a mixed-up homage of the best post-modern bits of Scream and The Player.

What borders on the interesting are the numerous cameos that litter the film. Spiceworld's best bits are seeing Elvis Costello, Meatloaf and Jennifer Saunders pop up like they're In a modern It's A Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World. Mad, indeed. D-

Salsa Mundo brings the music

By Niko Price
Associated Press

SALSA MUNDO
Various
Candela

Salsa music was born as a mix of styles — Cuban, Puerto Rican, Colombian. But Dutch? Israeli? Finnish?

Going where few salsa compilations have dared (or wanted?) to go before, Salsa Mundo brings together music from at least 10 countries that have little to do with Latin America. The result is surprisingly good.

It seems that musicians from other countries who pick up salsa tend to stick to the traditional, and the sound is fine, old-time Cuban fire — even if the lyrics are in French. Highlights include Saltamania's "Rampa Rumba" (sung in Finnish and Spanish); "Africa, Havana, Paris" by the Congolese and U.S. group Makina Loca; Haitian Beethuva Obas' "Si (oh!)" — although this sounds as much like bossa nova as salsa; Swedish group Hot Salsa's "Mi Rumba Esta Buena" and the classic "Paquita" by Congolese Tabu Ley Rochereau.

Tracks like these eclipse better-known world salsa bands on the disc, such as France's Fatal Mambo, Japan's Orquesta del Sol and Martinique's Malavoi.

MUSIC FROM THE COFFEE LANDS
Various
Putumayo

The concept may be a bit forced, but you can't argue with the result.

This compilation of music from coffee-producing countries is a disjointed blend. Most of the tracks, however, are hot.

From the opening tres and flute of Peruvian Julian Avalos' "Guajira Bonita" to the final strains of Congolese Ricardo Lemvo's "La Milonga de Ricardo en Cha-cha-cha," this disc is certainly aromatic. Check out "Wasuze Otya?" from Ugandan Samite, "Below the Bassline" from Jamaican Ernest Ranglin and "Esta Noche" from Mexican roqueros Cafe Tacuba.

C'EST LA VIE
Henri Dikongue
Tinder

With a velvety voice and mystical instrumentation, Cameroon's Henri Dikongue has hit on something with his hovering ballads and down-tempo salsa numbers. This is addictive music, richly arranged and beautifully produced.

The guitar work is intricate and understated, and the violin gives some of the songs a melancholy, almost Eastern European feel. The hit is the swinging, salsa-influenced "Ndol'asu," but the rest of the disc is certainly worthy as well. "Ndotu" and "C'est La Vie" are haunting ballads; "Na Teleye Owa Ngea" and "Francoise" are easy, sophisticated upbeat tracks; and "Bulu Bo Windi Tenge" is a gorgeous harmonization that sounds like gospel.

BULGARIAN VOICES
Ray Lema and Professor Stefanov
Tinder Gold

This is true world music — Congolese funkmaster Ray Lema teams up with Bulgarians Professor Stefanov and choral group L'Ensemble Pirin. The harmonies are truly magical, and combined with Lema's trademark growl the result is astounding.

This was released in 1992 by a French label and is available now for the first time in the United States. This is the kind of endeavor that could have been disastrous but somehow worked. The songs alternate between more African-influenced music and more Bulgarian-influenced tunes. The songs that go heavy on the African tend to be better.

"Ponjit" In a Felalike trance; "Kamulang" is an African funk enhanced by the piercing, impossible choral arrangements behind it. "Oi Doulou Ide Charena Kolitza" sounds like church music except for the "hiccup" shrieks of the chorus and the electric bassline. The one miss is an updated version of Lema's classic "Iyolela," enhanced with Bulgarian horns and voices. It lacks the fire of the original.

ROMANTICA
Various
Putumayo

Just in time for Valentine's Day is a collection of love songs from around the world. There's obviously a lot of material to choose from, and overall the people at Putumayo have done well for themselves.

The disc begins with the stunning "Toda Sexta-Feira" from Brazilian Belo Velloso, whose voice is reason enough to buy the disc. The voice of Congolese Lokua Kanza also soars over the song "Salle," and American Louise Taylor has a sweet, mid-tempo hit in "Your Face."

"Ay Madre!" from Brazilian group Fortuna sounds like a cross between Arab pop and opera, with flamenco guitar thrown in for good measure. Scotland's Dougie MacLean sings the uplifting ballad "She Will Find Me" and American Toshi Reagon recorded an original number for the disc called "Love and Affection" that could be a hit.

"I stopped to pick up today's Daily Collegian and missed my plane. It was worth it!"

Winter SALE
downtown Amherst

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM BOSTON
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $145 $264
PARIS $219 $403
MADRID $228 $419
ROME $259 $477
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations.
Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave., NY NY 10017
212-986-8420
800-272-9676
in NYC

REACHING FOR DIVERSITY
A CONFERENCE FOR MINORITIES INTERESTED IN LAW
Join us to find out how to make aspirations of a legal career a reality for minorities. If you are a high school or college student interested in someday becoming an attorney, or you provide career guidance to young people, join us for this important event and help us reach for greater diversity in the legal profession.
The Value of Diversity in the Classroom:
A panel presentation by law professors
Can/Should I Become an Attorney?
A panel discussion with current lawyers and law students
Saturday
Feb. 7, 1998
11a.m. to 3p.m.
Western New England College
School of Law
1215 Wilbraham Road
Springfield, Massachusetts
Lunch will be provided free of charge.
Pre-registration is preferred.
Call (413) 782-1406
Western New England College
School of Law
Springfield, Massachusetts

■ basketball

continued from page 10

pep in what could be the final chapter for the most influential ambassador in the history of sport.

Bring in the best. The Best of the Best. The Showdown of all Showdowns. Bring in Jordan, Nique, Spud, Kobe. Invite Walker, Harold Miner, Dee Brown, and Larry Nance back into the spotlight. Walker would maybe have an unfair advantage over the rest of the field because of his hair, but wouldn't it be great to see them all back together for one more storybook moment? Eric Roberts could even host the gala. It's just an idea.

Really though, the Two-Ball competition isn't the answer. And the NBA is going to have to think of something if this experiment doesn't work. Do you hold on for a couple of years to see if the fans catch on or do you go back to your old ways and take a chink in the armor known as respect? And if you do that, how will the fans accept it? I'm sure officials have thought of a ball-back plan to Two-Ball, but I think they took a step in the wrong direction by instituting it on All-Star Saturday. Hey, change is good, but only for the better. I guess only time will tell.

As for the All-Star Game itself, of course it's virtually impossible to make everybody happy in the selection process, but I couldn't agree more with the addition of Kobe Bryant to the squad. Coming out of high school, everybody heard the reviews on the Lower Merion standout. And I'd guess that Kobe heard it, also.

He was called "mediocre at best" by a majority of the big- name blue ribbon critics across the nation.

A year and a half later, what wasn't given much of a shot from the get-go, is slated to start for the Western Conference in the All-Star Game.

At the halfway mark in the season, I suppose I'm due to dish out my mid-season predictions. Well, I think the MVP voting will be the closest it has been in years. No one has really made a lasting impression on anybody, so by default, I guess Jordan will chalk up another one. Seattle in seven over Los Toros is still looking pretty sweet at this juncture. For sure, George Karl is chuckin' in his boots after getting Vin Baker for the Reign Man. Jordan-versus Hersey Hawkins could present some matchup problems for the Sonics, but this Sonic team is like no other. It's hard to imagine a Michael Jordan-led team not going out as winners, but that could be the case.

Brett Mauser is a Collegian staff member.

■ gym

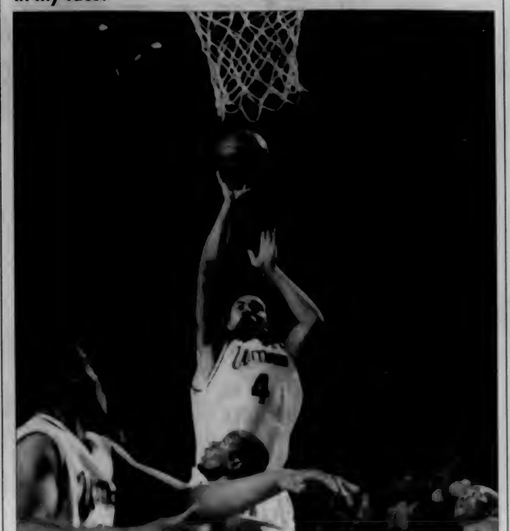
continued from page 10

9.50.

As far as the team status goes, Coach Roy Johnson was never overly concerned. "I've been saying all along that it is early in the season, and we will be getting better with every meet," Johnson said.

In fairness, the Minutemen captured this last meet handily despite competing without the services of Jeff LaVaille and freshman standout Andy Leis.



Nonetheless the disappointments were beginning to mount this season, and the team members were relieved to be back in the win column.

"This victory will help bring us back together," UMass gymnast Jonathan Hershey said. "We need to regain our momentum, and the only way to do that is to win competitions."

Next up for the Minutemen is a date with arch-rival Temple in Philadelphia this Friday night. While, UMass is always ready for battle with the Owls, Coach Johnson stresses not to over emphasize an individual match.

"It is very important to compete well against everybody. Temple is a very tough opponent and I'm sure the guys will be psyched up to perform well against them," Johnson said.

In my face!

BRIAN MOE/MASS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Lari Ketner gets a hand in his face as he goes up for the shot.

UM men swim to win; hold winning streak at 9

By Jamie Jee
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team extended their winning streak to nine games Saturday afternoon as they defily defeated Rutgers 150-92.

The Minutemen went into Piscataway, N.J. with a perfect 8-0 record and had no intention of allowing the Scarlet Knights into the meet at any point.

"Fortunately, we could manage to stay relaxed for this meet," coach Russ Yarworth said. "We were able to back off a little and make some key substitutions."

As UMass has done in each contest this year, someone decided to step up and close the door early. This time it was senior Sean Anderson, as he extended his own streak to remain undefeated in the 50 free this season.

Anderson also chipped in for the 400 freestyle relay team and helped propel them to victory over a solid Rutger collaboration. Anderson also owns the fastest times in the Atlantic 10 Conference for the 50 with a mark of 20.84 and for the 100 free at 46.31.

Anderson is not alone on the conference leader board, however, as he is joined by a couple of his teammates. Also representing the Minutemen are freshman Billy Brown who tops the 200 breast list with a 2:03.20, junior B.J. Brannan with a 4:35.67 500 free, and sophomore Ed Hefferon who holds the three-meter diving standard at 314.95.

"We swam pretty well," Yarworth said. "Although we weren't as peaked as we were against UConn, we were still able to have a nice road trip."

UMass was able to ease up somewhat after jumping out to a quick lead, taking several events. This gave the Minutemen the opportunity to mix up the lineup in places and do some interesting things pertinent to their A-10 Championship run.

"I was really pleased with Geoff Gear as well," Yarworth said. "He came back and performed well in the 500, putting together a real good effort."

Gear, a junior and three-time All-America had been recuperating after an injury set him back to his training.

The team is now looking forward to this Saturday's meet against conference rival Fordham. UMass will host the Rams at Joseph R. Rogers, Jr. Pool as they wrap up their dual meet season at noon before heading into the Atlantic 10 Championships.

■ women swim

continued from page 10

UMass has one final regular season dual meet to go, against Fordham on Saturday afternoon at 1 p.m. in what will be Senior Day at Rodgers Pool for the Minutewomen seniors.

"Fordham has some extremely talented swimmers. They have definitely had some good years recruiting," said Newcomb. "It should be a good meet, and it will also be a big weekend for our seniors as well."

Following the Fordham meet, UMass will then have a 12 day hiatus before the Atlantic-10 Championships, which will be held in Buffalo on Feb. 19-21. Newcomb feels that the layoff should be beneficial to his team when the A-10's roll around.

"Everyone has done a great job week in and week out, and I'll be looking to see them swimming well once they get some rest."

The Collegian transcends all boundaries of the physical world. We exist because you exist, yet none of us exist at all. Figure that out!

PGA battles court; Martin states issue

By Jeff Barnard
Associated Press

EUGENE, Ore. — Casey Martin limped to court yesterday seeking to play on the professional golf tour the only way he can — using a cart.

Martin, afflicted with a rare circulatory disorder that makes walking long distances painful, has already generated an outpouring of support with his Nike "I Can" TV ad and a Capitol Hill news conference last week where he won the backing of former presidential candidate Bob Dole.

"From a public opinion standpoint, it's a loser," PGA Tour commissioner Tim Finchem acknowledged before heading into court. "This is a very unfortunate system we find ourselves in, having to litigate whether a fellow we think a great deal of can play the game."

Martin, hobbling on his frail right leg, was mobbed by camera crews and supporters as he walked into court. "Who am I, Michael Jackson?" he said.

Martin is using the Americans with Disabilities Act as the basis of his lawsuit seeking to ride a cart instead of walk on the PGA Tour. The tour contends that walking is a fundamental part of the game and that allowing Martin to ride a cart creates an unlevel playing field.

Finchem said if there was a way to accommodate Martin without giving him an advantage over other golfers, he would, but "you can't write different rules and make everything the same...We're looking at the fairness of the sport."

A federal magistrate began hearing three to 10 days worth of testimony yesterday, with a lineup of witnesses expected to include Martin, his orthopedic surgeon, his father and his golfing coaches. One of the first witnesses for the PGA Tour will be Ken Venturi, who walked to victory in the 1964 U.S. Open despite almost collapsing from heat exhaustion. Videotaped testimony from golfing greats Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus also will be shown. Mindful of the support for Martin, PGA Tour lawyer William Maledon has said he will not contest that Martin is disabled. "In no way, shape or form is the PGA Tour going to in any way attack Casey Martin," Maledon said. "The real issue here is whether the PGA Tour can establish the rules for its competitions."

Martin, 25, was born with Klippel-Trenaunay-Weber Syndrome. He does not have the vein that runs along the bone in his lower right leg. Instead, blood flows back to his heart through a jumble of veins near the surface. The condition makes it painful for him to walk and could ultimately lead to amputation.

Last week, Martin won the first round in the legal battle, when U.S. Magistrate Thomas Coffin denied the PGA Tour's motion for summary judgment — in effect a request to throw the case out of court because the disabilities act does not apply to the case. Coffin ruled the PGA Tour is a commercial enterprise, not a private club that would be exempt from the act. He also found that golf courses used for tournaments by the PGA Tour are places of "public accommodation" under the act, even inside the ropes that exclude spectators.

Martin, a member of Stanford's 1994 NCAA championship team and a former teammate of Tiger Woods, rode the course in the PGA Tour qualifying tournament last year after getting a temporary injunction from Coffin, and missed making the tour by two shots. The tour didn't challenge the injunction pending the outcome of the trial when the second-tier Nike Tour started last month and Martin won the Lakeland (Fla.) Classic before missing the cut in his next event.

Any ruling against the PGA Tour will not affect the four major tournaments in golf: the Masters, U.S. Open, British Open and PGA Championship, all outside the jurisdiction of the tour.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Leah Muiero lead the UMass women's ski team this past weekend at the Brown/UConn Tournament.

COED NAKED COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS
"We do it all night long"

amc
Hampshire 6 •584-7550
Hampshire Mall
Great Expectations (R)
Today at (5:40@2.50) 8:30
Wag the Dog (R)
Today at (5:30@2.50) 8:20
Spice World (PG)
Today at (5:50@2.50) 8:30
Titanic (PG 13)
Today at (4:20@2.50) 8:10
Good Will Hunting (R)
Today at (5:20@2.50) 8:10
Deep Rising (R)
Today at (5:40@2.50) 8:00
Special Engagement
as Pictures on Computer
$2.50 (That Like) Show Daily
Mt. Farms 4 •584 9153
Mt. Farms Mall
Phantoms (R)
Today at 5:50
Half Baked (R)
Today at (5:20@2.50) 8:30
Tomorrow Never Dies (PG13)
Today at (5:30@2.50)
Fallen (R)
Today at (5:10@2.50) 8:30
Desperate Measures (R)
Today at (5:40@2.50) 8:30
As Good As It Gets (PG13)
Today at (5:30@2.50) 8:20

BACK TO SCHOOL SPECIAL
Pentium 166MMX Complete System Starting at $999
with 32MB Ram & 14" Color Monitor
• Custom Configured Systems
• Upgrades and Components
• Network Cards starting at $26
• $5 off any Network Card with this ad
Looking For a Computer?
Green Leaf Computers
413 . 256 . 6110

come join the fun at:
REGENCY HAIRSTYLISTS
253-9526

HEY!
Ski or Ride
just $21
Bus + Lift Ticket Included
Daily Bus Leaves: UMass 9:55 am
Amherst Center 10:00 am
Arrive: Mt. Tom 10:35 am
Leave: Mt.Tom 4:30 pm
Arrive: UMass 5:10 pm
Mt. TOM
Peter Pan

Wednesday Night
Chad LaMarsh
Returns
"Boston's Best Acoustic Rocker"
Playing your Favorite Cover Songs
Weekly Drink Specials
20oz. Miller Lite Drafts $1.00
Bucket of Rocks
4 12oz. Rolling Rock $5.00
Plus A free T-Shirt
22 oz. Rolling Rock $2.00
THE PUB
Over 40 Hand Crafted Beers
Smoking Section 10-1
15 East Pleasant Street • Amherst

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

TALKING ACROSS DIFFERENCES: EXPLORING COMMON GROUND & CONFLICT (2 Credits, Spring Semester) Your experience is needed! Participate in a 10 week Intergroup Dialogue course. Sections offered: 1) WHITE WOMEN & WOMEN OF COLOR, 2) PEOPLE OF COLOR & WHITE PEOPLE, 3) PEOPLE OF LATINO HERITAGE & PEOPLE OF AFRICAN HERITAGE. Issues discussed: Race relations on college campuses, Race & culture, Interracial dating, Affirmative Action, Immigration, etc. Enroll now at the Residential Academic Program Office, 5th floor-JQA or 159 Hills South.

PERFORMING ARTS DIVISION offers Group and Private Instruction in Music, Theater, and Dance. PAD is located in the New Continuing Ed Bldg. on the corner of Fearing and N. Pleasant Streets, rooms #208 and 210. Into call (413)545-0519

APARTMENT FOR RENT

3rd Floor 2 bedroom apartment available Feb 1. Heat/Hot Water + Cooking Gas included. $815/month. Please contact Andrew Newcomb. 549-0600

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a usad car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Pontiac Bonneville Great condition, many new parts. Must sell. $1200. Call anytime. 546-6342

88 Chevy Cavaliar Good running car. Very reliable. Has new brakes, tires, radiator. Replaced engine and rebuilt alternator about 2 years ago. Selling for $1200 ($300 below NADA). Call 546-3842

91 VW Golf GT Standard, 93k, A/C. Excellent condition. $5500. 549-0892

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795

CHILDCARE

Childcare Needed for bright, easy-going 13 month old girl in our home for 8-9 hours a week. Close to campus. 548-7061

COMPUTERS

7200/90 Power Mac 2 SCSI hard drives, 32 MB RAM, 4 MB VRAM, 17 inch 1705 Apple Monitor. $1500. Contact Jay @ 545-0989 or evenings @ 253-3692.

EMPLOYMENT

UMass Annual Fund is hiring. Earn $5.50 + bonuses. Flexible evening hours. Gain computer experience. Come to the Memorial Hall Basement and apply today!

Swahili Speaker Needed for minor translation. We can discuss payment. 596-6778. Leave message.

EMPLOYMENT

Receptionist Part-time

Elaine Health and Rehab. is seeking a Receptionist to assist us 3:30-8pm, Mon-Fri. Excellent interpersonal skills, as well as computer data entry experience are required. The successful candidate will be dependable, possess a pleasant phone manner and be able to work in a fast paced environment. Interested candidates may either complete application on premises, or may send resumes to:

JoAnn Caronugh
Payroll & H.R Coordinator
Elaine Health and Rehab.
Hadley, MA 01035
(413) 584-5057
EOE/AA m/f/d/v.

Activist JOBS FOR THE ENVIRONMENT

Work with the Sierra Club on an urgent endangered species campaign. Part-time available. Great for students. $50-$75 a day. Call Kate 256-6434

Now hiring part-time workers in Downtown Amherst $7 an hour. Applicants must be outgoing. Call Sean 253-0583

Looking for Mary Poppins 8-12 hours per week. Mon, Wed, Fri afternoons. Occasional weekend hours. References, experience, car a must. 549-7788

NEW STUDENTS PROGRAM seeks extroverts from '98-'00 Class with 2.5+ GPA. May 27 to July 18. Salary, room, meals, health coverage. Apply 307 Admissions Center. Deadline Feb 6

EMPLOYMENT

CRUISE SHIP & LAND-TOUR JOBS Discover how to work in exotic locations, meet fun people, while earning a living in these exciting industries! For more information: 517-324-3092 Ext C50012

FOR RENT

SUMMER RENTALS CAPE COD GROUP Summer Rentels- Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Diamond Real Estate (508)477-1900

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742

FOR SALE

TI-85 Calculator For Sale Only used for one semester. $80. Call 546-4662

FURNITURE

Futon Twin size, brand new. $100. (413)256-3527, 5-5547

HEALTH & BEAUTY

Acupuncture and Herbal Madicine National Board Certified Licensed. 549-6542

MISCELLANEOUS

FREE T-SHIRT + $1000 Credit Card fundraisers for fraternities, sororities & groups. Any campus organization can raise up to $1000 by earning a whopping $5.00/VISA application. Call 1-800-932-0528 ext 65. Qualified callers receive FREE T-SHIRT.

MUSICIANS

Epiphone Accoustic Electric Guitar. Excellent condition. Great sound and great pickup- with HARD CASE. $400. Call Dru 549-7540

MUSICIANS WANTED

No haircutting involved, just solid acapella singing. Call Daniel 865-7581

PERSONALS

"Take a chance on me!"- ABBA Free love and valentines at www.studentadvantage.com/qpid

ROOM FOR RENT

ATTENTION JEWISH STUDENTS

Spaces available in Living Community of Hillel House. Call Jason for details. 549-1710

Rooms For Rent Very close to campus. Females Only. $1200/semester. Call 549-7146 or (508)655-5922.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Looking for roommate to share three bedroom apartment. Call 549-5596.

SERVICES

Purchasing a usad car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

STEREO & CD EQUIP

Car Stereo Equipment Kenwood Detach Face- 1 year old, paid $350. 1 amp 100x2, paid $150. 1 amp 100x4, paid $100. 1 pair Pioneer 6x9 speakers, 100w, paid $110. Whole system sounds great, needs nothing. Selling as package deal for $300. Call 546-3842.

STEREO & CD EQUIP

Tascam Multitrack Recorder 4 track mixing board and recorder. Only 6 months old. Received a 24 track as a gift over break. Will include: 1 mic, never been used; 4 professional recording tapes. Paid $550, will sell for $330. Call 546-3842

TRAVEL

Spring Break- Cancun and Nassau from $399. Air, hotel, transfers, parties and more! Organize a small group and earn free trips plus commissions! Call 1-800-Spring Break. 1-800-777-4642

Spring Break '98 Get Going!!! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida. Group Discounts & Free Drink Parties! Sell 5 & go free! Book Now!!! Visa/MC/Disc/Amex 1-800-234-7007. http://www.endlesssummertours.com

Best Hotels, Lowest Prices All Spring Break locations: Florida, Cancun, etc. From $89. Register your group or be our Campus Rep. Inter-campus Programs (800)327-6013 www.icpt.com

Have you waited this long to make Spring Break plans? It's not too late! Choose Sunsplash Tours- Call Michelle 256-8217

USED BOOKS

ENGIN TEXTBOOKS for Chem 111-112, Chem 225, Chem 261-262, Physic 151-152, Engin 191A, ResEc 102 & notebooks. 546-3116

Spring Break '98
From $399
★Jamaica ★Cancun
★Panama City ★Daytona
★South Padre ★Bahamas
CALL FOR FREE INFO PACK
Sun Splash Tours 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK
CANCUN BAHAMAS
24 HOURS OF FREE DRINKS!
CLASS Travel
1-800-838-8202

Roses are red,
Violents are blue,
Take out a Classified
to a valentine from you.

D.M.
&
N.R.

Check out
The Classifieds
Valentine's Day Special Issue

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be produced by Collegian classified employees before placement and acceptance of the classified.
2. First names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthdays or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Last names are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. No telephone numbers are allowed.
5. Personals that threatening, derogatory, nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may not be used to sell items, work, or for commercial purposes.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad listed on the ongoing order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number. The name on the personal ordered, but not later identified, is not acceptable. Exception is subject to limitations under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type

NEW Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
AUTO PARTS
CHILDCARE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
COMPUTERS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FURNITURE
GREEK ANNOUNCEMENTS
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HEALTH & BEAUTY
HOUSES FOR RENT
HOUSES FOR SALE
HOUSESITTING
JEWELRY
INSTRUCTION
LOST & FOUND
MAKE FRIENDS
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MISCELLANEOUS FOR RENT
MOTORCYCLES
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
MUSIC LESSONS
MUSICIANS WANTED
PERSONALS
PETS FOR SALE
RESUMES
RIDES WANTED
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SPORTS
STEREO & CD EQUIP
SUMMER SUBLET
TELEVISIONS FOR SALE
TICKETS
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
TUTORING SERVICES
TUTOR WANTED
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED GENERAL
WORLD WIDE WEB
YARD SALES

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, FEB. 3

Auditions — University Chorale will be holding auditions for men at 2 p.m. in Pine Arts Center room 263. No preparation is required.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 4

Discussion— The Biological Sciences Student Organization will host Arup De, a UMass Worcester Medical School student to discuss medical school experiences. The event will be held at 7 p.m. in Campus Center 804-808.

Meeting— The UMass Theatre Guild's first meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in Campus Center room 162. For more information contact Kristina at 545-0415.

THURSDAY, FEB. 5

Meeting— The UMass Poetry Society will have its first meeting of the semester at 7 p.m. in Campus Center 904.

Class — Weekly yoga and meditation classes will be held in Butterfield Residential Area lounge for the next three Thursdays. Classes start at 8 p.m. and will be facilitated by a visiting yoga monk. For more information, call 253-9555.

Speech— Paul Bonin Rodriguez, Alberto Antonio Araiza and Michael Martinez will be speaking on The AIDS Pandemic: 3 Queer Latino Artists Share the Evolution of their Work. The event will be held in Campus Center room 803 at 12:30 p.m. For more information, contact the Stonewall Center at 545-4824.

FRIDAY, FEB. 6

Auditions— Auditions for the UMass Theatre Guild's production of Jesus Christ Superstar will be held at 7 p.m. in Campus Center room 101. For more information call Kristina at 545-0415.

Meeting— There will be a Tibetan Students Association meeting at 6 p.m. in Campus Center 165-169. New members are welcome.

SATURDAY, FEB. 7

Auditions— Auditions for the UMass Theatre Guild's production of Jesus Christ Superstar will be held at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. in Campus Center room 101. For more information call Kristina at 545-0415.

NOTICES

Writing — Spectrum Magazine is taking submissions for the next edition of the magazine. The deadline is Feb. 12. For more information, call the office at 545-2240 or come by in the Student Union, room 408E.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Add some culture to your life
with
The Daily Collegian

HSCN Housing Service's Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	17	HSCN Programming
3	CBS/3 Hartford	18	TV-19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	22	NBC/22 Springfield
6	PBS/57 Springfield	23	CNN
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	24	CNN SI
8	UPN/20 Hartford	25	Headline News
9	Weather Channel	28	UCTV
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
		33	Much Music

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 3, 1998

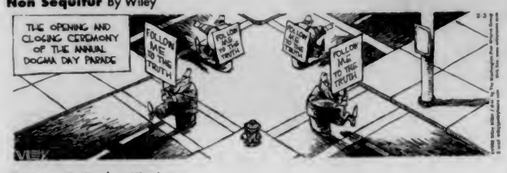
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	16	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Animal Hospital"		Frontline (In Stereo)		Martin's Lament; Religion		Conn. Heroes	Dude Ranches
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV	JAG "Father's Day" (In Stereo)		Negano: Gateway to Glory (In Stereo)				News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Father's Day" (In Stereo)		Negano: Gateway to Glory (In Stereo)				News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Drew Carey	Soul Man	Home Imp.	Grace Under	Greed (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Full House	BoyWorld	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Buffy the Vampire Slayer		Dawson's Creek (In Stereo)		News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Mad Abo. You	Newsradio	Frasier	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	9	Cheers	Med Abo. You	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Moesha	Clueless	Spice Girls-Never Enough		News	Grace Under	Vibe
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Mad Abo. You	Newsradio	Frasier	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Sentinel	Fraser	"Cool Runnings" (1993, Comedy) Leon. (In Stereo)				News		Simpsons	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Mad Abo. You	Newsradio	Frasier	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Animal Hospital"		Frontline (In Stereo)		Straight Talk		Charlie Rose	(In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Sentinel	Fraser	Drew Carey	Soul Man	Home Imp.	Grace Under	Greed (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Med Abo. You	Med Abo. You	Sentinel		NBA Basketball: Boston Celtics at Charlotte Hornets. (Live)				News	Cheers	M*A*S*H	Real TV
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Andy Griffith	Andy Griffith			"Sleeping With the Enemy" (1991, Suspense) Julia Roberts. Patrick Bergin.		Figure Skating: Champions on Ice. (R)
A&E	53	Northern Exposure	The Robe	Law & Order	"Blue Bamboo"	Biography: Sonny Bono-Politica		Silent Witness "Long Days, Short Nights" (R)				Law & Order
CNN	29	Worldview		Moneyline	Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	69	1 Night Stand	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Comics Come Home (R)		Comedy Hall	Drew Carey	Viva Variety	Make-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	70	Wings "Sunship"		Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery		New Detectives		Hot's Fresh	What Sex Am I	Justice Files "Killer Kids" (R)
ESPN	51	Up Close	Sportscenter		College Basketball: Iowa at Wisconsin. (Live)					College Basketball: South Carolina at Vanderbilt. (Live)			Sportscenter
LIFE	71	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Secrets" (1992, Drama) Christopher Plummer.				Almost Perfect	Golden Girls
MTV	67	MTV Live (In Stereo)		My So-Called Life (In Stereo)		Music Videos	Beavis-Butt.	Alt-Time Top 10 (In Stereo)		Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	68	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Secret of Alex	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	I Love Lucy	M.T. Moore	Taxi	Newhart
SCIFI	63	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Seaquest 2032 (In Stereo)		Sightings (In Stereo)		"Pet Sematary" (1989, Horror) Dale Midkiff, Fred Gwynne.				Seaquest 2032 (In Stereo)
TLC	26	Renovation	Renovation	Home Again	Home Again	Trauma II: Life in the ER (R)		Human Sexes		Human Sexes		Trauma II: Life in the ER (R)
TNT	52	Lois & Clark-Superman		Babylon 5 "Chrysalis"		NBA Basketball: Atlanta Hawks at Orlando Magic. (In Stereo Live)					Inside-NBA	"Tick, Tick, Tick..." (1970)
USA	62	Baywatch "Mirror, Mirror"		Highlander: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger		Boxing: Terrance Lewis vs. Darrell Wilson. (In Stereo Live)				Silk Stalkings (R) (In Stereo)
HBO	59	(3:00) "Three Wishes" (1995)		"Miss Evers' Boys" (1997, Drama) Alfre Woodard. (R)				"Ulee's Gold" (1998, Drama) Angelica Jolie, Mercedes Ruehl. (R)				Tracey Takes	Whitney: D.C.
MAX	60	(4:40)		"Revenge of the Nerds III: The Next Generation"				"To Sir With Love" (1967, Drama) Sidney Poitier.				"The Terminator" (1984) Arnold Schwarzenegger. (R)
SHOW	66	"Late for Dinner" (1991, Comedy) Brian Wimmer. (PG)						"The Usual Suspects" (1995) Stephen Baldwin. (R)				"The Fan" (1996, Suspense) Robert De Niro. (In Stereo) (R)

Bruno By C. Baldwin



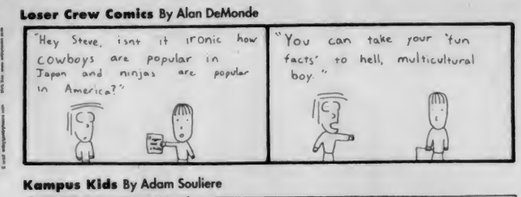
Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Fox Trot By Bill Amend

Non Sequitur By Wiley

Arrows By Stephen Higgins

Robotman By Jim Meddick



Dilbert By Scott Adams

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Loser Crew Comics By Alan DeMonde

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan 20.-Feb. 18) — You mustn't think that a project is over or coming to an end just because you have some breathing room. There is still much to do!

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You may feel as though one of your primary endeavors is rather disjointed as this time. Just wait; you'll have more accord than expected!

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Many people are looking to you for a subtle kind of guidance that actually can pass for hints. No one wants you to take charge aggressively.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You must take care that you treat everyone around you in a manner that befits the role he or she plays in your life. Be as fair as you can.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You may be spending too much time thinking about how you can get even in some way. The truth is, you're best to let bygones be bygones.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You have a long way to go, but today you can make dramatic progress that will have you feeling as though you're much closer to your goal.

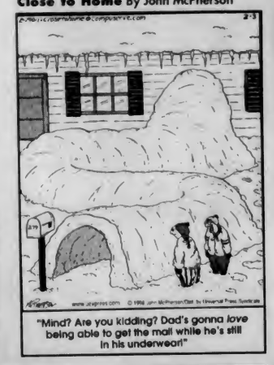
LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — Your attitude will benefit from an unexpected encounter today with someone you would not think could teach you any valuable lessons. Surprise!

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Someone may be trying to pull the rug out from under you at this time. Today, you must be firm and hold your ground; you won't be cheated.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — Give a little more than usual today and you are likely to enjoy a little more than usual in return– when the time comes. Do not rush things.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You may have reason to look back fondly today on a time in your life when things were, as you put it, simpler. You are not so bad off now, however!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You are going to have to make room today for an activity that is in no way related to a major endeavor, but which can pay off on its own.



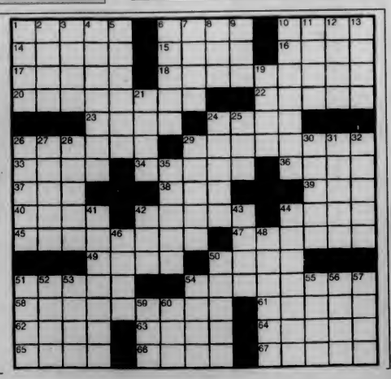
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You may have to work hard to convince a critic that what you are doing is for everyone's good. By day's end, you can win more support.

Quote of the Day

"Stop trying to make a difference, not trying to make a difference. No Way."

–Pearl Jam
"No Way"

Close to Home By John McPherson



ACROSS
1 Ear parts
5 Go very fast
10 "Two Years Before the —"
14 Sports complex
15 Hairstyle
16 Stage award
17 Installs in office
18 Advances rapidly
20 Simple, in a way
22 Grassy areas
23 Female sandpipers
24 Jai —
26 Force
29 Prolonged
33 Oklahoma town
34 Hobo
36 Alleviate 37 Corn crib
38 Lamb's mom
39 Aunts and others
40 Caesar's garment
42 Musical groups
44 Marshes
45 Underwater swimmers' needs
47 Cocktail —
49 Throat-clearing sound
50 Swerve
51 Brazilian dance
54 Plant or animal
58 Melancholy
61 Eyelashes
62 Tiny quantity
63 Operatic solo
64 Suspicious
65 Adolescent
66 Actor Foxx
67 Curved letters

DOWN
1 Whip
2 Sandwich cookie
3 Smile
4 Went inside
5 Gets smart with
6 Natal natives
7 Not closed
8 Harem room
9 Swab
10 Glacier accumulation
11 Take —: be recognized
12 Poster
13 Hardy heroine
19 Imperfection
21 Nuisance
24 Fortified
25 Racetrack circuit
26 Sums owed
27 Alliance
28 Beatle Starr
29 Sunnises
30 "The Old — Bucket"
31 Taking advantage of 32 Uptight
35 Domain
41 Spirited horse
42 Spelling contest
43 Hit
44 Newspaper features
46 Genghis —
48 Seer
50 Step
51 Skewer
52 African lily
53 Spouse
54 Roman poet
55 Seine sights
56 Father
57 Baseball's Willie —
59 Paving goo
60 Indignation

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

2-3 98 © 1998, United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Hungarian Noodle Bake
Tacos
Vegetable Tacos
DINNER
Mandarin Chicken
Southern Fried Steak
Ratatouille
Captains Catch on Roll

Worcester
LUNCH
Clam Roll
Ziti with Cheese or Tomato Suace
Naitve American Tacos
Vegetable Tacos
DINNER
Mandarin Chicken
Southern Fried Steak
Pastabilities
Meatball Grinder Roll

Hempshare
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Tacos
Pez
DINNER
Mandarin Chicken
Southern Fried Steak
Surge™

Berkshire
LUNCH
Grilled Cheese
Chef's Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Tacos
Vegetable Tacos
DINNER
Mandarin Chicken
Southern Fried Steak
Pastabilities
Ravioli Alfredo

Collegian Staff

Night Editor — Erin Murphy
Photo Technician — Danielle Gilardi
Copy Editor — Luke Meredith
Production Supervisor — Rob Snow
Production Staff — Mike Krezy, Thang Vo

Round 1: Massachusetts to battle Temple

UMass takes 10–game win streak into matchup with hated Temple

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

On Feb. 16, 1992 the Massachusetts men's basketball team beat Temple 67–52. After 21 straight losses to the Owls — then the Atlantic 10's elite — UMass first took its place atop the A–10. Massachusetts would go on to win five straight A–10 titles, and the program once the laughingstock of the conference became a symbol of its emergence.

But most of all, they've owned Temple.

But the hatred, brewed in the best of rivalry makers — a sense of inferiority — has never gone away. Even though the Minutemen have taken 13 of the last 15 games in the series, including six in a row, tonight's match-up with Temple (9:30 ESPN2) remains the one circled in red on the calendar. Though it may be Temple feeling inferior lately, the one constant thread of this back and forth rivalry remains a constant.

UMass hates Temple, Temple hates UMass, and it's always a war.

Tonight should be no different. No. 23 Massachusetts (16– 5, 8–0 A–10) comes in rolling, winners of ten straight and a new place in both the ESPN/USA Today coaches poll — ranked No. 24— and the No. 23 slot in the new AP poll. After a disappointing year by UMass standards last season, the Minutemen are on track to reclaim that A-10 title. UMass is 8–0 in conference, having already disposed of No. 25 George Washington and No. 25 Rhode Island in convincing fashion.

But like it always does, the road back to an A–10 title will go through Temple. Although the Owls have struggled of late, they come into tonight's game at 12–6, 5–3 in conference. Temple has beaten Indiana, Michigan State and Fresno State so far this season, and within striking distance of their 14th NCAA appearance in 15 seasons.

Temple will have to face the much improved UMass backcourt without their floor leader, sophomore point guard Pepe Sanchez. Sanchez sprained his ankle against Dayton and will not play.

In his place, Temple coach John Chaney will have to go with freshman Lynn Greer, who scored 16 points, including five of eight from three-point range, in Saturday's 79–73 loss to Xavier. Greer, who was heavily recruited by UMass, has played well when given the opportunity.

UMass has won 10 straight by playing tough defense and getting offense from a variety of places. The Minutemen scored a season–high 85 points Sunday in their win over Dayton, led by a career–high 33 points from junior center Lari Ketner. Monty Mack leads the team in scoring at 14.4 ppg., and Tyrone Weeks has chipped in with 11.4 ppg. and 9.9 rpg.

Minuteman Notes...

Temple has never won in the Mullins Center, which celebrated its fifth birthday on Saturday... The Owls are 5–2 in their new home, officially known as "The Forum at the Apollo of Temple". The Apollo has already sold out for the rematch against UMass on Mar. 1 ... Tonight's game with Temple will be a little more heated for Weeks and Ketner, natives of Philadelphia ... Ketner drew fire after Sunday's game by saying that without Sanchez in the line–up, the Owl backcourt lacks leadership ... Tonight's game will be the third sell–out in six games this season at the Mullins Center.

JORMA KANJANEN/COLLEGIAN

Jonathan DePina and the Massachusetts men's basketball team hope to extend their undefeated streak in the Atlantic 10 tonight against Temple at 9:30 at the William D. Mullins Center.

Turn to BASKETBALL page 7

NBA All–Stars; Kobe a keeper; MJ retains title

Brett Mauser
on the NBA

All–Star Weekend.

How things have changed since the glamour days where Kenny "Sky" Walker was fakin' the funk his way to a Slam Dunk Contest title. Or when Craig Hodges drilled three after three to sink the much more renowned field of three point bombers.

Nowadays, they don't even bring the best to All–Star Weekend anymore. In the 70s, the All–Star Game was a lost cause. Nobody played. Nobody cared. Nobody could even tell you who won the game. And 20 or so years later, after fetching its pail of water in the Jordan/Bird years, it apparently has broken its crown after all (whether they actually succeeded in getting the pail of water is still up for debate).

Two–Ball. All right, all in unison. "What?!?!?"

I'll admit, the Dunk Contest has lost some of its flair since the days of old, but it's hard for me to think of the extravaganza without it. All the dunks have been seen done by eight hundred different contestants and nobody seems to be able to palm the ball anymore, but really. Two–Ball certainly isn't the tourniquet (15 cents, thanks) to the bloodflow. I'm not sure if a lot of NBA columnists around could give a textbook definition to what the contest actually consists of. There's a Final Jeopardy question that would go unanswered.

Here's my idea, in case any NBA VIPs are checkin' this puppy out. Perhaps age would come into play, but I think the NBA could use a little

Turn to BASKETBALL page 7

Men's gymnastic rally over UVM and MIT

BRIAN MCENTYRE/COLLEGIAN

The men's gymnastic team hosted MIT and Vermont this weekend at the Curry Hicks Cage.

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's gymnastics team finally steered onto the right track, after apparently taking a wrong turn earlier this month.

The Minutemen came up with a convincing walloping of Vermont and Massachusetts Institute of Technology this past weekend at the cage. UMass scored 222.550, easily topping Vermont(176.2) and M.I.T.(170.250).

The triumph came on the heels of a disappointing loss on Jan. 23 against Navy. UMass finished just over two points shy of the Midshipmen's total at that meet.

In conquering Vermont and M.I.T., UMass established a new school record on floor exercise. The Minutemen tallied 38.5 in this event to earn the achievement.

Michael Plourde gained a 9.750, and Clayton Kent scored 9.650 to lead the way on floor. Stephen Pryor was also solid with a 9.5 as part of his career high total.

Pryor scored 56.650 in his overall tally to set his personal best total. His best performance came on the high bar with a 9.650, to go along with a 9.60 on the parallel bars.

D.J. Surgent won the pommel horse event with a 9.650 and Dan Young captured vault by posting a

Turn to GYM, page 7

Women's swim win; rally over Rutgers

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

Chalk up another dual meet victory for the Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team.

The Minutewomen (7–3) faced a scare against Rutgers on Saturday afternoon, as they trailed midway through the meet, but rallied to upend the Scarlet Knights 130–112.

"Looking back on the meet I'm impressed with the way we swam late in the meet. We were lackadaisical to start the meet and we found ourselves trailing after the medley relay," said Massachusetts women's swimming coach Bob Newcomb. "We were way behind, but we rallied well and produced the kind of swims that we needed to swim."

The reemergence occurred primarily in part to senior Barbara Hickey, freshman Julie Dragon, and sophomore Marci Hupp. Hickey won the 200 and 500 free, while Dragon (50 free) and Hupp (100 free) each took home one first–place finish apiece.

"Julie won the 50, was second in the 100 and was part of our winning relay team. She continues to get better with every meet, and she has really stepped up," said Newcomb. "Barbara also swam well. She went from the 1000 to the 200, and that is a difficult double. She beat her time in the 200 and was really pushed all weekend long."

Newcomb was also quick to point out the consistency of several other UMass swimmers, not just on Saturday, but throughout the entire season.

"Marci has been swimming consistently all season long. Sarah Newell, Julie Alexander, and Shana Strothers have also done a great job," said Newcomb. "Sharyn Harrison also has done some impressive things. She's stepped up and done the 1000, 500, and the relay, which is a good sign for her. Lia Lansky has a good double with the 400 IM and the 200 fly, which is one of the toughest events."

Turn to WOMEN SWIM, page 7

COLLEGIAN FILE

The women's swim team pulled away with another win at Rutgers this weekend.

UM's ski squads pack punch in slalom

By Aaron Saykin
Collegian Staff

After missing most of her 1997 season as the result of a knee injury, Massachusetts women's ski team captain Leah Mutiero has already returned to her two–time All–American form. For the third consecutive weekend, the senior standout has solidified her reputation of supremacy in the Eastern College Ski Conference with two top–eight finishes at the Brown/UConn Tournament this weekend at Loon Mountain, New Hampshire.

Mutiero's third–place showing in the giant slalom powered the Minutewomen to an overall fifth–place finish in the event. The Marshfield, Massachusetts native also finished eighth in the slalom event, leading her squad to an impressive forth–place.

"Leah had a particularly good weekend, and she's finally got it together," said 38–year Massachusetts coaching veteran Bill MacConnell. "She had two very good races, but is still very careful with her knee."

Anchoring the UMass women's attack in the slalom was freshman sensation Margaret LaBombard, whose 15th–place finish sparked UMass into the fourth position overall. LaBombard has recently stepped into the spotlight after teammate and projected second skier Katie Keane tore her ACL at the end of training camp.

"Margaret has come up big for the team in Katie's absence, as have a few other freshmen," MacConnell said. "What's even more incredible is the positive attitude that Katie has had about it all."

After finishing third in the giant slalom event during their last two meets, the men's squad faltered a bit this weekend, placing sixth out of ten teams. However, the team rebounded with a solid fourth–place showing in the slalom.

Unlike other tournaments, the Brown/UConn Tournament allows only five skiers to partake in the event, and weighs only the top three finishes. This system, although not completely unfamiliar to the balanced Minutemen, may have affected them.

Junior All–American Tom Holden powered UMass with a fourth–place finish in the giant slalom. New addition John Griffin chipped in with a 16th–place effort. Senior captain Eric MacCormick led the Minutemen's charge in the slalom event, finishing 10th overall. Freshman Jordan Kingdon added a 15th–place finish for the men's squad, who hopes to return to one of the top three positions in the conference this weekend.

Both UMass team's plan to travel to Ascutney Mountain, Vermont for the Boston College Tournament.

Men's track take 2nd place at UNH quad meet

Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's indoor track took a second place overall finish in Saturday's quad meet at the University of New Hampshire. Only the host Wildcats outscored the Minutemen, showing 88 total points while UMass tallied 48. Central Connecticut and Holy Cross followed up with third and fourth places, respectively.

Senior Ryan Carrara, who struggled at the tip end of the cross country season, continued in what has been an impressive indoor track season by leading the team with a victory in the 1500 meter with a time of 3:55.95. His junior long distance teammate Janda Ricci–Munn completed a UMass domination of the endurance events by winning the 3000 meter with a time of 8:51.84.

The Minutemen also faired well in the throwing events, as junior Jan Stevens captured the shot put victory with a season best mark of 49'3–1/4". Sophomore Vic Morency established a new team best for the season with a 50'1" weight throw, earning him a second place in that event.

Ben Biraldi was the fourth Massachusetts runner to win an event with a victory in the hurdles, following up his 7.70 second time in the New England Challenge Cup Trials.

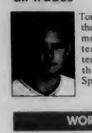
However, UMass could not overcome the loss of juniors Neil Concepcion and Tom Toye, senior Scott Price, and freshman Marc Sylvander, as the four, who make up the Minuteman 4x400 meter relay team, were absent from the New Hampshire meet so that they could participate in the Terrier Classic at Boston University. Concepcion and Sylvander are the team's leading 400 meter runners, and Price and Toye are the squad's premiere short distance sprinters. Their absence left gaping holes in the Massachusetts roster.

"Everyone performed really well," Concepcion said. "But when you don't have a full team, it's hard to win a meet. Points that the four of us would've taken away from New Hampshire weren't there."

The isolated relay team made use of their time in Boston, destroying the school record with a time of 3:13.92. The previous mark was 3:19.22.

The Massachusetts men's indoor track team takes to the track again this Saturday at the University of Rhode Island. The Minutemen will meet the Wildcats with all of their weapons present.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN



Volume CVII Issue 6 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Wednesday, February 4, 1997

An absolutely sweet Dylan

Rock legend Bob Dylan played Monday night to a sold– out crowd at Springfield's Symphony Hall (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Jack of all trades

Tom O'Connor of the Massachusetts men's hockey team leads the team on and off the ice (see Sports, page 12).

WORLD

16 allegedly leaked technology to Taiwan

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — More than a dozen South Koreans have been charged with stealing semiconductor technology and selling it to a Taiwanese company, prosecutors said yesterday.

Prosecutors in the southern city of Suwon said the theft could seriously erode the technological edge of South Korean memory chip makers.

South Korea, which plans to export $16 billion worth of memory chips this year, is the world's largest producer of the chips and accounts for more than 30 percent of the world market.

"We cannot tell you exactly how much, but the potential damage to Korean companies could be huge," chief prosecutor Kwak Moo–keun said.

Most of the leaked information was about manufacturing 64–megabit dynamic random access memory chips, the largest memory chips now in mass–production, prosecutors said.

Prosecutors said they were expanding their investigation and indicated that more people could be arrested.

NATION

Feds' mob–case memo released by mistake

NEW YORK (AP) — Federal prosecutors have bungled an investigation of organized crime's efforts to infiltrate Wall Street by mistakenly revealing their strategy in a key case, The New York Times reported yesterday.

The government made public a confidential memorandum containing the names of victims and potential witnesses in the case involving reputed members of the Genovese and Bonanno crime families. The 97–page document was inadvertently filed in federal court in Phoenix last year, the newspaper reported.

Fearing that disclosure could imperil the case and witnesses' safety, prosecutors tried to remove the memo from a public courthouse file. But a defense attorney already had a copy, the Times said.

The issue is now before U.S. District Judge Denny Chin in New York, who ruled in December that all copies of the memo will be held in his chambers until he can review them. He has not issued a ruling.

On Monday, Chin released a letter written to him by prosecutors asking that no part of the memo be made public. Prosecutors said the document contains information that could jeopardize other investigations.

The government's error may raise questions about whether a once–public document can be made private again. Chin has said the memo will remain secret at least until he decides whether it should be given back to the defense.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 39 LOW: 22	HIGH: 35 LOW: 21	HIGH: 36 LOW: 18

INSIDE

Arts & Music.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics .....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 12

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Registration is difficult for B.D.I.C. students

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

While students at the University of Massachusetts add/drop and beg for classes one group is consistently passed over when trying to get into classes in their major.

The Bachelor's Degree with Individual Concentration (B.D.I.C.) is a program through which students design their own major by taking a combination of classes in other departments.

"Students get the feeling they are really on top of their education," said Henry Geddes, B.D.I.C. advisor and professor of communications.

Most students get admittance preference in classes in their major. A B.D.I.C. student's classes are not within a single department, so they don't receive this preference. Most B.D.I.C. students do get into classes but only by hounding teachers and through persistence.

"This is a problem we have yet to resolve at B.D.I.C.. Because you're not in a department you don't have the privilege of first dibs," Geddes said.

Lack of recognition throughout the University and with professors is also part of the reason B.D.I.C. students find it hard to get into classes.

"Some are willing to accommodate B.D.I.C. University–wide students and faculty aren't as aware of B.D.I.C.," said Jose Ornelas, the director of B.D.I.C. "If they were aware of B.D.I.C. and how it works, it would help faculty be more accommodating. I really believe in the program. We have amazing solidarity among students and alumni."

Professors and the University are not very lenient toward B.D.I.C. majors.

"It's tough to change [other] department's policies. It creates insecurity for students every semester to have to go and lobby for courses. That's being brought up in meetings of B.D.I.C. But I find that students do find their way," Ornelas said.

Most do, but not without a degree of frustration.

"I was trying to get into a film class in the communications department for my major and they let in an anthropology major. Departments are only looking out for their own," said Anna Feder, a B.D.I.C student frustrated by not being able to get into classes.

"We make it very clear they have to sometimes talk to professors. They have to be enterprising sometimes," Ornelas said.

Feder feels it is unfair B.D.I.C. students can't get into classes in their major just because they are not in the department

Turn to TUCKER, page 3

Student Business Fair helps draw attention to budding entrepreneurs

By Jason Elseman
Collegian Staff

In an effort to raise awareness of student–run businesses, the University of Massachusetts Board of Student Businesses sponsored a Student Business Fair on the Campus Center Concourse yesterday.

Co–managers from the student businesses handed out applications and flyers with information about each business. They also had a raffle to raise money for their Student Business Dinner later in the year.

Sharon Wagner, a junior environmental science major, who works at Earthfoods, said that there were three objectives for the fair.

"To show what student businesses mean to the UMass [University of Massachusetts] community," Wagner said.

Their other purposes were to alert prospective employees than all of the student businesses are hiring, and to raise money with their raffle.

"There are so many student businesses. We share experiences and ideas," Nathan Wicks said in reference to the Board.

Wicka, who is also an employee of Earthfoods, said the businesses have had problems communicating in the past, and that they should communicate more.

"Privatization is rearing its ugly head, we've got to stick together," he said.

Earthfoods, which caters to the vegetarians and vegans on campus, has been closed since school began, but it will open on Monday.

According to Wicka, Earthfoods

Turn to BUISNESS FAIR, page 3

Karla Faye Tucker executed in Texas

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE, Texas — Karla Faye Tucker, the pickax killer whose born–again Christianity sparked a worldwide debate over redemption and retribution on death row, was executed yesterday for hacking a man and woman to death during a 1983 break–in.

Tucker, 38, was declared dead by injection at 6:45 p.m. She became the first woman executed in Texas since the Civil War.

"I am going to be face to face with Jesus now," Tucker said in her final words. "I love all of you very much. I will see you all when you get there. I will wait for you."

The execution came less than an hour after the U.S. Supreme Court rejected an 11th–hour appeal and Gov. George W. Bush refused to grant a 30–day reprieve, saying her case had been thoroughly reviewed by appellate courts.

"Like many touched by this case, I have sought guidance through prayer. I have concluded judgment about the heart and soul of an individual on death row are best left to a higher authority," Bush said.

"May God bless Karla Faye Tucker and God bless her victims and their families," he said.

Worldwide publicity over Tucker's case, including pleas for mercy from Pope John Paul II and TV evangelist Pat Robertson, focused on her metamorphosis from a drug–crazed teen–age prostitute to a soft–spoken young woman who would be content with a life sentence.

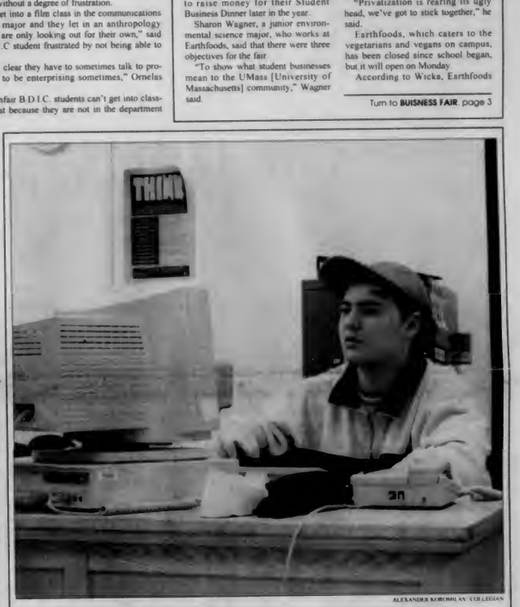
"If I go home February 3rd, don't take that as God not answering our prayers," she said in a TV interview aired on Robertson's "700 Club" hours before she was to die. "If he brings me home February 3rd, it's because in his wisdom, and his sovereignty, he knew that through that something greater is going to be accomplished."

People on both sides of her case, and Tucker herself, said her sex should have no bearing on her punishment. But the novelty of executing a woman — there were only 49 among 3,365 death row inmates nationwide as of Jan. 1 — prompted hundreds of reporters and photographers to descend on Huntsville, where executions in recent years have become almost routine.

Nationally, since the Supreme Court in 1976 allowed capital punishment to resume, 431 men and one woman have been executed — 144 of them in Texas, by far the most active death penalty state. The last execution of a woman in Texas was in 1863, when Chipita Rodriguez was hanged from a mesquite tree for the ax murder of a horse trader during a robbery.

Nationwide, the last woman executed was Velma Barfield, a born–again Christian who was put to death in North Carolina in 1984 for lacing her boyfriend's food with rat poison.

On Monday, the Board of Pardons and Paroles rejected 16–0 Tucker's bid to get her sentence commuted to life in prison, just as it denied all 76 requests for clemency made by condemned men since 1993.



Yesterday afternoon, the Supreme Court rejected an appeal in which she argued that the clemency process in Texas is unconstitutional.

A 30–day reprieve was the only option available to the governor, who could not grant clemency unless the board recommends it. Bush, who took office three years ago, has let 59 condemned men go to their deaths without once commuting or delaying a death sentence.

In numerous TV interviews, the 5–foot–3 dark–eyed, dark–haired woman portrayed herself as someone who had been rehabilitated and wanted a life sentence so she could help others behind bars. Robertson, normally a death penalty supporter, backed her plea for mercy because of her religious fervor.

"This thing is vengeance," he said. "It makes no sense. This is not the same woman who committed those crimes."

Turn to TUCKER, page 3

ALEXANDER KOROMILAS/COLLEGIAN

Can I see your ID?

Zafar Khusainov, a junior legal studies major works his shift as a monitor in the Lederle Graduate Tower Macintosh Lab.

ALEXANDER KOROMILAS/COLLEGIAN

All aboard!

A PVTA bus to Mullins Center makes its regular stop at Haigis Mall yesterday afternoon.

School of Ed. professors receive grants to bolster awareness of diversity

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

Two University of Massachusetts professors have received a grant worth $150,000 to create a series of classes and residential academic programs throughout the School of Education.

In an effort to build bridges between different racial, ethnic and gender groups, the William and Flora Hewlett Foundations Program on Pluralism and Unity grant was given to professors Ximena Zuniga and Maurianne Adams to encourage student leadership and faculty support for diversity issues.

"The goal of the course is to confront the issue of difference in a real way, not just as a concept," Zuniga said.

"The goal of the course is to confront the issue of difference in a real way, not just as a concept." — Ximena Zuniga

"Many of the students... are interested in teaching or human service where it will be to their benefit to know how to work more effectively in diverse settings. But, by far, these are not the only students who will benefit," Zuniga said.

The student leadership component of the series — the Student Leadership and Community Development Initiative — will focus primarily on graduate students at UMass who teach credit and non–credit courses to undergraduates in residential areas on campus such as Southwest and Orchard Hill Residential Areas.

An experimental course held this semester will be expanded through the initiative next fall. Entitled "Talking Across Differences: Exploring Conflicts and Common Ground," students will read and write extensively on the subject of diversity, and discuss issues concerning race, ethnicity, gender, religion and class.

"Our society is becoming increasingly multiracial and multiethnic and it is important for higher education to prepare young people for this reality," Zuniga said.

"Through our program, we hope to build bridges between these many groups on campus, and by doing so to extend these bridges to the outside community."

Other topics that will be discussed in the series include racism and sexism on campus; interracial dating; affirmative action; self–segregation; and the social implications of immigration and language discrimination.

The faculty section of the series, entitled the Faculty Leadership Initiative, is currently in the planning stages, and has a tentative launching date of spring 1999.

Support from Egypt sought by Albright

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

CAIRO, Egypt — Egypt said yesterday that "all the options are still on the table" in dealing with Iraq's defiance of U.N. weapons inspections, but stopped short of endorsing a military attack as a last resort.

Secretary of State Madeleine Albright met with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak at the end of a six–day round of diplomacy aimed at gaining Arab support for a U.S. attack if Iraq's President Saddam Hussein refuses to permit unfettered inspections of its weapons sites.

Mubarak, who has spoken to more than a dozen Arab leaders in the last few days, sent his foreign minister, Amr Moussa, to a joint news conference with Albright and remained inside his presidential palace.

"All the options are still on the table," Moussa said. A senior administration official told reporters this meant Egypt had joined Saudi Arabia and Jordan in firmly backing the Clinton administration.

Moussa emphasized diplomacy to persuade Saddam to adhere to U.N. Security Council resolutions designed to strip Iraq of dangerous weapons.

Albright said she remained skepti–

Turn to MILITARY STRIKE, page 2

ALEXANDER KOROMILAS/ COLLEGIAN

Now you see it...

A car being towed outside the Student Union yesterday afternoon.

20 die in Italy after U.S. plane cuts gondola line

TRENTO, Italy — A U.S. military plane on a low-level training flight over the snowy Alps sliced through a cable-car line, sending a gondola full of skiers crashing hundreds of feet to the ground. At least 20 people inside the car died.

Officials at the U.S. air base in Aviano in northern Italy, where the Marine EA-6B Prowler was based, said the accident was being investigated and all low-level missions by U.S. military aircraft in Italy have been suspended.

The pilot and his three-member crew returned safely to Aviano, said Brig. Gen. Tim Peppe, commander of the base's resident 31st fighter wing. The plane sustained minor tail damage.

Peppe, speaking at a news conference at Aviano, did not speculate on a cause, only discounting engine trouble.

In Washington, U.S. Defense Secretary William Cohen told the Senate Armed Services Committee that the pilot "was apparently unaware that he had struck a cable or injured anyone."

Base officials said American pilots fly dozens of training missions over Italy every day. The plane is a surveillance aircraft attached to the NATO force overseeing the Bosnian peace.

The accident occurred at 3:15 p.m. local time under sunny skies at a ski resort in the Val di Fassa area of the Dolomite Mountains near Trento. The cable car was traveling from the town of Cavalese, 80 miles northeast of Trento, to the top of Cermis mountain, site of a popular local ski resort.

The cabin had just begun its ascent from the base at Cavalese, at an altitude of about 3,000 feet, and was heading toward a mid-station when it fell, said Alessia Dezuigliano, an employee of the Alpe Cermis ski area.

RAI footage showed the crushed wreckage of the yellow cable car resting on the snow 240 feet to 300 feet below its route. The cable trailed off like a twisted thread.

"You couldn't guess the shape of the car anymore," said Andrea Russo, a police official who arrived at the scene an hour after the accident.

"All the four walls of the car had opened up like a cardboard box. The bodies were all laying beneath the sheet metals. Most of them were torn apart," he said.

One of the victims was the car's Italian operator. The rest were skiers, at least six of them German, said police Officer Robert Cavada in Cavalese. RAI state television said two victims were Hungarian, and two were Poles.

The line's other gondola was heading down, and stopped, suspended in air. Rescuers pulled out its operator, the only person aboard.

The scene was near the spot where a 1976 accident on the same gondola lift killed 42 people. The accident was blamed on operator error.

"Compared to the 1976 accident, this was even worse," Russo said. "Then you could at least see the dead bodies. Now they were all torn apart."

The resort in the lower-level Dolomites tends to attract locals and families, unlike the more fashionable ski spots like Cortina d'Ampezzo or Courmayeur, though it does have a foreign clientele. Phone lines at nearby hotels were jammed with calls from worried relatives of vacationers.

The pilot was remaining on the base, said spokeswoman Capt. Tracy O'Grady-Walsh.

"It's definitely fair to say he is concerned for all the families... involved in this," she said. "I'm sure if he had the opportunity he would express his deepest sympathy for them." She said the plane's squadron, based in Cherry Point, N.C., had an excellent safety record, with no accidents dating back to 1984 during 60,000 total flight hours.

But the incident drew an immediate political response in Italy. The Communist Refoundation party, which traditionally opposes the American military presence and supplies the government a majority in Parliament, renewed its call to close the Aviano base. Other leftists parties demanded an end to U.S. military flights over inhabited areas, and punishment for the pilot.

President Clinton called Italian Premier Romano Prodi to express condolences to the Italian people. The president said he was "so sorry" to learn of the accident which he described as "awful," White House spokesman Barry Toxv said.

Aviano, about 62 miles east of the accident scene, is the largest U.S. air base in Italy, with nearly 6,000 military and civilian personnel. It has played a major role in NATO intervention efforts in Bosnia, and has hosted President Clinton for several visits to U.S military personnel.

■ military strike

continued from page 1

cal of diplomacy succeeding. Before boarding a U.S. Air Force jet for a 14-hour flight home, Albright said the Iraqi president was using "feints, parries and blocks" to prolong the impasse.

The United States has no quarrel with the people of Iraq and "we do not wish to see women and children used as human shields," she said.

But she said time for diplomacy is running out and the United States, Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Jordan, Bahrain, Kuwait and the Palestinian Authority all agreed: "This crisis was created by Saddam Hussein's defiance of the Security Council."

Moussa explained Mubarak's absence as due to a busy schedule, including a meeting with the president of Panama. Albright told reporters she did not feel slighted.

A senior U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Egyptian statement that all options were on the table was welcomed by Albright as a sign of support.

Bahrain backed the United States in warning Iraq of "grave consequences" if it fails to heed U.N. demands that it open suspect weapons sites to unconditional inspection. A day earlier, Saudi Arabia said Iraq bears responsibility if diplomacy fails to end the inspection impasse. But the Saudis stopped short of granting U.S warplanes use of their air bases for possible strikes against Iraq.

Bahrain, the Persian Gulf emirate where the U.S. 5th Fleet maintains its central command, apparently pledged its military support in the event of an attack on Iraq.

"We believe we have all the cooperation we need across the board," Albright said after meeting with the emir, Sheik Isa bin Salman Al Khalifa.

In Bahrain, Albright dismissed as "diversionary," an overture by Iraq through Russia to open some presidential sites to U.N. inspectors.

While she did not object to further diplomatic efforts by Russia or any other nation, she stressed that "it's the message that counts" and the message should be insistence on total compliance with the United Nations.

State Department spokesman James P. Rubin also rejected as "another diversionary tactic" an offer by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to meet with a U.S. congressional delegation.

In Washington, Sen. John McCain of Arizona, a senior Republican on the Senate Armed Services Committee, said today a U.S. strike appears to be inevitable. "It's not absolutely certain we're going to go," McCain said on ABC's "Good Morning America." "But I think the series of events that are transpiring will lead us to that action unless there is something that happens within the next few days to a couple of weeks."

McCain said a U.S. attack, if it comes, "has to be severe, has to be sustained and has to be significant."

Bahrain's foreign minister, Sheik Mohammed bin Mubarak Al Khalifa, agreed that Iraq must "give access to the inspectors of the U.N. special commission" or face "grave consequences."

Bahrain is the nerve center of a powerful armada sent during the Gulf crisis, and the U.S. Navy has had a presence here for 50 years. There are two U.S. carriers and more than 300 warplanes in the area.

WRITE FOR NEWS

WELCOMING BACK STUDENTS

UNIVERSITY ST

Textbook Annex

AMHERST

www.aux.umass.edu/textbookannex

University Store • Textbook Annex

SAVE YOUR RECEIPT

Our Refund Policy

If you purchase an incorrect title you may return it for a refund within 10 calendar days of the first day of classes. Thereafter, incorrect titles may be returned for 48 hours if purchase price is the book's current wholesale price.

Textbooks no longed required may be returned during the month of September. Present your sales receipt and a copy of your Spring Schedule of Classes obtained from the Registrar. Any new books will be unmarked.

Keep your receipt. Refunds for textbooks cannot be given without a receipt.

Textbooks must be in re-saleable condition. Underlining and other marks will be considered damage.

Textbooks should not be returned to instructors or classes. Remember the semester after you've taught a class might call for the use of the book again.

RETURN YOUR TEXTBOOKS WITH YOUR RECEIPT FOR A "NO QUESTIONS ASKED" REFUND THROUGH MONDAY FEBRUARY 9TH, 1998.

Beginning [illegible] textbooks from dropped courses may be returned with a sales receipt and an updated course schedule.

The schedule may be obtained from the registrars office in Whitmore Administration Building.

New books must be in new condition. No marks, writing, water damage, etc.

Any incorrect titles purchased after TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 10TH must be returned within 48 hours of purchase. Schedule, syllabus or other proof of incorrect purchases must be presented, along with sales receipt.

Remember the last day to return textbooks with no questions asked is MONDAY, FEBRUARY 9TH.

www.aux.umass.edu/textbookannex

textbook annex

Spring '98 Schedule

We accept cash, personal check, Ucard, Visa, MasterCard as forms of payment.

We begin to return unsold books to the publishers in the middle of the semester. Students are encouraged to get the books they need for the semester as soon as possible after official enrollment in a course.

buyback

SECOND WEEK - February 2-6

Monday-Friday 9am - 5pm

Thereafter, Monday-Friday 9am-4pm at the Textbook Annex, beginning February 9, 1998

annex rush

Spring 1998 Book Rush Hours

Monday, Feb. 2 -Friday, Feb. 6 9am - 6pm

Thereafter - Monday - Friday 9am - 4pm

ALEXANDER KOROMILAS/ COLLEGIAN

A rose by any other name...

Roses brighten up the Facilities Services office in the Campus Center.

Teacher caught in parked car with boy

By Audra Ang
Associated Press

SEATTLE — A former grade-school teacher who was convicted of having sex with a 13-year-old former student and bore his child was arrested yesterday after she was found in a parked car with the boy.

Mary Kay LeTourneau, who got out of jail just last month, was arrested in a south Seattle neighborhood around 3 a.m. Officers looking for a stolen vehicle noticed a parked car that appeared suspicious because its lights were on and "its windows were steamy," said Carmen Best, a police spokeswoman.

LeTourneau was with a 14-year-old boy, Best said. After police determined her identity, officers arrested her for being in contact with a minor — a violation of the terms of her release, Best said.

David Gehrke, LeTourneau's attorney, confirmed to KIRO-TV that the teen-ager was the boy she was convicted of raping. He said she may well go to prison now.

"She was fixated on this one boy and she had been under a no contact order... It just underscores how deep-rooted this compulsion is," Gehrke said.

Best would not confirm the boy's identity, and neither the lawyer nor police would say what the two were believed to have been doing in the car.

Both LeTourneau and the teen-ager were questioned by investigators from a special sexual assault unit, Best said. The boy was later released into his parents' custody, KING-TV reported. LeTourneau was taken to King County Jail.

LeTourneau, 35, pleaded guilty in August to two counts of second-degree child rape and was sentenced to six months behind bars followed by sex-offender treatment.

The Shorewood Elementary School teacher, who had already served 100 days and was given additional time off for good behavior, was released from jail last month.

Under the terms of her release, LeTourneau was not allowed to have contact with the boy. She was also banned from having contact with minors or date anyone with minors living with them. Failure to comply could mean 7 1/2 years in prison, something LeTourneau now stands a "good chance" of facing, Gehrke said. A sentence revocation hearing probably will be held within a few days, said Dan Donohoe, a spokesman for the county prosecutor's office. He said prosecutors would ask that LeTourneau be sent back to jail.

LeTourneau was a married mother of four when she began having sex with the boy in the summer of 1996.

The boy has said he was a willing participant, and that he and LeTourneau exchanged rings and planned the pregnancy to affirm their bond. He had said he hoped they could be together one day. And LeTourneau said last year that she still loved the boy. Their daughter, born last May, was being raised by the boy's mother.

LeTourneau husband, Steve LeTourneau, has filed for divorce and is raising the couple's children.

LeTourneau lives in the Mount Baker area with a friend and was undergoing a three-year sexual deviancy treatment under the terms of her sentencing.

The terms also mandated that she disclose her "sexual deviancy" to any potential partners, avoid places where minors are known to congregate and not initiate or prolong contact with children. She must also inform the corrections officer of any romantic relationship to verify there are no children involved.

■ buisness fair

continued from page 1

was closed to spend extra time training the new staff it hired after many of its experienced personnel left.

Wagner added that they also used the extra week to give their committees time to work. Every student-run business is run by committees. Earthfoods has 18 committees, including advertising, buying, recycling, menu and a diversity committee.

Campus Design and Copy (CD&C), and People's Market also have diversity committees.

"We're hiring nine new members from different ethnic backgrounds," said Tony Jon Baptiste, a junior psychology major employee at the People's Market.

He said the diversity committee is useful for bringing the team of workers closer together.

"We want to develop a model that will help us break through issues of diversity," Baptiste said.

He said it is "challenging, and continuous work," but it is working because People's Market employees have begun working well as a team.

"The committees don't run a business," said Ian Levesque, a junior journalism major who works at Campus Design and Copy. "Committees are just a tool we use to make sure everything gets done."

Levesque said the co-managers divide the business into parts, and when everyone does their part it comes together to make the whole business do well.

In addition to Campus Design and Copy, People's Market and Earthfoods, all located in the Student Union, there are five other student-run businesses.

Tix Unlimited, which sells tickets to local shows, and the Bike Co-Op are located next to each other across the hall from the Five College Federal Credit Union in the Student Union.

The rest of the student businesses are scattered about in the residential areas.

Sweets N' More is a snack bar in Field Residence Hall Lounge, located in the Orchard Hill Residential Area. The Sylvan Snack Bar is located in the basement of McNamara Residence Hall. The Greenough Snack Bar is located in the basement of Greenough Residence Hall in Central Residence Area.

■ BDIC

continued from page xx

that is offering the class.

"If they [B.D.I.C. students] specifically need that course for their major they should get it," Feder said.

The director and advisors of B.D.I.C program try very hard to help students get into classes.

"I'm not blaming him [Ornelas]. He called the communications department and spoke to the chairman. He did all he could. Everybody has tried to help me but they don't have any power," Feder said.

It is a long process to get into B.D.I.C. A written 6-10 page rationale of why you want the certain major, an outline of the classes you wish to take and several meetings with an advisor are only part of the requirements to get into the B.D.I.C. program. Yet students feel the popular program is worth it for freedom it affords.

"[The B.D.I.C. program] such a wonderful idea, but after all that work [to get into the major], then you can't get into a class is kind of upsetting. It's the rest of the University that is being uncooperative. It's not the [B.D.I.C. faculty's] fault. They are still trying to get recognition," Feder said.

■ tucker

continued from page 1

Tucker and a companion, Daniel Garrett, were convicted of killing Jerry Lynn Dean, 27, and Deborah Thornton, 32, on June 13, 1983, at Dean's Houston apartment. Tucker and Garrett had broken in to steal motorcycle parts.

Garrett beat Dean with a hammer, and Tucker used the 15-pound picks to stop Dean from making a gurgling sound. Then Tucker attacked Thornton, who had been hiding under a blanket. Tucker told friends she experienced a sexual thrill each time she swung the ax.

As the execution drew near, Thornton's husband, Richard, said: "It's something we've been praying for, for many years. We have had to live with this monster in front of us all this time."

Garrett also got a death sentence but died in prison in 1993 of liver disease.

ALEXANDER KOROMILAS/ COLLEGIAN

Do you have a reservation?

David Gibson, a junior HRTA major welcomes customers in the Top Of Campus Center Restaurant.

ΑΧΛΣΠΠΦΨΑΜΑΠΨΕΦΣΑΧΛΣΠΠΦΨΑΜΑΠΨΕΦΣΑΧΛΣΠΦΨΑΜΑΠΨΕΦΜΑΠΨΕΦΣ

FRATERNITY FORUM
TODAY PATTERSON DORM LOBBY
7-9PM FREE FOOD

ΑΧΡ
Alpha Chi Rho

For more information on Alpha Chi Rho contact Jeff Howe at 546-9836.

ΑΣΦ
Alpha Sigma Phi

Alpha Sigma Phi, The Golden Chapter Recipient 1996-1997, was founded on the principles of "To Better the Man." Since the fraternities' chartering in 1996 young men have gathered along side the "Old Gal" bringing respectability to our community and the university. Our brotherhood is compromised of 25 university leaders who are proud of their academic and philanthropic accomplishments.

The brothers of Alpha Sigma Phi will be conducting formal rush from 2/1 to 2/12. For more information please contact Dan Jacobs at 549-0240 or Jeff Olszewski at 549-5920.

ΑΔΦ
Alpha Delta Phi

Alpha Delta Phi members are part of a self-perpetuating institution that has evolved since its 1832 founding. Members of the Alpha Delta Phi strive to become well-rounded individuals as they attempt to reach their self-actualization morally, socially, and intellectually. Initially, Alpha Delta Phi was strictly a literary society, but has evolved to include all recreational activities. Finally, Alpha Delta Phi stresses diversity in its brotherhood as we try to develop an intricate network of pledges, brothers, and alumni for years on end.

For More information on Alpha Delta Phi contact Luke at 549-7127 or Colin at 549-6691. Or stop by our house at 382 North Pleasant St.

ΑΤΓ
Alpha Tau Gamma

Alpha Tau Gamma is the social fraternity for the Stockbridge School at UMass. The men of ATG have the opportunity to benefit from a tightly knit house that supports one another, even after graduation, as careers in the green industry are pursued. This common goal each brother shares proves to form a unique and peerless bond. A tradition for academic excellence stems back to the foundation of the university. ATG enjoys a rich heritage by one of the strongest alumnae support.

For more information on ATG call Dan at 549-9678. Stop by our house at 375 North Pleasant St.

ΑΕΠ
Alpha Epsilon Pi

Alpha Epsilon Pi was founded on November 7, 1913 at New York University. The Phi chapter at UMass was established in 1933. AEP has a long tradition of training young men to be leaders in the Jewish community. We are strong in academics with a higher GPA than the average. We are also involved extensively in intramurals with several teams. If you are looking for a good time and a chance to enhance your whole college experience call Chris at 548-9640.

Rush dates

* 2/2 wing night at 8:00pm
* 2/3 TBA
* 2/4 Billiards Night in the Campus Center 8:30pm
* 2/5 Seinfeld and Chinese food Night 8:30pm
* 2/6 TBA
* 2/7 BBQ 1:00pm

For location call Chris 548-9640

ΔΧ
Delta Chi

The Brothers of Delta Chi fraternity welcome all university men to open Rush. Our brotherhood is the tightest and most diverse on campus. If you are looking for a unique and interesting experience unlike any other consider the Delta Chi Fraternity. Our academic and Intramural sports programs have been consistently successful for many years now. Our brotherhood invites you to see what were all about. Delta Chi challenges you to enhance your college experience, strengthen your academics, and find out what fraternity life is all about.

Open rush starts Wednesday February 4th and continues to the 5th. The following Wednesday February 11th and Thursday 12th. All events begin at 7pm. For more information call Matt at 253-8855 or Jonah at 549-1785. Or stop by the house at 118 Sunset Av.

ΔΣΦ
Delta Sigma Phi

The Delta Sigma Phi fraternity was founded in 1899. We now have hundreds of chapter's nation wide as well as over 90,000 brothers. The UMass Colony is the newest nationwide as well as the first delta Sigma Phi Fraternity in Massachusetts. What do we have to offer? Come meet the brothers and find out why we are one of the fasest growing fraternities in the nation. For more information call Dan at 546-1365 or Matt at 546-1672.

ΔΥ
Delta Upsilon

Delta Upsilon International Fraternity was founded in 1834. DU, as it is commonly known, is the sixth oldest fraternity. Since its inception, DU has been a trendsetter in the Greek community, establishing the first non-secret Greek letter society, instituting the first non-hazing fraternity and becoming the first fraternity to go international. DU was founded on the four principles of friendship, character, culture, and justice. The brothers of the Massachusetts Chapter are second to none when it comes to leadership and campus involvement. Our Philanthropy and Scholarship programs are considered among the best of all Delta Upsilon Chapters. We pride ourselves on the strength of our brotherhood and our support for one another as we prepare to become the leaders of tomorrow's world.

For more information call Justin at 549-6852 or feel free to stop by our house at 778 North Pleasant St.(across from Totman Gym)

Rush Dates:
* February 2 Antonio's Night
* February 3 UMass v Temple game meet at DU at 7:00pm
* February 4 Fraternity Forum in Patterson Dorm
* February 9 Casino Night (no money needed)
* February 10 Wings Night
* February 11 Special Event

Feel free to call for a ride. All events start at 7:00pm

ΑΧΑ
Lambda Chi Alpha

Lambda Chi Alpha is a unique fraternity rich in history and tradition that has stood firm in the Greek community for many years. The UMass chapter was founded in 1912 and has two very distinguished alumni, Rick Pitino and Murray D. Lincoln (name of the campus center). We are a close knit community which will prepare our members for continued successful accomplishments in life. The vast resources brought by each brother are shared by all and assist in the academic achievement and personal growth of each member.

For more information call Matt or Jeremy at 549-0384. Lambda Chi Alpha is located on the corners of North Pleasant St and Fearing St.

Rush Events
All events are from 7-9pm
* 2/3 Info session in Patterson Lounge. Pizza and Drinks provided
* 2/4 Sports Event. Wings, Drinks, and Pool
* 2/9 Get to know brothers and Alumni
* 2/10 Pool and dart tournament
* 2/12 TBA

ΦΣΚ
Phi Sigma Kappa

For more information on Phi Sigma Kappa contact Sean at 549-7058 or stop by the house at 510 North Pleasant St.

ΦΜΔ
Phi Mu Delta

Phi Mu Delta has been at UMass since 1955 and throughout these years we have established a strong brotherhood. The alumni consist mainly of working professionals in various careers and communication with these individuals is constant. As a house, our GPA has been steadily improving over the past few years. Our reading room has been completely renovated and is equipped with personal computer, new desks, and course books. We, the brothers of Phi Mu Delta, look forward to seeing you and wish you the best of luck this semester.

Rides will be provided for all events. There will be cars at the horseshoe from 7:15 to 7:45pm. Signs will be posted. Call Sean at 549-7410 with any questions or stop by our house at 389 North Pleasant St..

Rush events
* Feb 3 Maverick Poker Night
* Feb 4 Fraternity Forum
* Feb 5 Graffiti Exchange
* Feb 10 Tour De Mu
* Feb 11 Night Out

ΠΚΑ
Pi Kappa Alpha

For more information on Pi Kappa Alpha stop by their house at 418 North Pleasant St..

ΣΑΜ
Sigma Alpha Mu

In a school as large as UMass, where students are known merely as a number, it is good to find a place where you can belong. We have brothers who come from as far as Colorado and Oklahoma, as close as Massachusetts. At Sammy we strive to reach excellence in all that we do. Academics, athletics, philanthropy, and so much more are what make us one of the strongest fraternities on campus.

With over 55 active brothers, including 15 newly inuated brothers, we are able to do more than just the basics. Our close friendship, respect, and loyalty for one another are second to none. We urge you to come down to rush and see what we are all about. Feel free to stop by our fraternity house at 395 N. Pleasant St. at anytime.

Rush events
* Feb 2 7:00-9:00pm
* Feb 3 7:00-9:00pm
* Feb 4 off
* Feb 9 7:00-9:00pm
* Feb 10 7:00-9:00pm
* Feb 11 time pending
* Feb 12 bids given out

* All events take place at Sigma Alpha Mu

ΣΦΕ
Sigma Phi Epsilon

Sigma Phi Epsilon was founded at UMass on November 1, 1912. Sig Ep's philanthropies include St. Edwards Church, The Amherst Survival Center, The Red Cross, and The Newman Center. Sig Ep is also very active in intramurals with final four teams in soccer and basketball. We also have the highest GPA among all fraternities for the fall 97 with a 2.8 cumulative average.

Anyone interested in rushing Sig Ep may call Nate at 549-0848. Or stop by the house at 57 Olympia Dr.

ΖΨ
Zeta Psi

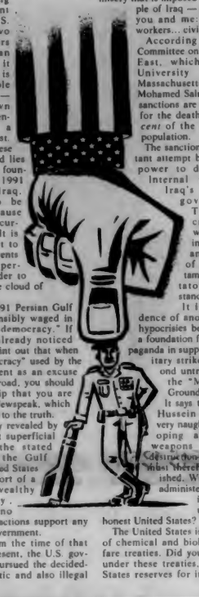
For more information on Zeta Psi contact Nate at 549-9187 or stop by their house at 387 North Pleasant St..

ΑΧΛΣΠΠΦΨΑΜΑΠΨΕΦΣΑΧΛΣΠΠΦΨΑΜΑΠΨΕΦΣΑΧΛΣΠΠΦΨΑΜΑΠΨΕΦΑΠΨΕΦΣ

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Analyzing the reasoning behind a U.S. strike on Iraq

U.S. motives hypocritical



Saddam asked for it…

- Point
- Counterpoint -

Daniel Bodah & John Wilkinson

All Americans who hold dear the values that this country was founded on should be actively and strongly against any United States military strike on Iraq. There are a number of false and hypocritical concepts at the bottom of the reasoning that has sent over 24,400 U.S. troops and two aircraft carriers to the Persian Gulf, making it clear the U.S. is playing the role of imperialist — which its own war for independence was a rebellion against.

Several of these hypocrisies and lies go back to the foundations of the 1991 war against Iraq, and need to be examined because they underlie current actions. It is also important to view current events in historical perspective in order to cut through the cloud of propaganda.

Saddam Under Pressure

First, the 1991 Persian Gulf War was ostensibly waged in the name of "democracy." If you haven't already noticed this, let me point out that when you see "democracy" used by the U.S. government as an excuse for actions abroad, you should take it as a tip that you are reading pure Newspeak, which has no relation to the truth.

This is easily revealed by even the most superficial analysis of the stated motives for the Gulf War. The United States acted in support of a fabulously wealthy monarchy, Kuwait. In no way did U.S. actions support any democratic government.

In fact, from the time of that war to the present, the U.S. government has pursued the decidedly undemocratic and also illegal goal of deposing Saddam Hussein. The sanctions that prevent oil-rich Iraq from rebuilding its destroyed infrastructure have, as one objective, the destabilization of Hussein's support and hopefully his loss of power. Of course, this is being done through misery that is imposed on the people of Iraq — people like you and me: students, workers…civilians.

According to the Committee on the Middle East, which includes University of Massachusetts professor Mohamed Salmassi, these sanctions are responsible for the deaths of 5 percent of the total Iraqi population.

The sanctions are a blatant attempt by a foreign power to dictate the internal nature of Iraq's sovereign government.

The current crisis over weapons inspections is an extension of this same tampering, dictatorial U.S. stance.

It is also evidence of another of the hypocrisies being used as a foundation for U.S. propaganda in support of a military strike. This second untruth I'll call the "Moral High Ground" argument.

It says that Saddam Hussein has been very naughty in developing and hiding weapons of mass destruction and that he must therefore be punished. Who better to administer the spanking than the upright and honest United States?

The United States is a signatory of chemical and biological warfare treaties. Did you know that under these treaties, the United States reserves for itself exactly the same rights which Hussein is exercising now in Iraq? That's right, if U.N. Inspection teams attempted to inspect U.S. sites for evidence of chemical or biological weapons production, they would be subject to summary refusal to enter sites at the whim of the U.S. government — for reasons of "national security." Additionally, the United States would be allowed to object to the composition of the inspection teams based on, guess what? "National security" concerns.

This is the same argument that Hussein is using, and it makes a lot of sense. Do you think our country should let agents of an overtly enemy government (especially one that has said it wants to overthrow the U.S. government) go snooping around the White House, Camp David and President Clinton's house in Arkansas looking for evidence?

Of course not. Hussein would be an idiot and a bad ruler if he were to acquiesce to such heavy-handed tampering. If the United States really cared about getting rid of Iraqi weapons of mass destruction (of which the United States is the world leader due to its vast nuclear arsenal), it would have pulled its inspectors off the U.N. teams months ago and ended this whole foolish affair the respectable way.

A U.S. military strike on Iraq will kill tons of Iraqi civilians — but most likely not Hussein. Although the propaganda has very effectively put over the illusion that Saddam Hussein is Iraq, and therefore an attack on Iraq is an attack on Hussein, this just isn't true.

In fact, Iraq is populated by a lot of people who have nothing to do with this whole mess. These people shouldn't have to struggle for their freedom for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness against the world's new, improved imperial power.

Daniel Bodah is a Collegian columnist.

The crisis in the Persian Gulf is coming to a head.

If Saddam Hussein is allowed to defy United Nations resolutions much longer — buying time to relocate and hide his chemical and biological weapons — much of the seven years of work destroying these weapons will be undone.

Arabs and non-Arabs alike are rightly concerned for the Iraqi people.

To place blame for their condition on U.S.-backed sanctions, however, is to ignore the facts of the matter.

It was a U.S. initiative that led to a proposal to allow Iraq to sell $4 billion more worth of oil each year to pay for food and medical supplies.

It was a proposal that had no strings attached, but one that Saddam Hussein turned down in a calculated attempt to use the starving of his own people to undermine international support for sanctions.

Iraqi officials claim that it is Iraq's right as a sovereign nation to refuse the weapons inspections. If Iraqi leaders — including Saddam Hussein — paid so much respect to sovereignty, they would never have violated the sovereignty of their neighbor Kuwait.

The truth is that Iraq forfeited its own sovereignty the moment that it agreed to the U.N. resolutions in order to end the Gulf War.

Iraq's claims that it does not possess chemical or biological weapons are similarly incredible. Not only does Iraq possess chemical weapons, but Saddam has used them openly, against his own people and against Iran.

Iraq has manufactured and deployed mustard gas, which burns and dissolves skin on contact; Sarin, the gas used in the Tokyo subway attack; and VX, familiar to fans of the Sean Connery-Nicholas Cage movie The Rock.

Furthermore, after denying having any biological weapons program for years, the Iraqi government admitted in 1995 that it not only possessed, but had "weaponized" and deployed anthrax, an incurable and deadly virus.

The government also done the same with botulinum toxin, a poison that kills by paralyzing the lungs and heart; and aflatoxin, a potent carcinogen.

After years of deception and continued delaying of weapons inspections, how is the Iraqi government to be believed now?

The questions are: how to attack, and how much destruction of Saddam's support structure should be enough?

The latter question is for Saddam to decide. Only he can choose when to give in to the U.N.'s demands, and only he can decide when to lift the sanctions that are hurting his people.

The former question is up to us.

With two, and soon to be three, aircraft carriers in the Persian Gulf, the U.S. is capable of delivering hundreds of tons of precision-guided bombs to their targets daily.

This, even without the help of any allies or air bases in Saudi Arabia or Turkey.

The Navy claims that its carriers are capable of continuing such operations for up to six months, if necessary. After only a few weeks of continued bombardment, Navy aviators would have difficulty finding still-standing targets for their bombs.

It 's agreed that any military strikes should target only suspected production and storage sites for chemical and biological weapons, as well as the only political constituency that matters to Saddam, his Republican Guard and military.

The Iraqi people, already forced to suffer at the hands of a power-mongering dictator who builds billion-dollar presidential palaces to hide weapons plans while his people starve, would be spared the brunt of any attack.

However, if Saddam can weather that firestorm (he has proven himself to be unusually tough in the past), the U.S. faces a tougher decision.

Some sites would be off-limits for an air-strike because Saddam has cleverly placed several of his chemical and biological weapons stockpiles near civilian centers.

An attack on these sites runs the risk of dispersing Saddam's anthrax throughout the atmosphere and initiating a plague amongst Iraqi citizens.

This cannot be allowed to happen, and Secretary of Defense William Cohen has stated that the U.S. will not target such sites if there is the possibility of chemical or biological fallout harming Iraqi civilians.

Unfortunately, if Saddam does not back down after repeated airstrikes and allow the U.N. inspectors to return to their work, the only way to be reasonably sure of destroying Iraq's chemical and biological weapons is to send in ground troops.

Hopefully it will not come to this, as a mere month of heavy air attack with America's new-and-improved weapons would result in the destruction of more targets than took place during the entire Gulf War.

The question of if and why we must take military action against Saddam Hussein has now become a question of when and how.

For seven years, Saddam has defied the terms of the U.N. security council resolutions that he agreed to in order to end the Gulf War.

During those seven years, his stubborn insistence on maintaining programs to acquire chemical and biological weapons has cost his people over $100 billion in revenue from lost oil exports.

Nowhere in the relevant U.N. declarations on weapons inspections are exceptions made for presidential palaces or limits placed on the number of Americans in the inspection teams.

His stalling of the U.N. weapons inspectors can no longer be tolerated.

If he does not allow immediate, unlimited access by the inspectors, military action must be taken.

John Wilkinson is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

No carts on PGA Tour

To the editor:

This is in response to the articles written by Casey Kane about the Casey Martin PGA golf decision.

I would blatantly like to say she doesn't know what she is talking about. As an avid golfer myself, which Ms. Kane obviously is not, she doesn't know what golf is like. She said that golf is different from other sports, and it is. In golf you are not competing against another team. Instead you are competing against other individuals. Any advantage another individual can have vastly helps him. Ms. Kane says that walking is not essential in golf. She said if so, why do country clubs give mucky mucks golf carts. Well, those people aren't there to play competitive golf, they are there to socialize. As serious golfers, who play golf for real, walk like golf was intended to be played. I myself have never seen any serious golfer use a cart, unless he was over 70 years old, which Casey Martin is not.

It is tragic that he has a degenerative disease in his leg. However, if it is so disabling, then how did he compete at Stanford, on the same golf team as Tiger Woods, without ever using a cart? To most of the American public, the PGA will seem like an ogre. However, to us fellow serious golfers, the PGA is fighting for its way of life. When such hallowed names like Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus say they are against Casey Martin, among many others, how can they be wrong? If Casey Martin wins his case against the PGA, professional golf will never be the same, or as good as it could be.

Let me just close with some advice for Ms. Kane. She should read Jacob Fanning's article on soaps. In it, he says "I wouldn't presume to criticize something I had absolutely no knowledge of."

Ryan Ascher
RyKirk1701@aol.com

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor. Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words long, and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes.
They can be submitted by mail to Ed/Op Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst MA 01003; by email to letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu; or by fax to (413) 545-1592.
The Collegian reserves the right to edit letters for length, clarity and style.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Death penalty for Tucker justified

Seema Gangatirkar

Yesterday, at a little after 6 p.m. central time, Karla Faye Tucker died by lethal injection. Tucker, who confessed to the 1983 pickaxe murders of a former lover and his companion, became the first woman executed in Texas since the 1863 hanging of Chipita Rodriguez.

The execution of Tucker gained much attention for two reasons: first, she is a woman and second, she was a born- again Christian.

Yesterday, the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles had voted unanimously to turn down Tucker's pleas for clemency, despite support from many, including Pope John Paul II. Their decision left Tucker's ultimate fate in the hands of Governor George W. Bush and the United States Supreme Court. But reprieve did not come for Tucker.

Texas isn't a state known for mercy when it comes to executions. Since 1993, all 76 requests for clemency have been denied and last year, a record 37 convicted killers were executed — with barely a fuss.

Occasionally, there is an argument about whether the death penalty is against the Constitution or whether the state- sanctioned killing of another human being is really a sanitized version of murder.

Those arguments were not raised in Tucker's defense. Instead, those rallying to save Tucker cited her newfound faith as a sign the 38-year-old woman was rehabilitated and repented her crime. Tucker even married the prison chaplain two years ago.

But is discovering God reason enough to grant mercy to a woman, who at the age of 23, took a pickaxe and cruelly bludgeoned two people to death?

For some, it was all the reason needed. For others, it was not.

There is an argument that rehabilitation is the point of every prison system and that if a convicted felon is able to change for the better and rejoin society in a productive manner, then the prison has done its job. Given that argument, Tucker should have been allowed to live.

But did she deserve to live, considering her rehabilitation?

The answer is no.

Take Timothy McVeigh. When he bombed the Alfred A. Murrah Building in Oklahoma City in 1995, the bombing was the single largest act of terrorism committed on American soil. No one blinked when McVeigh was handed the death sentence last year; his life for the 170 he took on that April morning.

Yet, how come all the fuss about Tucker? Are the two lives she took any less valued than the 170 McVeigh is responsible for? Or is it because, unlike McVeigh, she was genuinely sorry for what she did?

There is a moral ambiguity here. Were apologies enough to commute Tucker's sentence to life in prison?

Some would say yes; God knows there are plenty of unrepentant souls out there, sitting out decades on death row. Certainly, in cases like this, people would have no problem handing out the death penalty; some would even flick the switch themselves.

But because Tucker cared about what she did, her execution took on a different perspective. Was the punishment justified?

Even in hindsight, the answer does not change; it's still yes. She apologized for what she did, but apologies are not enough.

Death penalties are not handed out lightly. The choice to sentence a fellow human being to the most final of punishments is an excruciating decision for even the most hardened of jurists.

And in Tucker's case, the gruesome nature of her crime made it difficult to forgive so easily. While it's admirable she found comfort in religion after the murders, it is because of those murders she was executed.

Tucker's final journey to the death chamber in Huntsville, Texas, was determined by her actions 14 years ago — and nothing, not even repentance, can excuse the brutal slayings of two innocent people.

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor-in-Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Co-Editor
Tamar Carroll Editorial/Opinion Co-Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor

Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Leigh Faulkner News Editor
Lauren Konky Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor

Joeseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
David Parmenter Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

The freewheelin' Bob Dylan

Bob Dylan showed who was boss Monday night in Springfield. COURTESY COLUMBIA

By Marty Keane
Collegian Staff

BOB DYLAN
Springfield Symphony Hall
Feb. 2

SPRINGFIELD — Perhaps it was a testament to times a- changin', but the crowd as Bob Dylan's Symphony Hall performance was as varied and mercurial as the man they came to see. The words diverse and timeless immediately come to mind when describing both Monday night's crowd and Dylan's bottomless well of quality material.

The sold-out show — while hardly a revelation — served as an excellent overview of nearly every musical style Dylan has explored since leaving Duluth, Minn. in the late 1950s. From his bombastic protest songs from the Vietnam War era to murky stream-of-consciousness narratives, Dylan and his backing band touched all the bases: whether it be rock 'n roll, country, electrified folk-rock or the blues.

As is the case with anyone with a catalog of songs that numbers well into the hundreds, the show was notable for what he did not play as much as what he did. Absent from the set were such standards as "A Hard Rain's a-Gonna Fall," "Highway 61 Revisited" and the once-again poignant "Knockin' On Heaven's Door." It was of little consequence

Turn to DYLAN page 6

It's about respect & money for Lox

Hurricane #1 lacks bite, Victoria Williams too serious on latest try

MONEY, POWER & RESPECT
The Lox
Bad Boy Records

Hmmm, rapping about nice cars, big houses, fancy clothing, champagne, stocks and bonds and a song with a chorus taken from a Rod Stewart hit in the '80s… where have I heard this before? Oh, this is a Bad Boy release; I knew this reeked of staleness. As I listen to this, I wonder if the sacrifices I make for the Collegian are really worth while.

The Lox, a threesome from Yonkers, are Puffy's new stallions to carry the Bad Boy banner into 1998. The problem is it doesn't change at all from the formula used in '97. So if you want commercial rap this is where you'll get it, in heaping unhealthy doses.

The coffee coaster — I mean disc — starts off with "Livin' The Life" a surprisingly promising track. The song maintains a dark sparse beat (RZA anyone?) where the members of the Lox describe a day in their life. We learn that they do nothing else besides drive around in tinted out Land Cruisers, while drinking crystal and smoking blunts, but they add enough humor that they come close to capturing the precedent set forth by Biggie.

After that, they keep rapping about how all you need is money and you will get respect and power; it's all just Big Willie talk from a bunch of rappers who should be paying rent in Puff Daddy's pockets. The title track "Money, Power and Respect" features Lil Kim and (thank God) DMX, who saves the track. The rest of the CD is standard Bad Boy; you'll probably hear most of it on the radio anyway, so save your money.

The saddest thing about the Lox is that they do have skills that shine through. However, they are too saddled down with the Bad Boy image to show the world what they can do. These guys need to learn that respect comes from skills not money; it's the same reason that Puff Daddy or Mase will never be mentioned in the same sentence as Premier or KRS-One. This was disappointing to say the least. D (Adam Dlugacz)

WAG THE DOG SOUNDTRACK
Marc Knopfler
Mercury Records

As the first notes of the title track emanate from Mark Knopfler's guitar, you can't help but reminisce on his younger days with Dire Straits. Wag The Dog hearkens back to the days of "Communique" and "Angel Of Mercy," with the slow, funky groove opening the soundtrack nicely.

But people, this is a soundtrack, so after the token gesture of lyrically oriented work; Knopfler explores the instrumental work that has been his trademark with guitar legend Chet Atkins. Tracks like "Stretching Out" and "We're Going To War" bring back the good old days with the Straits, while "Just Instinct" and "Drooling National" showcase his work with the country and bluegrass legend.

Most of the instrumental tracks keep it short and sweet, which is a nice touch because this soundtrack is by no means Knopfler's premier work. Not even close.

But it is him, and his sweet fingerpicking style resonates throughout the release. At 24:15 in length, that soundtrack is almost a sampler of his work in instrumental musical composition. And that is not so bad. B (Iorma Karsanen)

MUSINGS OF A CREEKDIPPER
Victoria Williams
Atlantic Records

The sublime boom and crash of the opening track "Periwinkle Sky," mixed with William's beautiful voice creates an almost orchestral feel. Combined with the second track "Rainmaker," which touches on those same aspects, the disc promises great things out of the Lilith Fair participant.

But not so fast there sunshine…

After picking up the pace from the slower songs that open the disc, this effort from Williams drowns in lyrical and musical obscurity — with a variety of musical influences like country, blues and jazz mixing at times like oil and water. Not very appetizing, to say the least.

Through this muddled product.

Turn to TRAX page 6

Attention all new and returning writers: The Arts & Living section will be holding a meeting on Thursday, Feb. 5 at 6 p.m. for all those interested in writing this semester. Any questions? Call Seema Gangatirkar, Arts & Living editor, at 545-1361.

The Fine Art of Balance

Now that you are graduating, you are interested in making a difference in the business world, yet you also want to be active outside of the office. At Kenan Systems, we highly value such goals, and strive to maintain that balance through a collegial work environment where talent is cherished and excellence is nurtured. We dedicate ourselves to both the personal and professional growth of each of our employees. It's how we have become a leading global software company of over 450 employees and the employer-of-choice for smart, collaborative innovative people like you.

Kenan Systems serves global telecommunications customers launching new products and services utilizing the Internet, cable networks, and telephone networks, searching for new ways to reach potential customers in highly competitive markets. We provide strategic software products and services for billing, customer care, order management, and management support to large organizations in the communications industry worldwide. Our impressive client list includes AT&T, British Telecom, France Telecom, GTE, World Com, Optus, and Telus.

With an emphasis on the time-to-market and a passion for customer satisfaction, Kenan Systems uses the latest technologies and breaks through organizational techniques to differentiate itself from the competition.

We are currently seeking candidates for the following positions:

SEE US AT AMHERST COLLEGE ON FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 6

Software Development
We offer several excellent opportunities in our development group, designing, developing, and delivering state-of-the-art software products in the rapidly expanding markets for billing, customer care, and multi-dimensional OLAP technology. A strong academic record is required, preferably with a Computer Science, Mathematics, Physics or like background. Successful candidates possess excellent communication skills, as well as a strong working knowledge in a variety of operating systems and languages. Hands-on experience with C, C++, and SQL on the UNIX and Windows NT platforms, or with Windows application development using Visual Basic, and C++ is beneficial.

Marketing
Marketing at Kenan offers several opportunities for graduates with an interest in information technology as Market Development Representatives, Market Research Specialists, and Marketing Documentation Specialists. Each position requires a high degree of client contact, as they each participate in key areas of prospect care. Successful candidates must posses a high energy level and ability to work in a fast-paced environment, an excellent collegiate record of achievement, and an outstanding attitude and aptitude for learning.

Consulting
Consultants at Kenan assist in delivering customized decision support and executive information systems. Consultants work with clients on requirements definition and analysis, targeted development using state-of-the-art technologies, and field support of local software installations in a team environment. An excellent academic record is required, preferably in Computer Science, Math or another quantitative concentration with the background. Successful candidates possess strong communication and interpersonal skills, an affinity toward advanced technology, and a desire to remain in front of new developments.

Business Development
Pre-Sales Consultants work with high-profile clients to obtain solution requirements, and then develop and present product demonstrations that address those requirements. Successful candidates possess excellent academic standing in Computer Science or another quantitative academic concentration. Familiarity with UNIX and shell scripting as well as expertise in written and oral presentations are musts.

For more detailed information on the above openings, please visit our website.

If you're unable to visit us at Amherst College, then please send your resume to: Kenan Systems Corporation, Attn: College Recruiting, One Main Street, 9th Floor, Cambridge, MA 02142. Fax: (617) 225-2220. Email: dbenoit@kenan.com

An Equal Opportunity Employer

K-E-N-A-N
www.kenan.com

Subscribe to:

The Boston Globe

@ 40% off the newsstand price!!!

To get The Boston Globe delivered to your dorm or office, please fill out this form and drop in campus mail with payment to:

John Riley
College News Service
UMASS Amherst, Campus Center Hotel
Amherst, MA 01035

Please check desired service:

Spring Term

7 Days MON-SUN	☐ $37.35
6 Days MON-SAT	☐ $22.50
5 Days MON-FRI	☐ $19.20
SUNDAY ONLY	☐ $14.85

The above prices reflect subscriptions starting on 2/9/98

Name _____ Campus Phone _____
Campus Address _____
If you are paying by credit card, please complete: ☐ VISA ☐ MC ☐ AMEX ☐ DISCOVER
Card Number _____ Exp. Date _____
Cardholder Name _____ Signature _____

The Boston Globe

Have you seen the Globe Today?

Wood & Wire an admirable CD

By Bradley Skought
Collegian Staff

CHRIS VON SNEIDERN
Wood and Wire
Mod Lang

Chris Von Sneidern's Wood and Wire is probably going to be ignored for precisely the reasons it should be revered: It's a pop album that values song, skill and sincerity over style. Listen people, even Pavement figured out that all the scratchy indie-pop guitars in the world aren't going to save a half-baked idea. So while the followers of fashion are showered with praise for transparent stylistic retreads, Von Sneidern is quietly making stunning melodic masterpieces that simply outcraft 90 percent of the nonsense passing for "pop" these days.

Based in San Francisco, Von Sneidern's handful of albums are barely available outside of his hometown and are best ordered from his current label, Mod Lang. Good starting points for comparison would be the blue eyed soul leanings of '80s pop bands like Squeeze or Crowded House mixed with the more baroque arrangements of his contemporary Eric Matthews. Luckily he manages to avoid the watered down sheen of the former and the gadgetry of the latter in songs that marry subtle, imaginative arrangements with soaring, gutsy melodies — sophisticated without pretension and lush without syrup. Most of this would turn to heavy handed mush in less accomplished hands, but Von Sneidern keeps his wits about him and pulls the heartstrings without having to pull out all the stops.

It is, in fact, the restraint on this album which is so impressive. The songs are towering, even epic, but there's not a tricky gimmick in sight and even the more explosive rave-ups succeed without hammering "Drama" into your brain. Beatles and Beach Boys comparisons are inevitable, perhaps, but apt in their suggestion of the taste and smarts it takes to deliver this kind of pop. A thoughtful smattering of harpsichords, trumpets and wall-of-Wilson background vocals help flesh out the picture, too.

The really isn't a bad song to be found here, but it's the album's centerpiece, "Circles," which epitomizes Van Sneidern's talent — a gorgeous, bittersweet melody and crashing power pop guitars that melt into a bridge whose breathtaking choir of

Turn to CVS, page 7

COURTESY ANDREW SCOTTHAM

Victoria Williams tries too hard and takes herself too seriously on her new CD.

■ Dylan

continued from page 5

though. Dylan (wearing an oversized white cowboy hat) was on his mark all night — the arrangements were fluid and clever, and his band perfectly framed each of the show's 15 songs.

Unlike many of his recent area performances, it didn't take long for Dylan to catch stride. From the first few bars of the opening rockabilly tune "Absolutely Sweet Marie," Dylan and company were in fine form and never lost focus.

The show's apex came midway through on an almost hallucinatory "Masters of War," his gravelly voice perfectly echoing the song's raggedness with sinister defiance. "Tangled Up in Blue" followed and was a foot-stompin' delight, featuring multi-instrumentalist extraordinaire Buddy Baxter on mandolin. In the largest spontaneous display of mass adulation this writer has ever seen, throngs of people suddenly rushed towards the stage to shower the inscrutable one with appreciation. Clearly revelling in the moment, Dylan extended the song into a 10-minute tour-de-force featuring a fierce guitar jam between himself and lead guitarist Larry Campbell that recalled a recent performance by blues legend Buddy Guy.

Dylan fits into his band much like Neil Young fits into Crazy Horse; with the sole difference being that Young plays lead guitar and Dylan plays rhythm. The two men — now well into their 50s — also share something else, a similar playing style. Both treat their instruments with an almost reverential respect, coyly coaxing out powerful riffs.

The evening's closer, a lights-up "Rainy Day Women #12 & 35," provided a rapturous end to a 105-minute, triple- encore triumph. The crowd — ranging from grown-up hippies yearning for a bit of that old '60s magic to kids as young as 8-years-old — all joined in for a hearty dose of anti-establishment merriment. If everybody "must get stoned," that's still perfectly fine with Bob Dylan.

■ trax

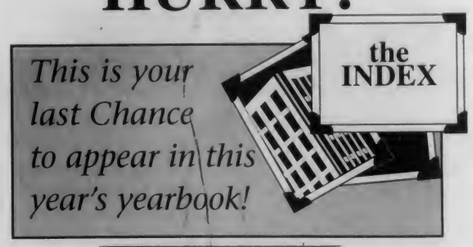
continued from page 5

which Williams' even admits has "some very beautiful parts to it," a few tracks stand out. The two opening tracks combined with "Let It Be So," "Hummingbird" and "Blackbirds Rise" do bring out the quality in this release, but Williams' major fault is that she tries way too hard, and takes herself way too seriously.

Like a stew, if you throw too many things into it, the good flavors are counterbalanced by the bad ones. Just listen to "Grandpa In The Compatch" if you want to know what I mean; that is, if you really want to buy this one. C+ (JK)

HURRICANE #1
Hurricane #1
Sire/Warner Bros.

Here we go — another band from England. Only this one features former members of Ride, so they have street credibility. Too bad Hurricane #1's self-titled debut makes you wonder if the only bands these guys have ever listened to are Oasis, Blur, The Stone Roses and the Beatles. Actually to be more accurate, the band has filtered those four bands through the Soupbones — not that that's something to be proud of.



The song opens up with "Just Another Illusion," and although it is not a tribute to Guns N' Roses, it could be one to the Stone Roses. "Faces In A Dream" and "Step Into My World" the next two songs follow along the lines of a more hippyish Roses. When Hurricane #1 sticks to that opening formula they are a pleasant listen. Guitarist Andy Bell is fairly inventive and the guitar riffs stay interesting. Vocalist Alex Lowe has a good voice and compliments the music beautifully, although he does maintain the typical British dreamy style.

Hurricane #1 really runs into a wall when they try to imitate Oasis or Blur. The lyrics don't maintain Blur's biting social commentary and even their longest songs never match Oasis's beautiful composition. On songs like "Let Go Of The Dream," they sound like cheap imitations.

Despite their namesake, Hurricane #1 sound more like a light breeze. C+ (AD)

HURRY!

This is your last Chance to appear in this year's yearbook!

All this week!
Schedule a sitting
(800) 836-0558

GET YOUR SENIOR INDEX YEARBOOK PHOTO NOW!

Campus Center Rm. 177-178

Hawke, Paltrow share similar expectations

COURTESY COLUMBIA

Ethan Hawke joins a generation of talented new actors — including fellow Great Expectations star, Gwyneth Paltrow

By Bryan McAllister
Collegian Staff

Actors Ethan Hawke and Gwyneth Paltrow have a lot more in common than their steamy companionship in the new film Great Expectations.

Both stars began their respective careers in the theater. Both are as famous for their off-screen romances as their on- screen roles. Both consistently dabble in thought-provoking films to compliment their big-concept ventures. And most notably, both are two of Hollywood's brightest young talents, members of a select group of young performers — Matt Damon, Ben Affleck, Leonardo DiCaprio and Claire Danes included — who look great and can actually act, too.

The two can currently be seen paired up in the film adaptation of Charles Dickens' classic novel. Taking a cue from Clueless (loosely based on Jane Austen's Emma) and Romeo and Juliet, the film updates the 19th-century setting to contemporary times.

While some small details are changed, the basic story of a coming-of-age boy dealing with life's coincidences remains intact. Of course, being a loose adaption, the movie focuses more extensively on the often chaotic romance between the passionate artist Finn (Hawke) and the cold, spoiled Estella (Paltrow).

Among many sensual scenes, including one where Finn paints a portrait of a nude Estella, Hawke and Paltrow are given the chance to show their sex appeal, as well as their trademark acting styles.

The film opened to uneven reviews but a solid $9.9 million at the box-office, second only to the unstoppable Titanic.

It's not surprising that Ethan Hawke fits so well into the role of Finn. Like Finn, Hawke had humble beginnings before being thrust into the Hollywood spotlight. Born in Austin, Texas, Hawke mostly studied theater, and foreshadowed his leading man qualities as Romeo in his high school's production of Romeo and Juliet.

But Hawke has never been your typical Romeo. In fact, his characters have always seemed to shun that role, preferring to revel in their twenty-something independence.

Hawke's first roles, however, were quite different from those recent ones. He tended to play shy but earnest characters — nice guys, essentially. He made his debut along with River Phoenix in Joe Dante's cult classic The Explorers, as a young boy with big dreams of flying, outer space, and winning over the girl next door.

Hawke soon found sudden stardom playing the role of the self-conscious Todd Anderson in the Academy Award winning Dead Poets Society. In that film, Hawke's dead-on portrayal of a shy follower with low self-esteem earned him critical acclaim. It also garnered quick fan approval, and his climactic rendition of "Oh Captain, My Captain" will be forever etched into audiences' minds.

Perhaps the fame changed him, because Hawke's movie roles changed dramatically. With his boyish aloofness still at hand, Hawke was willingly typecast as the typical "Gen-X" guy in such movies as Reality Bites and Before Sunrise. Perhaps only similar in their cynical sense of humor, the two roles provided Hawke with an opportunity to show off his versatile talents. Speaking of versatility, Hawke recently wrote a novel, The Hottest State, and serves as artistic director for the theater group Malaparte.

With two recent big roles, Hawke is back in the spotlight, but perhaps now for a personal reason. While working on last fall's Gattaca, he met and became involved with — much to the chagrin of every guy in Hollywood — Uma Thurman. The two are expecting a baby this summer. Perhaps Hawke's characters will now begin to explore his generation's idea of fatherhood.

If Hawke is like Finn, then it's even easier to compare Gwyneth Paltrow to Estella. Born to successful producer Bruce Paltrow and acclaimed actress Blythe Danner, Paltrow has led the fairytale life — or so it seems — that every aspiring actress dreams of. Originating from the theater, one of Paltrow's first roles was as a young Wendy in Steven Spielberg's Hook. She then went on to co-star, despite her character's unfortunate demise, in the successful Seven. She won critical acclaim for her leading role in the adaption of Jane Austen's Emma. Oh, and she dated, and almost married, Brad Pitt, something she still is perhaps most famous for.

However, Paltrow's life and career haven't been a breeze. Besides the hard Pitt split, she suffered through giant misses like The Pallbearer. Paltrow also read for the role of Rose in Titanic, a part which was eventually bestowed upon Kate Winslet.

Paltrow has survived the misses with some intriguing roles, though. She's been able to switch on a dime from the endearing Emma to the icy Estella. And as the latter, she shows off her lush sexuality without even showing much skin — something Hollywood actresses are rarely able to do.

Certainly Great Expectations is a title worthy of both stars' budding careers. Ironically, both have confessed that they didn't read the classic novel in high school, although Hawke did read the Cliff Notes.

Dickens may be rolling in his grave at the adaptation, but he would be even more perturbed if he found out the high school population is finding any way possible to avoid reading the book.

■ CVS

continued from page 5

"aahs" will bring tears to your eyes. Most of the songs are cut from similar cloth, but Von Sneidern gives them all enough twists and turns to give each a distinctive charm. "Split It" winds its way from a simple harpsichord driven verse to a thundering chorus. "I Can See" adds some psychedelic guitars, and there's even a little bossa nova on the touching "Like Me That Way." These aren't tricks, though — Von Sneidern knows exactly how to frame his snapshots and there's nary a self-indulgent note on the album. In many ways his writing recalls the melodic invention of later-year Chris Stamey or fellow Bay area pop genius Scott Miller. He shares their ear for insight, too, in his thoughtful portrayal of relationship roller coasters. On "Split It" he sings, "you can keep your picture book, but I'll retain my vision."

If Von Sneidern fails anywhere, it's in his occasional reliance on the clichéd sweep of a Hammond B3 to add spice where his stunning voice would more than suffice. A tendency toward these kinds of conventions threatens to smooth over some of the song's glorious sparkle, but it's rare enough to forgive. And who knows, perhaps a little more time mastering his craft in obscurity will allow him to unleash an even more impressive album by the time the music world wakes up and starts paying attention to artists who just write a good song and know how to deliver it. Consider this nearly flawless album a challenge to hipsters and lemmings: write a song or go away. A

(For information on ordering Wood and Wire, write to Mod Lang Records, P.O. Box 10111, Berkeley, CA 94709.)

Theater performance examines lives of 3 Latinos in AIDS age

COURTESY NEW WORLD THEATER

Quinceañera stars Michael Marinez (back), Paul Bonin-Rodriguez and Alberto Antonio Araiza.

By Emily Trask
Collegian Staff

To start off the 1998 spring season, the University of Massachusetts Theater Department presents Quinceañera in conjunction with the New WORLD Theater.

This unique performance is a collaborative, multi- disciplinary performance and community outreach event which is mainly focused on the lives three queer Latinos and their families. The performance will also examine the first 15 years of the AIDS pandemic.

Quinceañera, is an original performance piece created by Alberto Antonio (a.k.a. "Beto") Araiza, Paul Bonin-Rodriguez, and Michael Marinez. Joe Salvatore, who is an MFA candidate, is directing this performance.

Quinceañera, traditionally a Latina's "sweet fifteen" celebration, will explore a different type of coming-of-age process which is experienced by gay men. This piece will address the "rites of passage" in the lives of gay men who, in celebrating their coming of age experience, are also confronted with the difficult task of celebrating life and death in the age of AIDS. The basis of the performance is formed through narratives, history, improvisations, audience participation and poetry. This work-in-production will be seen for the first time in workshop at UMass.

This performance piece will be staged at the Curtain Theater on Feb. 4,5,6,&7 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $7 for the general public and $4 for students, low-income patrons and children 17 and under. For tickets call the Box Office at (413) 545-2511 or 1-800- 999- UMAS.

HEY!
Ski or Ride just $21
Bus + Lift Ticket Included

Daily Bus Leaves:	UMass	9:55 am
	Amherst Center	10:00 am
Arrive:	Mt. Tom	10:35 am
Leave:	Mt.Tom	4:30 pm
Arrive:	UMass	5:10 pm

Always Where You & Night — Mt. TOM Ski Area — Peter Pan

Wednesday Night
Chad LaMarsh
Returns
"Boston's Best Acoustic Rocker"
Playing your Favorite Cover Songs
Weekly Drink Specials
20oz. Miller Lite Drafts $1.
Bucket of Rocks
4 12oz. Rolling Rock $5.
Plus A free T-Shirt
22 oz. Rolling Rock 2.
Live food. smart. THE PUB on Boast
Over 40 Hand Crafted Beers
Smoking Section 10-1
15 East Pleasant Street • Amherst

catch the sun at
REGENCY HAIRSTYLISTS 253-9526

UMASS DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION
Something for Everyone
Workshops offered evenings, daytime, weekends, off and on campus
Nearly 100 noncredit workshops
Including:
• Mask Making
• Network Marketing
• Web Page Design
• Chocolate
• Songwriting
• Art Therapy
• Retirement Planning
• Genealogy
• UFOs
• Playback Theatre
• Bartending
• EMT Training
Spring semester workshops begin February 9
For a free course catalog, call 413-545-0107 or e-mail contined@admin.umass.edu
www.umass.edu/contined/
a quality education at an affordable price
• DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION •
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

JAMAICA
ONE LOVE. ONE HEART. ONE GREAT PARTY!!!
IT'S THAT TIME OF YEAR WHEN THOUSANDS OF STUDENTS COME TO JAMAICA TO FEEL ALRIGHT - FOR AN UNBELIEVABLE PRICE!!!
PACKAGE INCLUDES:
• Round-Trip Airfare
• 7 Nights Hotel Accommodations
• Round-Trip Airport & Hotel Transfers
• Free Welcome, Beach & Evening Parties
• Free Admission to Night Clubs
• Discounts on Restaurants, Water Sports & Side Excursions
• Montego Bay Packages Available from $399
• Professional On-Site Tour Reps
• Complete Weekly Activities Program Offering Optional Sunset Cruise, Ocean Cruise, Toga Party & More!
• Free Ocean Party Pack
SUN SPLASH TOURS
1 800-426-7710
STUDENT TRAVEL SERVICES
1 800-648-4849
Price is per person based on quad occupancy. NY, EWR/Wash, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus, Rochester, New Orleans, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh departures. Other cities may qualify for reduction or require surcharge. US and Jamaica departure taxes (currently $21) and $5 handling charge additional. Add $30 for 3/5 / 8/98 bookings. Rates increase $30 on 12/15/97. Peak week surcharges/off-week discounts may apply. Restrictions and cancellation penalties apply. Limited availability. Subject to change without notice. Call for full details on hotel selection and availability.

There's a first time for everything

JORMA KANGANEN

Senior hockey captain Tim Lovell was awarded co-Hockey East Player of the Week for scoring three goals and three assists this past weekend.

USA speedskater fulfills ice dream

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

NAGANO — Marc Pelchat always dreamed of skating in the Olympics. He just expected to be on hockey skates, not speed skates.

"I never even thought about speedskating," said Pelchat, a native of Chelmsford, who will skate the 500-meter long-track event in Nagano. "Maybe I was a little naive, but I always felt like I would play hockey the rest of my life."

That part of his life ended in 1992. Even though he was a superior stickhandler and skater, the NHL had no use for the 5-foot-9, 175-pound defenseman after he finished his college career.

Pelchat continued to play in a Massachusetts pro-am league, earning an invitation to try out for the U.S. Olympic team before the Albertville Games.

Three days before the camp began, his father suffered a stroke and Pelchat decided to be with his family.

The elder Pelchat recovered, but his son injured an ankle playing hockey later in that Olympic year. It was to be the first step toward putting down his stick and getting on with the rest of life.

Pelchat took up short-track speedskating intending to rehabilitate his bum ankle and perhaps pick up an extra step that would help him in the hockey rink. He found the new sport to be much more rewarding.

"I'm a very competitive person and I was probably the worst skater out there," he said, able to laugh about it now. "The older ladies and young kids were all beating me. It got to the point where I said to myself, 'I can't let this happen.'"

Besides, his hockey career wasn't going anywhere. Within two years, Pelchat was a top-level short-track skater at the national level, affording him the chance to compete in some international meets.

"I got my feet wet and my butt kicked," he recalled.

Pelchat decided to switch to long-track because his stocky frame tends to build up too much muscle mass for the tight confines of the shorter track.

"In short track, you've got to be small and light," he said. "I was fighting my size, so I came to long track. I could train as much as I wanted to and not miss any workouts."

In January, at age 30, Pelchat's dream finally came true at the U.S. Olympic trials in Wisconsin when he qualified in the 500.

"I always knew I could do it," he said. "When I first started speedskating, people were telling me not to get my hopes up. You don't come in at 25 and make the Olympic team. That takes 10 or 15 years and by then, you'll be too old anyway.

"Well, those people don't know me.

Full-time teacher earns spot on Olympic ski team

By Lisa Rathke
Associated Press

HYDE PARK, Vt. — Marc Gilbertson leads a dual life. In Morrisville, Vt., he is a young, enthusiastic social studies teacher students call Gilb. In the world of cross-country skiing, he is the longshot-turned-Olympic-racer, who had never before skied a World Cup race.

On Dec. 30, Gilbertson skied the 30-kilometer race in Lake Placid, N.Y., and won. His time of 1 hour, 28 minutes, 37.8 seconds landed him one of the five coveted spots on the men's Olympic cross-country team.

That kind of surprise is what the Olympics are all about. Olympic coach Gordon Lange likes to see a racer not from the national team come out and make it to the games. On Feb. 22, Gilbertson will compete in the 50-kilometer freestyle race in Nagano, Japan.

Gilbertson has no coach, no team, few donations and a full-time job. He has 14 years of skiing behind him, but few wins to show for it. What he does have is dedication and overwhelming support from his students and his community.

"Most folks either get donations or work as a waiter or waitress," he said. Gilbertson, instead, taught social studies full time to seventh and eighth graders. He trained before and after school with a lamp strapped to his head. And this year he mapped out a plan to take a year off, make the Olympics and survive on his savings.

Cowboys head coaching job uncertain

By Donne H. Freeman
Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — Terry Donahue returned to California yesterday after another round of interviews and a night at owner Jerry Jones' mansion, creating an uncertain turn in the Dallas Cowboys' search for a new coach.

The former UCLA coach had a third meeting with Jones before catching an early-morning flight home, heightening speculation that things did not go well.

Still, only Jones, sons Stephen and Jerry Jr., and Donahue know for sure.

And the latest developments leave the Cowboys into a fourth week as they try to find a successor to Barry Switzer. Jones, who hired Jimmy Johnson and Switzer although they had no NFL coaching experience, did not return calls. He had said a new coach would be hired by mid-week, but whatever happened with Donahue seemed to rule out an imminent decision.

"There is no timetable estimate for the near future. I'm not a liberty to say whether there will be more interviews," team spokesman Rich Dalrymple said.

Jones also claims to have a "mystery" candidate he can fall back on if all else fails. And he insists he will have a coach that will have the players and fans "sitting up in their seats."

Donahue was set to fly to Indianapolis tomorrow with the Cowboys for the NFL combine and it wasn't known if that trip was still planned.

Green Bay offensive coordinator Sherman Lewis and former San Francisco coach George Seifert have had two interviews each. Lewis got to spend two nights at the Jones palace while Seifert has yet to be summoned there.

"I haven't talked to Jerry since last Friday," Lewis said. "It's frustrating waiting."

Donahue had a 20-year career at UCLA but never won a national title as had Johnson and Switzer, who quit Jan. 9 after going 6-10 in his fourth and final season as the team's coach.

Donahue, who coached Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman in college, resigned from UCLA after the 1995 season. He has been working as a college football analyst for CBS.

Dallas also needs offensive coordinator to replace Ernie Zampese, who has gone to New England, and a running backs coach to replace Joe Brodsky, who has gone to Chicago.

N.Y. Yankees replace GM with Cashman

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Saying he was "burned out," Bob Watson quit as general manager of the New York Yankees yesterday and was replaced by Brian Cashman, his 30-year-old assistant.

Watson, 51, often had been a verbal punching bag for owner George Steinbrenner, who acts as his own GM for big trades and contract negotiations.

"I want to say something out front here. This is not about a health issue. This is because I'm changing the focus of my life and my career," Watson said. "I want to take some time off. This is my 33rd year in professional baseball and I haven't had a vacation."

Cashman, who becomes the second-youngest GM ever in the major leagues, will not have sole decision-making power, serving in a collective leadership that includes Gene Michael, the team's director of major league scouting, and Nark Newman, the vice president of player development and scouting.

"I think I might be better prepared than other people because my entire professional career has been with the New York Yankees," said Cashman, who started as an intern in 1989.

Steinbrenner, who didn't attend the news conference, tends to take credit for moves that turn out well and blame his GMs for decisions that work out badly.

"Can I deal with it? I go into this with my eyes wide open," Cashman said. "I've gone to the mat with him before."

The change is the 15th in general managers since Steinbrenner bought the team in January 1973. Steinbrenner and his GMs repeatedly have run into conflicts. How will Cashman avoid his wrath?

"It would help if we won every day," Cashman said. "He's a perfectionist."

Watson, who replaced Michael as GM during the 1995 World Series, made no illusion that Steinbrenner often left him "out of the loop" and at times told him to lie to reporters.

At a recent function, Watson was asked about Steinbrenner's repeated references to his baseball people and quipped: "Little people that run around in his head are his baseball people." Watson, who may become a television analyst for ESPN, helped the Yankee win the 1996 World Series, and he said his championship ring was worth all the aggravation. He said his health was better now than when he quit as GM of the Houston Astros to work for Steinbrenner.

When Houston hired Watson in October 1993, he was the first black to hold the title of general manager (Atlanta's Bill Lucas essentially served as GM for the Braves while he was director of player personnel from 1977-79).

"They've got a long way to go, but they're a lot more than when I came in," he said.

Cashman already has been involved with the Chuck Knoblauch trade talks with Minnesota and preparing for Bernie Williams' salary arbitration hearing and contract talks. He made clear Steinbrenner's decision will be final but said he will have input. He said the team has no intention of giving Williams a seven-year contract averaging $11 million per season, the deal the Yankees claim the outfielder wants.

"If he goes out and hits 50 homers and steals 30 bases, then, obviously, we'll have to reevaluate our numbers," Cashman said. "But it hasn't happened yet."

The only person to become a GM at a younger age was Randy Smith, 29 when San Diego hired him in 1993.

Steinbrenner issued a statement saying Cashman "will work closely with Mark Newman and Gene Michael and their teams," which are based in the office at Tampa, Fla. In the past, team officials in the two offices have clashed.

"Obviously, I would prefer to have people in the office every day up here," Cashman said. "Right now, there is no Tampa-New York problem."

Battering rams

JORMA KANGANEN / COLLEGIAN

The women's hoop will butt heads with the Rams in an Atlantic 10 matchup tonight in Kingston, R.I.

Get in SHAPE!
TRY OUR Designer Whey Protein 26
Creatine 400 29
MetRx 20 38
NUTRITION EXPRESS
NUTRITION ASSOCIATES & SPORTS MEDICINE
Amherst, Mass. 253-1850

THE CLUB
Tennis & Fitness Center
549-3638 659 Amherst Road, Sunderland
DOUBLED IN SIZE
STATE OF THE ART FITNESS CENTER
NEW CARDIO EQUIPMENT LOCATED ON OUR NEW BALCONIES
• Treadmills Life Stride, Star Trac, and Trotters
• Stairmasters New 4400pt's
• Recumbent Bikes by Stairmaster
• Precor EFX Crosstrainer a Cardio Workout without any weight impact on joints
• Weight Training Machine Circuits including the GRAVITRON
• Nautilus Equipment
• Complete Free Weight Area Doubled in Size! New benches & bars; New plates & weights; New lat pull down, leg press, & T-bar; New STRIVE Plate loading machines & much more!
• Let's not forget the AREA'S ONLY TREADWALL on assimilated rock climbing wall - WHAT A WORKOUT! You'll love it!
• Also introducing POWER PACING the area's only Exercise Bike Classes that are guaranteed to burn TONS of calories! Classes offered 10-15 times a week by certified Power Pacing Instructors. Pick up your schedule today!
NEW AEROBICS CLASSES! INCLUDING EARLY A.M.
JOIN OUR MEMBERS CLIMB TO MT EVEREST ON THE TREADWALL!
POWER PACING PACKAGES AVAILABLE YOUR FIRST RIDE IS FREE!

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM BOSTON
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $145 $264
PARIS $219 $403
MADRID $228 $419
ROME $259 $477
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations.
Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave NY NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

Write For Sports!!!!

EMERGENCY MEDICAL TRAINING
•by Human Services Training Consultants, Inc.
•Part Time Evening
•Classes start February 9, 1998
•Call UMASS, Continuing Education at 545 - 0474

Women's hoop to face URI

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

The verge of mediocrity.

It's not as bad as being mired at the bottom, but still not a position in which Michael Jordan or Pat Riley would settle for going into the second half of the NBA season.

The Massachusetts women's basketball team stands at 10–9 and 4–5 in the Atlantic 10. Its all-time series with the Rams of Rhode Island stands at 20–19 since 1973–74. By simply winning tonight, the Minutewomen can break .500 in conference and earn a .524 overall winning percentage to begin the process of salvaging their season.

The Rams, at 4–16 and 2–8 in conference, look to remain in the cellar for yet another season. They have yet to win a game at home this season and have only won two games against Atlantic 10 opponents.

Massachusetts is truly at the crossroads of its season. It might seem that a trip to Kingston, R.I. couldn't have come along at a better time for the Minutewomen. But a lot more is on the line than earning a win in conference. It's a chance for a fresh start, a brand–new winning streak. After a brief two–game away win streak, the Minutewomen returned to the William D. Mullins Center on Saturday to submit to a fired–up Dayton team.

UMass' Saturday loss against the Flyers, who stand at 7–13, and 3–7 in conference, proves that the Minutewomen have to be wary of every opponent. UMass simply couldn't come up with the big plays to close the constant lead the Flyers held. Dayton shot over 50 percent from the floor and nailed 14–of–16 free throw attempts in the second half.

Saturday's game simply proved that UMass needs everyone contributing in order for the team to win. UMass' usual scoring threats in Allison MacFarland, Tez Kraft and Sabriya Mitchell all struggled throughout the game. While they wrung up a respectable number of shots they simply wouldn't fall for the hard–luck Minutewomen. Dayton's smothering half–court trap halted the forced Massachusetts offense throughout the game.

Still, tonight's game could be the jump start UMass needs to get back on its previous win streak. Rhode Island is a young team which lost only four players last year and are struggling to form a core group to carry the team.

Eighth–year coach Linda Ziemke has compiled a 95–131 career record for the Rams. Her squad hopes to at least equal last year's record of 7–20.

No one on the URI squad averages in double digits for scoring. Amber Jansen leads with 6.3 points per game, followed by Ela Lapcuks with 5.3 ppg, and Nikki Blakemore with 5.3 ppg. Last year's top returnee, Dena Cocchiola, who averaged 8.2 ppg, and 3.1 rebounds per game is only averaging 4.6 ppg this season.

Minutewomen Notes: UMass has seven games remaining of the 1997–98 season including four games at home, all of which are Atlantic 10 contests...

Freshman guard Kathy Coyner scored a career–high 15 points against the Flyers on Saturday.

■ NHL

continued from page 12

Ron Francis and Jaromir Jagr are picking up the slack. And now that Jagr has been inked to a six– year, $48–million deal, the Steel City should be smiling for years to come.

The Habs are enjoying a solid season without a real superstar. Mark Recchi and Saku Koivu are putting up impressive numbers for the team with the best road record in the Eastern Conference (17–8–2).

• Kudos to Vladimir Konstantinov on his tremendous recovery following his near–fatal limousine accident. The former Red Wings defenseman accompanied his mates to the White House last week in an emotional event for all involved. The former Soviet Red Army star will continue to rehab down in Florida while putting the pieces of the puzzle back together.

• I can safely say that I have lost all respect for the Rangers and Canucks. Let's start with the Broadway Blueshirts.

How can a team with Wayne Gretzky tail in the middle of the pack in the Atlantic Division? His supporting cast isn't exactly poor, either. Pat Lafontaine, Brian Leetch, Adam Graves, and Mike Richter are all quality players. However, the Rangers are having a problem finishing teams off, as evident by their 15 ties (second best in league). It is that killer instinct that the Rangers lack, and unless they find it soon they may find themselves hitting the links sooner than expected.

The Canucks are just plain out... well, awful. ESPN hockey analyst and former Kings coach Barry Melrose said it best when he stated that the Canucks have a 70–goal scorer, a 60–goal scorer, a 50–goal scorer, a 40–goal scorer, a 30–goal scorer, and a 20–goal scorer... and are still the worst team in hockey. They may not be the worst (only Tampa Bay is better) but they are another club with a talented cast that is going nowhere.

Mark Messier, Pavel Bure, Alexander Mogilny, Geoff Sanderson, and Trevor Linden are five of the league's elite players. Throw Mike Keenan into the mix and you would expect the Canucks to at least compete for a playoff spot.

But you're wrong.

The only thing that this season has brought is disappointment. Maybe it's the players. Maybe it's the coach. Maybe it's the new uniforms. Whatever it is, Messier came to Vancouver to win a championship. And unless things get turned around soon, that's not going to happen.

• Paul Kariya and Teemu Selanne are cementing their claim as one of the best duos of all time. Now I know that this may be a bit premature, but the foundation has been laid in Anaheim. Now all they need is some support to hold up the fort.

• Finally, what column would be complete without a Hartford Whalers update (call them what you want, they'll always be the Whalers to me). The Failures are firmly planted in the basement of the Northeast Division.

That's sad... that's really sad. I guess Ottawa isn't as bad as it used to be. Oh well... I still bleed green.

Michael Kobylanski is a Collegian columnist.

■ hoops

continued from page 12

would have a frenzied crowd, and I wanted us to feed off that early. I was proud [because] they weren't rattled... this is meaningful for our growth.

This ranks among the Minutemen's most frustrating games of the season, because of Temple's intense zone defense. It's the same defense Chaney has been running at teams for years, but when its on — like it was last night — it makes Temple one of the toughest teams in America to score on. It worked to perfection last night.

"I wanted to key on Charlton Clarke and Monty Mack, and collapse on Lari Ketner," Chaney said. "We wanted to force them to take outside shots, but [the problem is] for year's they made [those outside shots]."

Defense isn't the the most glamourous part of the game, but glamour has never mattered much to Temple. Just look at Chaney, who looks like a nine–to–five guy at 5:01 p.m. from the opening tip. But it worked, and that's what matters.

"Their zone isn't like any other zone," UMass coach Bruiser Flint said. "You think you're open and you're not. Guys started playing fast, we got frustrated."

Another irony is where this game will rest in Temple's ledger — a huge road win that gets it back on track. UMass beat Temple decisively in Philadelphia last season, one of the biggest wins in the eyes of NCAA officials who eventually put the Minutemen in the national tournament. With the Owls slipping, a road win against a ranked team puts them right back in the thick of things for an NCAA bid in March.

So UMass drops its first game to Temple since Johnny Miller led the Owls past the Minutemen, 72–63, at McGonigle Hall in 1995, Lou Roe's senior year. Temple has finally won in the Mullins Center, and tonight's game will probably go down as one of those games that keeps this intense rivalry fueled.

Massachusetts is now 8–1 in conference, but that loss is a glaring one, because it wasn't to the likes of Virginia Tech or St. Bonaventure on the road. It was Temple, at the Mullins Center, with a crowd reminiscent of those during the Final Four year of 1996. UMass will learn from this one, and it's still the top team in the Atlantic 10. The Minutemen would have to collapse completely to miss an NCAA bid, which isn't going to happen. But last night was Temple's night, and though Brokenborough never heard what Keiner said about the Owl backcourt, it didn't stop him from saying a few choice words himself.

"UMass is a 'ra–ra' team [that gets fired up], but they're not a good team without the crowd." In the first half the crowd was [loud], but in the second half I didn't hear anything."

The rematch is March 1 at the Apollo of Temple.

Should be a good one.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

LAUREN NOVEY / COLLEGIAN

Charlton Clarke led the Minutemen with 14 points against Temple last night at the Mullins Center.

■ O'Connor

continued from page 12

games work out, and we'll see what happens," O'Connor said. "I've played with those guys before and I've learned from the hard work they put into practice. That's why they are where they are."

Cautious optimism resonates in Mallen's voice about the professional potential that O'Connor possesses, and it is not about his talent level, but the way NHL contracts are being handled in today's marketplace. Frugality currently abounds at the NHL level concerning contract negotiations, but Mallen sees no problem for O'Connor making the AHL level as a start to bigger and better things.

"The Pens may wait on bringing him up to the NHL level, but he definitely has the potential to play at that level," Mallen said. "I hope they sign him, and he has to believe that the AHL is only one step away from the NHL. You can't get there without that step, and he has the ability to make that step."

Former Denver coach Dan Issel comments on NBA's worst record

By Aaron J. Lopez
Associated Press

DENVER — When Dan Issel quit as coach of the Denver Nuggets three years ago, he said he didn't like what he had become. It can't be any worse than what his former team has turned into.

"It hurts a great deal," said Issel, now a TV analyst for the Nuggets. "I've got a lot years with this franchise and a lot of hard work and a lot of sweat. It kills me to see where the franchise is."

After a 39–point loss to Chicago, their fourth by more than 30 this season, the Nuggets are 4–41 with one game left before the All–Star break. They need six wins to avoid the NBA record for fewest in a season. It promises to be a photo finish.

"They're very close to being the worst NBA team I've seen," Chicago's Dennis Rodman said. "I can't say anything good about the Nuggets. They'll probably be competitive on the day I die."

It wasn't long ago that the Issel-led Nuggets were the talk of the NBA, upsetting top–seeded Seattle in the 1994 playoffs. Issel's resignation came midway through the next season, and things haven't been the same since.

"Before I had got here, they had won 20 and 24 games. The guys who were involved in that for a couple years remember what that felt like, and they really made winning the top priority," Issel said.

"It seemed like after we won that Seattle series, we had all that promise, but it seemed like some of the guys changed their priorities. Instead of 'Let's win the game,' it was 'What's in it for me?' It started going downhill."

The free fall continued following the 1995–96 season when center Dikembe Mutombo left Denver for the free–agent riches offered by the Atlanta Hawks.

"It'll be the next millennium before the franchise recovers from the decision to let Dikembe leave town scot-free," Issel said. "When he's the biggest asset that the franchise had, and you not only lose him, but you get nothing in return..."

Determined not to repeat their Mutombo mistake, the Nuggets traded rising star Antonio McDyess last October after McDyess said it would take $100 million to re–sign him after this season. The changing of the guard has left the Nuggets without a shield against the dragons of the NBA. They have stockpiled draft picks and are relying on rookies and role players to get by.

"It's just a bad time for Denver," Michael Jordan said. "The only way they can go is up. I don't think you have to go all the way down to the bottom before you do that, but if that's their approach, that's their opinion. I have a whole different opinion of economics."

For all their failures on the court, the Nuggets have been successful in sticking to their plan of freeing room under the salary cap. They may have a problem, however, luring top free agents to a losing team..

Witnesses called support Martin's claim against PGA

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Attacking the argument that golf carts give players an unfair advantage, Casey Martin's lawyers put on witnesses yesterday who said carts neither improve performance nor provide relief from great fatigue.

"I prefer to walk," said Eric Johnson, the Nike Tour's leading money winner. "It helps me with my rhythm. You get a full effect of the elements."

He also said walking helps him get a better feel for the course and noted that in last year's PGA Tour qualifying tournament all 160 players had the option of riding in a cart and only seven or eight took it.

Martin, who suffers from a rare circulatory disorder that has shriveled his right leg, has said he too would prefer to walk rather than ride, but it is just too painful. He is expected to take the witness stand himself late today or early tomorrow.

Martin limped to court for a second day of trial on his lawsuit against the PGA Tour in which he is using the Americans with Disabilities Act in an attempt to ride a cart on the pro golf tour. The PGA Tour contends that walking is a fundamental part of the game, testing each player's stamina, and that allowing Martin to ride would give him an unfair advantage. It is up to Martin's lawyers to show it isn't.

BACK TO SCHOOL SPECIAL
Pentium 166MMX Complete System Starting at $899
with 32MB Ram & 14" Color Monitor
• Custom Configured Systems
• Upgrades and Components
• Network Cards starting at $28
• $5 off any Network Card with this ad
Looking For a Computer?
Green Leaf Computers

Need a Car Loan?
We can help you establish your credit. We finance people with credit problems; no credit, bad credit, bankruptcy, divorced. No co-signers required!
Call Eric at 584-3030
or stop by Saturn of Hadley and ask for Eric Emet.
BALISE CREDIT EXPRESS

amc
Hampshire 6 • 584-7550
Hampshire Mall
Mt. Farms 4 • 584-9153
Mt. Farms Mall
Phantoms (R)
Today at 5:50
Half Baked (R)
Today at (5:20@2.50) 8:30
Tomorrow Never Dies (PG13)
Today at (5:30@2.50)
Fallen (R)
Today at (5:10@2.50) 8:30
Desperate Measures (R)
Today at (5:40@2.50) 8:30
As Good As It Gets (PG13)
Today at (5:30@2.50) 8:20
Great Expectations (R)
Today at (5:40@2.50) 8:30
Wag the Dog (R)
Today at (5:30@2.50) 8:20
Spice World (PG)
Today at (5:50@2.50) 8:30
Titanic (PG 13)
Today at (4:20@2.50) 8:10
Good Will Hunting (R)
Today at (5:20@2.50) 8:10
Deep Rising (R)
Today at (5:40@2.50) 8:00

Spring Break Fever
Party Hard Travel Safe
Cheap Tickets Great Advice Nice people
Lima $603
Hong Kong $753
Tel Aviv $693
Los Angeles $355
Orlando $177
FARES ARE ROUND TRIP, DO NOT INCLUDE TAXES. RESTRICTIONS APPLY.
Council Travel
CIEE: Council on International Educational Exchange
744 Main Street
Amherst
(413) 256-1261

CANCUN BAHAMAS
CANCUN
5 FREE BREAKFASTS
5 FREE DINNERS
24 HOURS OF FREE DRINKS
BAHAMAS
DRINK FREE! 21 HOURS OF FREE DRINKS!
USA SPRING BREAK
1-800-plan-a-break or 1-800-867-6774

SPRING BREAK
BEST PARTIES CANCUN JAMAICA FLORIDA BEST PRICE
Call Today! Space is Limited!
1 800 648-4849
Campus Travel
Amherst (413) 546-3147

TODAY ONLY! TODAY ONLY! TODAY ONLY!
People's Market
PRESENTS...
BLUE RANGE BEVERAGES
UCard
MasterCard VISA
Truly Natural... The Way Nature Intended
Now Hiring Managers - See Market for Details
MAIN FLOOR - STUDENT UNION - CAMPUS POND SIDE

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

$ WIN MONEY $
Win $ in the Central Area Battle of the Bands on March 6th. Demo tapes due by Feb 18. One member must be a Central Resident. Contact Chris 6-2169, Nick 6-5694

TALKING ACROSS DIFFERENCES: EXPLORING COMMON GROUND & CONFLICT (2 Credits, Spring Semester)
Your experience is needed! Participate in a 10 week Intergroup Dialogue course. Sections offered: 1) WHITE WOMEN & WOMEN OF COLOR; 2) PEOPLE OF COLOR & WHITE PEOPLE; 3) PEOPLE OF LATINO HERITAGE & PEOPLE OF AFRICAN HERITAGE. Issues discussed: Race relations on college campuses, Race & culture, Interracial dating, Affirmative Action, Immigration, etc. Enroll now at the Residential Academic Program Office 1st floor-JQA or 158 Hills South.

PERFORMING ARTS DIVISION offers Group and Private Instruction in Music, Theater, and Dance. PAD is located in the New Continuing Ed Bldg. on the corner of Fearing and N. Pleasant Streets, rooms #208 and 210. Info call (413)545-0519.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

3rd Floor 2 bedroom apartment available Feb 1. Heat/Hot Water + Cooking Gas included. $815/month. Please contact Andrew Newcomb 549-0600

AUTO FOR SALE

88 Toyota Corolla 5 speed Good condition 149k $2200 Call 256-1767

1988 BMW 325i Navy blue/grey interior, new tires, highway miles. Excellent student car. Runs great! $4500 or B/O Call 546-5536

AUTO FOR SALE

89 VW Fox Good condition. 165,000 miles. Many new parts. Pioneer Radio- Detachable Face. $1075 firm. 546-3060

1987 Pontiac Bonneville Great condition, many new parts. Must sell! $1200 Call anytime. 546-6342

91 VW Golf GT Standard, 93k, A/C. Excellent condition. $5500. 549-0892

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday 1-800-649-4795

CHILDCARE

Childcare Needed for bright, easy-going 13 month old girl in our home for 8-9 hours a week. Close to campus. 548-7061.

COMPUTERS

Intel Pentium Processor 90MHz with heatsink and fan. Brand new, never used! No floating point division operation error. 1 year factory warranty. $ 9 0 hbarrett@student.umass.edu 549-4797

7200/90 Power Mac 2 SCSI hard drives, 32 MB RAM, 4 MB VRAM, 17 inch 1705 Appla Monitor. $1500. Contact Jay @ 545-0989 or evenings @ 253-3682

EMPLOYMENT

Off-Campus Meal Plan in exchange for light kitchen work. 549-4062

Needed: EMT's Must have current CRA certification. Must attend mandatory training session Feb 8 @ 2:00pm (Will last no more than 4 hours). General Meeting after @ 7:00pm Location: Morrill IV N406. Questions? Call 545-1885

EMPLOYMENT

MAINTENANCE PERSON Brandywine Apartments in Amherst. Full-time. General maintenance skills including electrical, plumbing, carpentry and ceramic tile work necessary. Must live on site. Duties include after hours "call" on rotating basis. Competitive salary with benefits, including apartment. Send resume to 16G Brandywine Dr., Amherst, MA 01002. Or call (413)549-0600. Fax (413)549-1319

HAVE AN AMAZING SUMMER Prestigious coed camp in Massachusetts seeks caring, motivated college students who love kids! GENERAL & SPECIALTY COUNSELORS needed. Join a dedicated, fun team. Competitive salaries. Camp Taconic. (800)762-2820

Counselors for co-ed Northeast PA, overnight Jewish camp- 3 hours from NYC- general, sports, drama, H20 & arts 1-800-973-3866

UMass Annual Fund is hiring. Earn $5.50 + bonuses. Flexible evening hours. Gain computer experience. Come to the Memorial Hall Basement and apply today!

Swahili Speaker Needed for minor translation. Wa can discuss payment. 596-6778. Leave message.

Activist JOBS FOR THE ENVIRONMENT
Work with the Sierra Club on an urgent endangered species campaign.
Part-time available
Great for students
$50-$75 a day
Call Kate 256-5434

Now hiring part-time workers in Downtown Amherst. $7 an hour. Applicants must be outgoing. Call Sean 253-0583

EMPLOYMENT

Looking for Mary Poppins 8-12 hours per week. Mon, Wed, Fri afternoons. Occasional weekend hours. References, experience, car a must. 549-7788

NEW STUDENTS PROGRAM seeks extroverts from '98-'00 Class with 2.5+ GPA. May 27 to July 18. Salary, room, meals, health coverage. Apply 307 Admissions Center. Deadline Feb 6.

CRUISE SHIP & LAND-TOUR JOBS Discover how to work in exotic locations, meet fun people, while earning a living in these exciting industries! For more information: 517-324-3092 Ext.C50012

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ FOR HIRE: Professional DJ spinning all types of music. Now booking for Spring Semester. Perfect for your next date party, formal, or occasion. Check me out at Pruddy's on Thursday. DJ FOOZ (Ask for Tim) 253-8593

FOR RENT

SUMMER RENTALS
CAPE COD GROUP Summer Rentals- Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Diamond Real Estate (508)477-1900

Fridge Rentals Free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

TI-85 Calculator For Sale Only used for one semester. $80. Call 546-4662

FURNITURE

Futon Twin size, brand new $100! (413)256-3527, 5-5547

HEALTH & BEAUTY

Acupuncture and Herbal Medicine National Board Certified Licensed. 549-8542

MISCELLANEOUS

EARN $750-$1500/WEEK
Raise all the money your student group needs by sponsoring a VISA Fundraiser on your campus. No investment & very little time needed. There's no obligation, so why not call for information today. Call 1-800-323-8454 x 95

FREE T-SHIRT + $1000
Credit Card fundraisers for fraternities, sororities & groups. Any campus organization can raise up to $1000 by earning a whopping $5.00/VISA application.
Call 1-800-932-0528 ext 65. Qualified callers receive FREE T-SHIRT.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

For Sale- Didjeridu Hand made, hand painted by student. $20 with lesson. 253-7342

MUSICIANS WANTED

BARBERSHOP QUARTET FORMING
No haircutting involved, just solid acapella singing. Call Daniel 665-7581.

PERSONALS

"I only wanna be with you!" - Hootie & the Blowfish. Free love and valentines at www.studentadvantage.com/cpid

ROOM FOR RENT

Ooo bedroom available in Puffton Village. $267.50 per month. 1st and last month's down. Must be responsible, considerate and like to party but still get work done. Call Jay, Jill, or Rob @ 549-7203

ROOM FOR RENT

Ooo bedroom in 3 bedroom apt in Northampton. $300+/month. 10 min to downtown. Nice and cozy. Call 586-5016

ATTENTION JEWISH STUDENTS
Spaces available in Living Community of Hillel House. Call Jason for details. 549-1710

Rooms For Rent Very close to campus. Females Only. $1200/semester. Call 549-7146 or (508)655-5822

ROOMMATE WANTED

Ooo bedroom is two bedroom apartment. Sugarloaf Estates. On PVTA. Utilities included. Available NOW. 665-3295

Looking for roommate to share three bedroom apartment. Call 549-5596.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

STEREO & CD EQUIP

Car Stereo Equipment
Kenwood Detach Face- 1 year old, paid $350. 1 amp 100x2, paid $150. 1 amp 100x4, paid $100. 1 pair Pioneer 6x9 speakers, 100w, paid $110. Whole system sounds great, needs nothing. Selling as package deal for $300. Call 546-3842

Tascam 424 Multitrack Recorder 4 track mixing board and recorder. Only 8 months old. Recerved a 24 track as a gift over break. Will include 1 mic, never been used. 4 professional recording tapes. Paid $550, will sell for $350. Has box and instruc. Call 546-3842

STEREO & CD EQUIP

Boss DR5 Dr.Rhythm Drum Machine Brand new machine w/ 4 track sequencer, bought only 8 mo. ago. One of the top drum machines on the market. Paid $600, will sell for $400. Has box, instruc, and video. Call 546-3842

TICKETS

Sarah McLachlan/ Billy Joel/ NCAA Men's Basketball. 2 Guys Tickets 1-688-345-TIXX

TRAVEL

Spring Break '98
Cancun, Mexico from $419!!! R/T airfare. 7 night hotel, transfers PLUS sign up now and receive 7 free breakfasts and lunches. Don't miss out on one of the hottest spots in Mexico! Call Amanda today!!! 1-800-244-4483 Visit our Website at www.collegetours.com!

Spring Break- Cancun and Nassau from $399. Air, hotel, transfers, parties and more! Organize a small group and earn free trips plus commissions! Call 1-800-Spring Break. 1-800-777-4642

Spring Break '98 Get Going!!! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida Group Discounts & Free Drink Parties! Sell 5 & go free! Book Now!!! Visa/MC/Disc/Amex 1-800-234-7007 http://www.endlessSummertours.com

Best Hotels, Lowest Prices All Spring Break locations Florida, Cancun, etc. From $99. Register your group or be our Campus Rep. Inter-campus Programs (800)327-6013 www.icpt.com

Have you waited this long to make Spring Break plans? It's not too late! Choose Sunsplash Tours- Call Michelle 256-8217

USED BOOKS

ENGIN TEXTBOOKS for Chem 111-112, Chem 225, Chem 261-267, Physic 151-152, Engin 191A, ResEc 102 & notebooks. 546-3116

Spring Break '98
$299 $399
Jamaica Cancun
Panama City Daytona
South Padre Bahamas
CALL FOR FREE INFO PACK
Sun Splash Tours 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK!
CANCUN • BAHAMAS
24 HOURS OF FREE DRINKS!
7 nights from $279!
Prices based on per person, double occupancy. Subject to availability. Some restrictions may apply. Prices do not include taxes & fees.
CLASS Travel
Student Travel Services
1-800-838-3411

Roses are Red, Violets are Blue, Put in a Classified to a sweetheart from you.

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be produced by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday announcements personals, in which case the last name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. This means dorm, room, numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek employment, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad on file with the Collegian before 10:00 a.m. on the day before the personal is to appear in the paper. Personals may be submitted in person or by mail.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
$2.00 min./day
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

NEW Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
AUTO PARTS
CHILDCARE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
COMPUTERS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FURNITURE
GREEK ANNOUNCEMENTS
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HEALTH & BEAUTY
HOUSES FOR RENT
HOUSES FOR SALE
HOUSESITTING
JEWELRY
INSTRUCTION
LOST & FOUND
MAY I HAVE YOUR ATTENTION PLEASE
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MISCELLANEOUS FOR SALE
MOTORCYCLES
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
MUSIC LESSONS
MUSICIANS WANTED
PERSONALS
PETS FOR SALE
RESUMES
RIDES WANTED
ROOMS FOR RENT
ROOMS WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SPORTS
STEREO & CD EQUIP.
SUMMER SUBLET
TELEVISIONS FOR SALE
TICKETS
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
TUTORING SERVICES
TUTOR WANTED
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED GENERAL
WORLD WIDE WEB
YARD SALES

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 4

Discussion — The Biological Sciences Student Organization will host Arup De, a UMass-Worcester Medical School student, to discuss medical school experiences. The event will be held at 7 p.m. in Campus Center 804-808.

Meeting — The UMass Theatre Guild's first meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in Campus Center 162. For more information contact Kristina at 545-0415.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will have its first meeting of the semester at 7 p.m. in Campus Center 904.

Meeting — The coed service fraternity Alpha Phi Omega will be holding an informational meeting at 7:30 p.m. in room 409C in the Student Union. More information available in the concourse.

THURSDAY, FEB. 5

Class — Weekly yoga and meditation classes will be held in Butterfield Residential Area lounge for the next three Thursdays. Classes start at 8 p.m. and will be facilitated by a visiting yoga monk. For more information, call 253-9553.

Help Session — CCERMS Program is holding a FAFSA Help session on the second floor of the New Africa House Library from 6-8 p.m.

Meeting — Representatives from the Boston and Five College Peace Corps offices will hold a general information meeting from 7-8:30 p.m. in room 124 of Hasbrouck Lab.

Speech — Paul Bonin Rodriguez, Alberto Antonio Araiza and Michael Martinez give a speech entitled: "The AIDS Pandemic: 3 Queer Latino Artists Share the Evolution of their Work." The event will be held in Campus Center room 803 at 12:30 p.m. For more information, contact the Stonewall Center at 545-4824.

FRIDAY, FEB. 6

Auditions— Auditions for the UMass Theatre Guild's production of Jesus Christ Superstar will be held at 7 p.m. in Campus Center room 101. For more information call Kristina at 545-0415.

Auditions— Auditions for the UMass Theatre Guild's production of Jesus Christ Superstar will be held at 7 p.m. in Campus Center room 101.

Meeting— There will be a Tibetan Students Association meeting at 6 p.m. in Campus Center 165-169. New members are welcome.

SATURDAY, FEB. 7

Writing — Spectrum Magazine is taking submission for the next edition of the magazine. The deadline is Feb. 12. For more information, call the office at 545-2240 or come by in the Student Union, room 406E.

NOTICES

PYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Don't Just Sit There you could be there.
Read the paper
Never Know what you'l find!!!!

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board	17 HSCN Programming
3 CBS/3 Hartford	18 TV-19
4 CBS/4 Boston	20 ABC/40 Springfield
5 ABC/5 Boston	22 NBC/22 Springfield
7 PBS/57 Springfield	23 CNN
7 HSCN Movie Ch.	24 CNN SI
8 UPN/20 Hartford	25 Headline News
9 Weather Channel	26 UCTV
10 NBC/30 New Britain	27 TBS
11 Fox/61 Hartford	28 BET
12 PBS/24 Hartford	28 TV Land
13 WOCH & HSCN	30 Univision
14 International	31 Comedy Central
15 UMass Academic TV	32 Cartoon
16 UMass Academic TV	33 Much Music

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 4, 1998

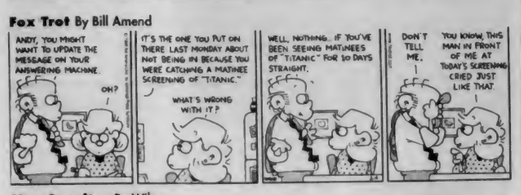
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Secrets of the Ocean Realm		Billy Wilder-Comedy		Great Performances: Porgy and Bess			Forever & Day
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV	"My Singer" (1998, Biography)	Ekaterina Gordeeva,			Chicago Hope (In Stereo)	News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	"My Singer" (1998, Biography)	Ekaterina Gordeeva,			Chicago Hope (In Stereo)	News	Late Show
WGVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Spin City	Dharma-Greg	Drew Carey	Ellen (R)	Primetime Live	News	Nightline
WLVI		Full House	BoyWorld	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Sister, Sister	Smart Guy	Weyans Bros.	Steve Harvey	News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	3rd Rock-Sun	Seinfeld (R)	3rd Rock-Sun	Working	Law & Order "Grief" (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Cheers	Mad Abo. You	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Sentinel "Red Ice" (In Stereo)		News	Greca Under	Vibe
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Herd Copy	3rd Rock-Sun	Seinfeld (R)	3rd Rock-Sun	Working	Law & Order "Grief" (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Party of Five "I Give Up"		News		Simpsons	Deep Space N
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	3rd Rock-Sun	Seinfeld (R)	3rd Rock-Sun	Working	Law & Order "Grief" (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Secrets of the Ocean Realm		Billy Wilder-Comedy		Great Performances: Porgy and Bess			Charlie Rose
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Spin City	Dharma-Greg	Drew Carey	Ellen (R)	Primetime Live	News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Sentinel "Red Ice" (In Stereo)		News	Cheers	M*A*S*H	Reel TV
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Andy Griffith	Andy Griffith	NBA Basketball: Chicago Bulls at Utah Jazz. (Live)				NBA Basketball: Trail Blazers at Lakers
A&E	107	Northern Exposure		Law & Order		Biography: Dutch Schultz		American Justice		Foot Soldier		Law & Order "Conspiracy"
CNN	29	Worldview		Moneyline	Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		World Today		Moneyline
COM	35	Comic Cebana	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	"Mystery Date" (1991, Comedy)	Ethan Hawke, Tim Polo,			South Park	Make-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	52	Wings "Wings Over Vietnam"		Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery		Discover Magazine "Poison"		Disaster Proof (R)		Justice Files "Head Time" (R)
ESPN	33	Up Close	Sportscenter	College Basketball: Clemson at Georgia Tech. (Live)				College Basketball: St. John's at Boston College. (Live)			Sportscenter
LIFE	97	Supermarket	Debt	Great Lifetime Makeover (R)		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"When Husbands Cheat" (1996, Drama) Patricia Kalember,				Almost Perfect	Golden Girls
MTV	53	MTV Live (In Stereo)		My So-Called Life (In Stereo)		Music Videos	Beavis-Butt.	Grammy Guide (In Stereo)		Real World	Austin Stories	Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	63	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Love Lucy	M.T. Moore	Lou	Newhart
SCIFI	69	Guerilla Leag (In Stereo)		Sequest 2032 (In Stereo)		Sightings (In Stereo)		★★ "Pet Sematary Two" (1992, Horror) Edward Furlong,				Sequest 2032 (In Stereo)
TLC	28	Renovation	Renovation	Home Again	Home Again	Ultrascience	Sea Tek	Human Sexes		Human Sexes "Gender Wars"		Ultrascience	Sea Tek (R)
TNT	62	Lois & Clark-Superman		Babylon 5 "Points of Departure"		★★½ "The Road Warrior" (1981, Adventure) Mel Gibson,				Babylon 5 "Paragon of Animals"	Rough Cut		Top Station
USA	59	Baywatch "Fason Manifesto"		Highlander: The Series (R)		Walker, Texas Ranger		"The Hunted" (1998, Suspense)		Harry Hamlin, (In Stereo) (R)		Silk Stalkings	Fire Storm
HBO	30	(:45) ★★½ "Sabrina" (1995)		Reflections on Ice: A Diary		★★★ "That Thing You Do!" (1996)		Tom Everett Scott. "PG"		★★ "The Trigger Effect" (1996)		Kyle MacLachlan.	First Look
MAX	60	★★½ "Multiplicity" (1996, Comedy)		Michael Keaton. "PG-13"		★★★½ "Lady Sings the Blues" (1972, Biography)		Diana Ross. "R"				★★½ "Mission: Impossible" (1996)	Tom Cruise,
SHOW	61	★★ "Flubber" (1996, Adventure)		Matthew Modine. (In Stereo) "PG"		★★★ "Forget Paris" (1995, Comedy)		Billy Crystal. "PG-13"		Dead Man's		Fast Track "Sonny Japanese"	"Lap Dancing"



Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Fox Trot By Bill Amend

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Grix of the Bus Stop By Brendan & Kevin Doherty

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan 20.–Feb. 18) — One particular development today may prove more interesting than any other — and it is neither good nor bad until you study it more closely.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You are well on your way to finishing something that others have never done. Today, take the time to ensure that everything is being done right.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You may have trouble with gadgets and technical devices today. When you can, do things without any kind of electronic assistance.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — A do-it-yourself project suddenly may become much more complicated today than you had anticipated. Still, you can finish it on schedule.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You will want to take a few extra precautions today. You may not know what the dangers really are, but do want to be prepared.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You must guard against being left out today. Put yourself where the action is, and stay there! Be sure you have all the up-to-date information.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — It is not enough just to make contact with someone far from home; you must be willing to put a little extra effort into the message you send.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Your idea of how things ought to be done is likely to prove quite different from the way a close friend sees things. Strike a compromise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You can have what you want today, but you must be sure that you really want it before going to the effort to acquire it. You can't give it back!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — An unusual message may contain a hidden meaning or two; you'll want to spend time looking at it from as many different angles as possible.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Why do you think you're on the spot today? The fact is, you may be the only person who is treating yourself in such a way; ease up on yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — Someone in a supervisory position may not take to you right away. You are going to have to trust that your work will win him or her over.

Quote of the Day

"I am guided by a force much greater than luck."

Lucas from "Empire Records"

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Spunk By Mike LaRiccia

Absolute Zero By Brad Turner

Close to Home By John McPherson

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Grilled Chicken Sandwich
Hot Pastrami on Rye
Ravioli/Tomato Sauce
Vegan Ravioli
DINNER
Roast Pork
Chili Cheese Puff
Quarter Pound Burger
Quarter Pound Swiss Burger

Worcester
LUNCH
Grilled Chicken Sandwich
Spinach Noodle Casserole
Fettuccini/Tomato Sauce or Meat Sauce
Lentil Chili
DINNER
Roast Pork
Cheese Spinach Strudel
Savory Stuffed Peppers
Pastabilities
Tortellini

Hampshire
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Macaroni and Cheese
Grilled Cheese Snadwich
DINNER
Pineapple Ham Steak
Chicken De Carlos

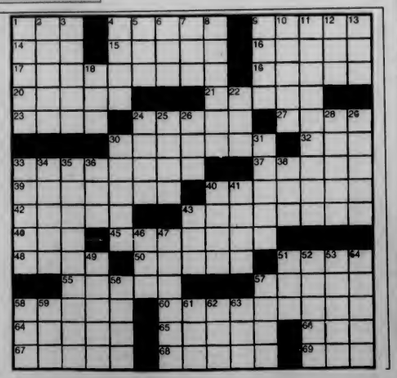
Berkshire
LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
American Chop Suey
Grilled Portabella Mushrooms
DINNER
Roast Pork
Cheese Spinach Strudel
Hot & Spicy Vegetable Pasta
Pastabilities

Today's Staff
Night Editor — Casey Kane
Photo Technician — Alexander Koromilas
Copy Editor — Lorraine Kennedy
Production Supervisor — Keren Charles
Production Staff — Angie Annese, Jonnie Huang

ACROSS
1 Have dinner
4 Summarize
9 Ebbs
14 Wood residue
15 Crumble away
16 West Indies sorcery
17 Lap dog
19 Midwest airport
20 Fable writer
21 Jet jockey
23 Attracted
24 Singer Reese
27 Yanks' foes
30 Lunches
32 Society-page word
33 Buying time
37 Relinquish (a claim)
39 Freight-train car
40 Got some knowledge
42 Black
43 In a teasing manner
44 Postal creed word
45 Crusader's foe
48 Work hard
50 — out: falls asleep
51 Lake the Gobi
55 Zeal
57 Great — Lake
58 First-rate
60 Pressing need
64 Extend a subscription
65 Weightlifter's pride
66 Sounds of hesitation
67 Bakers' needs
68 Parsley unit
69 Bread type

DOWN
1 Dieter's lunch
2 Theater worker
3 Stage
4 Bring in a crop
5 Important period
6 Dirty Harry, e.g.
7 Commercials
8 Persons
9 Sweater material
10 Loathe
11 Straightening up
12 Attention
13 The lady
18 Piglet's mother
22 Writer Fleming
24 Speaker's spot
25 Sea eagle
26 Limb
28 Cut on the slant
29 Run-down
30 Gluts
31 Beau
33 Bloodhound's clue
34 Forbidden
35 Early Australian
36 Actor Chaney
38 Prince Valiant's son
40 Fasten
41 — out: stretches
43 Winter mo.
46 Pretend
47 Perches
49 Light measure
51 "The Greatest"
52 Harder to find
53 Type of tower
54 Thick
56 Stitches
57 Environmental problem
58 Expert
59 Al Sharpton's title: abbr.
61 Upper part
62 Goof
63 "Do — say"

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED



L	O	B	E	S		Z	O	O	M		M	A	S	T
A	R	E	N	A		U	P	D	O		O	B	I	E
S	E	A	T	S		L	E	A	P	F	R	O	G	S
H	O	M	E	S	P	U	N		L	A	M	N	S
			R	E	S	S		A	L	A	I
D	U	R	E	S	S		D	R	A	W	N	O	U	T
E	N	I	C		T	R	A	M	P		E	A	S	E
B	I	N			E	W	E		K	I	N
T	O	G	A		B	A	N	D	S		P	E	N	S
S	N	O	R	K	E	L	I	N	G		L	O	U	D
		A	H	E	M		T	U	R	N
S	A	M	B	A		O	R	G	A	N	I	S	M
P	L	A	I	N	T	I	V	E		C	I	L	I	A
I	O	T	A		A	R	I	A		L	E	E	R	Y
T	I	E	E	N		R	E	D	D	I	S	S	E	S

2-4-98 © 1998 United Feature Syndicate

Quote of the Day

"I am guided by a force much greater than luck."

Lucas from "Empire Records"

SPORTS

NHLers give U.S. shot at Nagano gold

And now for the action on the frozen pond...

With the inevitable layoff for the Winter Olympics just around the corner, the National Hockey League is in a state of flux. Only two weeks removed from its All-Star game, the League will now endure a work stoppage that will give some players the chance to go for the gold, and others a

Michael Kobylanski
the THL

chance to watch it on television.

Oh well, it is the Olympics after all.

For a country that still holds the memories of Mike Eruzione catapulting the United States over the Soviet Union in the 1980 Winter Olympics (don't ask me about it because I wasn't even a year old) true to its heart, the break will provide a refreshing change.

What it will also do is give the Americans its best shot at a medal since the "Miracle on Ice." With stars like Brett Hull, Bill Guerin, and Tony Amonte donning the Red, White and Blue, the Americans have a legitimate shot at bringing home a medal.

Alright, enough about the Olympics.

• It's pretty much been the same old story around the league. New Jersey and Philadelphia in the Eastern Conference, Dallas, Detroit, and Colorado out West.

But what about the Penguins and Canadiens?

For a team which lost its star player to retirement, Pittsburgh is playing top-notch hockey. Former Hartford Whalers captain

Turn to NHL, page 9

Temple's defense stops Minutemen, 61–47

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

Behind its signature aggressive zone defense, which forced the No. 23 Massachusetts men's basketball team to 30 percent shooting and nine turnovers, the Temple Owls handed UMass its first conference loss of the season last night, its first in 10 games, with a stunning 61–47 decision.

The loss came before 9,493 William D. Mullins Center fans, UMass' third sellout of the season.

The Owls' Rasheed Brokenborough fueled a 16–2 second half run with a pair of three-pointers to give Temple (13–6, 6–3 Atlantic 10) a commanding 42–28 advantage. The Minutemen (16–6, 8–1) never got closer than 12 after that.

"The game was very important for us," said Brokenborough, who assumed the leadership role without backcourt mate Pepe Sanchez in the lineup. "Whenever you lose a member of your family, you wonder if you can win without him. But we played well, and stayed together as a team."

Brokenborough proved Massachusetts center Lari Ketner wrong — the big man made statements concerning Temple's ability to win a big game earlier this week — by taking control of the contest in the second half. Brokenborough scored 12 of his 16 points in the second frame, including eight in the opening 6:34 as the Owls stretched a two-point halftime lead to 14.

From that point, UMass fell apart.

Forward Tyrone Weeks and Ketner were marvelously held in check the entire game by a collapsing Owl defense. The two combined for only six points and five fouls in 52 minutes.

"It's hard because you think you're open when you're not," Ketner said.

"We would try to collapse on him [Ketner]," Temple coach John Chaney said. "He was sitting in the middle of the zone. You're not going to stop him when he's in the kitchen like that. He'll eat up all the food.

"This team usually gets a lot of easy baskets," Chaney said. "Tonight, I think we did a good job of stopping them."

Ketner picked up his second foul of the game with 15:18 remaining in the first half and was never a factor. With Ketner playing conservative basketball on the defensive end, Temple center Lamont Barnes went to work on the interior of the Minutemen defense. The sophomore muscled his way to a game-high 18 points and nine rebounds.

The Temple defense spread out to the perimeter as well and forced the Minutemen backcourt to low percentage shots and bad decisions.

"That's the first time I've really seen a zone like that," said Massachusetts guard Charlton Clarke. "It kind of rattled some of us. [Massachusetts] Coach [Bruiser Flint] said to stress patience tonight, and we didn't."

The Minutemen backcourt contingency of Clarke and Monty Mack combined for 5-for-16 shooting and 25 points. Backup point guard Jonathan DePina picked up three first half fouls and didn't attempt a shot during the game. Clarke led the way for UMass with 14.

"This team makes you do things you don't want to do," Flint said. "We needed to make extra passes out there, and we didn't."

"We learned a good lesson tonight," Flint said. "We just have to keep this one in the memory bank."

Temple and UMass matched baskets until the 12:10 mark of the first half when Clarke's free throw gave his team its final lead of the game, 11–10.

The Owls put together a 9–0 run to pull ahead 19–11, before sophomores Ajmal Basit and Chris Kirkland help put the clamps on Temple for the remainder of the half. Basit blocked three shots around the rim, and Kirkland scored a basket, knocked down a pair of free throws and forced a turnover in the final 2:37 to pull the Minutemen to within a basket at the break, 26–24.

LAUREN KOSSY / COLLEGIAN

Monty Mack scored 11 points despite Temple's frustrating zone defense, but the Owls walked away with the win last night.

Brokenborough, Owls silence Minutemen

You'd have thought Temple read the papers on Monday.

Riding high after a 33-point performance against Dayton, UMass junior center Lari Ketner told reporters that without injured Owl point guard Pepe Sanchez, Temple would not have leadership for last night's game with the Massachusetts men's basketball team. According to Ketner, the Temple backcourt couldn't hang with UMass for 40 minutes without Sanchez.

Luke Meredith

Well, hang the Owls did, scoring 34 points — including three consecutive three-pointers early in the second half — to help bury Massachusetts, 61–47, at the William D. Mullins Center.

On the offensive end, guards Rasheed Brokenborough, Lynn Greer and Quincy Wadley made the shots when they had to. And with sophomore center Lamont Barnes free to roam the paint after Ketner picked up his second foul with 15:51 to go in the first half, Temple (13–6, 6–3 Atlantic 10) had the offense it needed to end a six-game losing streak to UMass (16–6, 8–1).

Temple's guards played last night's game with a mission, but it had nothing to do with what Ketner had said about them. In fact, Brokenborough said he hadn't even heard the center's comments. What they were playing for was a chance to prove they could win a ballgame without Sanchez, their leader.

"We grew up tonight," Temple coach John Chaney said. "What I wanted to see was us to control the tempo of the game. I knew they

Turn to HOOPS, page 9

O'Connor solidifying future for his team & family

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

To say the 1997–98 season for the Massachusetts hockey team has not been a tumultuous one would be like saying El Niño is a slight offshore breeze.

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Tom O'Connor takes responsibility in leading his team and his family.

Through the ups and downs of not only this season but the last four seasons, one Minuteman has been a steadying factor amidst the roller coaster ride of a young program — in what is considered to be the top college hockey conference in the nation.

Senior defenseman Tom O'Connor (two goals, 12 assists on the season) has lived among the shadows the past three seasons, quietly doing the job on the backline while his other cohorts have received top billing. Last week, for example, senior defenseman Brad Norton decided that enough seemed to be enough, and made the jump to the professional ranks.

Period. End of that story.

But as UMass (5–16–2, 2–11–1 in Hockey East) faced two key conference games this past weekend, and a new story unfolded as the Minutemen needed their other seniors to help with the leadership burden. In came the calvary, and together with captain Tim Lovell, goaltender Brian Regan and defenseman Mike Gaffney, O'Connor took on the challenge given to him by coach Joe Mallen last week, and stepped up his play.

Even with a recent right knee injury, the Springfield native has played well, while already surpassing his career high in points scored in a single season (11 points in 1996–97). However, O'Connor's five assists in last weekend's wins over Providence and Merrimack were especially big because it helped lead UMass to its first conference and home wins of the season.

"It was tough with Brad walking out the door last week, but I think it made a lot of the guys step up, and realize we have to pick it up before its too late," O'Connor said. "If we were going to win, the seniors had to make a statement and show our leadership, and that's what we have to do for the rest of the year.

"Those two wins last weekend were a big boost to our confidence, and it gave us some well-needed momentum that we haven't had all year."

Mallen has been familiar with O'Connor's game since he was captain for the U.S. National Select 16 team, and during his days playing for the Springfield Pics. Due to a seemingly all-too-familiar situation with Boston College, a full scholarship offer to make Chestnut Hill home four years ago was reneged at the last minute, and Mallen was more than happy to offer O'Connor a spot on his team.

The coach of the Minutemen was not surprised at all when his senior defenseman automatically filled the space left behind by the departure of Norton.

"He's always been a leader for our team," Mallen said. "The kids have always looked up to him because of his high skill level, and his demeanor in practice. I had no doubt when Brad departed that Tom would instantaneously step up into a role of leadership on the team, and he responded to the challenge.

"All of those seniors as a group responded to the challenge, and we needed that."

Daddy O'Connor

When you think about it, it is no surprise O'Connor did not have a problem with the responsibility of senior leadership; especially when he has already been dealing with the ultimate level of leadership — fatherhood.

It is tough enough for a solid, well grounded man to step up to the full responsibility of fatherhood. Consequently, when you factor in the push and pull of the student-athlete who is also trying to fulfill a dream of playing hockey at the next level, the toughness needed for fatherhood beats giving and taking body checks by a country mile.

During the past two and a half years, O'Connor has had the utmost honor bestowed upon him, and his daughter Kayla is the living and breathing representation of the top responsibility in a man's life. With all three spheres of his life (student, athlete and father) pressing their weight upon his conscience, he spends as much time as humanly possible with his daughter in Springfield, but there are only so many hours in the day.

O'Connor is quick to bestow the utmost honor on his girlfriend, Kara Kelly, who has been patient with him in his pursuit of both a degree, and of a possible professional hockey career down the line.

"It's a lot of hard work, and coach Mallen and all my teammates have always been there for me," O'Connor said. "It's been a long road, and I have to give all the credit to my girlfriend. She has the hardest job, because she's a full- time student as well.

"I try to get back as much as possible, but Kara's been there a 100 percent of the time. My daughter is the best thing to happen to me in my life."

A father of three children himself, Mallen believes that to truly respect the job of being a parent you have to be a parent yourself. To him, the responsibility of being a father has matured O'Connor beyond his years.

"One thing that I believe in about situations like these is that things happen for a reason," Mallen said. "Being nearby both his girlfriend and daughter has been huge for him, and I know because it takes a parent to appreciate parenting.

"Having Kayla in his life has given him a different perspective on life, and having an opportunity to continue a career in hockey will create a solid future for her."

The other Black and Gold

That possible hockey career might not be too far down the tracks as O'Connor will possibly make the jump to the other Black and Gold team in the NHL — the Pittsburgh Penguins. O'Connor was drafted by the Pens with the 102nd pick overall in the fourth round of the 1994 NHL Entry Draft, and they have been keeping a close eye on his progress this season.

Unlike Norton's choice to make the early jump, O'Connor will wait until the end of the season to see how his professional career will turn out. If he is signed by Pittsburgh management, it will most likely be to their American Hockey League affiliate in Hershey, Pa., but stranger things have happened.

If he does play for the Bears, he will join former teammate Brian Corcoran in Hershey, and other ex-teammates like Norton, Rob Bonneau (the AHL's Portland Pirates) and Dennis Wright (the AHL's Worcester Ice Cats) who are making a nice living in the pros.

O'Connor considers it an honor to be ranked up with his former teammates because he has witnessed first-hand what they bring to the professional game.

"Well, we'll see how these last 10

Turn to O'CONNOR, page 9

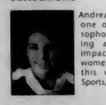
JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Tom O'Connor is stepping up his play as a leading defenseman for the men's hockey team.



The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVIII Issue 7 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Thursday, February 5, 1998

Let the games begin

The 1998 Winter Olympics in Nagano, Japan, begin tomorrow night. Check inside for more (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Sophomore sensations

Andrea Spencer is one of a pair of sophomores making a profound impact on UMass women's athletics this winter (see Sports, page 14).

WORLD

Nobel laureate speaks out against mines

(AP) — Standing at the mine-strewn border between North and South Korea, Nobel laureate Jody Williams insisted Wednesday that peace can be kept on the divided peninsula without land mines.

The United States and South Korea have refused to sign an anti-land mine treaty supported by most of their allies, saying the weapons serve as a deterrent to a possible North Korean invasion. But Williams, an American who won the Nobel Peace Prize last year for her anti-land mine crusade, said the reasons given by the United States and South Korea cannot be justified.

"North Korea did not invade when the United States removed tactical nuclear weapons from the South. Take out the land mines and the North is not going to invade," Williams said, standing in the middle of a dirt road flanked by land mines.

Numerous red signs reading "Mines-Danger" were attached to a high barbed wire fence installed along the Korean border, the world's most heavily armed, to mark mine fields obscured by waist-high reeds.

NATION

Murder trial of N.J. attorney continues

(AP) — The brother of a prominent attorney charged with murdering his mistress testified Tuesday how the two dumped a body off the New Jersey coast in June 1996 as he shouted, "This is wrong!"

Gerard Capano, 34, testified in a bail hearing for his brother, Thomas Capano. The 48-year-old is charged with murdering Anne Marie Fahey, Gov. Thomas Carper's scheduling secretary.

"I told him I didn't want to go. I don't want to go for a boat ride... I just don't want to ruin my life," Gerard Capano told Superior Court Judge William Swain Lee.

The younger Capano acknowledged in court that he began cooperating with investigators after an October raid on his own house turned up illegal narcotics and firearms.

He has agreed to plead guilty to a federal kidnapping charge and to serve three years on probation. The deal included immunity for other relatives — excluding Thomas — for false statements they may have given to a grand jury.

Gerard Capano appeared sullen as he testified before a courtroom packed with members of his family, one of the best known and wealthiest in Wilmington. His mother, Marguerite, cried as he walked in.

Thomas Capano, a married father of four, has acknowledged an affair with Ms. Fahey.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 35 LOW: 25	HIGH: 37 LOW: 19	HIGH: 33 LOW: 11

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 12
Comics.....page 13
Crossword .....page 13
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 12
News.....page 2
Sports .....page 14

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Semester's first SGA meeting held yesterday

By Jill Carroll
Collegian staff

The first meeting of the University of Massachusetts Student Government Association (SGA) produced some positive results for students including lowering tuition for in-state students, setting dates for SGA election nominations and insuring a free spring concert.

Brian Tirrell, student trustee of the SGA, reported that the University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees will be lowering tuition for in-state undergraduates and graduates next year for all UMass campuses.

UMass Amherst in-state undergraduates will receive a reduction of $100. Out-of-state students however, can expect an increase of $108.

Tirrell also reported there will be a freeze on all fees. This means fees such as housing and the on-campus meal plan will not be raised.

"The administration does take into account that students are hard pressed even in a booming economy. The reason in-state students pay less is to keep tuition affordable for citizens of the state," Tirrell said.

Carlos Alvarez, Senator in University policy, was sworn in as the Chancellor of Elections. Upon being sworn in he announced the dates for election nominations.

Normally an election committee would announce the dates of election nominations. In the absence of such a committee a motion was passed to give the responsibility to Alvarez.

Some members of the SGA were concerned this would give too much power to one person. It would take weeks to appoint the committee and the urgency to announce the nomination dates soon in order to hold the elections before spring break overruled those concerns.

> "We can't function if we don't have the computer equipment to do it. What we're talking about here is the functioning of the SGA. I consider that an emergency."
> -Senator Paul Ferro

Nominations will be accepted starting Monday Feb. 9 until Monday Feb. 23.

"In past years there has never been anything close to a committee. It's just not realistic," Kilbourne said.

The motion was passed and Alvarez was able to announce the dates when he was sworn in. The early announcement means elections will take place before spring break.

"It's tough to get students to come out [to vote] on a Monday when they've been going crazy the week before [on spring break]," said Jodi Bailey, Senator for Commuters at-large.

Alvarez hopes this will help the election process become more efficient.

"This the first step toward changing election procedures which are flawed in many ways," Alvarez said.

Another reason to look forward to the spring semester is a proposal by Brian McManus, senator at large in the Southwest area, to keep spring concert free to all students who contribute to the Student Activities Trust Fund (SATF). This would include all UMass students because

Turn to SGA, page 3

REN MC DONALD/ COLLEGIAN

Rebels with a cause

Kate Tvelia, a senior psychology major, went to look at various service organizations which were having a fair in the Campus Center yesterday.

Bowker hosts Shabazz talk

By Edgar A. Barros
Collegian Staff

Atallah Shabazz, the eldest daughter of Malcolm X and Betty Shabazz, will be speaking on topics concerning the life of her parents tonight in Bowker Auditorium.

Specific topics of Shabazz's lecture will include her parents' struggles, accomplishments and legacy. Her father's controversial life will surely spark interest in the minds of many, and for others, the often ignored life of her mother will be of great interest.

One of the advantages of having Attallah Shabazz speak on these topics is that she brings a different perspective to the podium: a personal perspective. Her ability to offer a personal perspective will provide the audience with details and thoughts which have never been heard before.

Other topics of tonight's discussion will include how the work of her parents affected their family and the struggles she and her sisters dealt with — a somewhat controversial topic.

Shabazz currently travels with her non-profit performing arts group which performs around the country. She is also an internationally acclaimed writer, producer, lecturer, and entrepreneur.

According to La'Keisha Kennedy, president of Black Student Union (BSU), "Students and faculty should feel privileged to have the opportunity to hear Attallah Shabazz speak because she does not make many stops on the lecture circuit."

With the untimely death of her mother, Betty Shabazz, who earned a Ph.D in education from the University of Massachusetts Amherst, Atallah found this to be an ideal time to speak here.

The (BSU) and the Office of ALANA Affairs encourages everyone from the UMass community to attend tonight's lecture regardless of race, gender, class, religion, or creed.

"This is a great opportunity for everyone to come together and learn a piece of Black history with a woman who was raised by one of the greatest men in the fight for human rights," Kennedy said.

The presentation of Attallah Shabazz by BSU and the Office of ALANA Affairs tops a week of workshops which discusses issues such as the culture, history, and politics of African-Americans, in celebration of Black History Month. The theme which BSU has chosen is "Moving Forward While Looking Back."

Students in attendance will have the opportunity to ask Shabazz any questions concerning herself and her family, as well as any other questions related to Black History Month, civil rights or race relations in America.

Atallah Shabazz will speak tonight at the Bowker Auditorium at 7:00 p.m. The event is free for students and faculty, $3.00 for the general public. No cameras or recording devices will be allowed inside the auditorium and security will be strictly enforced.

Former cadet testifies against ex-rommate

By Chris Newton
Associated Press

FORT WORTH, Texas — Former Naval Academy cadet Diane Zamora said her 16-year-old romantic rival was a "tramp" who "deserved to die," an ex-roommate testified at Ms. Zamora's murder trial Wednesday.

Jennifer McKearny offered details from a late-night dorm-room conversation she said she had with Ms. Zamora in August 1996, eight months after Adrianne Jones was killed.

Ms. Zamora, 20, and her former fiance, former Air Force Academy cadet David Graham, are accused of murdering Miss Jones because of her one-time fling with Graham. Prosecutors allege Ms. Zamora hit Miss Jones over the head with a dumbbell weight, then ordered Graham to finish her off by shooting her.

Ms. McKearny, also a former midshipman, said Ms. Zamora acknowledged she was present during the slaying but never mentioned striking Jones in the head with a dumbbell.

Ms. McKearny said her roommate showed no remorse in a later conversation.

"She said she had totally cleared her conscience and the girl deserved to die... (and that) everyone knew she was a tramp and a slut," Ms. McKearny said.

Under questioning by prosecutors, Ms. McKearny testified that Ms. Zamora told her she was driving the car the night of the 1995 slaying, with Graham in the front seat and Miss Jones in the back. That differs from Ms. Zamora's alleged confession and the accounts of other witnesses, who said Graham was driving while Ms. Zamora hid in the trunk.

Ms. Zamora "said over and over that Jones kept saying, 'You're going to kill me. You're going to kill me, aren't you?'" Ms. McKearny said. "They said, 'Yes.'"

John Green Jr., a high school friend of Graham, testified that Ms. Zamora and Graham crept into his house through a window late one night looking disheveled. Green said that Graham told him: 'You're my best friend - we were never here and you don't want to know."

UMass to host educator conference

By Jason Eisman
Collegian Staff

Over 100 educators from Western Massachusetts will assemble this Saturday at the University of Massachusetts for a conference to discuss recruiting more math and science teachers.

The educators will include teachers from kindergarden through twelfth grades in addition to instructors from area colleges. The project — Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics Teacher Education Collaboration (STEMTEC) — is funded by a $5 million grant from the National Science Foundation (NSF).

"All the work that we're doing this weekend focuses on issues of diversity in science and math classrooms," Susan Newton, STEMTEC project manager, said.

According to Newton, it has been predicted that 40 percent of the nation's teachers will retire in the next five years. This is expected to cause a teacher shortage, particularly in the fields of math and science.

"Many teachers were hired about 30 years ago," Newton said. "The baby boomers are beginning to retire."

To prevent a shortage of teachers, one of the main points of the conference is to convince current students to become science and math teachers.

"We want to encourage more students in math and science to go into teaching," Newton said.

She said that the conference was intended for the purpose of improving undergraduate programs, but in the long run it would help teachers at all levels.

The conference is a result of a five year collaboration between college and K–12 educators.

To prevent a shortage of teachers, one of the main points of the conference is to convince current students to become science and math teachers.

"We want to encourage more students in math and science to go into teaching," Newton said.

She said that the conference was intended for the purpose of improving undergraduate programs, but in the long run it would help teachers at all levels.

The conference is a result of a five year collaboration between college and K–12 educators.

Turn to TEACH, page 3

KEN MC DONALD/ COLLEGIAN

He's gotta crush

Alex Lea, a senior forestry major, learns that some jobs on campus are less illustrious than others, as is demonstrated above.

Dem fundraiser surrenders

By James Rowley
Associated Press

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — After fleeing to China while Congress investigated his political fund raising, Yah Lin "Charlie" Trie is back to face criminal charges of illegally funneling foreign money into the 1996 Democratic presidential campaign.

Sought for nearly a year as a witness by House and Senate committees that investigated campaign fund-raising abuses, Trie surrendered to FBI agents Tuesday in a surprise return to this country.

The former Little Rock, Ark., restaurateur and friend of President Clinton turned himself in after flying into Washington Dulles International Airport from Paris.

Trie later was released on a $200,000 personal recognizance bond by a federal magistrate who approved an agreement worked out by his lawyers and Justice Department prosecutors as the terms for his surrender.

"The White House believes that these matters should proceed appropriately, and that comments on the circumstances of Mr. Trie's surrender should be handled by the Justice Department," said James E. Kennedy, a White House lawyer.

Trie and a business associate were named last week in a 15-count indictment charging they solicited illegal donations to buy access to Clinton and other top officials to help their business interests.

Trie's lawyer, Reid Weingarten, traveled overseas to meet Trie and arrange for his return after the federal grand jury brought the indictment, said Jeffrey Gans, an attorney from Weingarten's firm who appeared at a bail hearing with the defendant.

Weingarten issued a statement emphasizing that Trie had volunteered to return to face the charges.

"Because of this act, any questions about his being a fugitive from justice or a spy for a foreign power should be put to rest," the statement said. "We are confident that when the media frenzy and political savagery associated with this case abate and this matter is aired in court, Mr. Trie will be fully vindicated." The Justice Department provided few details about Trie's return. But a senior official cautioned against making the assumption that Trie had agreed to cooperate.

"It's not at all unusual for defendants to come back and face charges rather than spend their life on the run," said an official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Turn to CONGRESS, page 2

Computers create problems

By Tom Raum
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Promising "a major technological and managerial effort," President Clinton created a White House council Wednesday to coordinate efforts to head off computer problems that threaten critical federal services when the calendar year changes to 2000.

Agencies ranging from the Pentagon to the Internal Revenue Service to the Federal Aviation Administration are expecting significant problems unless the problem can be overcome.

The problem will occur because many computer systems and other electronic devices, in both government and private industry, are programmed to recognize only the last two digits in a date and will misinterpret 2000 as 1900.

"The American people expect reliable service from their government and deserve the confidence that critical government functions dependent on electronic systems will be performed accurately and in a timely manner," Clinton said in an executive order setting up the Year 2000 Conversion Council.

John Koskinen, deputy director of the Office of Management and Budget in Clinton's first term, will head the new council, White House spokesman Mike McCurry said.

"We've been intensifying our efforts to make sure that federal systems can support critical programs for the American people as the calendar rolls over to the year 2000 and we face the problem of computers being able to read dates correctly," McCurry said.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., who introduced legislation in the Senate to set up a similar body, said he is encouraged Clinton is giving the issue top priority. "Having spent two years studying and warning of the lagging progress of the agencies on this issue, I should warn Mr. Koskinen that with fewer than two years remaining, he faces what looks to be the 13th labor of Hercules," Moynihan said in a written statement.

A House Government Reform and Oversight subcommittee already is holding a hearing on the problem. The General Accounting Office presented a report Wednesday suggesting the FAA is lagging in its efforts to fix the "year 2000" bug in its computers, a circumstance that the GAO said could delay airline flights and jeopardize safety.

The aviation administration had anticipated it would adjust the most critical of its computer systems by November 1999. But Stanley Graham, an outside auditors, testified Wednesday that the FAA will not make the deadline if it continues at the same pace as now. Administration budget officials have told Congress that more than a dozen federal agencies will have to redirect hundreds of millions of their technology budget dollars to correct year 2000 computer problems.

Many old computer software programs with the two-digit programming - 98 would represent 1998 - will run awry after the stroke of midnight New Year's Eve 1999. The government has estimated it will spend at least $3.9 billion to avert widespread computer crashes within the federal bureaucracy.

■ Congress

continued from page 1

A Taiwan native and naturalized U.S. citizen, Trie had gone to China last spring after congressional committees began investigating his role in funneling Asian money into Democratic Party coffers.

Republicans on Capitol Hill made repeated calls for the State Department to assist in locating Trie, who at one point told NBC News he was in hiding in Shanghai. NBC quoted Trie as saying his business had dried up as a result of the controversy surrounding his fund-raising and that he was broke.

Following a lengthy stay in China, Trie had been in Macao, a Portuguese colony on the coast near Hong Kong, law enforcement officials said Tuesday. Macao is the home of Ng Lap Seng, Trie's partner in several business ventures.

U.S. Magistrate Judge Theresa Buchanan read the charges against him during the bail hearing. She ordered Trie to turn over the deeds of his home in Little Rock and another property he owns there and surrender his passport.

His arraignment was scheduled Thursday before U.S. District Judge Paul Friedman in Washington.

Trie, 49, made no statement to reporters waiting outside the U.S. Courthouse but posed for pictures.

Trie and business associate Yuan Pei "Antonio" Pan, 50, are accused of funneling donations to the Democratic National Committee from people whom they reimbursed with cash.

KEN MC DONALD/ COLLEGIAN

Ready for Nagano

Joe Mallen Jr., who is the son of UMass men's hockey coach, prepares to take the ice yesterday.

PAY FULL PRICE?
Why Bother?
BACK TO SCHOOL
New SALE priced Health & Beauty selections!
Dozens of Clothing items MARKED DOWN!
Calculators on SALE!
UMass Notebooks 25% OFF!!!
UStore
We're not like a mall. We're better.
The University Store
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST
University Store
In the UMass Campus Center
Hours:
M-F 9 to 5 Sat 11 to 4
(413) 545 - 2619
AMEX, MC, Visa, Discover and UCard cheerfully accepted!

PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S
331 Russell Street, Hadley
586-7272
OPEN 'TIL 3AM FRIDAY & SATURDAY
Welcome Back
Carry-out Special
NO LIMIT
$3.99 PLUS TAX
Large Cheese Pizza
NEW (Offer expires February 15, 1998)
HOURS OF OPERATION
Sunday - Wednesday 11am - 1am
Thursday 11am - 2am
Friday & Saturday 11am - 3am
LARGE ONE-TOPPING PIZZA $6.98
PAPA'S CHOICE 1 LG UP TO 5 TOPPINGS $9.98
LARGE MEATS PIZZA DELIVERED $9.98
Offer expires 5/31/98 • Not Valid with any other offer • Valid only at participating locations • Customer pays all applicable sales tax • Additional toppings extra

Someone misses you.
1-800-COLLECT®

Balloonists break record

By Clare Nullis
Associated Press

GENEVA — A European team of balloonists broke the world record Tuesday for the most time in the air, but said China's refusal to let it float through its airspace deflated the team's round-the-world dreams.

The Breitling Orbiter 2 control center said chances of making the historic global circuit were "zero" without a Chinese change of heart.

The huge silver balloon hovered 800 feet above northern India late Tuesday as the crew waited to see if Beijing might drop its objections. China has said the balloon poses a security risk to other aircraft in its airspace.

If China does not relent, the crew will decide by noon Wednesday whether to abort the journey in India or continue through Laos, Burma and Vietnam.

Organizers say the balloon does not have enough fuel to clear the Pacific Ocean if it is forced to take a longer route to avoid China.

The team sought consolation Tuesday in besting the record set last year by American adventurer Steve Fossett for the longest time spent in the air.

Fossett was on board his Solo Challenger for 146 hours and 44 minutes before lack of fuel forced him down in a remote village 375 miles southeast of New Delhi, India.

Control center said the Swiss-led team beat that record at 8:07 a.m. EST.

Control center staff at Geneva airport celebrated the achievement with champagne. But Swiss pilot Bertrand Piccard, Belgium's Wim Verstraeten and British flight engineer Andy Elson were less jubilant.

"It's the icing on the cake, but unfortunately we haven't got the cake," Piccard said in a message.

The balloonists had hoped to take advantage of rapid jet-stream winds that would have swept the balloon across southern China to the Pacific. This would have enabled them to reach California in four days and North Africa - the planned finish - in seven. Chinese authorities have cited the large number of commercial and military aircraft that use the jet stream, especially during the Lunar New Year holiday, which ends Tuesday, according to diplomats.

"They cannot guarantee the security of the balloon and the security of civilian air traffic," said Florence Tinguely Mattli of the Swiss Embassy in Beijing.

KEN MC DONALD/ COLLEGIAN

The latest unicycle?

Unicyle or not, this motorcycle is definitely stuck in a rut. The owner was not available for comment.

Media groups push for lift of gag order

By David A. Lieb
Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Media groups today urged a judge to unseal documents in Paula Jones' sexual-harassment lawsuit against President Clinton and to lift a gag order, arguing it promotes innuendo and rumor.

Lawyers for a dozen media groups, including The Associated Press, said the order is too broad, restricts free speech without good reason and does nothing to ensure a fair trial.

"To the contrary, instead of reducing the possibility of prejudice, the order is potentially promoting prejudice," the media groups wrote. "The order, without any intention to do so, promotes misinformation, speculation, innuendo and rumor." The president's lawyers earlier this week had asked U.S. District Judge Susan Webber Wright to move the trial from May 27 to March 23 in an attempt to squelch false information they say is based on leaks.

The media groups said lifting the gag order would give them an opportunity to disseminate facts from the court record, rather than relying on anonymous sources with their own motives.

"Given the magnitude of recent revelations there is absolutely no way to eliminate the anonymous sources and rumor' cited in the president's motion short of removing the secrecy by which it is fueled," lawyer Robert B. Huemeke argued on behalf of the media groups.

For example, according to sources speaking on condition of anonymity, Clinton denied under oath during his Jan. 17 deposition for Mrs. Jones' lawsuit that he had any sexual relations with former White House intern Monica Lewinsky.

However, there is nothing in the public court record about it. In addition to the AP, today's request was made by Pulitzer Publishing Co., publisher of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch; The New York Times; USA Today; Newsday; NBC; CBS; ABC; CNN; Time; Little Rock Newspapers, publisher of the Arkansas Democrat-Gazette; and The Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press.

Mrs. Jones' lawsuit claims Clinton asked her for oral sex at a Little Rock hotel in 1991 while he was governor and she was a state employee. Her lawyers have been questioning other women in an attempt to show a pattern of misbehavior by Clinton.

Wright already was considering a motion by Judicial Watch, a Washington-based conservative group, to modify the gag and open Clinton's deposition to the public.

That request, filed Jan. 28, also cited the ineffectiveness of the gag order while arguing it would be in the public's interest to know the reason for allegations that Clinton may have perjured himself in the deposition.

■ SGA

continued from page 1

payment to this fund is included in tuition bills. McManus feels the students should not be used to make a profit and would be willing to foot the bill if students were to be charged.

"Don't plan on charging students and making money off of students. I would be more willing to take the money out of our [SGA] account to keep the concert free," McManus said.

Another issue of money came up concerning the fund used to give money to RSO's. The finance committee is in charge of a fund used to give emergency money to RSO's.

On a more costly note, a motion was proposed by Alvarez to buy a new computer for the SGA office. The current computer crashes continually, wasting time and slowing the work of the SGA. The computer was estimated to cost $1,500. This money would be taken out of the emergency fund. There was debate over taking money out of this fund.

"I don't know if anyone has noticed but a $4,000 dinner here, a $1,500 survey there, now we're about to pass a motion for a $1,500 computer," Adam Feldman, Commuter at Large said. "If the RSO's can just walk downstairs [from the SGA office to avoid using the SGA computer] why can't we and save $1,500? We're taking money away from RSO's this fund is for helping RSO's in an emergency."

Senator Paul Ferro disagreed commenting, "We can't function if we don't have the computer equipment to do it. What we're talking about here is the functioning of the SGA. I consider that an emergency."

Despite the controversy the motion passed.

■ teach

continued from page 1

Newton gave credit to five investigators who looked into providing grants for improving math and science program.

Each of the five colleges has an investigator. UMass' investigator is Morton Sternheim, a professor emeritus of physics.

Part of the conference will be spent discussing what has worked in their revised courses and some of the problems they have come across.

In addition to UMass, STEMTEC includes Hampshire, Amherst, Mount Holyoke and Smith colleges. It also includes three community colleges and public schools in Springfield, Amherst, Holyoke, Hadley, Northampton, South Hadley and Franklin County.

Interested in writing for News?
Then come to the New Writers meeting on Monday, Feb. 9 at 7 p.m.
Call Leigh, the News Editor for more information.

HURRY!
This is your last Chance to appear in this year's yearbook!
the INDEX
All this week!
Schedule a sitting
(800) 836-0558
GET YOUR SENIOR INDEX YEARBOOK PHOTO NOW!
Campus Center Rm. 177-178

ADVERTISE With The COLLEGIAN

HEY!
Ski or Ride just $21
Bus + Lift Ticket Included
Daily Bus Leaves: UMass 9:55 am
Amherst Center 10:00 am
Arrive: Mt. Tom 10:35 am
Leave: Mt.Tom 4:30 pm
Arrive: UMass 5:10 pm
Mt. TOM Ski Area
Peter Pan

JAMAICA
ONE LOVE. ONE HEART. ONE GREAT PARTY!!!
IT'S THAT TIME OF YEAR WHEN THOUSANDS OF STUDENTS COME TO JAMAICA TO FEEL ALRIGHT - FOR AN UNBELIEVABLE PRICE!!!
PACKAGE INCLUDES:
• Round-Trip Airfare
• 7 Nights Hotel Accommodations
• Round-Trip Airport & Hotel Transfers
• Free Welcome, Beach & Evening Parties
• Free Admission to Night Clubs
• Discounts on Restaurants, Water Sports & Side Excursions
• Resort Packages Available from $499
• Professional On-Site Tour Reps
• Complete Weekly Activities Program Offering Optional Sunset Cruise, Booze Cruise, Toga Party & More!
• Free Bonus Party Pack
SUN SPLASH TOURS 1 800-426-7710
STUDENT TRAVEL SERVICES 1 800-648-4849
Price is per person based on quad occupancy NY BWI/Wash. Cleveland. Cincinnati. Columbus. Nashville. New Orleans. Philadelphia. Pittsburgh departures. Other cities may qualify for reduction or require surcharge. US and Jamaica departure taxes (currently $57) and $9 handling charge additional. Add $30 for 3/6,7,8/98 bookings. Rates increase $30 on 12/15/97. Peak-week surcharges/off-week discounts may apply. Restrictions and cancellation penalties apply. Limited availability. Subject to change without notice. Call for full details on hotel selection and availability.

— The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian —

Breaking point...

"You're from Philly, huh? Shoot anybody recently?" (Insert small, insular New England town chuckle here).

For the past four years, this is what I've had to hear most times I mention my city of origin. And I think I've been pretty civil for the most part for a "city" guy, what with our trademark trip-wire disposition. The truth of the matter is that by growing up in some Bay State village, you're less likely to be brained by a bullet than if you pick a fight with the average clod.

C. Taylor Conner

Let's see here — bloody lip or spattered cranium? It's a crapshoot if you're faced with a potential rumble in Urbania, and there are only two ways to roll: be the guy who walks away or be the guy who limps, crawls or is carried away. I choose the former. Delicate bones, you know.

So I came to Amherst, a civil man from Philadelphia, ready to spread some Brotherly Love to the Happy Valley. And I witnessed crops upon crops of schlubs from little places beat the living poop out of each other because they'd never been in a situation where their poop might not be living at the end of an altercation.

But for me, things were hunky-dory until I brought a car up to school.

Though few will acknowledge it, I believe there is a breaking point in all people, especially those who exist as oxymorons — polite city dwellers. For years you cast a blind eye toward the muggings, the hold-ups, the break-ins, the obnoxious incense peddlers. And your world is good, if you let it be so.

But there is a breaking point at which we snap like any other human being. There has to be. And it took driving in the Amherst area to bring about my own private psychotic catharsis.

Here's how crossing the street works in most major cities. If you have the "Walk" signal, you look to your right, then your left, then both ways again, and finally you cross the street at an efficient pace. If you don't have the walk signal, you follow the above procedure, but rather than briskly strolling from sidewalk to sidewalk, you dash like Michael Johnson with a road flare in his keister.

Note in the above paragraph there is no mention of crosswalks. There is a reason for that — God did not intend them to be. Now I'm no Bible-thumper, but I do know that while there is neither a passage regarding cars nor crosswalks in Genesis. Cars are bigger, faster and mo' bigger than the average mortal. This is Detroit's Darwinism at its finest.

To the civil city man, getting killed for his wallet makes perfect sense, but some chump dragging narrow tail across those insipid white lines is a real crime.

When I get behind the wheel of my Cherokee, I feel the full, unbridled flush of the power of that puppy. And this doggy don't want to play nice with a pear-shaped, acid washed jean-sporting engineer who can't get his hustle on when I'm vying for a good parking spot.

What I previously believed to be the universal principle of traversing a busy road: a pied seems to hold no relevance around these parts. To the civil city man, getting killed for his wallet makes perfect sense, but some chump dragging narrow tail across those insipid white lines is a real crime. There is a beautiful, fluid rhythm to urban pedestrian traffic — the MGM musical for the downtown set — because everyone understands that everyone else has somewhere to be.

Thus, the sight of shuffling Vans and denim pants the size of Bill Maher's ego slogging through backed up traffic like some Fellini-does-Caucasoid hip-hop quaalude festival really digs right to the core of all the bad things inside me. The bad things Mom told me not to think, or worse, do.

Sometimes I see "The Day." It'll be 9:17 a.m. or so, the morning drive to the garage. He'll be one of those lanky goobers, one of those rich kids with a hand-me-down Volvo station wagon, a prep school education and more weed in his dorm room than a Bam Morris party.

I'll stop for him at the crosswalk. He'll take his sugary sweet time. He'll turn back mid-stride to joke with a chum. He's meat unless he does "The Thing" — the Get-Out-of-Jail-Free card for his type. All it takes is the courtesy wave, and my instincts will repress themselves. It's a real live "Choose Your Own Adventure" book, Jack, and you want page 37, not 52.

He won't give the wave. I flip the shift-on-the-fly four- wheel drive. He doesn't even see it coming, the end of my civility. The police will search in desperation for any witnesses, but strangely no driver will admit to having seen anything. I'll clean the clumps of natty white-boy dreads and tattered hemp jewelry out of my grill before the fuzz even show. A fantasy crime.

Is it so perverse, this vision? Oh, yeah. Big time. But who unmade me? So if you see that dark green jeep rumbling your way, pedestrians, know that judgment has come upon you — lest ye wave — and it shall be that of the unhinged city man.

C. Taylor Conner is a Collegian columnist.

Things to think about

I haven't been real busy since I saw you guys last. My life during the first few weeks of 1998 hasn't been very interesting. Without you guys, ideas that would make a humorous column just worry my friends. In fact, housemate B's favorite expression over break was, "Luke, what makes you act the way you do?"

You know, I'm not really sure.

But ideas just sort of bounce off my head. I just listen to them more when I have nothing to do.

Like during the month of January.

In this time, when (as we've already established) I didn't do anything, I came face to face with a few, quite serious ideas.

Their stories must be told.

There may be a little "Hey Luke, don't let the snow and the isolation and the fact that you had no money and had to have Garv and Jimmy support you with their keg-orator and occasional free meals get you down" feeling this time out.

Buy hey, what's serious journalism without a little hunger, snow or drunkenness? Where would Cokie Roberts, Dan Rather or even Stone Phillips be without it?

Exactly.

Luke Meredith

Winny Cooper was never the All-American girl

In fact, Winny Cooper was a tramp.

That might be a little harsh, soiling Super Cooper's legacy by calling her a tramp. We'd all like to think Ms. Gwendolyn Cooper epitomizes all the things we love about women, and America really. But if you look at the facts, Super Cooper ain't so super. The only thing Winny epitomized was being a heart-breaker.

Remember the second to last episode? Winny leaves Kevin — they're still together, mind you — to work at a resort. Kevin gets in a fight with Mr. Arnold, over the whole "You don't run my life" thing.

Yeah, Kev. I know. P.I. thought he was pretty cool back then too.

Kevin leaves home. He goes to the resort, finds Winny, hoping she'd be happy to spend the summer with him.

Hoping being the key word.

But it turns out "Super Cooper" (ain't that ironic) has shacked up with some punk lifeguard named Chip or something. And when Kev finds out, Winny gets mad because Kev "spied" on her.

Hmm. Sounds like "tramp" to me. I won't even the mention the time she put on Kev's Jets jacket and did her best Kevin Arnold impression (yeah, real funny)— or her brief seventh-grade affair with that quarterback.

Nobody has the right to make fun of Kevin Arnold, or break his heart. Nobody.

In my mind, Kev should have tried to get with Becky Slater. Yeah, she was shady, but at least she was up front about it. And any girl that can throw a punch and get with Hobson — Kev's wise-ass friend — is alright by me.

Winnipeg Jets fans are funny

If you look at someone and say, "Hey, you look like a Winnipeg Jets fan," somebody else will laugh. Though I have yet to try this one out, I believe in it.

Besides, telling someone they look like a Minnesota North Stars fan doesn't pack that same bite. And they made fun of the Whalers enough in Chasing Amy for all of us. (Hartford is nothing to joke about, you know. If Hartford blew up, think of how much insurance would go up.)

Bob Barker's policy of only picking old ladies, guys from the Navy and sorority girls from UC-Santa Cruz to appear as guests on "The Price is Right"

That's fact. What I need to do is get someone at this University to give me an independent study called "Sexism on 'The Price is Right': A case study on the overt emphasis on booty in America's favorite game show."

Barker's beauties? Plinko?

I could get an A in Plinko. Much easier than French.

By the way, I never tried out the whole "Price is Right" or the daring "Hey, let's make fun of Winnipeg" theory on housemate B.

He worries about me enough as it is.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

A fair deal for Lewinsky?

By now, the image of the fresh-faced intern is everywhere. But who is Monica Lewinsky? When the story of her alleged affair with President Clinton first broke, she was portrayed as a wide-eyed Innocent who had been cruelly used and then cast aside. At least that's the image brought to us by Lewinsky's former friend, Linda Tripp.

FOCUS ON WOMEN

SARA ECKEL

"The kid was madly in love with Clinton," Tripp's friend and agent Lucianne Goldberg told the New Yorker. "But she was increasingly miserable. And you know how it is when a girlfriend is being treated badly by a man... Tripp was furious. It was like she was gonna see her own daughter die."

Of course, Lewinsky's "mom" showed just how concerned she was for the young woman's welfare by secretly taping their conversations and sicking Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr on her. But that's another matter. Especially since the tide has begun to turn on Lewinsky's image. Now she is increasingly viewed as a calculating temptress, a slut. A recent New York Daily News headline dubbed Lewinsky as "SEX-CRAZED," after an ex-boyfriend came forward to say that the former intern plotted the alleged affair.

Whether Monica Lewinsky is ultimately seen as a naif or a vixen has yet to be determined. But one thing is for sure: She will have to be one or the other. It's simply not possible that Lewinsky could be an ordinary woman who lost her head when the leader of the free world came calling. We will never allow her to be a functioning adult with an average sexual appetite, a woman who simply made a mistake.

Not that she necessarily deserves sympathy. Obviously, it is wrong to partake of another woman's husband. But that's not what the impulse to cast Lewinsky as either a child or a whore is about. Rather, it speaks to our deep-seated ambivalence about female sexuality. Despite the many advances that women have enjoyed over the past century, there is one double standard that doesn't seem to be going anywhere.

For some reason, we still have a very hard time with the idea of women enjoying sex for its own sake. That men can enjoy the pleasures of the flesh without emotional hang-ups has always been a given. In fact, we've taken this concept to such a ridiculous extreme that even when a sixth-grade boy was seduced by his teacher (who later became pregnant from the affair), the matter was treated like a joke — the young boy seen less a victim of child abuse than the beneficiary of astonishing good luck. But women who obtain carnal knowledge outside the bounds of a committed relationship must necessarily fall into one of two categories: They are either simps who have been duped into thinking their relationships were deeper, or they are tramps.

"Why buy the cow when you can get the milk for free?" I had once thought that cliche had gone the way of Ovaltine and "Howdy Doody." But lately I've been hearing it uttered by a number of conservative women commentators. Speaking in kittenish voices and wearing leopard-print miniskirts, they wax on about how the sexual revolution has hurt women because now men don't feel so compelled to marry.

It's interesting to hear these women cast the female species as mere victims of men's desires — especially after so many years of accusing feminists of doing the same. It has apparently not occurred to them that not all women view sex as a commodity that can be brokered in exchange for more desirable things — wedding rings, furs, whatever. And I think most men would be happy to know that the gal on the street doesn't view sex as charity work, either. Women aren't "giving" anything away. To the contrary, they are taking.

This is not to say that Monica Lewinsky is not naive or stupid or emotionally unstable or a liar or manipulator. She may be all of the above or none of the above — I have no idea. But I suspect that had she not been outed by a creepy friend with a tape recorder, she would have recovered from her infatuation just fine. It was Monica Lewinsky's choice of friends — not lovers — that caused her downfall.

Sara Eckel is a syndicated columnist. Send comments to the author in care of the Collegian or send her e-mail at saraeum@aol.com.

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.

Letters must be typed, no more than 300 words long and include a name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted by mail to: Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst, MA 01003; by email to letters@collegian.umass.edu; or by fax to 413-545-1592.

The Collegian reserves the right to edit letters for length, libel, grammar, and style.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Attention all interested writers: There will be a meeting tonight at 7 p.m. for prospective columnists in the Collegian offices at 113 Campus Center Basement. We are especially looking for writers who can have a specialization in background, such as campus/local news, multicultural issues, international politics, science, etc....

Let our page be as broad and varied as the University is by coming down and getting involved. Please bring a sample column, approximately 600-700 words long, with you. Call Dan Eckel or James Connolly at 545-1491 for more information.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Christopher Stamm Editor-in-Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Co-Editor
Tamar Carroll Editorial/Opinion Co-Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Leigh Faulkner News Editor
Lauren Konky Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor
Joeseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
David Parmenter Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Your guide to the Winter Olympics

Getting in shape for the Olympics

Things are moving so fast and furious these last few days I can hardly keep things straight. The Winter Olympics open tomorrow night in Nagano, and I'm not really sure I'm ready.

That's not to say I haven't been preparing. Quite the contrary. I have been prepping for this like you wouldn't believe. My couch and pillows are ready, I've got the TV Guide with the special edition Olympic cover and I'm going to watch the whole horrid Nancy-and-Tonya thing on television tonight. Plus, I have literally spent minutes watching ESPN's Winter X-Games and Wide World of Sports (at least when it has ice dancing).

So I'm prepared. Unlike Lillehammer, when I went into the whole Olympic thing and got completely blindsided. Seriously, after the opening ceremonies and a day of giant slalom, my leg was asleep, I was out of snacks and I couldn't handle the luge.

Turn to SHAPE, page 7

Therefore, I offer a few tips to the Olympic viewer, because watching can be just as strenuous as competing.

• Start small: If this is your first Winter Olympics in front of the tube, the experience can be a bit overwhelming. The Games are nothing like those held in the summer months (a bunch of countries compete in sports that wouldn't otherwise make it onto television for the chance at a medal — something completely different).

You have to pace yourself.

Seven years ago, I was talking to my friend Casey about the prospect of snowboarding being an Olympic sport. At the time, I thought that it could be a positive step for the sport.

However, Casey seemed to disagree with me at the time.

Seven years later, I see both the positive and negative impacts on the sport as snowboarding makes its debut this month at the eighteenth Winter Games in Nagano, Japan.

Snowboarding as an Olympic sport?

What is snowboarding? Where and when did it originate?

In the late '60s there were people that took really big skis and would stand on one ski with two feet on it and slide down hills. It was not long before big corporations like Brunswick, who was making pool tables, caught on and used scrap wood from pool tables to make the "Snurfer."

The "Snurfer" was nothing more than a piece of wood with some traction so the user can place their feet on it and a rope tide to the front of it so the rider can steer the board. Today, snowboarding has evolved into the fastest-growing winter sport in American with different ways for snowboarders to enjoy the sport. Whether you are the type of snow-

Turn to BOARDING, page 7

Winter alterna-sports

In America, if I brought a person to the edge of a ski jump and told them to launch themselves off it, I would probably be arrested for intent to murder.

In my homeland of Finland, if I brought a person to the edge of ski jump and told them to let it fly, they would — and that person would probably buy me a beer afterwards as well (geez, as if that's the key to my heart).

In America, if I put on cross country skis and went out for a little 20, 30 or even 50 kilometer trek, I would probably be labeled a sucker for punishment.

In Finland, if I put on those skis and won that 20, 30 or even 50 kilometer trek, I would be considered a hero.

In America, if I put on said skis and went out on that trek with a rifle over my shoulder, I would probably be called Grizzly Adams and be referred to as the guy who lives on the edge of town who has "issues to deal with."

In Finland, if I strapped that rifle to my shoulder on that trek, I would be labeled as a man among men.

No, Finns are not bunch of homicidal maniacs, suicidal freaks or rabid NRA members. However, in some people's minds we are — sarcastically said, and definitely in a tongue-in-cheek sort of way — because sports that we enjoy like ski jumping, cross country racing and nordic combined are parts of our national fabric.

Hey, we're a wintry kind of country, and we really enjoy our winter sports.

Not only are those sports a part of our national fabric, but a part of the entire continent of Europe's sporting culture. It's almost like football on Sunday, without all the timeouts. Truthfully, people gather

Turn to WINTER, page 7

Going for gold

Layout by Lenaigh by Joe Sawtsch & Dave Parmenter

~ Olympic Television Coverage ~

Friday — 2/6
8–11 p.m.
• Opening Ceremonies
• Alpine Skiing (preview)

Saturday — 2/7
4–6 p.m.
• Alpine Skiing (preview)
• Women's Ice Hockey
8–11 p.m.
• Men's Downhill Skiing
• Women's Cross–Country Skiing
11:35 p.m.–12:35 a.m.
• Olympics Late Night Show

Sunday — 2/8
3–6 p.m.
• Men's Speed Skating
• Women's Ice Hockey (China v. USA)
8–11 p.m.
• Pairs Figure Skating
• Alpine Skiing
• Combined Downhill Skiing
11:35 p.m.–12:35 a.m.
• Olympics Late Night Show

Monday — 2/9
8–11 p.m.
• Women's Alpine Skiing
• Men's Speed Skating
12:35–1:35 a.m.
• Olympics Late Night Show

Tuesday — 2/10
8–11:30 p.m.
• Figure Skating (Pairs Free Program)
• Ski Jumping (Individual)
• Men's Speed Skating
1:05–2:05 a.m.
• Olympics Late Night Show

Wednesday — 2/11
8–11 p.m.
• Men's & Women's Freestyle Skiing
• Men's Alpine Skiing (Combined Slalom)
• Women's Speed Skating
• Men's Figure Skating Preview
12:35–1:35 a.m.
• Olympics Late Night Show

Thursday — 2/12
8–11 p.m.
• Men's Figure Skating
• Men's Alpine Skiing
• Men's Speed Skating
• Men's Ice Hockey Preview
12:35–3 a.m.
• Men's Ice Hockey (USA vs. Sweden)

Friday — 2/13
8–11 p.m.
• Women's Alpine Skiing
• Figure Skating (Ice Dancing)
• Women's Speed Skating
• Men's Ice Hockey Report
12:35–3 a.m.
• Men's Ice Hockey (USA vs. Qual. #1)

Saturday — 2/14
2:30–6 p.m.
• Men's Ice Hockey (Sweden vs. Canada)
• Women's Ice Hockey (Canada vs. USA)
7–11 p.m.
• Men's Figure Skating
• Women's Alpine Skiing
• Women's Speed Skating
• Men's & Women's Ice Hockey Report
11:35 p.m.–2 a.m
• Men's Ice Hockey (Russia vs. Finland)

Sunday — 2/15
4–6 p.m.
• Men's Ice Hockey (Czech Repub. vs. Qual. #2)
• Men's Figure Skating Review
• Figure Skating (Ice Dancing)
8–11 p.m.
• Figure Skating (Ice Dancing)
• Men's Speed Skating
11:35 p.m.–2 a.m.
• Men's Ice Hockey (Canada vs. USA)

Monday — 2/16
1–6 p.m.
• Men's Ice Hockey
8–11:30 p.m.
• Figure Skating, Ice Dancing
• Women's Speed Skating
• Men's & Women's Freestyle Skiing
• Team Ski Jumping
1:05–2:05 a.m.
• Olympics Late Night Show

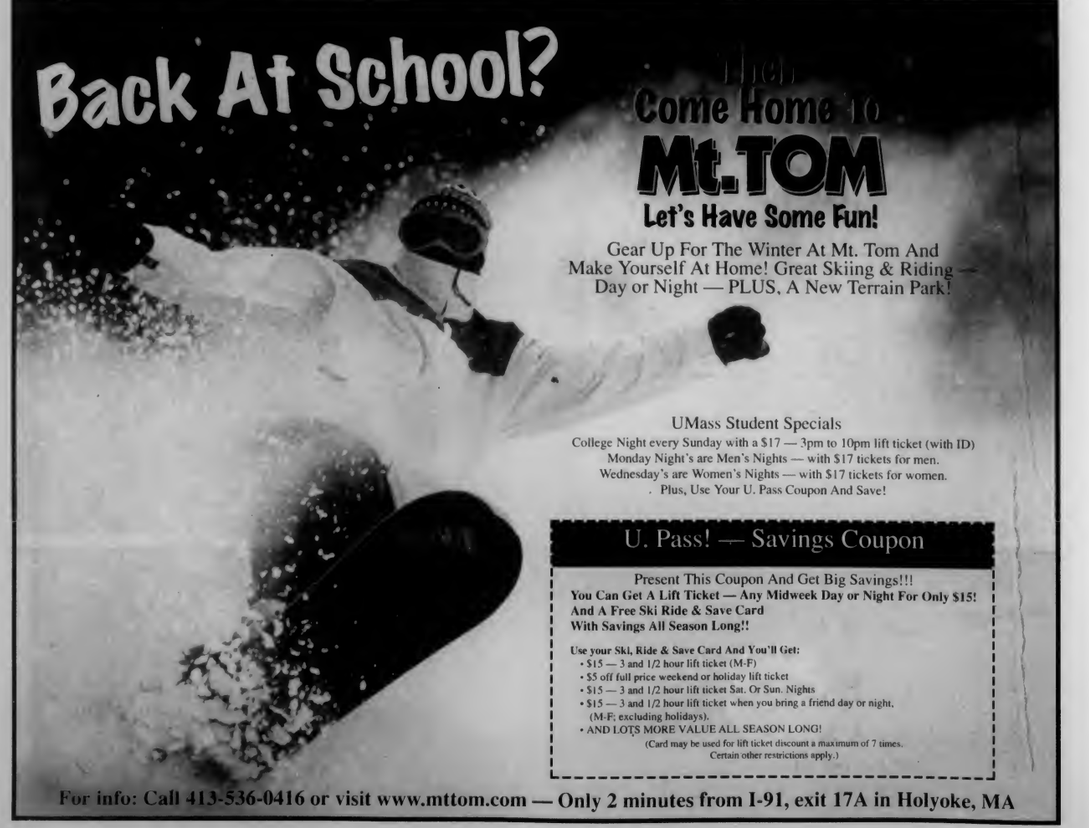
Tuesday — 2/17
8–11 p.m.
• M&W Freestyle Skiing
• Women's Alpine Skiing
• Figure Skating Preview
• Men's Speed Skating
12:35–3 a.m.
• Men's Ice Hockey (Quarterfinal)

Wednesday — 2/18
8–11 p.m.
• Women's Figure Skating
• Men's Alpine Skiing
• Men's Ice Hockey Report
12:35–1:35 a.m.
• Olympics Late Night Show

Thursday — 2/19
8–11 p.m.
• Women's Figure Skating Preview
• Women's Alpine Skiing
• Women's Speed Skating
12:35–3 a.m.
• Men's Ice Hockey (Semifinal)

Friday — 2/20
8–11:30 p.m.
• Women's Figure Skating
• Women's Alpine Skiing
• Men's Ice Hockey Report
1:05–3:30 a.m.
• Men's Ice Hockey (Bronze Medal Game)

Saturday — 2/21
1–6 p.m.
• Women's Speed Skating
• Men's Biathlon
• Figure Skating Recap
7–11 p.m.
• Figure Skating
• Men's Alpine Skiing
11:35 p.m.–2 a.m.
• Men's Ice Hockey (Gold Medal Game)



Sunday — 2/22
12–1 p.m.
• Men's Ice Hockey Review
3:30–6 p.m.
• Overall Review of Games
8–11 p.m.
• Closing Ceremonies
11:35 p.m.–12:35 a.m.
• Olympics Late Night Show

JOIN A WINNING TEAM! WRITE FOR ARTS & LIVING!

amc
Hampshire 6 •584-7550
Hampshire Mall
Mt. Farms 4 •584-9153
Mt. Farms Mall
Phantoms (R)
Today at 5:50
Half Baked (R)
Today at (5:20@2:50) 8:30
Tomorrow Never Dies (PG13)
Today at (5:30@2:50)
Fallen (R)
Today at (5:10@2:50) 8:30
Desperate Measures (R)
Today at (5:40@2:50) 8:30
As Good As It Gets (PG13)
Today at (5:30@2:50) 8:20
Great Expectations (R)
Today at (5:40@2:50) 8:30
Wag the Dog (R)
Today at (5:30@2:50) 8:20
Spice World (PG)
Today at (5:50@2:50) 8:30
Titanic (PG 13)
Today at (4:20@2:50) 8:10
Good Will Hunting (R)
Today at (5:20@2:50) 8:10
Deep Rising (R)
Today at (5:40@2:50) 8:00

Spirit Haus
YOU HAVE TO SEE IT TO BELIEVE IT!
LIQUOR SPECIALS
Jack Daniels $13.99/750 ml
Bacardi Limon $9.99/750 ml
Jagermeister $14.99/750 ml
SS Pierce Vodka $9.99/1.75 ml
MICRO BREWS
Saranac All Flavors $4.99/six pack + dep
Mill City Old Nutcracker $8.99/12 pack bottles + dep
Cider Jack Spiced Cider $5.99/six pack + dep
1/2 Keg Special-Evil Eye $59.99/keg Honey Brown & Black and Tan
BEER SPECIALS
JW Dundee Honey Brown 12-Pack Bottles $6.99 + dep
Bud Dry Case of Bottles $9.99 + dep
Rolling Rock 18-Pack Cans $9.99 + dep
Guiness 6-Pack Bottles $6.99 + dep
Micro Kegs In Stock
DISCOVER VISA MASTERCARD ACCEPTED OPEN 8am to 11pm
RT. 9 EAST - 338 COLLEGE ST (413)585-5358 - TAKE I-91 TO EXIT 19 / RT. 9 east
Full Redemption Center

Attention all new and returning writers: The Arts & Living section will be holding a meeting tonight at 6 p.m. for all those interested in writing this semester. Any questions? Call Seema Gangatirkar, Arts & Living editor, at 545–1361.

■ shape

continued from page 5

Go with something you already know. If you have been to the Ice Capades, try ice dancing. There is no tossing of scantily clad females as there is in pairs skating or some of your low–end bar fights.

If you have been to the bunny slope of a local ski area, tune into the downhill racing. The speed might be a bit much at first, but you'll get used to it.

Got a group of friends, but you're sick of playing Scattegories? Try hockey (hey, it's a team).

• Experiment: If you are a Winter Olympics veteran, try to branch out a bit and watch different events. Feeling romantic? Pairs luge may be for you. Maybe. Are you the hunting type? Have you ever tried skiing? Put the two together and presto — biathlon! Don't be afraid to try bobsled, it's only an overgrown alpine slide.

Also, check the program listings for curling and go for it. Here's a brief synopsis of the sport. You slide an overgrown housecat across a slippery kitchen floor at your sister while she tries to sweep and you get points for how far and accurate your tries are. On ice. Or something like that.

Don't be afraid to broaden your horizons, that's what these things are for.

• Maintain your equipment: Your surroundings and equipment can make or break your entire Olympic experience. If your chair is lumpy, it's doubtful you'll make it through the parade of participants in the Opening Ceremonies. If your lighting is insufficient, say goodbye to reading any of the aforementioned collector editions of TV Guide.

Make sure to keep a healthy supply of Kleenex and lip balm. Tears abound when the scrawny–underdog–whose–gold–medal–means–Wheaties–box–a nd–movie–of–the–week– fame taken the top spot on the podium. Lip balm is necessary for the hours of nordic and freestyle skiing, hockey and speedskating. Not that you'll be out there doning the ski bib yourself, but once you get settled into the barcalounger to see the crowing of the next Bonnie Blair or Dan Jansen, hours may pass before you think about anything else — but you don't want to neglect your lips. Consider some hand lotion as well, although it's not as important as the balm.

• Train properly: It's crucial that you stay in shape yourself. Make sure you have Gatorade on hand, in case any of the athletes appear to winded, and you lose it too. The calorie burn of chip dipping increases proportionally to the amount of dip (you burn more if you use salsa and sour cream, salsa and guacamole, etc...). Watch the alcohol. Too much Saki and you're misjudging the snowboarding half-pipe.

• Remember, this is supposed to be a competition: None of that just have fun crap. If you and your friends get together, beat them at whatever you do. Now go out there and win won for the whole country.

Casey Kane, a Collegian columnist.

■ winter

continued from page 5

around their TV's and enjoy this stuff every weekend of the winter.

No lie. Really.

Europeans seem to bask in the fact that there are more sports to enjoy than America's Big Four (baseball, basketball, football and hockey), and they don't even like two of those professional sporting options. In mine and a lot of people's minds, the Winter Olympics is more enjoyable than the Summer edition because it does showcase the more radical side of the athletic endeavor.

From speed skiing and skating to luge and bobsledding to my homeland's Big Four (hockey, ski jumping, cross country and nordic combined), the wild and crazy side of life is spotlighted when the Winter Olympics hits the air waves. Its like the X–Games with more legitimacy, or a continuous, three–week long Warren Miller film.

These sports hold a high fitness level to success, with uncompromised emphasis on concentration and natural skill — just like the sports in this country.

There is major emphasis placed on these sports, with a tremendous amount of media coverage to boot — just like this country.

And, winners and losers of those sports are either glorified or disenfranchised for their efforts — just like this country.

For example, in every instance of a fall from grace like a Dwight Gooden in this country, there is someone like Matti Nykanen in my homeland.

A multi–gold medal and world championship winner in ski jumping, Nykanen was popularly known as the "Flying Finn."– Nykanen was literally flying high after his success in the 1988 Calgary Olympics, and the homeland embraced him as a national hero.

But as soon as his stature rose, it went down in flames with the temptations of wine, women and dancing that stardom inherently holds. Tabloids followed him around everywhere, and plastered shots of him drunk in the streets of Helsinki, while destroying his character with stories of all–night escapades with beautiful Finnish women.

Yes, I'm biased in that realm of thought, but I digress.

The tint of his gold medals were tarnished forever.

Blame the media if you want, but temptation is constant and universal. I saw a story done on him the last time I was in Finland, and it showed the humbled man trying to rebuild his life once again. A sad story, yes, but its a story that is constant and universal in both of our sporting cultures.

And hey, if I was going to tell you the good things about our Big Four, then I'm obligated to tell you about the bad things as well. But on both good and bad points, all this goes to show is that Finnish and European people are excited (sometimes overly so) about their sports and sporting figures — just like this country.

Differences may abound in the sports we play, but not in the enthusiasm for them. In this case, when you watch what Finnish people, consider the Big Four come Olympics time, try to enjoy it as much as we do. One thing is for sure, you don't see this stuff on TV in this country at all (except for hockey, that is), so that might be motivation enough.

Enjoy. I know I will.

And geez, I won't even ask you to launch yourself off a ski jump... unless you really want to, you crazy bastard.

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

■ boarding

continued from page 5

boarder who gets psyched about making turns on the slope or you are an intense racer getting as many training days as you can before the big race, there is a place for you in the snowboarding world.

Not bad for a 30–year–old sport.

If all of you business majors out there are wondering how to capitalize on the snowboard market, then you better get in line. With the enormous growth that snowboarding is experiencing, it has caught the attention of the skiing industry — and the International Olympic Committee (IOC).

Snowboarding couldn't have grown to where it is today without the attention and coverage that it has received. Everything from ski resorts opening its trails for snowboarders to technological improvements such as step–in bindings were a result of this attention.

There is another side to this swift evolution from the "Surfer" to becoming an official Olympic sport. When the IOC was considering snowboarding as an Olympic event, they needed a governing body to oversee it.

Already in existence is the International Snowboard Federation (ISF), who have been governing snowboard competition for the past 10 years.

Ever since skiing has been an Olympic sport, IOC has been working closely with the Federation International de Ski (FIS) to govern the sport of skiing.

Through all this political mess, IOC has decided that when snowboarding becomes a medal event, FIS would be the governing body over snowboarding.

This decision, as you might imagine caused a lot of anger and frustration with the snowboard competitors. As a result of this decision, snowboarder competitors in the mid–90s went through a phase of boycotting the National Team and the Winter Games.

If you are confused about this political scene, you are not alone. Just imagine what it's like for competitors who are trying to decide which halfpipe competition to go to or which race circuit should they do this season.

There was also tension between snowboarders who would compete for ISF and those competing for FIS.

Fortunately, a lot of this negativity is currently being worked out and both governing body are trying to make a positive impression on this year's Winter Games.

This month you will see two disciplines being showcased in Nagano. One is the giant slalom, an event where snowboarders race down the mountain through a series of gates trying to find the fastest line to the finish. The other discipline is will be a half–pipe, where snowboarders go down a structure made from snow doing aerial maneuver that will be judge on a point system. Both men and women will compete separately for the gold.

Whether snowboarders want it or not, by becoming an Olympic sport, snowboarding will be changing. But whether you are a competitor or just like to ride on the weekends, don't forget that feeling that you experienced your first day on the snowboard.

Thang Vo is a Collegian staff member.

Todd Richards, here winning the 1997 U.S. Open, could be a medal contender in the halfpipe competition at this year's winter games.

Do you think you have an obsessive amount of knowledge on a relatively obscure subject which no one else knows about?
In past semesters, Arts & Living has given columns to people just like you!!!
Come on down and pick up YOUR column.... Just ask Seema...

Opening ceremony details a top secret

By Ted Anthony
Associated Press

NAGANO, Japan — A 516-pound sumo wrestler and a 95-pound figure skater, Japanese heroes both, will form the centerpiece of an Olympic opening ceremony scripted to draw East and West together — from traditional Asian bonfires to Beethoven.

Beyond that, though, mum's pretty much the word.

Details of the opening ceremonies (tomorrow night) have been kept secret — so secret that two Japanese newspapers' Olympic credentials were pulled temporarily when they published details of the festivities after an earlier rehearsal. Reporters invited to a dress rehearsal had to promise they'd keep quiet.

The message of this year's ceremony, says Francois Carrard, director general of the International Olympic Committee, "is very simple: It's a message of respect of one's self and the rules, of tolerance and understanding."

"The ritual part helps to convey the message," Carrard said Wednesday. "The ceremony should never become just a performance or a show."

Some in Nagano agreed. "I don't want them to use it as a commercial," said Aiko Minamisawa, a pharmacist.

Festivities at the Minami Nagano Sports Park will include the 3,000 competing athletes, 50,000 spectators and a television audience expected to number in the hundreds of millions. The masters of ceremonies are both TV journalists; one, Hisanori Isomura, has been described as "the Walter Cronkite of Japan." Children from around Nagano city and surrounding Nagano prefecture, or province, will sing and dance. In Nagano, the bell at the ancient Zenkoji Temple will toll 108 pillars fashioned from trees are raised in a millennium-old traditional festival from Nagano's Suwa region.

Akebono, a grand champion sumo wrestler born in Hawaii, will join other contenders of Japan's national sport to perform a ring-entering ceremony known as dohyo-iri. After that, he'll take the stage and stomp on the ground to drive out any evil spirits that might be lingering.

As a yokozuna — or grand champion sumo wrestler — Akebono stands at the pinnacle of Japan's ancient sport, a position that affords him a special kind of respect.

Sumo champions, the only men in Japan who still wear the hair in a top-knot and dress in kimono in public, are expected to be the embodiments of traditional Japanese values of chivalry and humility.

After the Olympic flag is raised, Japanese figure skater Midori Ito, who won a silver medal in Albertville in 1992 and is not competing this year, will light the Olympic cauldron.

Exactly how she'll do it remains secret for now. But odds are it will involve skating and incorporate one of the opening ceremony's ideals — showcasing Japan's culture and working toward a world without war.

Ito, the only Japanese figure skater to win an Olympic medal, has superstar status in her native land.

For the finale, singers on five continents — in Berlin, Sydney, New York, Beijing and Cape Point, South Africa — will belt out Beethoven's "Ode to Joy" simultaneously.

The 587,000 square-foot Minami stadium forms the shape of a cherry blossom, Japan's national flower, when seen from above. The reinforced concrete building was completed in December after four years of construction. It cost $75.4 million.

Three giant screens around the stadium will bring action closer to spectators. Athletes will watch from seats that form a concentric circle. And the ceremony will be peppered with other pieces of Nagano history and tradition.

"They've built this whole city up for the Olympics, and people won't necessarily know that watching on TV," said Hiroshi Nishimoto, a social worker. "I hope some of Nagano will come through in the opening ceremony."

The key words for the ceremony, according to preliminary press materials, are "simple, dignified and spiritual."

Carrard couldn't agree more. He seemed sure Wednesday of one thing: that an Olympic opening ceremony needs to retain the dignity and content of what it is — a ceremony.

"It is in a stadium. It's not a stage," he said. "We should be aware of not transforming an opening ceremony into a major pop concert."

CBS hopes Olympics pay off for network

By Bob Thomas
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The 1998 Winter Olympics are off and skating, skiing, sledding, even snowboarding and curling, as CBS Sports' four-year project enters its 16-day television marathon.

The closing ceremonies on Feb. 22 will mark the end of an Olympic trail throughout the 1990s for Rick Gentile, senior vice president of CBS Sports and Olympics executive producer. During all the preparations for the Nagano games he figures he has clocked 18 trips from New York to Japan. "The planning started almost immediately after Lillehammer," said Gentile, speaking from Nagano. He had been executive producer of all sports as well as overseeing the winter games in Albertville, France, 1992, and Lillehammer, Norway, 1994.

CBS, which paid $375 million for the broadcasting rights, boasts that its 128 hours of programming will be the widest coverage of the Winter Games. Because of the time difference, many of the major events can be seen live at convenient times in the United States.

Gentile said CBS has 1,500 to 1,600 people at this year's games, "and the count is still growing. I don't really know how many cameras, but we will be well represented at every venue.

"We take some of the world feed;' the coverage that the host country provides. In the case of figure skating, we shoot all our own stuff. There may be an occasional tradeoff of cameras at some of the venues, but basically we're on our own."

Covering a winter Olympics must be the most difficult sports event because of the vast and sometimes mountainous terrain, and the extreme cold.

Also, "most of the sports are pretty much unfamiliar to the production people who cover them," Gentile added. "Not too often do you get to cover bobsled luge. Yes, it's cold out at the camera locations. But it's our third winter Olympics, and we've really got it down at this point...

"We think we did a lot better at Lillehammer than we did at Albertville. We think we'll improve in the way we do things here. I don't think that will necessarily translate into higher ratings than we had at Lillehammer. I don't think anybody will ever top them."

Why were the Lillehammer ratings so high? The ugly rivalry between skaters Tonya Harding and Nancy Kerrigan, for one thing; the bad weather in the United States, for another. It kept Americans home and watching TV.

"The weather in Lillehammer was great, the American stories were beyond belief," said Gentile. "An American won the downhill in the first night of coverage. If you weren't hooked by then, you certainly were afterwards. Everything that happened was just perfect. We may never see that combination of things again.

"The Olympics stand on their own," he said, and "Lillehammer was the highest-rated Olympics, ever."

Harding & Kerrigan face off for the first time since '94

By Josh Dubow
Associated Press

When Tonya Harding walked into the room, Nancy Kerrigan averted her eyes as a queasy look came over her. It was the first time the skaters had been together since the Lillehammer Games.

Fox interviewer James Brown stood up to greet Harding, who then asked Kerrigan how she was. Kerrigan, looking in her lap instead of at the woman whose ex-husband conspired to break her kneecap, quietly replied "fine" and the interview began.

The meeting is the highlight of a two-hour retrospective Fox will air on Kerrigan and Harding, who became household names in 1994 after the attack, which was intended to help Harding's Olympic chances. Fox's "Breaking the Ice: The Women of '94 Revisited" airs tonight at 8 p.m. EST.

"They realized that there would be a lot of pressure on them to say something at this time of year," Fox Sports president David Hill said. "They welcomed the opportunity to perform and to try to bring closure to this event."

In the four years since Lillehammer, Harding and Kerrigan had not crossed paths until Fox put up the money for the brief reunion, at least $100,000 for each skater.

Brown, the host on the special, interviewed Harding and Kerrigan separately at their homes before their Dec. 22 meeting in New York. Fox released excerpts of the interviews this week.

Interviews with Kerrigan and her family, Harding, Jeff Stone (Harding's ex-husband who used to be known as Jeff Gillooly), prosecutor Norman Frink, reporters who covered the event and the other skaters are spliced throughout the two-hour show, which culminates with the 10-15 minute joint interview.

"There was a discernible shift in attitude and emotion on Nancy's part when Tonya walked into the room," Brown said. "The tension was palpable. You could cut it with a knife.

"The body language changed as Tonya addressed her," he said. "Nancy was doing her utmost to control herself. Her emotions were bubbling up inside her. That was very readable."

The timing of the special is no surprise, the first day of February sweeps and one day before the Olympics. Fox looks to double its usual Thursday night audience.

That may not be an outrageous projection. On their first night of skating at Lillehammer, barely seven weeks after the Jan. 6 attack on Kerrigan, nearly half of American TV sets were tuned into CBS' coverage — the third highest rated show in history.

The attack skyrocketed interest in the already popular sport, considering the large number of skating exhibitions that fill American air time.

Kerrigan went on to win the silver medal in Lillehammer; Harding finished eighth. The other skaters from the 1994 Games who participate in Fox's show include Olympic gold medalists Oksana Baiul, Katarina Witt and Ekaterina Gordeeva. Yuka Sato and Josee Chouinard, who was forced to skate early in 1994 when Harding's lace broke, will also participate.

Harding, still banned from skating for her role in covering up the attack, was forced to do her routine for the show at an outdoor rink in Beaver Creek, Colo., a few miles away from where the other skaters performed.

While Hill and Brown say the skating performances are memorable, people will not be tuning in to see what is on the ice, but rather the interplay between Kerrigan and Harding off it.

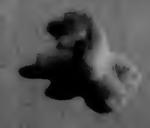
In a one-on-one interview, Brown confronts Harding with evidence from FBI files, including reports that Gillooly and his co-conspirators briefly considered killing Kerrigan, before deciding a whack on the knee would do the job.

Harding is visibly shocked by the question and asks Brown to repeat it. She then denies any knowledge of the plan. She also said she knew nothing of the attack before it happened, despite living with Gillooly at the time.

"I thought Tonya was genuine about her remorse and repentance and her desire to move on," Brown said. "Whether or not she was truthful in refuting the points from the FBI files, I don't know. She maintains that she didn't know until three days after attack."

While Brown stays away from questions about the FBI files in Kerrigan's presence, he does bring up the attack during the joint interview, which makes both women nervous.

"I think the interview itself was compelling from what wasn't said as much as for what was said," Brown said. "The body language was riveting as a look into what they were thinking as opposed to their words, which were couched with niceties."



While Fox officials acknowledge that Harding sought repentance and both skaters were looking for closure, they are less revealing about whether Kerrigan forgives Harding.

"That's the crux of the show," Brown said. "Tune in and make your own judgment."

Arts & Living.

Who else is working simultaneously for both your edification and your amusement?

The Student Value Package comes with Overdraft Protection. So go ahead. Buy the brand name macaroni and cheese.

Can you believe other banks charge you a fee every time you overspend a little? How lame is that? The Student Value Package from BankBoston gives you Overdraft Protection, so you're free to pursue the finer things in life. And you'll save 20% at Papa Gino's when you show your BankBoston Card, student ID and one of our coupons. To open your Student Value Package, stop by your local branch or call 1-800-2-BOSTON.

BankBoston

It's Amazing What You Can Do.

Member FDIC. www.bankboston.com/students. For qualified applicants only. You will pay interest on outstanding balances on overdraft protection. Offer valid through May 31, 1998. Not valid with any other discounts or specials. Tax not included. Limited delivery areas. Delivery charge applies. $7.50 delivery minimum. Not valid on alcohol purchases.

Fairfield University invites you to explore the world!

Study the rich legacy of Britain and live in a 16th century abbey near Oxford's "dreaming spires." Spend a summer, a semester or a year studying in the center of the historic "cradle of Renaissance civilization" in Florence, Italy where we offer a dazzling variety of courses. Or immerse yourself in Russian and European art, music, dance, literature, history and politics during the White Nights of Summer in St. Petersburg.

Our programs offer the opportunity to combine a solid academic program with the chance to travel and experience new cultures. For more information call Cris Bowers, Tour Assistant, at (888) 254-1566 or e-mail her at cbowers@fair1.fairfield.edu.

FAIRFIELD UNIVERSITY
Dolan House
Fairfield, CT
06430-5995
www.fairfield.edu/sce/studyabroad/studyabroad.htm

THE CLUB
Tennis & Fitness Center
549-3638 659 Amherst Road, Sunderland
DOUBLED IN SIZE
STATE OF THE ART FITNESS CENTER

NEW CARDIO EQUIPMENT LOCATED ON OUR NEW BALCONIES

- Treadmills Life Stride, Star Trac, and Trotters
- Stairmasters New 4400pt's
- Recumbent Bikes by Stairmaster
- Precor EFX Crosstrainer a Cardio Workout without any weight impact on joints
- Weight Training Machine Circuits including the GRAVITRON
- Nautilus Equipment
- Complete Free Weight Area Doubled in Size! New benches & bars; New plates & weights; New lat pull down, leg press, & T-bar; New STRIVE Plate loading machines & much more!
- Let's not forget the AREA'S ONLY TREADWALL an assimilated rock climbing wall - WHAT A WORKOUT! You'll love it!
- Also introducing POWER PACING the area's only Exercise Bike Classes that are guaranteed to burn TONS of calories! Classes offered 10-15 times a week by certified Power Pacing Instructors. Pick up your schedule today!

NEW AEROBICS CLASSES INCLUDING EARLY A.M.

JOIN OUR MEMBERS CLIMB TO MT EVEREST ON THE TREADWALL!

POWER PACING PROGRAMS AVAILABLE YOUR FIRST RIDE IS FREE!

Pachinko parlors worry Nagano

By Eric Talmadge
Associated Press

NAGANO, Japan — It's called pachinko — a noisy, mesmerizing kind of pinball gambling game that the Japanese just can't seem to get enough of.

But police in Nagano apparently don't think this particular pastime is up to the standards of an Olympic host.

So when the Winter Games open on Saturday, every pachinko parlor in town, all 57 of them, will be closed for business. And police vans will be filling most of their parking lots.

"This is something that isn't going to happen again in this town for another 100 or 200 years," said Sakae Kayama, who owns a pachinko parlor near the stadium on the outskirts of Nagano where the games' opening ceremony will be held. "We want do our part to help."

Kayama said police requested that pachinko parlor owners close their shops for both the opening and closing ceremony days.

Police say they want the parlors to close because they believe that will help lighten the traffic in town.

Pachinko parlors also tend to have big parking lots — a prized commodity in this crowded country — and Kayama said police want to use those lots themselves.

With the games opening Saturday and the closing ceremony Feb. 22 coming on a Sunday, the parlors will be closed on two of their most busy days.

They have also agreed not to bring in any new machines — a big draw for pachinko enthusiasts — until next month.

"The police requested our cooperation," Kayama said. "We didn't feel we had much of a choice, and we're going to lose some business, but it never hurts to do favors for the authorities."

The singling out of the pachinko parlors reflects the industry's less-than-shiny reputation.

More than 30 million Japanese play pachinko, and the country's 18,000 parlors are hard to miss with garish neon storefronts and the din of machine bells and marbles.

They are often the most prominent landmarks in rural towns and along highways.

Gambling is illegal in Japan, but pachinko parlors get around that by giving winners prizes that can be exchanged elsewhere for cash. As long as cash is not dispensed inside the parlors, officials turn a blind eye.

■ gold

continued from page 5

and 1995 World Champion Chen Lu (China).

In the men's competition, 1998 National champion Todd Eldredge and silver medalist Michael Weiss will try to make it to the podium. Eldredge, a four-time National champion and a former world champion (1996), will try to take home a medal without a quadruple jump. Eldredge attempted the quad at the Nationals and fell in the process. In order to win in Nagano, Eldredge will need the quad to come out on top.

The silver medalist at Nationals, Weiss was able to almost complete the one thing that Eldredge will need to win at Nagano: the quad jump. A two-footed landing eliminated the jump from the judges' consideration, but Weiss is confident he can attempt the jump perfectly when it counts.

Others to watch out for in the men's competition include Canada's Elvis Stojko, Great Britain's Steven Cousins, Phillipe Candeloro of France and Russia's Ilya Kulik. Stojko and Kulik both have quad jumps, which they have performed perfectly in competition, making them top contenders for the gold. Also, 1998 European champion, Alexei Yagudin (Russia) will be on hand to make his attempt at top honors.

In pairs skating, the United States will be sending two time national champions Kyoko Ina and Jason Dungjen and the husband-wife team of Jenni Meno and Todd Sand. Ina and Dungjen are known for their speed, strength and innovative choreography. After years in the shadows of Meno and Sand, Ina and Dungjen finally captured their first national title in 1997 and then defended that title last month.

Meno and Sand competed at the 1994 Games in Lillehammer, finishing fifth. Meno's injured ankle kept the pair out of Nationals this time around, but after giving the US Skating Federation's judges a special performance, Meno and Sand earned a repeat visit to the Olympics.

The main competition for the pairs title, will (as usual) come from the Russians. Elena Berezhnaya and Anton Sikharulidze are the defending European champions while silver medalists at the Europeans — Oksana Kazakova and Artur Dmitriev — will also make a run for the gold. Dmitriev, with former partner Natalia Mishkatunek, took silver behind Gordeeva and Grinkov at the 1994 Games in Lillehammer.

Elizabeth Punsalan and Jerod Swallow will represent the United States in the ice dancing competition, along with new kids on the block, Jessica Joseph and Charles Butler. Punsalan and Swallow performed at the 1994 Olympics, just weeks after Punsalan's brother murdered their father. The pair finished fifteenth.

Now back with new and innovative programs, Punsalan and Swallow will try again for a finish in the top ten. Joseph and Butler finished second at Nationals in their first appearance at that competition. Brimming with confidence after their Nationals' performance, and top-20 finishes at the World Championships, Joseph and Butler will attempt to make waves at the Olympics.

In ice-dancing the major competition again comes from Russia. Ice dancers to watch out for will include 1994 Olympic gold medalists Pasha (formerly Oksana) Grishuk and her partner, Evgeny Platov, and Anjelika Krylova and Oleg Ovsyannikov. And if you can't beat the Russians, you might as well try to join them: Canadian ice dancers Shae- Lyn Bourne and Victor Kraatz, looking for their first Olympic medal, have hired a Russian coach and choreographer.

And whatever drama the ice skating may hold this year, one thing is for certain: it will be on the ice, not off.

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian columnist.

Winter SALE
downtown Amherst

THE FINE ARTS CENTER SERIES

HARMONIC CONVERGENCE
SAINT LOUIS SYMPHONY
HANS VONK, CONDUCTOR
HILARY HAHN, VIOLIN

One of the world's premiere orchestras and one of its youngest and most gifted soloists perform Prokofiev's Violin Concerto. Also on the program is Harbison's Symphony No. 1 and Brahms' Symphony No. 1. A harmonic convergence not to be missed!

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 8PM, CONCERT HALL
PRESENTED WITH THE GENEROUS SUPPORT OF FIRST MASSACHUSETTS BANK, THE DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE, AND WFCR 88.5FM

GREAT AMERICAN THEATER
TRINITY REPERTORY COMPANY IN
FIRES IN THE MIRROR
BY ANNA DEVEARE SMITH

Rhode Island's Tony Award-winning theater presents a consummate play for our times, called by the New York Times, "Quite simply the most compelling and sophisticated view of urban racial and class conflict that one could hope to encounter."

TUESDAY & WEDNESDAY
FEBRUARY 10 & 11, 8PM
BOWKER AUDITORIUM

STAR SAXOPHONE
GARY LOUIE

A rising star in the music galaxy, alto saxophone virtuoso Gary Louie has performed at Lincoln Center, Jordan Hall, and the Kennedy Center, among many other world-class venues.

"Without a doubt, an astonishing player..." The LA Times

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 8PM
BOWKER AUDITORIUM
A THOMAS F. PARKER YOUNG ARTIST COMMUNITY RESIDENCY

Call 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS for tickets
Visit our Website at www.umass.edu/fac/fac.html

TICKETS ONLY $5 FOR FIVE COLLEGE STUDENTS

THE FINE ARTS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

CONNECT WITH YOUR CENTER!

Spring Break Fever
Party Hard Travel Safe
Cheap Tickets
Great Advice Nice people
Lima $603
Hong Kong $753
Tel Aviv $693
Los Angeles $355
Orlando $177
Council Travel
44 Main Street
Amherst
(413) 256-1261

CANCUN BAHAMAS
LIMITED TIME SPRING BREAKER SPECIAL
CANCUN
5 FREE BREAKFASTS
5 FREE DINNERS
24 HOURS OF FREE DRINKS
BAHAMAS
DRINK FREE!
24 HOURS OF FREE DRINKS!
USA SPRING BREAK

FORGET THE REST & PARTY WITH THE BEST!
COLLEGE TOURS
SPRING BREAK '98
in CANCUN
INCLUDES
7 Breakfasts/7 Lunches
7 NIGHT HOTEL W/T TRANSFERS
from $419
For information on a FREE Trip or Reservations call Amanda at 800-244-4463
or visit our website at www.collegetours.com!

EMERGENCY MEDICAL TRAINING
•by Human Services Training Consultants, Inc.
•Part Time Evening
•Classes start February 9, 1998
•Call UMASS, Continuing Education at 545 - 0474

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Daily 7 & 9:20 at your favorite theatre for viewing!
"Smart and Touching With a Very Warm Heart!"
ROBIN WILLIAMS MATT DAMON
GOOD WILL HUNTING
THE NEW FILM BY GUS VAN SANT
ACADEMY MUSIC Christmas NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

8 BALL'S BILLARDS 9
10A BELCHERTOWN ROAD AMHERST, MA 01002 256-8284
LIVE MUSIC
Friday 9:45pm
Crawdads
Saturday
Live Music!

Peter Pan & PVTA
Your Community Link To The Entire Northeast!
Lenox Pittsfield Lee Amherst Northampton Holyoke Springfield Worcester Boston Framingham Newton Hartford Middletown Meriden Farmington New Haven Bridgeport New Rochelle New York Philadelphia Wilmington Baltimore Washington
BOSTON
NEW YORK
DAILY
EXPRESS SERVICE
Peter Pan
800-343-9999
PVTA • 781-PVTA
(413-781-7882)
Amherst, Peter Pan Terminal, 79 S Pleasant St
Umass
Campus Cntr. or SW Hampden Dinning Common
Northampton, Peter Pan Terminal 1 Roundhouse Pz

GOT THE WINTER "BLAHS", COME IN TODAY & SAVE!!!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive

Miller Genuine Draft REG. & LIGHT CASE 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTTLES $9.99 + DEP
MICHELOB & MICHELOB LT. 18 PK. CANS $9.99 + DEP
NATURAL LIGHT & ICE CASE OF 2-12 PK. CANS $8.49 + DEP
HARPOON ALE - I.P.A. - MIX 12 PK. BOTTLE $8.99 + DEP
BECKS BEER REG. & DARK CASE OF 2-12 PK. BOTTLE $8.99 + DEP
NATURAL LIGHT & ICE ROLLING ROCK 1/2 KEGS $33.99 + DEP
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LT, BUD ICE, MICH, MICH LT, MICH AMBER BOCK, LITE, ICEHOUSE, RED DOG $39.99 + DEP

WINE OF THE MONTH
Cavit CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, PINOT GRIGIO, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML $5.99
Almaden RHINE, BLUSH, CHABLIS, GOLDEN, WHITE GRENACHE SALE $7.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -2.00 FINAL COST $5.49
SUTTER HOME SAUVIGNON BLANC, ZINFANDEL 1.5L $6.99
GEORGES DUBOEUF BEAUJOLAIS-VILLAGES 750 ML $5.99
MARTINI & ROSSI ASTI SPUMANTE 750 ML $7.99
MOET & CHANDON WHITE STAR CHAMPAGNE 750 ML $21.99

GORDONS VODKA 1.75 L $11.49
JACK DANIELS 750 ML $13.49
SOUTHERN COMFORT 1.75 LT $15.49
BACARDI RUM SILVER & GOLD 750 ML $7.49
CLAN MACGREGOR SCOTCH 1.75 LT $12.49
FLEISCHMANN'S GIN 1.75 LT SALE $11.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $8.49

Discounts Available on Cases of Wine & Liquor. Ask For Details.
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 586-3007
HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 2/5/98 THRU WEDS. 2/11/98
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

COURTESY UNH

Is UNH ready to rumble?

Goalie Brian Regan and the Massachusetts hockey team will travel to the raucous, unfriendly confines of UNH's Whittemore Center Friday night.

Speedskater Eric Flaim tabbed as U.S. torch bearer

By Larry Siddons
Associated Press

NAGANO, Japan — Eric Flaim started as a speedskater when the rinks were outdoors and Bonnie Blair had yet to win a medal. Now, with Blair and her five gold medals in retirement and indoor ice the rule, he's about to lead the U.S. team into his fourth Olympics.

Flaim, who turns 31 next month, was selected to carry the American flag at the head of the U.S. delegation in the opening ceremony of the Nagano Winter Games on Saturday (Friday night EST). The choice was made in a vote today of team captains of the U.S. squad, the largest at the Olympics with some 240 athletes, coaches and officials. Flaim is the fifth speedskater chosen as U.S. flagbearer.

Now skating short track as a member of the men's 5,000-meter relay team, Flaim, from Boston, broke into world-class competition as the "other Eric" in the mid-1980s. He was the heir apparent to Eric Heiden, who won an unprecedented five gold medals in Lake Placid in 1980.

Flaim never achieved Heiden's heights, but he became a solid member of a U.S. speedskating team that had steady success over 10 years.

He won a silver medal in the long-track 1,500 meters and finished fourth in three other races at Calgary in 1988, the first time Olympic speedskating was held in an enclosed oval. That also was the place where Blair won her first medals, a pair of golds that set the stage for her to become the most successful woman athlete in U.S. history.

Blair hung up her skates after the 1994 Lillehammer Games. While she's working as a motivational speaker and TV commentator and expecting her first child, Flaim skates on.

Student Affairs Special Services
Student Speaker
Undergraduate Commencement
Is there something you would like to say before graduating? If so, you are invited to submit a proposal for consideration as the Student Commencement Speaker.

Who is Eligible:	Graduating Amherst Campus Senior (Class of 1998).
Subject Matter:	Your proposed speech should be of general interest to graduating seniors as well as to parents and other guests, and address your impressions and experience(s) both academic and extra-curricular.
Format:	Submit approximately three word-processed/typewritten pages, double-spaced, or the equivalent of 3-5 minutes speaking time. Speeches exceeding this limit will not be considered.
Selection Process:	Authors' names will be deleted (by a non-voting staff person) after which a committee of students (majority), staff, and faculty will review the proposals. Three to five individuals will be invited to "audition" before the committee (in March), after which the speaker will be selected.
Deadline:	Wednesday, February 11, 1998, 4:30 p.m.
Submit Proposals To:	Paul R. Appleby, Chair, Student Speaker Selection Committee, 305 Whitmore (545-3464).

Scott's LIQUORS
Thank You for Your Patronage
Shop Scott's and Save Lots
Thank you for your Patronage
Dozens of in Store Specials Every Day
Lite 12 Pack Bottles $6.99 +dep
Newcastle 6 pack btls $6.19 +dep
Captain Morgan Parrot Bay $9.49
Gordons Gin 1.75 ltr $13.49
+ Many Many More!!!
Give us a call @ 549-2692 to get our Low, Low Price on all your Favorites
Specials Orders & Quantity Discounts Always Available @ the Lowest Prices Around
We want to be your Favorite Liquor Store
Mon - Sat 9am-11pm
549-2692
Ballers Alumni Bookstore University Drive SCOTTS Towing Service
MasterCard AMERICAN EXPRESS VISA

Save on general books
EVERY DAY at UStore's
NEW Book Department
New York Times Bestseller
Hardcover ..... Save 35%
New York Times Bestseller
Paperback ..... Save 25%
All Other Books
Hardcover Fiction ...20% Off
Any other book ..... 10% Off*
University Store
University Store
On the UMass Campus Center Concourse
Hours:
M-F 9 to 5
Sat. 11 to 4
(413) 545 - 2619
We accept AMEX, Discover, MasterCard, Visa, and the UCard!
NEW Union Billiards
NEW NAME, NEW LOOK, NEW ATMOSPHERE!
STOP IN BETWEEN 1PM AND 11PM ANY DAY OF THE WEEK TO SEE THE NEW UNION BILLIARDS. WE'D LOVE TO SEE YOU! COME BY AND MEET STRIDER AND THE GANG. WE'RE RIGHT ACROSS FROM THE HATCH IN THE OLD GAMES ROOM.

Something Every Friday
A Special Series of Free Events on the Umass Campus. Call us 545-3800, or Visit our Website for more information: http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/calendar.htm
FRIDAY FEBRUARY 6
Student Union Ballroom...8pm
Comedian Kivi Rogers
...n "Kivi Rogers"...Gifted with a quick wit, a thou... ...k for mischief, Kivi's comedy career was ... "The Tonight Show," HBO's "Def Co... ...ase and NBC's "Home Im...
This series is made possible by a grant from the Umass Auxiliary Services Department, the Office of the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs, and the
DAILY COLLEGIAN

■ Tyson

continued from page 14

to break his contract with King, Horne and Holloway, according to Dr. Elias Ghanem, chairman of the Nevada State Athletic Commission.

"I don't know if Tyson is thinking that since he is not licensed, that his contract is void," Ghanem said yesterday. "It would be very hard for someone to sign with someone else, knowing he already has a valid contract. The way I understand it, it would be hard for Tyson to sign with anyone else without Don King releasing him."

Tyson is scheduled to attend a news conference today in New York City about an upcoming appearance for the World Wrestling Federation. It was not known whether King would attend.

Ghanem's agency banned Tyson and fined him $3 million last July after Tyson bit Evander Holyfield on his ears during a June 28 heavyweight championship fight at the MGM Grand. The controversial fighter will be able to seek reinstatement next July.

The outcome of any relicensing hearing "depends on Mike Tyson's behavior and what he does inside and outside the ring," Ghanem said yesterday.

Ghanem said he is also concerned about published reports that Tyson may owe as much as $7 million in taxes.

"Anytime somebody has a tax problem, usually the IRS would put a lien on his purse before he gets in the ring," Ghanem said. "That would be an issue. We don't like to get involved in that."

"It wouldn't surprise me if the $7 million is accurate," said the AP source, who requested anonymity.

Tyson has earned an estimated $140 million in six fights since he was released from an Indiana prison in 1995 after serving time on rape charges. The New York Post reported Wednesday that Tyson was down to $150,000 in liquid assets.

The New York Daily News reported that Los Angeles attorney John Branca had been hired by Tyson and had sent "termination" letters to Horne and Holloway last Thursday.

Calls by the AP to Branca on yesterday were not returned. The latest Tyson incident began to unfold Tuesday with reports that he was ending a 10-year relationship with King.

"Mike went down and met with some guys in Los Angeles and they enticed him by saying they could help him more than his existing deal," the AP source said.

"He wrote the letter, then he called Rory and John later and apologized," the source said. "I think it is a tempest in a teapot. He's under contract with everybody — King, Horne and Holloway. There's no way he can get out of those contracts, which run for another three years."

King, Horne and Holloway issued statements Tuesday through Rogich Communications, a Las Vegas public relations firm hired to represent the boxer after the Holyfield fight furor.

"I love Mike and he knows it, but there are often outside forces and individuals that will try to capitalize on Mike's frustration that comes from his layoff as a result of the suspension," King said in his statement.

"I think there is sometimes a frustration and misunderstanding that can occur in the best of friendships and business relationships, and that's how we categorize this," Holloway and Horne said in their joint statement.

THANG VO, COLLEGIAN

"And what's Fonzie like, Yolanda?"

Yolanda Rayside and the UMass women's hoop team faced off against Rhode Island last night. See tomorrow's Collegian for the wrap-up.

■ Spencer

continued from page 14

helped with her upper body strength and the discipline that crew brings has also helped her improvement," Newcomb said.

Another factor that has also helped in Spencer's progress involves her increased activity in the gym, something that really didn't play a big role in her career until she entered the collegiate ranks.

"I didn't start lifting until college. Last year I didn't lift all year round because I got sick. This year I've lifted all year round and into the training trip because I'm also lifting a lot for crew," Spencer said.

Swimming, crew, UMass swimming records, and of course, classes. Just another typical day for Spencer. So what will the future hold for this SOM major?

"She has a shot at several school records. She is also continuing to become a better all-around swimmer and is also maturing as an athlete," Newcomb said.

One final intriguing sidenote in Spencer's saga involves her origins in the sport which she excels at today.

"Back when I was 8-years-old I lived in a neighborhood with a community pool and I ran home and said that I wanted to be on the swim team," said Spencer. "It was like $10, so I got the money. That's how I started swimming. That winter I joined a private team, and I've been swimming all-year round ever since."

Not a bad $10 investment.

■ Mosby

continued from page 14

saw glimpses of greatness in her gymnastics ability and her focus turned to sport specifically.

"My parents saw the talent I had and then we discussed collectively whether we wanted to shoot for the Olympics or stay home. We all decided on staying home. I guess I've thought about the Olympics and all, but it has never been my main focus."

Mosby, who admits — along with the rest of the team — to live in the '80s as a Dirty Dancing fanatic, hopes to add a few more skills to her already booming repertoire. She is working on a new vault as well as a new dismount for her beam routine.

This weekend, the Minutewomen head to Kingston, R.I. to take on A-10 rival Rhode Island Rams on Friday night and then come back home for a tri-meet with George Washington and Yale on Monday at the Mullins Center.

The Minutewomen jumped out to a quick 3-0 record with the quad meet victory, ousting Ithaca, Springfield, and SUNY Cortland by convincing margins. With the win, the Minutewomen climbed to No. 24 in the country, ranking fourth in the Northeast behind Penn State, Ohio State, and New Hampshire.

"I think after this weekend, we'll have a good idea where we stand," Kuzara said. "I think for the first time in five years, we really feel like we can be a Top 10 team in the country."

Mandy Mosby concentrates on her balance beam routine. The sophomore has been a standout for the women's gym team.

■ Hockey

continued from page 14

before, they went seven hours.

"We went at it pretty good," New Jersey GM Lou Lamoriello said. "It was one of the more intense meetings I've seen since I've been here."

New Jersey pioneered the neutral-zone trap and won the 1995 Stanley Cup with it. But the trap is blamed for a drastic two-year goal-per-game drop.

Lamoriello said he supported the experiments and didn't regard the trap as the target of discussions.

"You have to put aside your own team, your own things, and see what's best," Lamoriello said.

"If it's something worth trying, you have to do that."

Yell at the TV all you want. They still can't hear you, armchair quarterback. Do something about it. Write for Sports. Talk to Casey. She'll help you out.

UMASS DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION
Something for Everyone
Workshops offered evenings, daytime, weekends, off and on campus
Nearly 100 noncredit workshops
Including:
• Mask Making
• Network Marketing
• Web Page Design
• Chocolate
• Songwriting
• Art Therapy
• Retirement Planning
• Genealogy
• UFOs
• Playback Theatre
• Bartending
• EMT Training
Spring semester workshops begin February 9
For a free course catalog, call 413-545-0107 or e-mail contined@admin.umass.edu
www.umass.edu/contined/
a quality education at an affordable price
• DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION •
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

MEET TWO TRAVELERS WHO JUST HAD A GOOD NIGHT'S SLEEP
SHE STAYED AT A HOSTEL and with the money she saved on her accommodation, she had breakfast at a trendy café, toured the famous sights, saw a band at a local club and still had enough change left over to make a phone call home.
HE STAYED AT A HOTEL and had enough money left over for a cup of coffee.
HOSTELLING INTERNATIONAL
With a Hostelling International membership card you get access to affordable accommodation at nearly 5,000 hostels in over 70 countries. So if you're planning a trip, get the HI card and join 4 million members worldwide who save every time they travel. For your HI card visit our website, call us at 202-783-6161 or contact your local student travel specialist.
Join on-line today: www.hiayh.org

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
Club 256-6446
90 Gateway Road
"Off Rt. 9 2mile East of town Center"
On PVTA Bus Route to Rolling Green, Pool
•Aerobics•Aqua-Aerobics•Steps•Nautilus
•Racquetball•Free Weights•Jacuzzi
•Sauna•Bike•
•Indoor Tennis & Basketball
•Rowers•Treadmills
•Hurry - ends February 12th
Join Now for Our 15 Week Semester Special ($169) & Get A Free HFC T-Shirt!

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring "Bud & Bud Light" 30-pk $14.99
The "12-Pack" Special!
Sam's "Winter Lager" Sam's "White Ale" $8.99
Michael Shea "Irish Amber" Dundee "Honey Brown Lager" Your Choice $6.99
M.G.D. & Light 30/pk $10.49
"MICRO MADNESS CONTINUES"
Catamount Devil Mountain Petes Blue Moon
ALL FLAVORS !
Mix & Match "TWO" 6-pks... $9.95
Wow!
Cider Jack 14.99 1.5 gal. (Ale Flavors)
Kendall Jackson Chardonnay 19.99 750 ml.
Capt. Morgan Spiced Rum 17.99 1.75 ml.
Check Out Russell's Indoor Specials!
• Delivery Available • OPEN 9:00AM to 11:00PM • Visa/Mastercard • All Beers Plus Deposit •

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

$ WIN MONEY $
Win $ in the Central Area Battle of the Bands on March 6th! Demo tapes due by Feb 18. One member must be a Central Resident. Contact Chris 6-2169, Nick 8-5694

TALKING ACROSS DIFFERENCES, EXPLORING COMMON GROUND & CONFLICT (2 Credits, Spring Semester) Your experience is needed! Participate in a 10 week Intergroup Dialogue course. Sections offered 1) WHITE WOMEN & WOMEN OF COLOR, 2) PEOPLE OF COLOR & WHITE PEOPLE, 3) PEOPLE OF LATINO HERITAGE, & PEOPLE OF AFRICAN HERITAGE. Issues discussed: Race relations on college campuses, Race & culture, Interracial dating, Affirmative Action, Immigration, etc. Enroll now at the Residential Academic Program Office, 5th floor-JQA or 158 Hills South.

PERFORMING ARTS DIVISION offers Group and Private Instruction in Music, Theater, and Dance. PAD is located in the New Continuing Ed Bldg. on the corner of Fearing and N. Pleasant Streets, rooms #208 and 210. Info call (413)545-05

3rd Floor 2 bedroom apartment available Feb 1. Heat/Hot Water + Cooking Gas included $815/month. Please contact Andrew Newcomb 549-6600

AUTO FOR SALE

Toyota Tercel 94 Good condition. Extended. Dealer's Guaranty. $7500. Call 546-2430

88 Toyota Corolla 5 speed. Good condition. 149k. $2200. Call 256-1767

IT'S COMING...

AUTO FOR SALE

1989 BMW 325i Navy blue/grey interior, new tires, highway miles. Excellent student car. Runs great. $4500 or B/O. Call 546-5536

89 VW Fox Good condition. 165,000 miles. Many new parts. Pioneer Radio- Detachable Face $1075 firm. 546-3060

1987 Pontiac Bonneville Great condition, many new parts. Must sell! $1200. Call anytime. 546-6342

88 Chevy Cavalier Good running car. Very reliable. Has new brakes, tires, radiator. Replaced engine and rebuilt alternator about 2 years ago. Selling for $1200 ($300 below NADA). Call 546-3842

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday 1-800-649-4795

CHILDCARE

Childcare Needed for bright, easy-going 13 month old girl in our home for 8-9 hours a week. Close to campus. 548-7061

COMPUTERS

Intel Pentium Processor 90MHz with heatsink and fan. Brand new, never used! No floating point division operation error 1 year factory warranty $ 9 0 hbarrett@student.umass.edu 549-4787

EMPLOYMENT

Teer Counselors/Teer Directors to lead teenagers on 3-6 week adventures in Canada and U.S.A. Must be 20 years of age or older by July 1. Enormous responsibility coupled with unique travel opportunities. Contact Westcoast Connection 800-767-0227

EMPLOYMENT

CAMP WAYNE FOR GIRLS- Northeast Pennsylvania 6/20-8/18/98. Have the most meaningful summer of your life! Directors for Drama, Camping/Nature, Cheerleading, Golf, Counselors for Tennis, Gymnastics, Swim, Sail, Fine Arts, Video, Photography, Guitar, Waterskiing, Dance, Piano, Team Sports, Low Ropes, Karate, Head Chef and Assistant. Other positions available. On Campus Interviews March 3rd. Call 1-800-279-3019 for more information

Off-Campus Meal Plan in exchange for light kitchen work. 549-4062

Needed: EMT's Must have current CRR certification. Must attend mandatory training session Feb 8 @ 2:00pm (Will last no more than 4 hours) General Meeting after @ 7:00pm Location: Morrill IV N406 Questions? Call 545-1895

MAINTENANCE PERSON Brendywine Apartments in Amherst. Full-time General maintenance skills including electrical, plumbing, carpentry and ceramic tile work necessary. Must live on site. Duties include after hours "call" on rotating basis. Competitive salary with benefits, including apartment. Send resume to: 166 Brendywine Dr., Amherst, MA 01002. Or call (413)549-0600 Fax (413)549-1319

Swahili Speaker Needed for minor translation. We can discuss payment. 586-6778. Leave message

Activist
JOBS FOR THE ENVIRONMENT
Work with the Sierra Club on an urgent endangered species campaign
Part-time available
Great for students
$50 $75 a day
Call Kate 256-6434

EMPLOYMENT

Now hiring part-time workers in Downtown Amherst. $7 an hour. Applicants must be outgoing. Call Sean 253-0583

Looking for Merry Poppies 8-12 hours per week. Mon, Wed, Fri afternoons. Occasional weekend hours. References, experience, car a must. 549-7788

NEW STUDENTS PROGRAM seeks extroverts from 98-00 Class with 2.5+ GPA. May 27 to July 18. Salary, room, meals, health coverage. Apply 307 Admissions Center. Deadline Feb 6

CRUISE SHIP & LAND-TOUR JOBS Discover how to work in exotic locations, meet fun people, while earning a living in these exciting industries! For more information 517-324-3092 Ext C50012

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ FOR HIRE: Professional DJ spinning all types of music. Now booking for Spring Semester. Perfect for your next date party, formal, or occasion. Check me out at Pruddy's on Thursday. DJ FOOZ (Ask for Tim) 253-6593

FOR RENT

SUMMER RENTALS
CAPE COD GROUP Summer Rentals- Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Diamond Real Estate (508)477-1900

Fridge Rentals Free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

Full Size Futon Used one semester. $150/BO. 546-4841

Valentine's Day Special Issue...

FURNITURE

Futon Twin size, brand new $100. (413)256-3527. 5-5547

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy 21st Silonsky!
You're the best.
I love you.
Booty

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Acupuncture and Herbal Medicine National Board Certified Licensed. 549-6542

LOST

A Gold Cross with blue and white inlay. Sentimental value. Reward. Please call Laura at 546-0851

MISCELLANEOUS

EARN $750-$1500/WEEK
Raise all the money your student group needs by sponsoring a VISA Fundraiser on your campus. No investment & very little time needed. There's no obligation, so why not call for information today. Call 1-800-323-8454 x 95.

FREE T-SHIRT + $1000
Credit Card fundraisers for fraternities, sororities & groups. Any campus organization can raise up to $1000 by earning a whopping $5.00/VISA application. Call 1-800-932-0528 ext 65. Qualified callers receive FREE T-SHIRT.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

For Sale- Didjeridu Hand made hand painted, by student $20 with lesson. 253-7342

MUSICIANS WANTED

Berber Shop Quartet Forming No haircutting involved, just good acapella singing. Call Daniel: 665-7581

PERSONALS

My heart will go on!"- Celine Dion. Free love and valentines at www.studentadvantage.com.gold

ROOM FOR RENT

One bedroom available in Pulfton Village. $257.50 per month. 1st and last month's down. Must be responsible, considerate, and like to party but still get work done. Call Jay, Jill, or Rob @ 549-7203

One bedroom in 3 bedroom apt in Northampton. $300+/month. 10 min to downtown. Nice and cozy. Call 585-5016

ROOMMATE WANTED

One bedroom in two bedroom apartment. Sugarloaf Estates. On PVTA. Utilities included. Available NOW. 665-3295

Looking for roommate to share two bedroom apartment. Call 549-5582

SERVICES

Questions about your lease, security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting? assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Know Your Rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find Out! Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

Place your Classified SOON !

STEREO & CD EQUIP

Car Stereo Equipment Kenwood Detach Face. 1 year old, paid $350. 1 amp 100x2, paid $150. 1 amp 100x4, paid $100. 1 pair Pioneer 6x9 speakers, 100w, paid $110. Whole system sounds great, needs nothing. Selling as package deal for $300. Call 546-3842

Tascam Multitrack Recorder 4 track mixing board and recorder. Only 8 months old. Received a 24 track as a gift over break. Will include: 1 mic, never been used; 4 professional recording tapes. Paid $550, will sell for $330. Call 546-3842

TICKETS

Sarah McLachlan/ Billy Joel/ NCAA Men's Basketball. 2 Guys Tickets. 1-888-345-TIXX

TRAVEL

EARLY BIRD SPECIAL
Europe- Summer '98
Northeast Dep's: $329 R/T
Caribe/Mexico: $199 R/T
Florida: $79 O/W
Puerto Rico: $99 O/W
Call (800)325-2009
http://www.airtech.org

Miami only $79 O/W. Mexico/Caribbean or San Juan $200. R/T Europe $179 O/W. Other world-wide destinations cheap. ONLY TERRORISTS GET YOU THERE CHEAPER! Air-Tech (212)219-7000. (800)575-TECH. www.airtech.com

SPRING BREAK '98
Free food and drinks! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica and Florida from $399. Organize a small group and travel FREE! Highest commissions and lowest prices. Call Surf & Sun Tours to become a campus representative (800)574-7577

Receptionist Part-time

Elaine Health and Rehab is seeking a Receptionist to assist us 3:30-8pm, Mon-Fri. Excellent interpersonal skills, as well as computer data entry experience are required. The successful candidate will be dependable, possess a pleasant phone manner and be able to work in a fast paced environment. Interested candidates may either complete application on premises, or may send resumes to:

JoAnn Cavanaugh, Payroll/H.R. Coordinator, Elaine Health and Rehab, 20 N. Maple St., Hadley, MA 01035; (413)584-9057, FAX (413)586-7787

Spring Break- Cancun and Nassau from $399. Air, hotel, transfers, parties and more! Organize a small group and earn free trips plus commissions! Call 1-800-Spring Break 1-800-777-4642

Spring Break '98 Get Going!!! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida Group Discounts & Free Drink Parties! Sell 5 & go free! Book Now!!! Visa/MC/Disc/Amex 1-800-734-7007. http://www.endlesssummertours.com

Have you waited this long to make Spring Break plans? It's not too late! Choose Sunsplash Tours- Call Michelle 256-8217

USED BOOKS

ENGIN TEXTBOOKS for Chem 111-112. Chem 225, Chem-261, 262. Physic 151-152. Engin 191A. ResEc 102 & notebooks 546-3116

Valentine's Day Issue Deadline is Feb. 10 !

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be processed by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthdays or congratulations personals in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. See exceptions regarding Off-Campus Meal Plans.
5. Personals are the property of Collegian. Collegian does not accept personals of a vindictive or libelous nature and reserves the right to refuse any personals that do not meet the standards of good taste. Personals must not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and like forms of identification. Collegian reserves the right to refuse any personals that do not meet the standards of good taste.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or typographical errors.

NEW Standard

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
AUTO PARTS
CHILDCARE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
COMPUTERS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FURNITURE
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HEALTH & BEAUTY
HOUSES FOR RENT
HOUSES FOR SALE
HOUSESITTING
JEWELERY
INSTRUCTION
LOST & FOUND (3 DAYS FREE)
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MISCELLANEOUS FOR RENT
MOTORCYCLES
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
MUSIC LESSONS
MUSICIANS WANTED
PERSONALS
PETS FOR SALE
RESUMES
RIDES WANTED
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOMS WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SPORTS
STEREO & CD EQUIP
SUMMER SUBLET
TELEVISIONS FOR SALE
TICKETS
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
TUTORING SERVICES
TUTOR WANTED
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED GENERAL
WORLD WIDE WEB
YARD SALES

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, FEB. 5

Class — Weekly yoga and meditation classes will be held in Butterfield Residential Area lounge for the next three Thursdays. Classes start at 8 p.m. and will be facilitated by a visiting yoga monk. For more information, call 253–9553.

Help Session— CCEBMS Program is holding a FAFSA Help session on the second floor of the New Africa House Library from 6–8 p.m.

Meeting— The Peer Mentor's Network will be meeting from 6:30–8 p.m. in the Campus Center. The meeting is for students and community members to support and discuss issues concerning disabilities. For more information contact Peter at 545–4602.

Meeting— Representatives from the Boston and Five College Peace Corps offices will hold a general information meeting from 7–8:30 p.m. in room 124 of Hasbrouck Lab.

Speech– — Paul Bonin Rodriguez, Alberto Antonio Araiza and Michael Marinez will be speaking on : The AIDS Pandemic; 3 Queer Latino Artists Share the Evolution of their Work. The event will be held in Campus Center room 803 at 12:30 p.m. For more information, contact the Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

FRIDAY, FEB. 6

Auditions— Auditions for the UMass Theatre Guild's production of Jesus Christ Superstar will be held at 7 p.m. in Campus Center room 101. For more information call Kristina at 545–0415.

SATURDAY, FEB. 7

Auditions— Auditions for the UMass Theatre Guild's production of Jesus Christ Superstar will be held at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. in Campus Center room 101. For more information call Kristina at 545–0415.

SUNDAY, OCT. 8

Auditions— "Mass Hysteria". UMass "Saturday Night Live"-type show will be holding auditions at 11 a.m. in the UVC–TV 19 Studio. For more information contact Josh at 548–9337.

NOTICES

Writing — Spectrum Magazine is taking submission for the next edition of the magazine. The deadline is Feb. 12. For more information, call the office

PI's are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PI's, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

A true story of how Collegian Personals work...

There once was a man from my home town who came to me to tell me that he had the same problem story. He didn't have a job, he just graduated around the same time I did with a Poli-Sci major. He called me "his Poli-Sci man." Fast forward to the present and that same guy is now a junior professor at Harvard. Before he got crazy and started Poli-Sci-ing, he, although everyone people he called me "his Poli-Sci man." Fast forward to the present and that same guy is now a junior professor at Harvard. Before he got crazy and started Poli-Sci-ing, he, although everyone in town knew I'm a Poli-Sci and was, to some extent, to find love, love is very important in my town, too.

Here at the Collegian, we seem to think love is a pretty good thing, too. That's why when you place a classified, we stay away and in a little times to help your ad bring you love, success, you might love or fun. Whatever. It's not important.

The important thing to find you personal that Collegian Classifieds are read by hundreds and hundreds of people every day.

What happened to Poli-Sci man? He got a job. Turns out he wasn't "crazy" for us... He just went kind of into business.

This ad's even cheap enough to get you to place a personal ad, We're nice...

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	17	HSCN Programming
3	CBS/3 Hartford	18	TV–19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	22	NBC/22 Springfield
8	PBS/57 Springfield	23	CNN
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	24	CNN SI
8	UPN/20 Hartford	25	Headline News
9	Weather Channel	26	UCTV
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
		33	Much Music

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 5, 1998

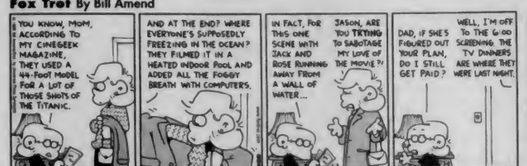
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH (2)	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Rhymes of Burma Shave		Mystery! "Cadfael" "A Morbid Taste for Bones"		Keeping Up		Wait for God	This Old Hse.
WFSB (3)	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV	Promised Land (In Stereo)		Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ (4)	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Promised Land (In Stereo)		Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB (5)	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Prey "Origins" (In Stereo)		"Target Earth" (1996, Science Fiction) Christopher Melon				News	Nightline
WLVI (6)		Full House	BoyWorld	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★★ "Billy Bathgate" (1991, Drama) Dustin Hoffman				News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH (7)		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Frasier (R)	Seinfeld	Veronica's Cl.	ER "Family Practice" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Cheers	Mad Abo. You	★★★ "Done With the Wind" (1939, Drama) (Part 1 of 2) Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh.						News	Grace Under	Vibe
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Friends	Frasier (R)	Seinfeld	Veronica's Cl.	ER "Family Practice" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC (61)	11	Home Img.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	Figure Skating Dressing the Ice: The Women of '94 Revisited				News		Simpsons	Deep Space 9
WWLP (22)	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Frasier (R)	Seinfeld	Veronica's Cl.	ER "Family Practice" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY (57)	6	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		This Old Hse.	Dra-Cell	Mystery! "Cadfael" "A Morbid Taste for Bones"		Foto-Novelas		Cherlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB (40)	20	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Prey "Origins" (In Stereo)		"Target Earth" (1996, Science Fiction) Christopher Melon				News	Nightline
WSBK (38)		Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	★★★ "The Untouchables" (1987, Drama) Kevin Costner, Sean Connery.					News	M*A*S*H	Real TV
WTBS (72)		Family Matters	Family Matters	Andy Griffith	Andy Griffith	Thunder				★★★ "The Blues Brothers" (1980, Comedy) John Belushi
A&E (31)		Northern Exposure "Up River"		Law & Order "Vengeance"		Biography Ted Bundy		New Explorers		Unexplained (R)		Law & Order "Life Choice"
CNN (30)	33	Worldview		Moneyline	Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM (35)	36	Comedy-Viewers' Choice		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★½ "Stewardess School" (1986, Comedy) Brett Cullen.				Comedy Net	Mske-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC (32)		Wings "Final Assault" (R)		Gimme Shelter		Traveling the Dingo Fence (R)	Strange-True	Movie Magic	Wings "Target Berlin" (R)			Justice Files (R)
ESPN (33)	35	Up Close	Sportscenter		College Basketball	College Basketball: Mississippi at Arkansas. (Live)				College Basketball: Southern Mississippi at Tulane. (Live)			Sportscenter
LIFE (34)	37	Supermarket	Desk	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "Memories of Midnight" (1991, Drama) Jane Seymour.				Almost Perfect	Golden Girls
MTV (37)	39	MTV Live (In Stereo)		My So-Called Life "The Zit"		Models-House	Models-House	Models-House	Models-House	Fashionably Loud (In Stereo)		Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK (68)	40	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Secret of Alex	Hppy Days	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	I Love Lucy	M.T. Moore	Taxi	Newhart
SCIFI (42)	41	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Sequest 2032 (In Stereo)		Sightings (In Stereo)		★½ "Prophecy" (1979, Horror) Talia Shire, Robert Foxworth.				Sequest 2032 (In Stereo)
TLC (67)	29	Renovation	Renovation	Home Again	Home Again	Medical	Without Warn.	Jack the Ripper (R)		Why Sex? (R)		Medical	Without Warn.
TNT (63)		Lois & Clark-Superman		Babylon 5 "Revelations"		★★★½ "Gone With the Wind" (1939, Drama) Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh.
USA (62)		Baywatch "Western Exposure"		Highlander: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger		★★★ "First Blood" (1982, Drama) Sylvester Stallone.				Silk Stalkings (R) (In Stereo)
HBO (3)		★½ "It Takes Two" (1996, Comedy) Kirstie Alley. "PG"				★★ "Space Jam" (1996) Michael Jordan. "PG"		Replacement		Comedy Hour: Damon Wayans		Best of Autopsy (In Stereo)
MAX (8)		★★ "Memoirs of an Invisible Man" (1992) Chevy Chase. "PG-13"				★★★½ "Blind" (1998, Biography) Forest Whitaker, Dana Delany. (In Stereo) "R"						★★ "Tailor Trash" (1980) "R"
SHOW (9)		★★ "Ruby Jean and Joe" (1996, Drama) Tom Selleck. "PG-13"				★★★½ "Jerry Maguire" (1996, Comedy-Drama) Tom Cruise. (In Stereo) "R"						"Blind Faith" (1998, Drama) Courtney B. Vance.

Bruno By C. Baldwin

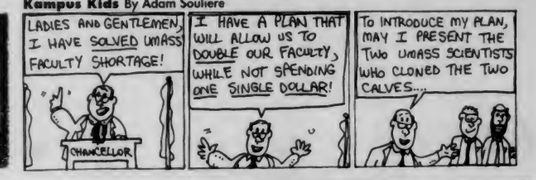
Robotman By Jim Meddick



Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Fox Trot By Bill Amend



Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Sven By Stephen Higgins

YOU

could have a comic in this very spot, come down and see Laura Stock at The Collegian in the basement of the Campus Center.

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan 20.–Feb. 18) — You are likely to discover something about a close friend today that makes you realize just what has been going on behind your back.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You may have to search high and low in the future for the kind of opportunity that can be yours this very day. Do not hesitate to explore it fully.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Form and function must be combined today if you're to enjoy the kind of success you seek. You must do it well and look good doing it, too!

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You may be getting so caught up in peripheral or even trivial issues at this time that you're overlooking one or two key concerns.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Get back to basics today and you should be able to increase profit and enjoyment while engaging in all the old endeavors. Have fun again!

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You can do things in more than one fashion today, but you must strive to find the one that works best for you. You can maximize your results.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — Follow in someone else's footsteps today and you can learn a thing or two about a topic that, in the past, was only of fleeting interest.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Now is the time for you to make a more concerted effort to engage in meaningful conversation with those around you. Forget about small talk!

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — Take the time to study details carefully today and you'll enjoy a greater yield as a result of your efforts. Get facts and figures.

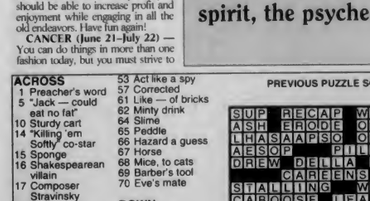
SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You may not be able to do things entirely on your own– nor are you likely to want to, anyway! Your choice of partner will make all the difference.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You may not be able to do things entirely on your own– nor are you likely to want to, anyway! Your choice of partner will make all the difference.

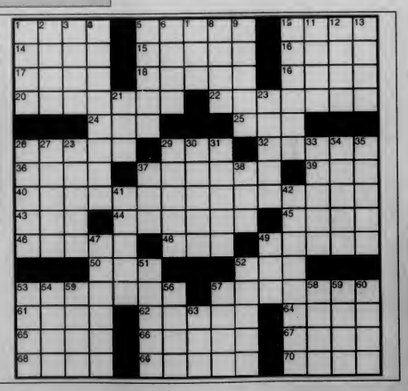
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You mustn't let an unexpected development take you too much by surprise. Look back and you'll see that you could have anticipated it.

Quote of the Day

"The greatest sin, perhaps, is uninterest. A numbing of the spirit, the psyche, the mind."
–William S. Burroughs



Close to Home By John McPherson



ACROSS
1 Preacher's word
5 "Jack — could eat no fat"
10 Sturdy cart
14 "Killing 'em Softly" co-star
15 Sponge
16 Shakespearean villain
17 Composer Stravinsky
18 Secret
19 Open
20 Conflict
22 State
24 Writing fluid
25 Before, poetically
26 Halt
29 Bower's punch
32 Revises (text)
36 Early name in automobiles
37 Threaten
39 Actor Gibson
40 Yellow-orange wildflower
43 Out — limb: at risk
44 Unusual thing
45 Swiss painter Paul —
46 Farewell
48 "You bet!"
53 Act like a spy
57 Corrected
61 Like — of bricks
62 Minty drink
64 Slime
65 Peddle
66 Hazard a guess
67 Horse
68 Mice, to cats
69 Barber's tool
70 Eve's mate

DOWN
1 Vinegar, e.g.
2 Wise Men
3 Son of Aphrodite
4 Trumpet-shaped flowers
5 Nasty smile
6 Body of water
7 Perlman or Leibman
8 Served perfectly
9 "— Men and a Baby"
10 Used the phone
11 Prince of India
12 Lab-culture medium
13 Days of —: long ago
21 Type of liner?
27 Large antelope
28 Dwight's rival
29 Singer — Lee Lewis
30 Sharpshooter Oakley
31 Entices
33 Suggest
34 Plains dwelling
35 Craftier
37 Extinct bird
38 Low-lying
47 Smoothly
49 Not care a —
51 Collegian's field
52 Serpent
53 Stinging insect
54 Roman road
55 Part in a play
56 Immature butterfly
57 Nevada city
58 Denizen of

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

2-5-98 © 1998, United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Pizza Casserole
Vegan Falafel Sandwich w/ Falafel Sauce

DINNER
Breaded Chicken Tenders
Jamaican Beef Patty
Pasta Shells w/ Tomato Basil Broth
Pastabilities

Worcester
LUNCH
Hot Turkey Sandwich
Elbow Macaroni/Tomato Sauce
Vegetable Lo Mein

DINNER
Breaded Chicken Tenders
Black Bean Quesadilla
Began Black Bean Quesadilla
Pastabilities

Hampshire
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Barbecued Beef on a Bun

DINNER
Breaded Chicken Tenders
Jamaican Beef Patty

Berkshire
LUNCH
Hot Turkey Sandwich
Hamburger on a Roll
Harvest Burger

DINNER
Breaded Chicken Tenders
Jamaican Beef Patty
Pasta Shells w/ Tomato Basil Broth
Pastabilities

Night Editor: Chris Stamm
Photo Technician: Ken McDonald
Copy Editor: Marty J. Keane
Production Supervisor: Jaylyn Lombard
Production Staff: Jocelyn Burrows, Jeremy Brothers

Sophomore women bolstering UMass winter teams

Andrea Spencer eyes UM swimming records

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

Consistency.

It may only be a simple word, but it goes a long way in defining Massachusetts swimmer Andrea Spencer.

The sophomore has been rock solid in the pool for the Minutewomen since her arrival in Amherst last year. Right from the start Spencer left an impression, leading the team with 13 first-place finishes as a freshman.

The 1997-98 season has not seen any type of "sophomore jinx" affect Spencer either. After waning in the background for the first half of the campaign, the Wilmington, Del. native has emerged from the shadows in the past month. She won three events in a victory over Dartmouth, and added an individual and a relay team victory in a loss to Connecticut.

Andrea Spencer

"I feel that I'm swimming consistently. I was swimming consistently last year and I feel that I'm doing the same thing again this year," Spencer said.

Spencer posted a personal best tand third best on the all- time UMass list1 time of 59.77 in the UConn meet. Now take into the consideration the fact that she is only a sophomore, and there is a strong possibility that Spencer will eclipse the current record time (57.36, set by Michelle Leary) by the time that she graduates from UMass.

Several other records appear to be in reach for Spencer, possibly in the 50 free and 200 IM. She is also third on the career UMass list in those strokes as well.

However, the scary thing about all of this is that Spencer feels she hasn't tapped into her full potential yet.

"The reason why I've stayed in swimming so long and why I haven't burned out or reached my full peak yet is because the coach that I had on my club team for so many years was so laid back," Spencer, who was the Delaware state champion in the 100 fly, said.

"He let me do other sports and he wasn't so strict and demanding. My senior year I ended up switching teams because my coach moved to New Jersey. I did really well my senior year and from that it's just been building and building."

Building towards the top of the UMass leader charts that is. Things have been going well for Spencer, and Massachusetts women's swimming coach Bob Newcomb agreee with that.

"Andrea is doing all the right things in the pool. She is heading in the right direction, and that's something that I've been very impressed with," Newcomb said. "Each race it seems like she's doing better than the one before."

Spencer's fascination with the water doesn't end when she steps out of the pool for UMass either. She is also a member of UMass' women's crew, a move that seems to be paying dividends already.

"It just so happens that the crew season is in the spring and is totally opposite from the swim season, so last year, when I got back from Atlantic 10s I started rowing right away," Spencer said. "I was on novice to start… and I did pretty well. In the fall [practice] I was rowing for the first two months but then I had to stop in October because the swim season was starting."

Newcomb feels the work with crew has helped Spencer's swimming.

"One of Andrea's strengths is that she does crew. I noticed that it

Turn to SPENCER, page 11

All-around, Mosby a valuable asset for UM

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

In the fall of 1996, the stork flew up from Lilburn, Ga., a town just outside of Atlanta, and delivered perhaps the smallest package of all to the UMass campus. She was a gymnast, but even more, she's a student, binding together to make the epitome of the term "student-athlete."

Her name is Mandy Mosby, and at a mere 4-foot-8, she has a knack for being lost in the crowd. But when the dust settles, more often than not the smallest package has packed the biggest punch, whether it be in the forum of gymnastics or in the classroom.

"She's the complete package; that's all there is to say about her," women's gymnastics coach Dave Kuzara said. "She's a great student also a member of UMass' women's crew, a move that seems to be paying dividends already.

Mandy Mosby

"It just so happens that the crew season is in the spring and is totally opposite from the swim season, so last year, when I got back from Atlantic 10s I started rowing right away," Spencer said. "I was on novice to start… and I did pretty well. In the fall [practice] I was rowing for the first two months but then I had to stop in October because the swim season was starting."

Newcomb feels the work with crew has helped Spencer's swimming.

"One of Andrea's strengths is that she does crew. I noticed that it will be tested this preseason if the governors approve.

NCAA games already are played without one, but Sinden said experimentation is needed at the NHL level to see if the game's best players need the added help of being able to make longer passes.

"We know what it looks like in college, but there's a feeling that it may look a little different here since the players are better," he said.

Six changes will be tested in the American or International hockey leagues the rest of this season to see if they should be recommended:

- Moving the net out another 1-to-3 feet.
- Not allowing the goalie to handle the puck behind the net.
- Hurry-up faceoffs.
- Banning line changes in the neutral zone.
- Not allowing the puck carrier to stop behind his own net. • Requiring players who commit minor penalties to serve the full two minutes.

Bettman said all of the proposed recommendations got a consensus approval in a four-hour meeting before the group adjourned. The day

Turn to HOCKEY, page 11

NHL GM's discuss potential rule changes

By Mal Reisner
Associated Press

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — The red line, an NHL staple for 55 years, may be history

Elimination of the red line was among seven rule changes backed by NHL general managers Wednesday after three days of meetings to discuss ways to improve the flow of play, encourage forechecking and create more scoring.

The GMs cannot implement changes, only recommend them to owners, who meet in June, possibly in Buffalo, N.Y.

In addition, the league will examine three areas after the Olympic break: a second referee, obstruction infractions and goaltenders' equipment, including glove, blocking pad, stick and the leg pads that have grown two inches in width in recent seasons.

NHL commissioner Gary Bettman said the days of a player without the puck impeding an opponent without a check are numbered.

"It may be now that it's got to be zero tolerance with the stick," Bettman said. "It doesn't matter if it's a tug or it's light or you want to see where he is: no stick on a player; The same thing with the hand."

Dallas GM Bob Gainey said he didn't consider the proposed recommendations a crackdown.

"We have many things that we think are being handled really well," Gainey said. "There are some areas where we're going to try to lift the bar a little bit."

Bettman said using four officials was supported by all 26 managers following tests in exhibition games.

"If you go back and look at the preseason games, it wasn't a case of more penalties being called," Bettman said. "In fact, the games were faster."

But Boston GM Harry Sinden wasn't sure about the idea.

"I'd say it's 50-50," Sinden said about the chances of adoption. "I played in a league once where there were two referees, and I don't recall it being… any better or worse."

When the red line was introduced in 1943, the league said its purpose was to speed up the game and reduce offside calls.

Hockey watchers consider its introduction the start of the modern era. But play without a red line

Martin, Sprewell's sport in the court cases continue raise questions

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Casey Martin broke down in tears yesterday as he testified about the intense pain he feels when he walks the golf course, and how he doesn't believe a cart would give him an advantage over other players.

"If I could trade my leg and a cart for their good leg, I would do it anytime, anywhere," Martin told a packed federal courtroom. Under gentle questioning from his lawyer, Martin gave a detailed description of the rare circulatory condition he has lived with since birth.

Instead of a vein along the bone of his lower right leg, he said he has a jumble of varicose veins. The valves that normally keep blood from flowing backward don't work, so blood tends to pool in his lower leg whenever he stands, causing painful swelling.

"It feels like my leg is going to blow up," he said, adding that the condition has gotten progressively worse over the past four years. "Every time I step, there's a sharp pain in my shin." He described a match he played while at Stanford, and the intense pain that came after carrying his clubs over 36 holes. He said the opposing coach from the University of Arizona saw the agony he was in and told him: "Man, you've got to take a cart." Martin said he replied: "I wouldn't do it."

With that, Martin choked up and reached for tissues to wipe away tears. His mother, his brother and his sister-in-law also cried.

U.S. Magistrate Thomas Coffin called a five-minute recess. Martin has invoked the Americans with Disabilities Act in his lawsuit against the PGA Tour that seeks to ride instead of walk at professional events. His doctors say walking is not only painful, it's dangerous, causing a weakening of the leg that could result in a break and possibly amputation.

PGA Tour lawyers contend allowing Martin a cart would give him an unfair advantage. They maintain walking offers a test of stamina that adds to the competition and is an integral part of tournament golf.

Under cross-examination, PGA Tour lawyer William Maledon compared having a cart to the advantage of carrying extra clubs. Martin said that was an unfair comparison. "That's shotmaking, that's where the game is played, with your clubs."

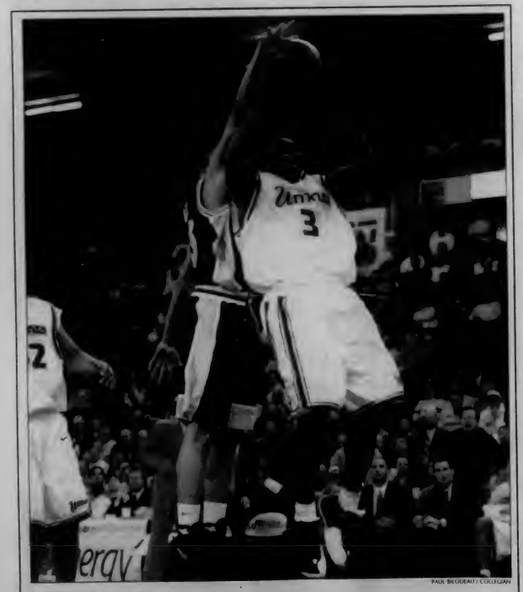
Before it became too painful for him, Martin said he always preferred walking rather than riding a cart.

Even when in a cart, he said he must park it along a paved path and still must walk up to 100 yards a hole.

Earlier yesterday, a PGA Tour executive testified carts are allowed at senior events because it's a money-driven "nostalgia" tour, far less competitive than the top circuit where Martin seeks to ride.

"It's an economic factor," said Richard Ferris, chairman of the PGA Tour policy board. "If Arnold Palmer has an arthritic hip and can't walk 18 holes, he's an economic draw. That's why we allow them to use carts."

The magistrate, who is hearing the case without a jury, has given Martin the chance to ride a cart on the Nike Tour pending the outcome of this trial. Last month, the 25-year-old golfer won the tour's event in Lakeland, Fla., generating an outpouring of public support.



Nike signed Martin to an endorsement contract, making him the latest spokesman for its new slogan: "I Can."

* * *

NEW YORK (AP) — P.J. Carlesimo and Latrell Sprewell met face-to-face for the second time at the player's arbitration hearing, but this time the coach got to tell his side of the story. Carlesimo, who sat through several hours of testimony in Portland, Ore., last week but did not have a chance to speak, rushed to the airport in San Francisco on Tuesday night and took an overnight, cross-country flight after the Golden State Warriors played their final game before the All-Star break.

Reached at his hotel room prior to his 10 a.m. arrival at yesterday's hearing, Carlesimo said he didn't know why he had been forced to make such a hasty trip.

Before leaving the Oakland Coliseum Arena just minutes after the final buzzer, he had said: "Given the choice, I'd rather be rested. But all I'm going to do is answer questions. I can be tired and do that," he said.

PAUL BEGLEY/ COLLEGIAN

Count the basket

Charlton Clarke and the Massachusetts men's basketball team looks to rebound from Tuesday's loss to Temple with a trip to Xavier on Sunday.

Tyson to King: I'm moving on with my life

By Robert Macy
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Mike Tyson, who has seen the biggest paydays in boxing history since being released from prison three years ago, says he is taking control of his life, setting the stage for a legal battle with promoter Don King.

"At the present time I have taken control of my own affairs, both personal and business," Tyson said in a statement released by a Hollywood celebrity manager yesterday afternoon. "I have hired new attorneys and accountants who report directly to me. I have formed Mike Tyson Enterprises and I am in the process of moving forward with my life."

The statement, released by Jeff Wald of Los Angeles, did not address reports that Tyson had severed ties with King and his two co-managers, John Horne and Rory Holloway.

And Wald would shed no light on the split.

"At the present time I am not answering any questions, but stay tuned," Tyson said in the brief statement.

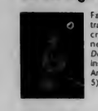
Wald, who represents celebrities such as Roseanne and James Brolin, said his company has "no formal involvement" with Tyson, adding, "We're not negotiating at this point." Wald said he met Tyson earlier when the fighter approached him about a music venture.

Wald and his partner, Irving Azoff, promoted the last two George Foreman fights.

The announcement set the stage for a showdown of two of the biggest names in boxing — Tyson and King.

"He can't just walk away from a contract," one source close to the parties told The Associated Press yesterday. "Mike is just frustrated right now because he can't fight."

It would be "very hard" for Tyson



Turn to TYSON, page 11

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVIII Issue 8 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Friday, February 6, 1998

An adventure on the high seas

Famke Janssen is trapped on a luxury cruise liner in the new action movie Deep Rising. Check inside for more (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Going for two in a row

Tez Craft hit for 17 points against Rhode Island Wednesday and looks to lead the women's basketball team against the Spiders tonight (see Sports, page 12).

Parking garage decision not influenced by UM

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

Student power to influence a recent vote on an ultimately successful referendum question was not felt as a surprisingly low turnout yielded less than a handful of voters in one area.

The recent controversial question to build a parking garage on Boltwood walk was narrowly decided in favor of building the garage with a yes vote of 1811 and a no vote of 1716 — a difference of only 95 votes.

The vote, however, was not heavily decided by University of Massachusetts students if the turn-out at Southwest polling places was any indication.

Only four people out of the 150 eligible, voted at the polling places located in Hampden dining commons. Not every student on campus is eligible to vote in Amherst elections which might account for a low turn-out.

Voting on this issue would have been a way for students to make clear what they want.

"The garage issue impacts student workers and shoppers, if students want more parking they need to show that in the ballot box," said John Furbish, Town Meeting member of precinct 10, which includes part of Southwest, in an interview earlier this week

The lack of student voting is of concern because these are the polling places that will be used for national and other elections, said Peter Kilbourne, Speaker for the Student Government Association. The SGA will also be having elections this semester.

A larger student turn-out was expected because this was a question that would affect many students.

"I think it's too bad students don't vote. It's the majority of students on-campus who complain about not having enough parking in town," Kilbourne said.

The problem of low voter turn-out among students is something Kilbourne would like to see changed.

"It's time we [SGA] step up… maybe we could work with the town clerk's office [to improve turnout]," Kilbourne said.

The small showing will not require a re-vote. The referendum question was a vote to either approve or overturn a decision already made by the Amherst Town Meeting to build the garage, said Sandra Burgess, Management assistant in the Town Clerk's office.

Chancellor addresses Faculty senate body about "Vision 2000"

JOHN BURT/ COLLEGIAN

Chancellor Scott spoke at the first Faculty Senate meeting of the semester Thursday.

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

Chancellor David K. Scott addressed the senate body yesterday at the first Faculty Senate meeting of the semester at the University of Massachusetts.

His speech focused primarily on "Vision 2000," a document directed towards New England land grant university presidents and chancellors to ensure full and equitable participation of women at these schools.

According to the document, "women continue to be underrepresented in the curriculum, ignored or disparaged in the classroom, underrepresented in leadership roles and overrepresented in entry-level and support positions."

Through nine recommendations including encouragement of women's academic and career development and an end to gender-bias and discrimination against women in the curriculum, "Vision 2000" is expected to set forth a vision where the women at all six land grant institutions can overcome sexism and related issues.

"I endorse these principles… if [these problems exist on this campus] I am one hundred percent com-

Turn to VISION, page 2

WORLD

No survivors found in Phillipine crash

CLAVERIA, Philippines (AP) — Rescuers climbing down a steep ravine found at least 11 bodies yesterday at the rain-soaked crash site of a DC-9 airliner, but no survivors. Elderly mourners kneeled in soggy grass nearby, chanting prayers for the dead.

The government of the Philippines grounded all seven remaining planes operated by Cebu Pacific Air until the cause of the crash is determined. All are DC-9s previously owned by other airlines. Officials offered little hope that any of the 104 people aboard the twin-engine plane survived Monday's crash in the southern Philippines, making it the worst in the country's aviation history. U.S. Embassy officials confirmed at least two Americans were on board the plane, but did not release their names.

Bitterly cold rain and fog hampered the rescue effort, limiting visibility to only a few feet and grounding helicopters for much of the day. Rescuers were forced to crawl along the steep slopes to the bodies and widely scattered plane fragments.

Jesus Dureza, a leader of the rescue effort, said 11 bodies and six bags of body parts were found yesterday.

NATION

Vampire cult leader pleads guilty to murder

TAVARES, Fla. (AP) — The self-styled 17-year-old leader of a vampire cult pleaded guilty yesterday to killing the parents of one of his cult members.

Just minutes into prosecutor Brad King's opening statement to jurors, Rod Ferrell's attorney interrupted the murder trial to confer with his client about entering a plea.

Jurors, relatives of the couple who were slain, prosecutors, reporters and the judge filed out of the courtroom so Ferrell could talk privately with his attorneys.

"Mr. Ferrell has indicated he may want to do something to change things," said William Lackey, Ferrell's public defender. Ferrell, who could face the death penalty, also pleaded guilty to armed burglary and robbery charges. On Feb. 12, the penalty phase gets under way.

He had pleaded innocent to two counts of first-degree murder for bludgeoning to death Richard Wendorf and Naoma Ruth Queen on Nov. 25, 1996, in their home in Eustis, 35 miles northwest of Orlando. Prosecutors had planned to use a combination of DNA evidence and Ferrell's own statements against him.

The couple's daughter, Heather Wendorf, fled with Ferrell and three other cult members to Louisiana after the killings. Miss Wendorf was cleared of any charges by a grand jury last year. Howard Scott Anderson, 17, Dana L. Cooper, 20, and Charity Keesee, 17, are charged with being principals to murder. They will be tried later in the year.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Friday	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 38	HIGH: 33	HIGH: 29
LOW: 21	LOW: 13	LOW: 11

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics.....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 12

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

UMass student dies unexpectedly

University of Massachusetts senior, Robert Alperin-Lea, 25, died unexpectedly on Monday, Feb. 2.

Alperin-Lea, of Farmington, CT, was a biology major and lived on campus in Brett Residence Hall

No foul play is suspected in his death.

Born in Newport, RI, Alperin-Lea is survived by his wife Wendy Alperin, his son Sumner Alperin-Lea, his parents James and Anne Lea of Lowell, and a sister Rebecca Lea of Lowell. He is also survived by his mother and father- in-law, Jeffery and Elena Alperin of Farmington, CT.

Funeral services were held yesterday at the Chapel of Weinstein Mortuary, in Hartford, CT and burial followed in the Farmington Valley Jewish Congregation Cemetery, Avon, CT.

Memorial contributions may be made to the "Jimmy Fund," c/o Dana-Farber Cancer research, 44 Binney St., Boston, MA 02115.

— Leigh Faulkner

LAUREN KOSAT/ COLLEGIAN

Livin' large

A view looking up at the W.E.B. Du Bois Library.

U.S. carrier enters Gulf; Marine unit close behind

By George Gedda
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A third U.S. Navy aircraft carrier arrived in the Persian Gulf yesterday as 2,000 Marines on Navy ships with infantry and combat aircraft aboard headed toward the Gulf from the Mediterranean Sea.

President Clinton rejected any suggestion that the United States would take action to depose Saddam Hussein.

"Would the Iraqi people be better off if there were a change in leadership? I certainly think they would be, but that is not what the United Nations has authorized us to do," Clinton said at the start of a White House meeting with British Prime Minister Tony Blair. The extra firepower assigned to the Persian Gulf was designed to give more flexibility as Clinton contemplates using military force to compel Iraqi compliance with U.N. arms inspections.

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Saddam Hussein

As expected, the USS Independence, the oldest ship in the Navy, arrived in the Gulf with its 50 strike aircraft plus support planes to join the USS Nimitz and USS George Washington. The Independence left its home base in Japan last month.

While the administration continued to pursue a diplomatic solution to the standoff with Iraq, Gen. Anthony Zinni, commander of all U.S. forces in the Gulf, requested the additional forces. Zinni asked for a Marine Expeditionary Unit, a specially tailored group of about 2,000 Marines aboard Navy ships equipped with about two dozen attack and support helicopters, plus amphibious assault vehicles. They include an infantry battalion armed with artillery and other weapons.

A senior defense official said yesterday Marines aboard a four-ship fleet led by the amphibious assault ship USS Guam started toward the Gulf. The 24th Marine Expeditionary Unit has been operating in the Mediterranean, practicing an amphibious landing on the Spanish coast.

Defense Secretary William Cohen had told CNN on Wednesday that Clinton "probably will approve" some of Zinni's request in the next few days.

Clinton is winning strong support for his Iraq policies from Blair and from Congress, but the signals received from the Arab world are decidedly mixed.

Blair said yesterday while making the rounds of morning television talk shows: "We have got to make it absolutely clear to Saddam Hussein

Turn to GULF, page 2

Accident leaves 20 dead in Italy

By Vania Grandi
Associated Press

CAVALESE, Italy — As an angry nation demanded an accounting, U.S. officials promised yesterday to cooperate fully with Italians investigating why a Marine plane sliced a cable car line in the Alps, sending 20 Europeans to their deaths.

Residents of this small ski village in the Dolomites, who say the roar of jets often jolts them awake at night, mourned the dead at a memorial service.

Among the 1,000 people attending the memorial 100 yards from the cable car station was Gen. Richard C. Bethurem, commander of NATO air operations in southern Europe, who expressed America's condolences.

"There's an ongoing investigation, a cooperation of Italian and U.S. authorities," he said. "It's our wish that this investigation comes to a quick ending, so that the healing process can begin."

Speaking before residents, schoolchildren and official delegations, an Italian priest summed up the feeling of many that their repeated complaints about low-flying planes went unheeded. "The skies are not for the most powerful or for the most aggressive," said the Rev. Lorenzo Casarotti. "They are for everyone."

"Today, there are 20 people crying out against those who took over our skies. The people of Cavalese, officials have cried out about this. They went unheard," the priest said.

The Marine EA-6B Prowler swooped through the valley just above

Turn to ITALY, page 2

Searching for stamps? Amherst store offers designs by local artists

By Samantha Poulten
Collegian Staff

What do dolphins, goddesses, wicker baskets, mermaids and Lucille Ball have in common? Where can you find a perfect picture of a beer mug to put onto your checks? How can you put a picture of a bride and groom on a wedding invitation if you have no artistic ability?

The answer to all these questions lies in one store: Simon's Stamps, a new store specializing in custom made business stamps, now offers an array of artistic stamps to suit every individual. Each brilliantly made stamp can be used to create greeting cards, wrapping paper, wall decorations and designer checks.

"Art stamps are a lot more fun for us than our usual business or address stamps," said Simon P. Alciere, president of Simon's Stamps.

Located in an old railroad station at 13 Railroad Street in Amherst, Simon's Stamps features hundreds of beautiful and decorative rubber stamps, all custom made by Alciere and his eight employees. This is in addition to his already enormous supply of address and business stamps.

Alciere has been a chief supplier of business and address stamps for the United States government and other major businesses since 1989. His customers are world-wide, including the United States Embassy in Moscow, the California Postal Workers and the United States Military. Local businesses and retail companies including Copycat and Kinkos purchase their business and address stamps from Simon's Stamps, as well.

Alciere said he got the idea to create designer stamps from college students who continuously share with him artistic ideas for new stamps.

"People who can't necessarily draw will find they can make beautiful artwork using the images and techniques available here," Alciere said.

Many of the stamp images the store sells are actually drawn by local artists.

"A business called Rubber Tree Stamps, in Hadley, commissioned some of the artwork and transformed them into molded rubber," Alciere said. "The artists receive a percentage of each sale."

People can also bring images drawn in pen and ink to Simon's Stamps, where Alciere and his staff convert the designs into rubber stamps.

"We make our own dye and rubber for the stamps," said assistant manager Jenn Brown. "The entire process for producing one stamp takes about 45-60 minutes."

The store converts the stamps onto a plastic sheet which is then placed into a machine called the Vulcanizer. Liquid rubber is then poured over the sheet, and a new sheet is pressed over it. The Vulcanizer is then heated to 310 degrees and is pressed together.

"It's a lot like making a grilled cheese sandwich," Alciere said.

Alciere said in addition to his new artistic stamps he expects his local and government contracts to continue to pour in.

"Most of our sales will continue to come from government and wholesale accounts," Alciere said. "The store will work because all we have to do is get lots of cool rubber stamps."

If you really want that cool Lucille Ball stamp, head over to Simon's Stamps 9 a.m.–5:30 p.m. on Saturday, Feb. 7 for Simon's Stamps' grand opening. To promote the grand opening, Alciere will be offering free stamps, as well as free refreshments, to the public throughout the day.

Security tightens at Nagano in wake of airport bombing

TOKYO — A group of leftist radicals claimed responsibility yesterday for a rocket attack on Tokyo's main airport and ridiculed security for the Nagano Winter Olympics.

Three homemade rockets were fired Monday into a cargo plane area of the airport 40 miles east of Tokyo, embarrassing the Japanese government and raising concerns about terrorism during the games. One worker was injured.

The leftist Revolutionary Workers Association claimed responsibility for the attack in letters sent yesterday to Tokyo news organizations.

"We defeated the heavy, counterrevolutionary security for the Olympics," the group said in a brief statement.

The group said it opposed the construction of a second runway at Narita Airport, which opened in 1978, and also criticized Japan's military alliance with the United States.

The letter was signed "The Revolutionary Army," which police said is part of the Revolutionary Workers Association.

"We are determined to continue fighting guerrilla wars to prevent further construction at the airport and to eventually close it," the letter said. Leftist groups claim a larger airport could be used for military purposes.

Police said they had no immediate evidence the rockets were aimed at disrupting the games, which start today. No arrests have been made.

Olympic organizers in Nagano said yesterday that security had been tightened, but stressed the measures were not in response to any specific threat.

"This is a normal security reinforcement just before the Olympic Games," organizing committee spokesman Ko Yamaguchi said. The leftist group said the security guidelines updated last year between Washington and Tokyo "could lead Japan to war and fascism." The guidelines commit Japan to greater cooperation with the U.S. military.

The same group claimed responsibility for launching a projectile at a U.S. Air Force base in Japan days before a 1993 meeting in Tokyo of the Group of Seven industrial powers.

It also claimed responsibility for firing three mortar rounds at a state guest house a month before a 1986 meeting of the G-7 in Tokyo. A larger leftist group was suspected of later launching five missiles at the guest house as foreign leaders were gathering for the summit.

Narita Airport was the scene of violent protests in the 1970s. Radicals have frequently claimed responsibility for similar attacks in the past — though this is the first one to result in an injury. Police set up an 80-member force to investigate the attack, and additional policemen were joining the 500 police assigned daily to the airport.

■ vision

continued from page 1

mitted to fix it. If I find there is discrimination against women... I will see to it that we're going to take it out. And no argument of academic freedom will stand in my way," Scott said.

Last December, all relevant Faculty Senate councils were asked to review the document and make any appropriate recommendations. Because insufficient feedback was received, the vote on "Vision 2000" has been postponed until early April.

"We want to create a program tailored to this campus... and we need feedback from the councils," said Ann Ferguson, Director of the Women's Studies Program.

Also present at the meeting were Eleanor Court, student representative to the Board of Higher Education, and member of the Student Government Association (SGA) Executive Cabinet Salwa Shamapande to explain their advocacy of a possible Course And Teacher Evaluation (CATE) guide for the Amherst campus.

A CATE guide would make it possible for students registering for classes to read professor and class evaluations from other students. These are informal evaluations and are not included in faculty personnel files.

"This is something that helps students and faculty. Professors will get interested students in their classes.

"It would highlight some of the excellent teaching at this university," Shamapande said.

"[A CATE guide] has been identified by students in campus as a high priority. If students have different learning needs, and you can match them with a professor with the same teaching style, it will ultimately help everyone succeed," Court said.

Provost Cora Marrett also addressed the senate body with a request of the faculty of "studying... teaching, writing and experimenting should be our obsession.

"It's a question about how big ideas must pervade our classrooms and, dare I say, our meetings.

"In the talent of our faculty lies the capability of mobility on our campus," Marrett said.

■ Gulf

continued from page 1

that he is not allowed to develop weapons of mass destruction. If he doesn't come back into line to let weapons inspectors in, then we will have to force him to do so."

Clinton, at the National Prayer Breakfast, spoke of the "difficult decision we are facing now ... because of the concern all Americans have that we not expose our children — if we can help it — to the dangers of chemical and biological warfare."

Speaking on condition of anonymity, Blair's aides said Britain is contemplating a period of two to three weeks to educate the public about the extent of Iraq's arsenal and to exhaust diplomatic options.

Those comments left the impression that the earliest period for U.S. military action against Iraq would be in the second half of February.

The administration has said that no decision on military action has been made. It also has refused to discuss a timetable, rejecting appeals by the International Olympic Committee that any such action be delayed until after the winter Olympic games, set to start today in Japan and end Feb. 22.

Clinton said Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, in six days of consultations in Europe and the Persian Gulf, found a "strong consensus" in support of the need for Iraq to allow U.N. inspectors unfettered access to search for forbidden weapons.

"All of us would prefer a genuine diplomatic solution," Clinton said. "The best way to stop Saddam from building nuclear, biological or chemical weapons is simply to get the international inspectors back to work with no restraints."

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
Feb. 2
A two vehicle accident occurred on University Drive. No injuries were reported.
Feb. 5
A vehicle in parking lot 26 on Governors Drive backed into a pole.

Animal Complaint
Feb. 3
A dog was removed from the lobby of Kennedy Residence Hall.
Police were asked to check on the well being of a raccoon in parking lot 64 on Hicks Way.
Police were asked to check on the well-being of a raccoon near Bartlett Hall on Hicks Way.
Feb. 5
A healthy raccoon was trapped by Pest Control and released in the woods.

Annoying Behavior
Feb. 2
An individual from Johnson Residence Hall reported a past incident in which an individual exposed himself.
An individual from Greenough Residence Hall reported threatening messages left on door.
Feb. 3
An individual from Melville Residence Hall reported receiving annoying email.
A motorist was interfering with traffic detail on Hicks Way.
Feb. 4
An individual from Chenoweth Laboratory reported notices were being removed from office doors.

Assault & Battery
Feb. 2
An individual reported being struck in the face on the Southwest Residential Area Mall. He will seek charges in court.

Health and Safety Hazard
Feb. 2
A vehicle's radiator hose broke spilling a large amount of antifreeze in parking lot 49 on Orchard Hill Drive.

Larceny
Feb. 3
A backpack was reported stolen from the Textbook Annex.
Feb. 4
A parking decal was stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 71 on Massachusetts Avenue.

Suspicious Person/Activity
Feb. 2
Francis W. O'Connor, Jr. 42, of Northampton, was arrested on Hicks Way for trespassing, possession of a Class D drug.

Vandalism
Feb. 2
A bottle was thrown through a window of a vehicle parked on Washington Road. Estimated value, $400.
Racial graffiti was written on a desk on the 18th floor of the Dubois Library.
Feb. 3
A vehicle was damaged in parking lot 44 on Sylvan Drive.
A window was broken on the 4th floor of Patterson Residence Hall.

■ Italy

continued from page 1

the treetops on Tuesday, severing the cable with its tail fin at a point about 500 feet above the ground. The plane continued on to the U.S. air base in Aviano, 60 miles to the east.

"Everyone hates how they fly through here at supersonic speeds, instilling fear in all of us," said Renzo Alegretti, a 63-year-old retired union worker. "They are crazy, completely irresponsible. It was an accident waiting to happen."

Italian politicians and local officials are just as outraged. Several influential lawmakers said all U.S. bases in Italy should be closed.

"This is not about a low-level flight, but a terrible act, a nearly earth-shaving flight, beyond any limit allowed by the rules and laws," Italian Premier Romano Prodi said Wednesday.

The defense minister, Beniamino Andreatta, told Parliament the plane was as many as six miles off its planned course when it flew under the cable line.

"There would not have been any danger had the plane kept to the rules," Italian media quoted him as saying, adding that "what happened is incomprehensible."

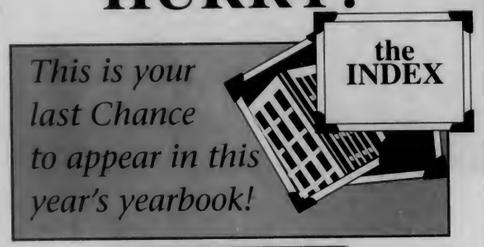
However, Marine Brig. Gen. Guy Vanderlinder, speaking with reporters at the plane's base in Aviano, insisted that the pilot was flying on the authorized route. the Italian news agency ANSA reported yesterday.

The U.S. military released the names of the crew yesterday. The pilot was Capt. Richard Ashby, 30, of Mission Viejo, Calif., who had more than 750 hours flying time on that type of aircraft. The mayor of Cavalese, a town of 3,600, proclaimed a day of mourning yesterday to honor the victims, who included eight Germans, five Belgians, two Italians and two Poles, an Austrian and a Dutch woman.

The gondola operator, an Italian, had switched shifts with a co-worker that morning.

All ski lifts in the Val di Fiemme area shut down along with most of Cavalese's stores, restaurants and other businesses. A U.S. Marine team arrived in Aviano to investigate. Italian prosecutors have questioned the pilot and the three crew members but no charges have been filed.

"We don't know what the facts are yet," Defense Secretary William Cohen said Wednesday on CNN's "Larry King Live."



"What happened, how that plane happened to be there, whether it was below limits. It's under investigation right now."

Aviano spokeswoman Capt. Tracy O'Grady said the pilot "was on an approved low-level training mission," but did not say what altitude was authorized.

The Italian Defense Ministry said military flights must maintain a minimum altitude of 500 feet.

...Collegian, IN THE CAMPUS C...
WE'RE GOOD FOR YOUR HEALTH

HURRY!

This is your last Chance to appear in this year's yearbook!

All this week!
Schedule a sitting
(800) 836-0558

GET YOUR SENIOR INDEX YEARBOOK PHOTO NOW!

Campus Center Rm. 177-178

A+
...for the teacher.

OUTSTANDING TEACHER AWARD

COLLEGE OF FOOD AND NATURAL RESOURCES
students and faculty invited to submit nominations for the 1997-98 award

NOMINATION FORMS ARE DUE MARCH 2
(Available in room 113 Stockbridge Hall or in departmental offices.)

Faculty in the following majors are eligible for nomination:

Animal Science • Building Materials and Wood Technology
Apparel Marketing • Entomology • Environmental Design
Environmental Sciences • Family and Consumer Sciences • Food Science
Forestry • Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration
Landscape Architecture • Microbiology • Natural Resource Studies
Plant and Soil Sciences • Resource Economics
Sport Management • Wildlife and Fisheries Conservation

JOHN BURT | COLLEGIAN

Sneak a peak
Looking in the windows of the Morrill Science Center

Hatch, Gorton debate Microsoft monopoly

By Scott Sonner
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Microsoft Windows' domination of the desktop computer software market has been a good thing for consumers but its gaining control of key Internet interfaces would not, Sen. Orrin Hatch said yesterday.

Hatch, (R-Utah), chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, told a conference that the Justice Department's antitrust scrutiny of the giant software maker was warranted.

"On balance, the antitrust machinery in Washington, D.C., probably shouldn't concern itself with every technology market which, at a particular point in time, is dominated by a particular firm to an unusual, even unhealthy extent," Hatch said.

"Where antitrust policy should focus... is on the transition from one technology to the next," he told the conference on the future of computer technology.

Hatch, whose state is home to Microsoft competitor Novell, said "high stakes" are involved in Justice's October antitrust lawsuit. The suit says Microsoft was using its dominance in the Windows 95 operating system software to gain market share for its Internet Explorer program.

Microsoft disagrees, saying the two programs are integrated and can't be separated as the government wants.

Hatch's criticism of the Redmond, Wash.-based company has put him at odds with the state's two U.S. senators, including Republican Slade Gorton. He wrote to Gorton on Wednesday saying he would treat Microsoft fairly and has no intention of interfering in the Justice Department probe.

But Gorton said he takes little comfort in such assurances. "In light of Senator Hatch's past comments, in which he has taken a very hard anti-Microsoft line, I must admit that I find it hard to believe" that the Judiciary chairman will give Microsoft a fair shake, Gorton said in a statement.

Hatch said yesterday that by creating a common platform for software developers, Microsoft's "successful establishment of the Windows monopoly... has had a tremendous effect in the recent boom in software applications and the software industry in general."

Officer at center of brutality; case thrust into more trouble

By Jeff Donn
Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — A white police officer who was videotaped kicking a prone black suspect is back in a legal bind. This time, Jeffrey Asher is accused in a lawsuit of beating a distraught black man and then falsely bringing him up on charges. In the lawsuit filed Monday in Hampden Superior Court, Brent Whitley, 34, of Springfield, accuses Asher and another officer of beating him with clubs, pushing him down stairs, and then falsely charging him with assault. He is asking for unspecified compensatory and punitive damages for civil rights violations. The lawsuit does not suggest that the alleged attack by the officers was racially motivated. There was not specific evidence of active racial bias in the videotaped kicking of the black suspect, though that incident turned into a cause celebre in the city's black community.

Some black leaders say that the mostly white police force is habitually tougher with black suspects. The mistrust has been aggravated in recent years with the police shooting of an unarmed black motorist and a mocking telephone call made by an officer to a black minister.

Asher is on a one-year suspension for misconduct in the videotaped kicking, which he delivered while other officers were holding the suspect to the ground. Asher was cleared of criminal wrongdoing, though.

He is also named in a separate 1997 federal lawsuit alleging police brutality. In that case, a city man claims he was beaten senseless by Asher when he objected to an unprovoked attack by Asher on a man who had mingled with Asher's father at a bar where the father was working.

In the lawsuit this week, Whitley claims that his wife called police to his home on Feb. 7, 1995, fearing he might kill himself. He has a history of marital problems, including a conviction and 60-day suspended sentence in 1995 for hitting his wife. He could not be reached for comment yesterday.

But, in his lawsuit, he says his mother happened to phone him while Asher and officer Sean Condon were at his apartment. He says they lit into him when he ignored their request to put down the phone.

In their reports, they said he was screaming and threatened them with a knife and frying pan. They said he also kicked and punched them. But he was acquitted of assault on March 15, 1996.

Neither Asher nor Condon could be reached yesterday. Police Chief Paula Meara was not immediately available for comment.

Whitley's lawsuit also names the city, which he claims failed to properly supervise its officers.

Gerald Phillips, head of the city's Police Commission, said yesterday he could not comment directly on the lawsuit. But he said the department had been working hard to improve racial sensitivity among officers.

"We have problems from time to time. We address them. You can have a few bad apples in any barrel. We try to pull them out... as soon as we hear about them. We have a record of acting quickly and decisively," he said.

However, the local branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People wants Asher fired, not just suspended. Darnell Williams, leader of the branch, said yesterday that he will monitor the new case.

DAUBEN BURT | COLLEGIAN

The forest for the trees
Light shines through a dense patch of trees near Puffer's Pond.

Interested in writing for News?
Then come to the New Writers meeting at 113 Campus Center on Monday, Feb. 9 at 7 p.m.
Call Leigh, the News Editor, for more information at 545-1762.

Save on general books
EVERY DAY at UStore's NEW Book Department

New York Times Bestseller
Hardcover ..... Save 35%

New York Times Bestseller
Paperback ..... Save 25%

All Other Books
Hardcover Fiction ...20% Off
Any other book ..... 10% Off*

*Excludes Textbooks, Reference, Newspapers and Special Orders

University Store
On the UMass Campus Center Concourse
Hours:
M-F 9 to 5
Sat. 11 to 4
(413) 545 - 2619
We accept AMEX, Discover, MasterCard, Visa, and the UCard!

NEW Union Billiards
UMass Student Union
NEW NAME, NEW LOOK, NEW ATMOSPHERE!
STOP IN BETWEEN 1PM AND 11PM ANY DAY OF THE WEEK TO SEE THE NEW UNION BILLIARDS. WE'D LOVE TO SEE YOU!
COME BY AND MEET STRIDER AND THE GANG. WE'RE RIGHT ACROSS FROM THE HATCH IN THE OLD GAMES ROOM.

OUTSTANDING ADVISOR AWARD

COLLEGE OF FOOD AND NATURAL RESOURCES
students, faculty and staff are invited to submit nominations for the award for 1997-98

NOMINATION FORMS ARE DUE MARCH 2
(Available in room 113 Stockbridge Hall or in departmental offices.)

Faculty in the following majors are eligible for nomination:

Animal Science • Building Materials and Wood Technology
Apparel Marketing • Entomology • Environmental Design
Environmental Sciences • Family and Consumer Sciences • Food Science
Forestry • Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration
Landscape Architecture • Microbiology • Natural Resource Studies
Plant and Soil Sciences • Resource Economics
Sport Management • Wildlife and Fisheries Conservation

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

A real trust fall

Kenneth Lawrence McDonald

Trust.

It is one of those words that can cause one of two reactions. First, it can send shivers down your spine. To actually let someone else do something or not do something in the hopes that it is in your best interest. When your parents leave the house for the weekend, they want to believe that you won't throw a party, (ahem, well, now you know why the word trust can evoke such fear) not that any of us would do that anyway, right folks?

The other reaction is the one that I fall under, or used to fall under. When I used to hear the word trust I could give an example where I said, "Yeah sure, I'll leave my door open. Go in, you know, do whatever, just don't break anything." Off I'd go, leaving my door open, returning four hours later to find eight people in my room playing Goldeneye. Some may call my actions stupid or naive, but I don't want to ruin a good time, so why should I lock my room up when I go out?

Here is a reason why, and it has changed the way that I've seen dorm life ever since. Last semester, I was going to have a few people in my room to have a couple of "beverages" before I left the next morning. So, being the genius that I am (as if you couldn't already figure that one out), I moved all my stuff into the hall. No big deal right? I went to bed around four and was going to get up at eight. What is four hours of leaving your stuff in the hall? Well, as I soon learned, it is far too long. Here is a list of the damages that occurred in the wee morning hours:

Super Nintendo — stolen
$100 sunglasses — broken prom picture — torn in half (my date was replaced in the picture with a guy from a magazine, how creative...) coffee maker — thrown out the window wallet (which was in my room) — stolen expensive poster — artistically rendered (polite way of saying ruined with a marker)

Last but not least, I had this teddy bear, "Wes," that an ex- girlfriend gave to me. You know, one of those things that you get used to falling asleep next to (I mean the bear). Anyway, a few days before, Wes disappeared while I was out of the room, I'm not making this a tob story, keep listening. While I was hanging out with those friends on the last night, there was a knock on the door. When I opened the door, there was Wes, In a box, with his face burned off. Hmmm, it takes a classy individual to do that.

Now, when I go to take a shower (two doors down), I have to lock my door. I hate the fact that I have to live in fear from one moment to the next, frightened that if I turn my head for even a second It all could be taken from right under my nose. Still, maybe that is the best approach.

I ask you, is it my complete naivety that led to what happened? Is it my fault that I had enough trust in dorm life to allow my stuff to sit in the hall, unattended for an extended period of time? Some of my friends told me that I asked for it. My first response was, "How could I ask for all of that?" However, maybe they are right, maybe it is wrong to trust people. Putting faith in people is a tricky business, and the smallest chink in the armor can send the walls crumbling down. I hope that I don't become so cynical as to overlook other people's true intentions, but I know that I'm well on my way.

It's funny, trust is the building block upon which so much is built, and equally much is destroyed. From marriage to politics, dorm life to "real life," that little "T" word is the common fabric that all are woven from. An issue that I am grappling with right now is the whole Clinton/Lewinsky/ Cap'n Crunch issue (I'm waiting for the Cap'n to give his deposition to Kenneth Starr next).

As much as I am sick of "Zippergate," it brings up an issue that strikes right at the heart of what I am talking about. In my book, Clinton has been doing a good job on the whole. The economy is on the rise, and there doesn't seem to be that lingering sentiment of an impending depression as there has been during past administrations. Yet, at the same time, it is hard for some to trust a man who has been so unfaithful in his personal life with the daily operations of an entire country. If I know that my boss is a sleaze, but he runs a profitable, well oiled machine, should I look for employment elsewhere? To me there is no clear answer. "Could you respect your boss or employer professionally without respecting him/her personally?" I look forward to your responses.

Maybe it is better to be a little more cynical and a little less happy. To you, which is more important: the value of a pair of sunglasses or the goodness of the people that surround you? I thought I knew the answer. I guess I thought wrong.

Kenneth Lawrence Mc Donald is a Collegian staff member.

E–mail alienation

There is a serious problem confronting our society. A problem which is too often overlooked when people talk about the computer age. Everyone talks about how computers will make everything faster, easier, more efficient. It seems to me there are serious consequences facing us as we turn into a computerized society.

Advanced technology was supposed to make life more simple by bridging gaps of communication. However, all computerization appears to be doing is alienating us as individuals and making everything more difficult. I never had to worry about checking an e-mail account, but now I must find a proper time and place to check my e–mail. I had a phone and no one called me, now I have an e–mail account and no one e–mails me.

"Advanced technology was supposed to make life more simple by bridging gaps of communication. However, all computerization appears to be doing is alienating us as individuals and making everything more difficult."

Jason Eiseman

Part of the alienation from high technology comes from a trade off in which we get stuck with the greater of two evils. E–mail is a poor substitute for telephone conversation. So much is added to a conversation involving pitch and tone in a person's voice. Talking with someone, hearing their voice as they say words, is much more personal than an e–mail. E–mail prevents us from talking to each other, thus alienating us.

However, a telephone conversation is also a poor substitute for a face–to–face conversation. Even the voice on the telephone does not convey the messages which can be shown by body movements, gestures and facial expressions. I still drop in on my friends sometimes for no reason at all.

These examples explain how each new level of technology has further alienated us from each other. Telephones almost replaced face–to–face conversation, will e–mail replace the telephone? I hope not. And still I have not mentioned the forgotten art of letter writing.

Correspondence is an art, and this is best seen in correspondence through letters. Many published letters have shined a light and given us new insight into personalities which were once closed to us.

Even the physical characteristics of a letter are more attractive than the cold e–mail. A letter is essentially finite. You can add more pages, but there really is only a certain amount of physical letters one can write on paper. When you receive a letter you can hold it. You can save a letter, and although it may become brittle, take care of it and it will last.

An e–mail is infinite. You can't hold an e-mail. There is no physical presence behind an e–mail. Where is cyberspace? Where is my e–mail "account?" It's out there somewhere. Even a phone has something to hold on to. You can't spray an e–mail with perfume.

Supposedly e–mail is cheaper. Is it? I pay 10 cents a minute for a long distance phone call, and nothing for local calling. It's always free to hop on a PVTA bus and visit a friend, but I paid $20 for my e–mail account.

E–mail is faster; the other person does not have to be there. So what? Most people have answering machines, and if not, so what, call back. E–mail becomes a hassle. I don't like to check my e–mail account, but I feel that I have to in case some one is waiting for me to respond. But why? If it was really that important, they probably would have called me or come to see me anyway.

So what is this alienating reliance we have on this technology? We are already losing the ability to relate to each other beyond boundaries of gender, race and religion, and impersonal technology is just facilitating the isolation and alienation of people from each other.

Many people see the new computer age as a wonderful breakthrough, propelling society to the next millennium. Some people say, "In the future there will be no need for people to leave their house." This is a good thing?

People should leave their houses, people should leave their houses all the time. I am not above the quagmire holding us down. I am a hypocrite; I use my computer too much. But I spend all day on campus. When it is nice outside I try to spend time outside. Occasionally I can even break myself from the grasp of my computer.

Is there an answer to the alienation we face as a society as a result of the computer age? No. I certainly do not have a definite one. There is no systematic answer. There is no law, there is no program that we can enact to change our alienation.

But we can do something about it as individuals. Instead of sending an e–mail to someone, call them. Instead of calling someone, take a ride out to see them in person. Working with computers is fine, telecommuting is an expanding job market, but don't forget that there is an entire world out there. Go out and see it — in person.

Oh, and my e–mail address is jeiseman@student.umass.edu; e–mail me, no one else does.

Jason Eiseman is a Collegian staff member.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Misty eyed clichés

Elsa Allen

I went out last Saturday night. Nothing exciting happened. It was just a typical Saturday night, a night that will eventually blend together with all the others that I've spent here in Amherst.

So, why do you care?

This night made me think about something a grown–up once told me. Somewhere in the back of my mind I remember sitting down to a family dinner. Some strange relatives that I didn't know began to get misty eyed over a few too many glasses of red wine, and then the emotions began to flow.

I hate to get caught up in the middle of these family reminiscing sessions because I always end up finding out stuff about my parents that will inevitably come back to haunt and embarrass me in the future, but this was unavoidable. I was trapped in my chair, forced to listen to second cousin so–and–so tell me the story about the time his fraternity ran some girls underwear up a flagpole in, like, 1955, when he was in college. Great!

And then it came. Those dreaded words — the most horrifying cliché ever uttered. Eight little words that only an adult (you know, the kinds of adults that have careers and kids and stuff) can say.

"These are the best days of your life."

Back to last Saturday night. Is this going to become one of those alleged "best days of my life?" God, I hope not.

I have dreams, aspirations, plans for the future. If the best days of my life consist of walking up and down North Pleasant Street looking for a party that I heard a friend of a friend of some guy that's in my roommate's biology class might be having, I don't know if I want to see what the worst are.

So I began to do a little bit of exploration into what makes these the "best days of my life." I mean, I always imagined that the best days of my life would be spent floating around exotic ports on my private yacht, not cramped in a sweaty basement, floating in a puddle of cheap beer.

After putting a little bit of thought into the matter, I realized that it must be the typical things that I'll eventually look back on. Fifty years from now I'll be sitting at the dinner table with some youngster that I don't really know, but feel obliged to talk to because it's the child of some cousin or another.

"I remember the time when I was in college. We went to a party. We stayed up until four in the morning, you know. And on our way home, we stopped at Taco Bell, because back in those days, they had a place that served Taco Bell until five. Isn't that wild?"

And that kid will look at me like I'm nuts, just like I did to my relatives.

Perhaps I'll recall the night that my roommate decided to be a champ at three in the morning and busted into the living room with a bottle of cheap tequila and a bag of limes. Or maybe I'll tell of the time that I spent three weeks washing mud out of my hair because I decided to go to an infamous hoedown.

But no matter what I say, future generations will no doubt think that it's weak compared to what they are currently doing.

But, last Saturday night, I came to terms with those eight words. Over a couple of tequila shots and a steaming platter of Nachos Bell Grande, while my roommate (the champ) was crying over some undisclosed tequila induced tragedy and my other roommate was already planning the next night, I felt that I could finally justify the use of the cliché.

Although it may not seem like a big deal now, there is going to come a day when it just isn't going to be possible to spend an entire night listening to Madonna, trying to hit three parties and still get to Antonio's before they run out of buffalo chicken pizza, or hitchhiking with six other people on North Pleasant Street and actually getting picked up. These things just don't happen in that mysterious "Real World" that grown–ups also love to threaten us with.

We'll never be able to do these things again, and It's knowing that that truly makes these the best days of our lives.

Elsa Allen is a Collegian staff member.

No easy answers

Michael Messaros

Cloning? Bad idea.

How's that for a first line?

I guess I have to back this up with some thoughts or feelings on the subject because people who read the editorials seem to be sticklers for things like that. I wish I could just leave it at that, though, because the questions that cloning creates may be too much for anyone to answer, especially me.

My feeling is this — maybe science is reaching beyond it's boundaries this time. Maybe it's time we just sit back, look at the freak–sheep and our very own freak–cows, and say, "That's great. Good job guys. Now, uh, cure cancer or something." Instead, we are looking forward to human cloning, but hopefully with at least just a hint of trepidation. Human cloning seems to be that next big advancement in science, the next thing to conquer. Does that necessarily mean we have to conquer it?

Scientists are saying that human cloning is a long way off, that we may not even have the capabilities to do it, but at the rate technology improves day by day, it's something that is definitely foreseeable. The government has already started talks on the subject, or at least started talking about setting up talks. Richard Seed, mad scientist of the moment, is promising to start cloning humans, damn the federal moratorium. So, this is obviously not some flight of science fiction fancy here, this is something that has to be examined closely, and even then, would it be right? This is a question that cannot just be answered by a government committee, a question that is religious and philosophical, and therefore may not be able to be answered by any one group.

The question of cloning almost begs for an answer to the unanswerable, asking what we are and who we are. If you believe in God then the answer is simple, if unproven. A person is made up of body and soul, the body just being a shell and the soul being the essence of what we are. Will a clone be its own person, or soulless? Blood and tissue are able to be defined, studied and, now, cloned. But souls are much more nebulous, intangible, not apt to be cloned. To try and create life, on our own, is to look into the eye of God and not blink. Can we create our own people? The old cliche warns about "playing God" and that is brought up every few years in relation to some scientific topic. We are continually expanding the boundaries of human knowledge and testing what we can do. I have never been one to stand in the way of science, but this time we are dangerously close. I am not that religious, and I hope I am not coming off as some kind of Jesus freak, but I do believe we have to tread lightly through this.

This being America, though, and church and state being separate entities, it is hard, impossible even, to stop the process of science based on these grounds. Sticky moral issues are fine as points of debate, and on personal levels support arguments well enough, but when dealing with empirical data and facts needed in our society, it's harder to hold water. How else, though, should this be approached?

But what right do I have to stop science? What right does anyone have to stop science? Should science be stopped for some ninny questions about who we are and where we come from? Human cloning has the ability to shake the world as we know it, to change the course of human history much like Darwin did with his famous theory of evolution. Of course, he was met with opposition, too, especially from people arguing from the same side I seem to be edging toward here. That scares me.

Sometimes I think that this world is too big for me, that there are few easy answers that can be spelled out in editorials written in college papers. The issue of cloning is something that cannot be easily stepped into. It could be a Pandora's Box waiting to be opened. My fear is that many questions that revolve around it are too grand to be addressed by committee. I look at what I have written and realize I have more questions than answers, and questions just lead to more questions. The answers might just be beyond us, and that scares me a bit. I wish I could have just said, "Cloning? Bad Idea."

Michael Messaros is a UMass student.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangotirkar Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Co-Editor
Tamar Carroll Editorial/Opinion Co-Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Leigh Faulkner News Editor
Lauren Kosky Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor
Joeseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
David Parmenter Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Aiberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Deep Rising a ridiculous movie

COURTESY DOUG CURRAN

Famke Janssen and Treat Williams star in the lame thriller Deep Rising.

By Bryan McAllister
Collegian Staff

DEEP RISING
Directed by Stephen Sommers with Treat Williams, Famke Janssen, Anthony Heald
playing at Hampshire Six Theaters

I can just imagine the pre–production meetings for Deep Rising.

"Yeah, basically, we have a monster movie. Only this isn't your typical monster. It's a giant sea serpent/squid with lots of tentacles, and multiple mouths with lots and lots of teeth, and instead of eating people — get this — it drinks them."

"Spectacular. So lots of people die, right?"

"Yeah, but I mean, that's not all. Sure we have a lot of chases and feedings and everything. But the characters are great. There's a Harrison Ford–type, A beautiful, sexy jewel thief. An evil ship owner. And a funny sidekick."

"Sounds like a great movie."

"This movie works on many levels. It's very involved and complex. See, first we have a big conflict between our hero and the bad guys he's assigned to be with. And we have the ship owner, who sabotages his own ship to get the insurance money."

"Are you sure audiences are going to be able to follow all this?"

"Well, like I said, it's basically just a monster movie."

"Right."

"Oh, and there could definitely be a sequel."

"I'm sold."

All right, so maybe the meetings weren't even that innocent. The filmmakers behind Deep Rising probably knew that they were making a bad movie. Or perhaps they were just really drunk the whole time. In fact, the film can best be compared to perpetually drunk college guy. He never takes anything seriously, he cheats off other people's work and he still gets bad grades. But at least he has fun doing it.

In this case, Deep Rising cheats a lot. The film blatantly rips–off (or as the filmmakers might say, "pays homage to") the Alien series, Jaws and Anaconda; the latter wasn't even a good movie to begin with. However, that last film did do moderately well at the box–office, which probably ignited the staggering creativity (sarcasm thick) behind this movie.

Turn to DEEP RISING, page 6

Vision of Disorder invades Pearl Street

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Staff

Long Island is invading Pearl Street on Saturday night with Vision Of Disorder — the 516's king of hardcore. If you remember their show last semester with Orange 9Md and Shift, you know what they can do live. What makes this show even more special are the opening triumvirate of Millhouse, One King Down and Crown of Thornz.

Millhouse, better known as the most satanic band on the face of the planet, bring their brand of scream core to their first valley appearance. Millhouse, who also hail from Long Island, feature Artie Phillie on vocals and are the closest thing to Born Against since... well Born Against. If you like loud, intelligent hardcore with a singer who turns crimson after the first song, be there on time. Millhouse just released their first full length on Exit Records.

Crown of Thornz, from New York City, go for a more melodic Burnish style of hardcore. Vocalist Lord Ezec, who started off as an Agnostic Front roadie, has taken his band to the level of one of the more respected bands in the scene. Their full length Mentally Vexed was well received by the hardcore community as it blended melodic hardcore with evil breakdowns that will get your booty shaking. Not being your typical band, their lyrics run the gamut from broken relationships to Kaiser Soze to the Juggernaut.

From Buffalo, One King Down (hey, what do you know an all–New York show!) boast a better record then the Bills as all their shows have been well received up here. One King Down are one of the few bands who have managed to take the Earth Crisis sound to a level that doesn't sound like a blatant rip–off. They have a full length Bloodlust Revenge available on Equal Vision Records.

Vision Of Disorder started off with a small following of faithful fans on the Island of Long. After the release of their split 7" with Loyal to None and a reputation for incredible live shows they began to take off. The vocals range from a brutal hardcore cry to more melodic callings intermittently. In fact it is the vocal stylings that have helped set the band apart from the crowd. After their contribution to the New York's Hardest compilation they really began to receive top billings.

Their classic EP Still on Striving For Togetherness records showcased the bands ability to write intelligent lyrics about the state of our society. Unlike most hardcore bands, V.O.D. are not merely pointing its collective finger in the name of teen angst they are asking us to question the roles we play in society and whether or not we should accept them. One of the band's biggest themes is not to conform and it comes through in their music as they do not conform to any traditional style of hardcore.

Last year V.O.D. released their self–titled debut on Supersoul Records. While the album was criticized for being over–produced, the bottom line was that you could still hear the song writing that made this band famous. It is because of that their live show is so important; when the songs are devoid of their studio tamperings you really hear that they are hardcore classics. The bottom line is that Vision of Disorder is one of the best live

Turn to VISION, page 6

COURTESY DOUG CURRAN

Trillian (Famke Janssen) and Finnegan (Treat Williams) trying to outrun sea creatures.

WELCOMING BACK STUDENTS

RETURN YOUR TEXTBOOKS WITH YOUR RECEIPT FOR A "NO QUESTIONS ASKED" REFUND THROUGH MONDAY FEBRUARY 9TH, 1998.

Beginning TUESDAY FEBRUARY 10 1998 textbooks from dropped courses must be returned with a sales receipt and an updated course schedule.

The schedule must be obtained from the registrar's office at Whitmore do not wait for them to mail.

New books must be in new condition. No marks, writing, water damage etc.

Any incorrect title purchased after FRIDAY FEBRUARY 10TH must be returned within 48 hours of purchase. Schedule, syllabus or other proof of incorrect purchases must be presented, along with sales receipt.

Remember the last day to return textbooks with no questions asked is MONDAY, FEBRUARY 9TH.

www.aux.umass.edu/textbookannex

UNIVERSITY ST AMHERST

Textbook Annex

www.aux.umass.edu/textbookannex

University Store • Textbook Annex

SAVE YOUR RECEIPT

Our Refund Policy

If you purchase [illegible] at the Textbook Annex and decide to drop it for a refund [illegible] day of classes [illegible] returned with the [illegible] receipt. [illegible] the book is new and unmarked.

1. Textbooks [illegible] during the month of [illegible] copy of your update [illegible] Any new books must be unmarked.

2. Receipts [illegible] be made, unless the sales receipt is [illegible]

3. [illegible] required for any refund transaction.

[illegible] weeks after the beginning of the semester [illegible] to purchase the books you need.

textbook annex

Spring '98 Schedule

We accept cash, personal check, Ucard,Visa, MasterCard as forms of payment.

We begin to return unsold books to the publishers in the middle of the semester. Students are encouraged to get the books they need for the semester as soon as possible after official enrollment in a course.

buyback

SECOND WEEK - February 2-6

Monday-Friday 9am - 5pm

Thereafter, Monday-Friday 9am-4pm at the Textbook Annex, beginning February 9, 1998

annex rush

Spring 1998 Book Rush Hours

Monday, Feb. 2 -Friday, Feb. 6 9am - 6pm

Thereafter - Monday - Friday 9am - 4pm

Highlights, lowlights on the tube

Tube Notes
with
Seema Gangatirkar

Just in time for the Winter Olympics, FOX television re- hashed the whole Nancy–Tonya thing (again!) yesterday in "The Women of '94 Revisited." The show was billed as a skating event and featured Nancy Kerrigan, Tonya Harding, Oksana Baiul, Josee Chouinard, Katarina Witt and Ekaterina Gordeeva. And, coups of coups, FOX actually got Kerrigan and Harding in the same room (gasp!) for an interview.

Not wanting to let CBS run away with all the glory of the Olympics, FOX did its best to grab some ratings. Why are viewers still interested in this scandal anyway? But a better question that begs to be asked is why oh why did Kerrigan agree to do this?

By the way, Harding's skating appearance was taped at another rink when the other skaters refused to skate at the same rink as Harding.

George Clooney, in pursuit of a big screen career á la David Caruso, may be leaving "ER" when his contract runs out at the end of the year and hence may not be heading with the rest of the cast into the next millennium. Clooney has starred in forgettable films such as Batman and Robin and mediocre ones like The Peacemaker and One Fine Day. Clooney, though, should take a good look at Caruso, who bailed from ABC's "NYPD Blue" in search of movie stardom. Caruso thunked painfully with Jade and is now starring in a new CBS drama "Michael Hayes."

Probably one of the best new shows on television is WB's "Dawson's Creek." The show airs 9 p.m. on Tuesdays and chronicles the lives of a group of high school sophomores, living in a Massachusetts coastal town. With the tangled web woven by these teens, you have to wonder where the parents are in this show.

ABC is still in trouble; the network only placed one show — "The American Music Awards" in the top 10 last week. But it was a good week for NBC. The peacock network placed its entire Thursday night line-up from "Friends" to "ER" in the top five for last week. Also making the top 10 was "Dateline." CBS came through with "Touched By An Angel," "60 Minutes" and the Sunday night movie, "The Love Letter."

Filming for a television movie based on the life of Princess Diana has begun. Amy Claire Seecombe has been cast to play Diana in "The People's Princess — A Tribute" while George Lakos will play Dodi Al Fayed. The movie will cover Diana's life from childhood until the moments just before her Mercedes enters the tunnel in Paris. Guess those television execs just couldn't wait to cash in on this. The movie will air in mid-April.

Just in time for February sweeps, "Melrose Place" will air a two–hour special episode on Monday. Ostensibly, Amanda (Heather Locklear) is supposed to get married on the show, but nothing is ever that simple on nighttime's trashiest soap. Be prepared for plenty of twists in the tale and screwy dialogue.

Trying to make the most of its Olympic coverage, CBS' "48 Hours" spent time with figure skaters Tara Lipinski, Ekaterina Gordeeva and Scott Hamilton for a behind the scenes look at the Olympics. And if you aren't sick of the figure skating coverage yet, you can always check out "Elvis on Ice" and "The Tour of Champions" airing on TBS.

In a piece of good news for ABC, Tim Allen has no plans to cancel "Home Improvement." Now in it's eighth season on the air, Allen believes the show still has a lot of ground to cover.

Leaving ABC at the end of the season will be Brett Butler's "Grace Under Fire." Also, the Disney–owned network is still debating whether to keep "Ellen" or not for next season.

Speaking of shows in trouble, NBC's "The Profiler" is still one of the most awful shows on television. Ally Walker brings a wide–eyed haunted look (kind of like a bad Scully imitation) in her job as a profiler for the FBI. The premise sounded good back in the fall of 1996 when NBC picked up the show, but in practice the show falls flat. Choppy editing, weird flashbacks, creepy MOs and complicated storylines just don't grab the attention.

A battle between good and evil rages on Comedy Central's "South Park." The show, which airs 10 p.m. Wednesdays, will feature all new episodes through February, starting with last Wednesday's showdown between Jesus and Satan.

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian columnist.

COURTESY CATHRINE WESSEL

Catch a rising star

Concluding a string of Saturday shows at Northampton's Iron Horse, Another Girl opens for Rubyhorse tomorrow night in a 10 p.m. show. Call 584–0610 for more information.

■ Deep Rising

continued from page 5

Basically, Deep Rising is a throw–back o the great B–movies of Roger Corman, Ed Wood and William Castle. If it had its way, it's the kind of movie that would insist every theater be equipped with blood to be sprayed into the audience every time someone is consumed.

Deep Rising is also the type of movie with character nicknames like "grease–monkey" and "chick with the muscles." It tries to be witty, cool and different without ever being remotely close.

In the film, a rogue hireling named Finnegan (Treat Williams) captains a speedboat destined for an unknown location, equipped with a half–dozen missiles and a band of military rejects straight out of Aliens. Meanwhile, a gargantuan pleasure ship is being attacked by a strange school of giant serpents, killing everyone on board in the process, except for selfish ship owner and a jewel thief named Trillian. Finnegan? Trillian? Somehow this sounds more like the sequel to Legends of the Fall than an action movie.

At the core of Deep Rising is the giant squid. an obvious computer generation but a big improvement over some other Alien clones like in The Relic. When the snake–like monster slithers around, director Stephen Simmers does a good job of creating some suspense. Of course, this only lasts about three or four minutes before it becomes tiresome. But he certainly finds lots of ways to have people die.

The no–star, no–talent cast features Goldeneye Bond girl Famke Janssen, who's terribly out of place here. Janssen looks like Face/Off's Gina Gershon but acts here more like a less girly Sandra Bullock. Djimon Hounsou, so good in Amistad, is wasted in a small role. Williams, who plays a much better corporate executive than a resourceful hero, takes the thankless good guy role. He has sleaze written all over his grin, which makes him hard to root for. His favorite saying is, "Now what?"

As the end of Deep Rising, only a few characters survive. They think they're safe, but suddenly a new terror haunts them. Yes, a sequel is left much room for.

"Now what?" indeed. D+

■ vision

continued from page 6

bands around and we should all be thankful to Scott Lee at Pearl Street for bringing us such a fine hardcore showcase.

Vision Of Disorder, Millhouse, Crown of Thornz and One King Down will be playing at Pearl Street in Northampton tomorrow night. The show is all ages, doors open at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $8 in advance and $10 at the door

The Madonna of the '60s returns

By John Rogers
Associated Press

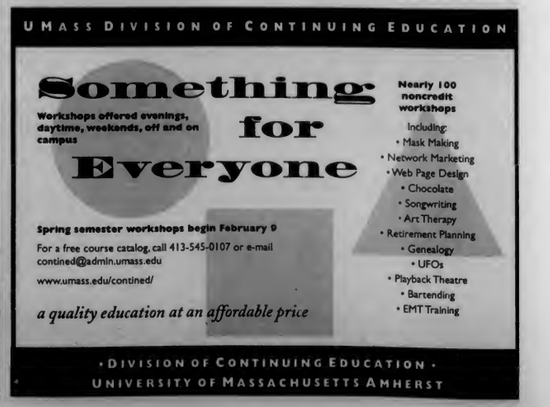
It was Wavy Gravy, that chronicler of strange counter-culture phenomena, who said the '90s are really just the '60s upside down. Turns out he may have been right.

How else could it be that Joan Baez and Bob Dylan would once again bring out two artistically powerful and critically acclaimed recordings at the same time?

"It's sort of amazing, isn't it?" asks Baez, before breaking into laughter, something she does often during a recent telephone interview from New York, where she was promoting Gone From Danger. Released in the last weeks of 1997, it is her first album of new material in five years. And by a strange twist of fate it has come out parallel with Dylan's Time Out of Mind.

"The same year, the same month," she continues in a voice filled with wonder and amusement. "I think it's basically a good thing. Here we are back in force; the old warhorses."

Not that Baez is feeling quite like an old warrior, or an old folkie, or even an old fogy these days. She has her own Web page, after all, where she posts poetry that she eventually plans to compile into a book. And she's planning a concert tour that will take her across Europe and the United States.



But, perhaps most important, the woman the '60s children called the Madonna, folk music's original "oh-so-stern Earth mother," says she is learning at last how to have fun.

So when you think of Joan Baez these days, she says, don't think of the sometimes preachy political leftist with the beautiful voice. Think instead of the Joan Baez who likes to horse around with friends and tell jokes — who always liked to tell jokes but often didn't have the nerve.

Turn to BAEZ page 7

■ Baez

continued from page 6

"I think in the early years I felt it was compulsory to be strident," says Baez, who turned 57 on Jan. 9.

"I was so afraid that if I wisecracked, people wouldn't think I was serious enough. I wish I had understood then about what fun it was to have fun. But I'm perfectly prepared to learn that now."

She's kept that stunningly lovely voice in perfect pitch over the years through constant practice. Indeed, her voice on Gone From Danger is no less the equal of Joan Baez in Concert, recorded for Vanguard 35 years ago. And there is a reason for that, she says.

"I was lucky for about the first 40 years. But then, about 18 years ago, I realized it wasn't going to be a free ride forever and I started seeing a vocal coach. And that's what it's been: practice, practice, practice. I practice daily or I wouldn't have any kind of a high range left."

On the road, she says, practicing hasn't always come easy. "I once had a hotel manager ask if there was a cat stuck in something," she says, dissolving into laughter again. "He said the neighbors were worried."

Life wasn't always so entertaining.

Born in New York to Quaker parents and raised mostly in California, she recalls growing up a lonely girl who soothed the emotional pain with music.

"I picked up a ukulele one day and discovered it would be easy for me to play and easy to sing," she says. "It eased the loneliness.

"I never had the slightest designs on being an entertainer," she continues. "I just sang. I sang rhythm and blues at first. And pop music. 'Earth Angel' was the first song I ever sang in public. Then Harry Belafonte. Then I moved on to Odetta, and then all the East Coast folk singers. And then I moved to Cambridge (Mass.) when I was 17, and that was where a lot of the big folk music boom started to happen."

Later, it was on to Greenwich Village, on to musical stardom and a tumultuous romantic relationship with Dylan in the early '60s.

"A couple times, just at folk festivals, we've run into each other in recent years," she says. "We've had a good chuckle talking about the old days."

Her stardom helped propel her to the forefront of the protest movement, and she marched for civil rights and against the Vietnam War. She did so much of that, she says, that when she decided to get serious about her musical career again in the '80s, "I didn't know what a battle it would be to insist on being more than a '60s legend."

She triumphed, in part, by turning to a new generation of young songwriters. Gone From Danger has contributions from such heralded singer-songwriters as Dar Williams and Richard Shindell, among others, and only one contribution from Baez.

She chose the music of others not so much to craft a new image, she says, as to ease out of writing music.

"I'm not trying to be cute here," she says adamantly. "I've written a couple of very good songs in my time. And I've written a lot of very mediocre songs. And it isn't what I really enjoy doing."

And there is so much else to do, anyway: tending her goats at her home in Woodside, Calif.; writing her poetry; keeping tabs on her son, Gabe Harris, a drummer who has been traveling the world in pursuit of his own musical muse.

As she looks back on her life, she sees so much that has changed and so much that hasn't.

"Yeah, I've changed," she finally says. "My principles really haven't budged much. The foundations are all rooted in nonviolence, and that hasn't changed. The major difference is in the last nine years I've dropped everything to pursue a musical career. I'd never done that before, and I think it shows."

Food for thought for dorm rooms

School's been back in session for almost two weeks now. Have you had enough of the D.C.'s gruel yet? If so, I can help.

Each week this semester, I'll be giving you my recipes for great tasting gourmet style food that can be made using only a hot plate, a toaster oven and a microwave with ingredients that are easily found in the local market (and in some cases, the convenience store!).

This week's installment will focus on the much loved — but often abused — boneless chicken breast. The problem with the chicken breast is two fold: first of all, everyone is scared to death of salmonella and thinks that they have to cook the thing to death to make it safe; second, because it has such a low fat content, all this cooking dries it out so it gets tough, stringy and inedible. I have the solution and it makes for a great dorm room delicacy.

Here's the deal. First, marinate the meat for a while in a flavorful, tenderizing bath, then cover it with a crunchy, protective coating and then bake it in a very hot oven for a short amount of time. This will result in an extremely tasty breast with a crispy exterior and a plump and juicy interior. For the marinade, I've combined yogurt, lemon juice and a curry powder and chili mixture to add a little punch to the relatively bland breast meat. For the topping, I've combined crushed potato chips, Goldfish crackers and pistachio nuts for a flavorful crunch.

This recipe has an Indian vibe, but I encourage you to take this method and try making up your own combination of ingredients for both the marinade and topping. And, as I am compelled to say, whenever and wherever you're cooking, think safety (and flavor) first. Have a fire extinguisher close by and be sure to provide for proper ventilation. Rock and boil!

The Dorm RoomGourmet

Potato Chip and Pistachio Coated Curried Chicken Breast

Ingredients:

4 whole boneless chicken breast fillets

for marinade
1 cup plain yogurt
3 tbs. olive oil
3 tbs. lemon juice
1 tbs. curry powder
2 tsp. chili powder
1/2 tsp. cayenne pepper
2 tsp. sugar
1 tsp. black pepper (for coating)
1 cup finely crushed plain style potato chips
1 cup finely crushed plain style goldfish crackers (or other plain cracker)
1 cup finely crushed pistachio nuts (unsalted)
1 tsp. curry powder
1 tsp. chili powder
1 tsp. black pepper

Procedure:

1) Mix the marinade ingredients together in a bowl and then submerge the chicken breasts in the goo. Cover the bowl and place in the fridge for 30 minutes to overnight. (The longer the meat marinates, the more tender and flavorful it will be.)

2) Preheat your (toaster) oven to 450 degrees. Place a metal rack on top of a baking sheet and grease it up with a little oil or butter.

3) Mix the topping ingredients together in a bowl. Take the chicken out of the marinade one piece at a time (don't wipe any of the marinade off the meat) and lay it in the crumb mixture. Turn the fillet over and coat the other side. Remove from the bowl and place on the rack.

4) Place the rack in the oven and roast the chicken until it is brown and crisp on the outside and just cooked all the way through (about 25-30 minutes). To prevent burning, check the chicken after 15 minutes — if they're getting too brown, lower the heat to 400 degrees and add an extra 5 minutes to the total cooking time.

5) Remove from the oven and serve with Basmati rice and some bottled mango chutney. Enjoy!

Louis Davis is a Collegian columnist. You can e-mail him with any culinary questions, or with any comments about this column at LouieXO@aol.com

Funny woman Tracey Ullman tackles society's taboo issues with wit & charisma

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Tracey Ullman takes on the great issues of the day.

One by one, she takes on pressing issues like religion and marriage, talent agents and smoking, and deftly polishes off each of them in 30 inspired minutes. Viewers looking for answers — and, more importantly, for laughs — should look for "Tracey Takes On...," in its third season on HBO airing Sundays at 10 p.m. EST. But right now, Tracey is taking on the tea just served in a posh Manhattan hotel.

"This is a Limoges teapot I'm holding here, made by the French, and the French hate the English," she says in her sassy, shrewd fashion. "There's no way you can make a decent cup of tea in a French teapot. 'Not the right thickness. And it's French! This place should really have English china."

Got that. Four Seasons? Ullman, of course, knows her tea, being British-born. But she belongs to the world. A self-declared actress, rather than comedienne or impersonator, she has the ability to embody breathtakingly different members of the human race regardless of color, creed, age or gender. In the tradition of Peter Sellers and Lily Tomlin, she is a channeler-chameleon.

These gifts she unleashes in "Tracey Takes On...," a weekly round of commentaries and sketches tied to the designated topic.

"I wanted lots of different themes on the subject every week," Ullman explains, "and therefore I needed to create this broad spectrum of characters. I create mindsets as need be."

This world of flesh-and-blood "mindsets" Includes a much-face-lifted TV has-been, an Asian doughnut shop owner, a gay flight attendant, a Middle-Eastern taxi driver, and an attack-dog attorney whose vanity plate reads "BITE ME."

Explaining the genesis of the attorney, Ullman says she wanted an aggressive career woman.

"But at first, it seemed she had no redeeming features — she's horrid, cold, impersonal."

Then Ullman discovered in Sydney Cross a humanizing trait — loneliness.

"She's so aggressive, and so ugly! She's got adult acne and her teeth are terrible!"

Ticking off Sydney's frailties, Ullman can't help laughing. "She became sort of appealing to me. All of my characters have a sadness or an inadequacy about them."

Yet Ullman never plays them to make fun of their shortcomings. All her progeny exhibit self-pride, however ill-advised it may be. Ullman may feel sorry for them, and the audience may feel sorry for them, but clearly they don't feel sorry for themselves.

There is no better example of this than Ruby Romaine, a boozy makeup artist who has been part of Hollywood since the Warner brothers were pups. With nothing in her life but pickled memories and an oafish son, Buddy, she's a great old broad who is never without a cigarette and an outrageous claim.

"I used this color on Eisenhower," slurs Tracey-as-Ruby, holding up a phantom tin of powder, "and it suited him very well. He was a very passionate lover, by the way."

Ullman laughs, as if she, too, had been listening to Ruby. Then she announces that in a future "Takes On..." segment, Ruby might get a hip replacement, and starts riffing again: "One of Buddy's friends there at the VA / 'cause we're not insured / he's gonna put a new hip in for me. They got use of one of those thea'ers, operating thea'ers. Nobody's gonna know about us. 'Course, I gotta recuperate at home. But. hell. it's not gonna cost us a penny!"

"I love being Ruby," says Ullman. "But I hate putting the makeup on."

Then she talks about Janie Pillsworth, her idea of a magazine editor.

"I love wearing her clothes, but she's such a bitch, and I tend to be a bitch when I'm her. Everyone on the set just hates her.

"Though I hate wearing a beard, I enjoy being Chic," she goes on, referring to her scruffy, loutish cabbie "He's so vile. So confident.

"But it's weird," she confides, "if I'm having my period when I'm one of my men characters," and then she cracks up at her candor. "It makes the workday SO bizarre!"

Bizarre, on top of breakneck-busy and sweltering, which you could say about the "Takes On..." shoot any workday. The series is filmed throughout the Los Angeles area, reports Ullman — except in the San Fernando Valley, which is where she draws the line.

"Not with the makeup I have to wear!" she exclaims. "Too hot! We don't go anywhere in the 818 area code. That's my rule for location managers: 213, 310, they're OK. But no 818!"

Affordable
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
Happy B'day Cards
Earrings
Rings Bracelets
T-Shirts
Posters
Candles
Chains Incense
Chinese Shoes
Socks Leather Sole
India Print Bedspreads
Sweaters
Dresses
Area Rugs
Baskets
Skirts
Mugs
Sale
20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The Mercantile
GreatGifts
Visa / MC
Th.Fri.9PM
Sun 12-5
Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St.
Amherst-Carriage Shops

Join QPE
QUEER PEER EDUCATION
1, 2, or 3 credits available
Today
Need to add a class?
Do you like to give workshops?
Are you creative and energetic?
Are you committed to educating others about health and wellness issues?
How about hosting safer sex parties?
Want to make a difference for you and your peers?
If you answered yes to any of these questions, call QPE Lauri today at 7-5252 or email lauri@educ.umass.edu
1, 2, or 3 credit independent studies are available.
Open to all 5-college students.

UVC-TV 19
is the place for you!!
Attend our general meeting Monday, February 9th at 7 pm in the UVC studio
(located to the right of the Hatch in the Student Union)
Find out about our workshops beginning this Tuesday and our job opening for Video Production Coordinator.
UMASS' only student run TV station

HEY!
Ski or Ride just $21
Bus + Lift Ticket Included
Daily Bus Leaves: UMass 9:55 am
Amherst Center 10:00 am
Arrive: Mt. Tom 10:35 am
Leave: Mt. Tom 4:30 pm
Arrive: UMass 5:10 pm
Mt. TOM
Peter Pan

University Health Services
Mental Health Groups Spring '98
MONDAY
THE DREAM, THE BODY AND THE HIDDEN PSYCHE
Explore how our dreams reflect the dynamics of our bodies and emotions. Topics include: dreamwork; family dynamics; psychosomatic process; health and the unconscious mind.
Mon., 9 -10 am., 3/2 - 4/13
INTERPERSONAL GROUP
For college men and women who experience difficulties in interpersonal connections or who have concerns about their relationships.
Mon., 3:45 - 5:00 pm., 3/2 - 5/11
SUPPORTING GAY, LESBIAN AND BISEXUAL IDENTITIES
Exploring such issues as: coming out; building community; dating relationships; family of origin; and stress management.
Mon., 3:45 - 5:00 pm., 2/23 - 4/13
WEDNESDAY
ADULT CHILDREN OF DYSFUNCTIONAL FAMILIES
This 8 week group is for individuals wanting to explore the impact of family relationships on their lives as UMASS students.
Wed., 3:30 - 5:00 pm.
MEN OF COLOR
Focus will be on the academic, interpersonal, social and dating dynamics of men of color. Identifying body image, self esteem, sexuality and the reactions of society will also be explored.
Wed., 3:45 - 5:00 pm., 2/25 - 4/1
MORE Groups Beginning IN LATE SPRING
545-2337
THURSDAY
COUPLES SKILLS GROUP
Improve your communication and conflict resolution skills, to help deepen your relationship.
Thur., 8:30 - 10:00 am.
WOMEN'S SELF EXPLORATION GROUP-
(For older undergraduates, graduate students, student dependents and Kaiser members)
This group provides an opportunity for women to explore personal relationships, work, studies, family of origin, health, acculturation and other relevant concerns. This group is ongoing with members added as space permits.
Thur., 9 - 10:30 am.
COED SELF-EXPLORATION GROUP
(For older undergraduates, graduate students, student dependents and Kaiser members)
This group provides an opportunity for men and women to explore their interpersonal relationships. This group is ongoing with members added as space permits.
Thur., 3:30 - 5:00 pm.
FRIDAY
UNDERGRADUATE WOMEN'S SELF EXPLORATION GROUP
Primarily focused on women with self esteem issues who want to explore how these issues may interfere with their ability to form satisfying interpersonal relationships.
Fri., 9 - 10:30 am., 2/13- 5/11
Groups are conducted by Mental Health Division staff. Group sessions are covered under UHS Basic Health Plan and Kaiser pre-paid plan. Groups require an initial screening appointment which can be arrang ed by calling 545-23 37 or by stopping at 127 Hills North
For further information please call 545-2337, Mon - Fri 8 am - 5 pm. or refer to the Mental Health website at http: www.umass.edu/uhs/mentalhealth

■ hockey

continued from page 12

ence coming up this month," O'Connor said. "We're going to have to rise to another challenge. There's no doubt that we need a win right now, and we just can't not have a good game against them.

"Our defensive effort will have to be outstanding."

Each game this upcoming month is important for the Minutemen, but the immediate task at hand is what to do with UNH before they play Lowell on Sunday. UMass will face the Wildcats three times in the next three weekends, and consequently, two areas must be addressed — UMass' performance on the power play and penalty kill units.

Going into this weekend's action, the Minutemen are ranked third in the conference with a 23.43 power play percentage, but are almost dead last in penalty killing with a 77.14 mark. If UMass can force UNH into committing penalties, the duo of senior forward Tim Lovell (8 goals, 12 assists) and senior defenseman Mike Gaffney can readily test the strong Wildcat man-down unit.

The Minutemen are coming into this game as the least penalized team in conference play, only giving up 16:39 of man-up advantage a game to their opponents. But, if they get trapped into committing infractions, the four-headed beast of Krog, Nolan, Bekar and Mowers can burn any team — even if their power play unit is not as strong as they desire (20.25 percent in conference play).

UMass coach Joe Mallen knows UNH will test whatever momentum the Minutemen have carried on from last weekend, and they need to take care defensively to succeed.

"At this point of the season, special teams really come into play," Mallen said. "Five-on-five, UNH is dangerous. But on the power play they're dangerous with their personnel, but they haven't been clicking. We need to keep up our clean play this season to succeed, and play great team defense.

"If we over-forecheck in that rink, we will get burned. No matter how we forecheck, we can not give up odd-man rushes to this team. No way, no how."

Factor into all of this Wildcat Sean Matile (18–5–1), one of the best goalies in the nation with a 2.42 GAA and a .914 save percentage and a tough home crowd that saw their team lose 3–1 to Maine last Sunday, and the first section of this three-part test will be a tough one for UMass.

COURTESY SANDY WRIGHT

This ain't no Ice Capades

Senior captain Sandy Wright and the UMass women's hockey team will face Troy Prep Saturday at the Mullins practice rink. For more info about club and intramural sports check out Sports Briefs in next week's Collegian.

LAUREN ROSATI / COLLEGIAN

And they're off!

The UMass men's swim team will compete in its final home dual meet of the season Saturday at Joseph R. Rogers Pool.

Bryant headlines old vs. new All–Star game Sunday

By Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

NEW YORK — This should be an All-Star game to remember, a crossroads event with subplot upon subplot in the media capital of the world.

Michael Jordan in his "last" All-Star game vs. Kobe Bryant in his first.

The league elders vs. the toddlers.

Grumpy George Karl vs. laid-back Larry Bird.

The slam-dunk contest vs. 2-ball.

It even has the David Stern vs. Latrell Sprewell sideshow.

"It's going to be fun. I can't wait. Talk about your emotions and adrenaline!" said Bryant, the 18-year-old Lakers reserve voted by fans into the starting lineup for the Western Conference as the youngest NBA All-Star ever.

The game, which tips off Sunday at 6:38 p.m. EST, looks like it may have some of the pizzazz that was missing the last couple of years in humdrum contests in the too-big Alamodome in San Antonio and the silent Gund Arena in Cleveland.

The New York Knicks' Madison Square Garden is known as the mecca of basketball and the game hasn't been in the Big Apple since 1968. Some 1,817 media credentials have been issued, scalpers have been demanding more than $1,000 for the best seats and even the players seem to be looking forward to it instead of secretly dreading the lost vacation time.

"It's going to be very exciting, given all the young players who have made the team," Jordan said. "Most of the old guys and some of the old faces have gone. It's like the changing of the times."

The East and West rosters feature players from different generations. There are elders in Jordan, Karl Malone, David Robinson and Reggie Miller; youngsters in Bryant, rookie Tim Duncan, Kevin Garnett and Antoine Walker; and three generations of 'tweeners: the Jason Kidd-Nick Van Exel-Vin Baker types; the slightly older Grant Hill-Penny Hardaway-Shaquille O'Neal set; and the early '90s Shawn Kemp-Glen Rice-Mitch Richmond crew.

Among the "old faces" Jordan was talking about are Patrick Ewing of New York (an 11-time All-Star); Charles Barkley (11), Hakeem Olajuwon (12) and Clyde Drexler (10), all of Houston; John Stockton of Utah (9), and Scottie Pippen (7) of Chicago.

Injuries and diminished vote totals kept all of them from making this year's cut, leaving their formerly automatic roster spots open to some of the league's most exciting newcomers.

Jordan and Utah's Malone are the oldest veterans on the All-Star team, and the seven first-timers are Bryant, Van Exel, Duncan, Walker, Steve Smith, Rik Smits and Jayson Williams.

"Charles is not there. Olajuwon is not there, Ewing's not there — all the guys who came up with me when we made the transformation from the Larry Birds and the Kevin McHales," Jordan said.

HOCKEY EAST

UMass HOCKEY

VS.

UMASS LOWELL RIVER HAWKS

SUNDAY FEBRUARY 8TH at the
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst

THIS WEEKEND, GET ON THE WAGON . . .

. . . THE UMASS HOCKEY BANDWAGON

■ basketball

continued from page 12

PAUL BRODEUR / COLLEGIAN

Tyrone Weeks is accustomed to battling for the ball, and he'll have to do so Sunday when the Minutemen travel to Xavier.

time at shooting guard — is tied for the team lead in scoring at 16.4 points and leads the team in three-point percentage at just under 40 percent.

Sharpshooter James Posey is another weapon for Xavier coach Skip Prosser. The sixth man scores over 16 points a game off the bench for the Musketeers.

"They are a well-balanced team," Flint said. "All of their guys do their jobs."

When the two teams met in Amherst last year, Carmelo Travieso's eight three-pointers helped UMass push Xavier to overtime. But the Musketeers were too strong, and they held on for an 87–84 victory.

Flint knows the outcome of Sunday's game may depend on the Minutemen's ability to knock down open shots and to free up space in the paint for Lari Ketner and Tyrone Weeks to do damage.

"We have to handle that press," Flint said. "If we give them easy baskets, it'll be a long day Sunday."

COURTESY XAVIER MEDIA RELATIONS

Gary Lumpkin will lead the Musketeers against UMass Sunday in Cincinnati.

With whole team ready, UMass heads to Rhody

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

This Saturday, the Massachusetts men's indoor track and field team will travel to Kingston, R.I. for a meet against the host Rams, Central Connecticut, New Hampshire and Hartford.

One week ago, the Minutemen locked horns with two of their four upcoming opponents, as they placed second behind the New Hampshire Wildcats and in front of Central Connecticut in a quad meet at UNH. During that meet, however, UMass lacked four of its premiere sprinters, leaving points open to be claimed by the Wildcats.

Senior Scott Price, who ranks first and third in school 200m times, led the talented 4x400m relay team to the Terrier Classic at Boston University on that same day, where they proceeded to break the UMass record in that event by nearly two whole seconds. Running on that relay team were junior Tom Toye, second on the school's list of top 200m performances and the record holder for the 400m dash, classmate Neil Concepcion. Massachusetts' leading quarter miler this season, and standout freshman Marc Sylvander, a consistent scorer in the middle distance sprints.

Without these valuable weapons, UMass was unable to overcome a solid New Hampshire team, whose main strengths were in those vacated sprinting events.

This coming weekend, however, the Minutemen will come with all guns loaded, as their exceptional sprinters will return refreshed to join the respectable crew that met the Wildcats on Jan. 31. Senior distance runner Ryan Carrara, junior hurdler Ben Barakdi, sophomore thrower Vic Morency and pole vaulter Albie Vasquez carried the team last week, as Massachusetts recorded impressive team outings in the long distance and throwing events. The outcome of this meet will set the tone for the Valentine Invitational to be held on Feb. 14 in Boston, where the Minutemen will again be tested by some of the best runners in the nation.

■ horn

continued from page 12

ing an inner-tube over the guy (or girl, you never know in those costumes).

The Hawk answered back and hi-jinx ensued. And the Ram was relieved of his duties. I don't understand, stuff like this is great to get the crowd really going. I personally would have paid money to see this.

• Speaking of money, the Red Sox signed Jeff Frye. I am quite happy with this arrangement, since the second baseman once won me $20 in a bet with several other sportswriters.

• Nancy and Tonya. Enough already. It was interesting four years ago, now it's something geared more for Jerry Springer. Actually, it was geared toward Jerry Springer four years ago, too.

• If you want an interesting spin on the women on ice theme, check out the women's hockey in this year's Olympics. The United States and Canada are considered contenders, so it should be interesting to watch.

• And if that doesn't get you, curling is a full medal sport this year!

Michael Kobylanski is a Collegian columnist

UMass Student Legal Services Office

FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

The Collegian
likes basketball.
Basketball is a Sport.
You like basketball.
You should write for Sports!

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Daily 7 & 9:20 at your favorite theatre for viewing.
"Smart and Touching With a Very Warm Heart!"
ROBIN WILLIAMS MATT DAMON
GOOD WILL HUNTING
THE NEW FILM BY GUS VAN SANT
ACADEMY MUSIC NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

amc
Hampshire 6 •584-7550
Hampshire Mall
Great Expectations (R)
Today at 5:00 7:50 10:40 • Sat 1:10 5:00 7:50 10:40 • Sun 1:10 5:00 8:30 • Mon-Thurs 5:30 8:30
Replacement Killers (R)
Today at 5:30 8:20 10:50 • Sat 1:40 5:30 8:20 10:50 • Sun 1:40 5:30 8:40 • Mon-Thurs 5:30 8:40
Spice World (PG)
Today at 5:20 8:10 10:50 • Sat 1:30 5:20 8:10 10:50 • Sun 1:30 5:20 8:40 • Mon-Thurs 5:30 8:40
Titanic (PG 13)
Today at (4:00) 8:30 • Sat 12:10 4:00 8:30 • Sun 12:10 4:00 8:10 • Mon-Thurs 4:20 8:10
Good Will Hunting (R)
Today at (4:50) 7:40 10:30 • Sat 1:00 4:50 7:40 10:30 • Sun 1:00 4:50 8:20 • Mon-Thurs 5:20 8:20
Deep Rising (R)
Today at (5:10 8:00 10:40 • Sat 1:20 5:10 8:00 10:40 • Sun 1:20 5:10 8:30 • Mon-Thurs 5:40 8:30
Special Engagement, No Passes or Coupons
$3.50 (Two Like Show Only)
Mt. Farms 4 •584-9153
Mt. Farms Mall
Wag The Dog (R)
Today at (5:20 8:10 10:50 • Sat 2:00 5:20 8:10 10:50 • Sun 2:00 5:20 8:40 Mon-Thurs (5:50 8:40
Desperate Measures (R)
Today at (5:30 8:20 10:50 • Sat 2:00 5:30 8:20 10:50 • Sun 2:00 5:30 8:40 • Mon-Thurs (5:50 8:40
As Good As It Gets (PG-13)
Today at (5:00 7:50 10:40 • Sat 1:40 5:00 7:50 10:40 • Sun 1:40 5:00 8:20 • Mon-Thurs 5:30 8:20
Blues Brothers 2000 (PG-13)
Today at (5:10 8:00 10:40 • Sat 1:50 5:10 8:00 10:40 • Sun 1:50 5:10 8:30 • Mon-Thurs (5:40 8:30

catch the sun at
REGENCY HAIRSTYLISTS 253-9526

SPRING BREAK
BEST PARTIES
CANCUN JAMAICA FLORIDA
BEST PRICE
Call today!! Space is limited
1 800 648-4849
STUDENT TRAVEL SERVICES
On campus call Shanthi Orlan @413-546-3142

EMERGENCY MEDICAL TRAINING
•by Human Services Training Consultants, Inc.
•Part Time Evening
•Classes start February 9, 1998
•Call UMASS, Continuing Education at 545 - 0474

YOUR ♥ IS IN THE RIGHT PLACE WHEN YOU SHOP AT ATKINS
Send Your Sweetie Something Wonderful from Atkins . . .
Fragrant Flowers
Adorable Teddy Bears
Yummy Cookie Trays
Healthy Fruit Baskets
Sumptuous Fudge
Lovely Gift Baskets
Delicious Cakes
Visit Atkins Flower Shop for just the right way to say "I Love You"
Roses, Bouquets and Arrangements
We Deliver To The Surrounding Area
ATKINS FARMS Country Market
Rte. 116 & Bay Road, South Amherst, MA
(413) 253-9528 • (800) 594-9537

What's cheaper than a card?
Healthier than candy?
Comes in lots of colors?
Can be funny, cute or sexy?
CONDOMGRAMS!
Send one to that special someone.
Campus Center - 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.
Monday - February 9
Wednesday - February 11
Thursday - February 12
Sponsored by your Peer Health Educators
Health Education Division • University Health Services

LS
COKE 16oz. $2.*
MILLER LITE DRAFT THE BIG ONE 20oz $1.
BUCKET OF ROCKS 4 12oz. ROLLING ROCKS AND A FREE T-SHIRT $6.99
FRIDAY NIGHT MILLER LITE PROMOTION T-SHIRTS - PRIZES
THURS-FRI-SAT DANCING
BEAT THE COVER NO COVER BEFORE 10PM fun•food•spirits
THE PUB
amherst
15 EAST PLEASANT STREET

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

$ WIN MONEY $
Win $ in the Central Area Battle of the Bands on March 6th. Demo tapes due by Feb 18. One member must be a Central Resident. Contact Chris 6-2189, Nick 6-5694

PERFORMING ARTS DIVISION offers Group and Private Instruction in Music, Theater, and Dance. PAD is located in the New Continuing Ed Bldg. on the corner of Fearing and N. Pleasant Streets, rooms #208 and 210. Info call (413)545-0519

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Single room apartment at Cliffside. Available Feb onward. All utilities included. $540/month. Please call Robin at 865-1281

3rd Floor 2 bedroom apartment available Feb 1. Heat/Hot Water + Cooking Gas included $815/month. Please contact Andrew Newcomb. 549-0600

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Toyota Tercel 94 Good condition. Extandad Dealer is Guaranty. $7500. Call 546-2430

88 Toyota Corolla 5 speed. Good condition. 149k. $2200. Call 256-1767

IT'S COMING...

AUTO FOR SALE

1989 BMW 325i Navy blue/gray interior, new tires, highway miles. Excellent student car. Runs great. $4500 or B/O. Call 546-5536

1987 Pontiac Bonneville Great condition, many new parts. Must sell. $1200. Call anytime. 546-6342

86 Chevy Cavalier Good running car. Very reliable. Has new brakes, tires, radiator. Replaced angina and rebuilt alternator about 2 years ago. Selling for $1200 ($300 below NADA). Call 546-3842

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday 1-800-649-4795

CHILDCARE

Childcare Needed for bright, easy-going 13 month old girl in our home for 8-9 hours a week. Close to campus. 548-7061

COMPUTERS

Intel Pentium Pracessor 90MHz with haatsink and fan. Brand new, never used! No floating point division operation error. 1 year factory warranty. $ 9 0 hbarratt@student.umass.edu 549-4797

EMPLOYMENT

Whitewater Raft Guides Needed in Western MA. Full or Part-time available. No experience necessary. Wa will train. Looking for athletic, personable people who like to work hard in the outdoors. Call Crab Apple Whitewater (413)339-0188 for more information and an application

EMPLOYMENT

Fall-Time Summer Position Availabis at Crab Apple Whitewater for a Photo Technician at our Minilab. Job entails developing film and printing pictures. No experience necessary but some past use of lab helpful. Call (413)339-0188 for info and an application.

HAVE AN AMAZING SUMMER! Prestigious coed camp in Massachusetts seeks caring, motivated college students who love kids! GENERAL & SPECIALTY COUNSELORS needed. Join a dedicated, fun team! Competitive salaries. Camp Taconic. 1-800-762-2820

EXCEPTIONAL SUMMER OPPORTUNITY- Camp Wayne, NE PA (Shrs/NYC)- Sports oriented. Counselor/Spacialists for all Land/Water Sports including Tennis, Camping, Climbing/Ropas, Mountain Biking, Rockerry, Roller Hockey, Sailing/Waterskiing, A&C, Drama, Radio, Video. Campus Interviews Tues. March 3rd. Please call 1-888-737-9295 or 516-883-3067. Leave your name, phona numbar and mailing address.

Off-Campus Meal Plan in exchange for light kitchen work. 549-4052

Needed: EMT's Must have current CRR certification. Must attend mandatory training session Feb.8 @ 2:00pm. (Will last no mora than 4 hours). General Meeting after @ 7:00pm Location: Morrill IV N406 Questions? Call 545-1885

Valentine's Day Special Issue...

EMPLOYMENT

MAINTENANCE PERSON Brandywine Apartments in Amherst. Full-time. General maintanance skills including electrical, plumbing, carpentry and ceramic tile work necessary. Must live on site. Duties include after hours "call" on rotating basis. Competitive salary with benefits, including apartment. Send resuma to 18G Brandywina Dr., Amherst, MA 01002. Or call: (413)549-0600. Fax (413)549-1319

Activist JOBS FOR THE ENVIRONMENT
Work with the Sierra Club on an urgent endangered species campaign.
Part-time available
Great for students
$50-$75 a day
Call Kate 256-6434

NEW STUDENTS PROGRAM seeks extroverts from '98-'00 Class with 2.5+ GPA. May 27 to July 18. Salary, room, meals, health coverage. Apply 307 Admissions Center. Deadline Feb 6.

CRUISE SHIP & LAND-TOUR JOBS Discover how to work in exotic locations, meet fun people, while earning a living in these exciting industries! For more information: 517-324-3092 Ext C50012

FOR RENT

SUMMER RENTALS
CAPE COD GROUP Summer Rentals- Sama waterfroat houses, some with swimming pools. Faimouth area. Diamond Real Estate (508)477-1900

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Free delivery 253-9747

FOR SALE

Full Size Futon Used one semester. $150/BO. 546-4841

FURNITURE

Futon Twin size, brand naw. $100. (413)256-3527, 5-5547

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Acupuncture and Herbal Medicine National Board Certified Licensed. 549-6542

INSTRUCTION

University Bartending Course 50% Student Discount. National Certification Available. Spring Sessions This Semester. Space Is Limited. 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

LOST

A Gold Cross with blua and white inlay. Sentimental value. Reward. Plaasa call Laura at 546-0851

MISCELLANEOUS

Matants Against Majority Organization is an assault on conformity. Booga

FREE T-SHIRT + $1000
Credit Card fundraisers for fraternities, sororities & groups
Any campus organization can raise up to $1000 by earning a whopping $5.00/VISA application
Call 1-800-932-0528 ext 65
Qualified callers receive
FREE T-SHIRT.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

For Sale- Oldjerlde Hand made, hand painted, by student. $20 with lesson. 253-7342

MUSICIANS WANTED

BARBERSHOP QUARTET FORMING No haircutting involved, just solid acapella singing. Call Daniel, 665-7581.

PERSONALS

"Wa've got a groovy kind of love"- Phil Collins. Frae lova and valentinas at www.studentadvantage.com/qpid

ROOM FOR RENT

One bedroom available in Puffton Village. $257.50 per month. 1st and last month's down. Must be responsible, considerate, and like to party but still get work done. Call Jay, Jill, or Rob @ 549-7203

One bedroom in 3 bedroom apt in Northampton. $300+/month. 10 min to downtown. Nice and cozy. Call 586-5016

ROOMMATE WANTED

One bedroom in two bedroom apartment. Sugarloaf Estates On PVTA. Utilities included. Available NOW. 665-3295

Looking for roommate to shara three bedroom apartment Call 549-5596

Place your Classified SOON !

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

STEREO &CD EQUIP

Car Audio Equipment for low, low prices. Face Off Cassetta $45. Woofers- All sizes, from $40. Kicker Boxers from $60. Bass Tubes, Door Speakers, 700W Bassbox, House Speakers 700W, Amps and Wirekits. Everything Wholesale!!! Call 253-4855 and ask for Jake.

Car Stereo Equipment
Kanwood Datach Face- 1 year old, paid $350. 1 amp 100x2, paid $150. 1 amp 100x4, paid $100. 1 pair Pioneer 6x8 speakers, 100w, paid $110. Whole system sounds great, needs nothing. Selling as package deal for $300. Call 546-3842.

Tascam Multitrack Recorder 4 track mixing board and recorder. Only 8 months old. Received a 24 track as a gift over break. Will include 1 mic, never been used; 4 professional recording tapes. Paid $550, will sell for $330. Call 546-3842

TICKETS

Sarah McLachlan/ Billy Joel/ NCAA Men's Basketball: 2 Guys Tickets. 1-888-345-TIXX

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK 98
Free food and drinks! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica and Florida from $399. Organize a small group and travel FREE! Highest commissions and lowest prices. Call Surf & Sun Tours to become a campus representative (800)574-7577

Spring Break '98 Get Going!!! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida Group Discounts & Free Drink Parties! Sell 5 & go free! Book Now!!! Visa/MC/Disc/Amex 1-800-234-7007 http://www.endlessSummertours.com

Have you waited this long to make Spring Break plans? It's not too late! Choose Sunsplash Tours- Call Michelle 256-8217

TEXTBOOKS

ENGIN TEXTBOOKS for Chem 111-112. Chem 225, Chem 261-262. Physic 151-152. Engin 191A; ResEc 102 & notebooks. 546-3116

Valentine's Day Issue Deadline is Feb. 10 !

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be preapproved by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used as personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed on personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Collegian does not disregard any personals. Any inappropriate personals will be rejected.
5. Personals are screened for derogatory names and get acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Personals may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the classified order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number will be recorded on the classified order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to sanctions under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

NEW Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
AUTO PARTS
CHILDCARE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
COMPUTERS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FURNITURE
GREEK ANNOUNCEMENTS
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HEALTH & BEAUTY
HOUSES FOR RENT
HOUSES FOR SALE
HOUSESITTING
JEWELRY
INSTRUCTION
LOST & FOUND
3 DAYS FREE
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MISCELLANEOUS FOR RENT
MOTORCYCLES
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
MUSIC LESSONS
MUSICIANS WANTED
PERSONALS
PETS FOR SALE
RESUMES
RIDES WANTED
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SPORTS
STEREO & CD EQUIP.
SUMMER SUBLET
TELEVISIONS FOR SALE
TICKETS
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
TUTORING SERVICES
TUTOR WANTED
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED GENERAL
WORLD WIDE WEB
YARD SALES

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, FEB. 6

Auditions— Auditions for the UMass Theatre Guild's production of Jesus Christ Superstar will be held at 7 p.m. in Campus Center room 101. For more information, call Kristina at 545-0415.

Meeting— There will be a Tibetan Students Association meeting at 6 p.m. in Campus Center 165-169. New members are welcome.

Performance— There will be a performance by pianist Mr. Luke Henderson of classic American tunes at 3:30 p.m. in the Graduate Lounge.

SATURDAY, FEB. 7

Auditions— Auditions for the UMass Theatre Guild's production of Jesus Christ Superstar will be held at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. in Campus Center room 101. For more information call Kristina at 545-0415.

SUNDAY, FEB. 8

Auditions— "Mass Hysteria," UMass' "Saturday Night Live"– type show will be holding auditions at 11 a.m. in the UVC–TV 19 Studio. For more information contact Josh at 548–9337.

Meeting— The Socialist Party USA, Western Mass. Local, will hold a meeting at 7:30 p.m. at the Bangs Center, Boltwood Walk, Amherst. For more information call 367–9356.

MONDAY, FEB. 9

Meeting— S.H.A.R.E. community service organization will be holding an informational meeting at 6 p.m. outside of room 504 Goodell. There will be free pizza.

Meeting— UVC–TV 19 is having its first general meeting of the semester at 7 p.m. in the studio, located at 216 Student Union. For more information call 545–1336.

TUESDAY, FEB. 10

Meeting— The Ballroom Dancing Club will meet from 5:30–7 p.m. in Totman 101. No experiences is necessary. For more information, contact Shannon at 546–2253.

NOTICES

Writing — Spectrum Magazine is taking submission for the next edition of the magazine. The deadline is Feb. 12. For more information, call the office at 545–2240 or come by in the Student Union, room 406E.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Collegian Graphics

"we just work here."

and only on weekdays...

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	17 HSCN Programming
3	CBS/3 Hartford	18 TV–19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20 ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	22 NBC/22 Springfield
6	PBS/57 Springfield	23 CNN
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	24 CNN SI
8	UPN/20 Hartford	25 Headline News
9	Weather Channel	26 UCTV
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27 TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28 BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29 TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30 Univision
14	International	31 Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32 Cartoon
		33 Much Music

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 6, 1998

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	3	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Connecticut Journal		McLaughlin	Religion	Nova "Animal Hospital"
WFSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Insids Edition	Real TV	Olympic Winter Games (Live)						News / Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Olympic Winter Games (Live)						News / Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Sabrina-Witch	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Teen Angel	20/20		Nightline
WLVI	6		Full House	BoyWorld	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	"The Marrying Man" (1991, Comedy) Alec Baldwin,				News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy	Dateline (In Stereo)		"Passenger 57" (1992, Drama) Wesley Snipes,				News / Tonight Show
WTXX		6	Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	"Gone With the Wind" (1939, Drama) Clark Gable,				News	Grace Under	Vibe
WVIT		10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Dateline (In Stereo)		"Passenger 57" (1992, Drama) Wesley Snipes,				News / Tonight Show
WTIC	61	11	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	Beyond Belief: Fact or Fiction		Millennium "The Mikado"		News		Seinfeld / Deep Space 9
WWLP	61	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy	Dateline (In Stereo)		"Passenger 57" (1992, Drama) Wesley Snipes,				News / Tonight Show
WGBY	61	6	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Stats We're In	This Week	Record Row: Cradls of R&B		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	28	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Sabrina-Witch	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Teen Angel	20/20		News / Nightline
WSBK	40		Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	"Ghost" (1990, Fantasy) Patrick Swayze, Demi Moore,					News	M.A.S.H. / Neil TV
WTBS	40		Family Matters	Family Matters	Andy Griffith	Andy Griffith	"Taking Care of Business" (1990, Comedy) James Belushi, Charles Grodin,				"Dragnet" (1987, Comedy) Dan Aykroyd,
A&E	41		Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Virtue"		Biography: Lawrence Welk		America's Castles		20th Century		Law & Order "Apocrypha"
CNN	43	23	Worldview		Moneyline	Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Rus. / Moneyline
COM	44	36	"Life in Smoke" (1978, Comedy) Thomas				"Dirty Rotten Scoundrels" (1988, Comedy) Steve Martin,				"Porky's" (1981, Comedy) Dan Monahan, Mark Herrier,
DISC	45		Wings "The Valiant Few" (R)		Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery		News	World-Word	Anatomy of an Alien (R)		Justice Files (R)
ESPN	46		Up Close	Sportscenter	Winter Olympics Edition.		NASCAR's 50-Year Victory		NASCAR 50th: 24 Hours of Daytona Highlights				Sportscenter
LIFE	47		Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Crisis Unheard: The Donna Yeakich Story" (1994, Jaclyn Smith,				Great Lifetime Makeover (R)
MTV	48		MTV Live (In Stereo)		My So-Called Life (In Stereo)		News	Beavis-Butt.	Yo! (In Stereo)		Top Ten Videos of the Week		Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	49		Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Kablam!	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	I Love Lucy	M.T. Moore	Taxi / Newhart
SCIFI	50		Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Night Stalker	Sentry	American Gothic "Pretty Boy		"Cat People" (1982, Horror) Nastassia Kinski,				Night Stalker / Sentry
TLC	69	26	Renovation	Renovation	Home Again	Home Again	Real America: 48 Hours		John Dillinger (R)		Human Animal: A View		Real America: 48 Hours (R)
TNT	45		Lois & Clark-Superman		Babylon 5 (In Stereo)		"Above the Rim" (1994, Drama) Duane Martin, Leon,				NBA All-Star Friday		"Heaven Is a Playground"
USA	51		Baywatch "Trading Places"		Highlander: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger		"Cape Fear" (1991, Suspense) Robert De Niro, Nick Nolte, (In Stereo)				"Separate"
HBO	49		"Cold Paradise" (1995, Comedy) Robin Williams, PG-13				"Sleepers" (1996, Drama) Kevin Bacon, Robert De Niro, (In Stereo)						Boxing: William Guthrie vs. Reggie Johnson.
MAX	48		(4:30)		"Sop" (1996) Mario Van Peebles. PG-13		"Get on the Bus" (1995, Drama) Richard Belzer.
SHOW	55		(5:45) "Shadows" (1992, Adventure) Robert Redford. PG-13				"Robocop 3" (1993) Robert John Burke. (In Stereo) PG-13				Stargate SG-1		Outer Limits (R) (In Stereo)

Bruno By C. Baldwin

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Non Sequitur By Wiley

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Deadpan Taxi By C. Jones

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Vegan Cheese By Elise Checile

Absolute Zero* By Brad Turner

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan 20.–Feb. 18) — You may have the chance to do something for someone else today that brings you a good deal of notoriety. Do not let it go to our head!

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — Someone may bring you news today that has you both eager and hesitant at the same time. You may be thrust into something new, yet familiar.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — This is a good day for making promises to someone who has been waiting quite some time for a commitment of a special kind.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — Interaction with someone relatively new in your life is likely to introduce you to a new way of doing things that proves exciting and profitable.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — A battle of wills ensues today after an argument introduces two conflicting points of view. It will be up to you to suggest a compromise.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — Take the time to reassess your position today. It could be that you've overlooked something that others think is painfully obvious.

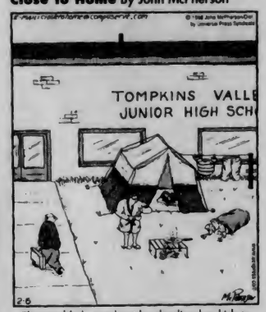
LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — Something is troubling you, but you don't know how to talk about it with the one person who can help. Do not try to be clever, be open and honest.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You may come under fire today for a decision you made under a good deal of pressure. Make amends when you can, but stay the course for now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — Take a break from routine today and explore an option introduced to you by a friend who wants to see you extend yourself more.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You won't have all the answers today, but you can help those around you ask better questions. In the end, you can gather plenty of information.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You may be a bit too concerned with how you compare to someone who has been around longer than you. You still have time to develop.



CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You may hear from someone today who has kept his or her distance — for a very good reason. By day's end, you'll understand a great deal more.

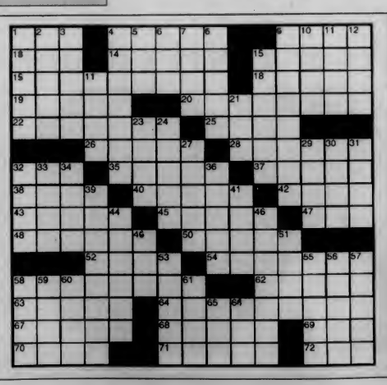
Quote of the Day

"Just because it hasn't been done before, doesn't mean that it's a good idea..."

–Donk

Close to Home By John McPherson

Thoroughly burned-out by shuttling her kids to and from school activities, Shelley makes a drastic move.



ACROSS
1 Tea holder
4 Cheer at the Met
9 "Fernando" group
13 100%
14 Sea duck
15 House part
16 Trinidad musicians
18 Concorde, e.g.
19 African village
20 Went flat
22 Briefcase
25 Bridle part
26 Was optimistic
28 Lure
32 Cove
35 Mountain-climber's aid
37 Kind of wave
38 Curved molding
40 Healed
42 Machine parts
43 Some exams
45 Actress Laurie
47 Meadow
48 Defense skill
50 Oregon capital
52 Baby powder
54 Citrus drink
58 Battle Napoleon lost
62 Nile dam
63 Out of the way
64 Advantage
67 Movie spouts
68 Cook's tool
69 Frozen surface
70 —, Queen of Scots
71 Timidly
72 Senator Kennedy

DOWN
1 Barrels
2 Very very
3 Skirt feature
4 Hotel employee
5 Umbrella part
6 Nabokov novel
7 Peddle
8 Respond to the waiter
9 — Ocean
10 Gravy dish
11 — up: review
12 Copied
15 First-aid device
17 Apiece
21 Lawyer's price
23 Heroic story
24 Pause
27 Rock's frequent co-star
29 Object of devotion
30 Zoo enclosure
31 "Born Free" lioness
32 Library item
33 Taj Mahal site
34 Calendar period
36 Katmandu's land
39 Jubilantly
41 Where to buy pastrami
44 Rubbernecks
46 Wed again
49 Annex
51 Netting
53 Brilliant moves
55 Be ready for
56 Twist or bossa nova
57 Finished
58 Affectionate
59 On the Adriatic
60 Row
61 Bright-colored fish
65 Use a crowbar
66 Slippery one

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

A	M	E	N		S	P	R	A	T		D	R	A	Y
A	R	I	A		M	O	O	C	H		I	A	G	O
I	G	O	R		I	N	N	E	R		A	J	A	R
D	I	S	C	O	R	D		D	E	C	L	A	R	E
			I	N	K			F	R	E
G	E	A	S	E		J	A	B		E	D	I	T	S
O	L	L	I	E		M	E	N	A	G	E		M	E
G	A	L	I	F	O	R	N	I	A	P	O	P	P	Y
O	N	A		B	A	R	I	T	Y		K	L	E	E
A	D	I	E	U		Y	E	S		F	L	Y	E	R
		V	I	M			V	I	A
W	I	R	E	T	A	P		R	I	G	H	T	E	D
A	T	O	N		J	U	L	E	P		O	O	Z	E
S	E	L	L		O	P	T	I	N	E		M	A	R
P	R	E	Y		R	A	Z	O	R		A	D	A	M

2-6-98 © 1998 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Cheesey Chicken Casserole w/ Cheese
Hot Beef in a Hot Sandwich
Battered Fish in Fish Batter menus are stupid
DINNER
French Fried Chicken
Stuffed Shells in Stuff Sauce
High Stake Grilled Steak Sandwich
...you can't have any pudding!

Worcester
LUNCH
HAM radio burger
Krabby Cake Sand Witch
Raditore/Tomato or Alfredo Sauce
Harvest Burger & Vegan Falafel Sandwich
DINNER
Rotisserie (basketball?) Glazed Chicken
Scrumptious Shrimp Scampi Pasta
Vegetable Gumbo Casserole w/ Vegies
50% Time Deli

Hampshire
LUNCH
Burger (of cow)
Cheese (grilled)
Captains Catch (fish)
(things in parentheses are seldom important)
DINNER
Rip Roarin' Rotisserie Glazed Chicken
Stupendous Stuffed Shells in Sauce
Fabulous Fettucini Alfredo
Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Berkshire
LUNCH
Krabbycake Sandwich (w/ Krabby Cakes)
Grilled Cheese on Bread
Chef's Grilled Cheese on Bread Garnish
Ratatouille without Beef
DINNER
Rotisserie Glazed Chicken w/o Raisins
Peculiar Pineapple Ham Steak
Very Vegie Gumbo Casserole
pastabilities: Stuffed Shells in Sauce

Night Editor: Seema Gangatirkar
Photo Technician: John Burt
Copy Editor: Melissa Tauber
Production Supervisor: Leon Latino
Production Staff: Matt Wolzver

SPORTS

What's the world coming to when mascots fight?

All good things must come to an end.

And with that cliche came Temple's thumping of the Massachusetts men's basketball team on Tuesday night. The game was practically a mirror image of the clash against UConn in December. The shots weren't falling and the end result was unpleasant.

But hey, better now than in the NCAA tournament. A tough loss against a quality opponent may have been just what the doctor ordered for a UMass team that may have been riding too high on its laurels following its victory over Dayton on Sunday.

Nevertheless, UMass basketball is back. A 10-game winning streak

Around the Horn

(before Tuesday's loss), a spot in the AP Top 25, and its first-place standing in the Atlantic 10 all attest to that.

Now all we can do is look towards the final month of the regular season and hope for a trip to San Antonio.

• This Casey Martin situation is really starting to annoy me. The kid can play. I don't really care about golf, but I can sympathize with Martin. Just let the kid play in the PGA.

• The Olympics are right around the corner. Nagano appears to be ready to put on a great show. I wonder who or what is going to become the story of this Olympics? Will it be out of a fairy tale, like the 1980 U.S. hockey team or Dan Jansen finally getting his gold medal? Or will it be out of a nightmare, like the tragedy in Munich or the bombing in Atlanta? We'll just have to wait and see.

• The Yankees went with another proud move this week by hiring Brian Cashman. This guy is still in diapers as far as general managers are concerned, and will surely be fired within two or three years.

That's just the way things work with George Steinbrenner. This man does not know how to run a team. He did not bring a championship to New York in 1996, his players did. Talent wins championships, not ownership.

• In keeping the theme of terrible owners, Jerry Jones has no idea what is going on with his team. Hey Jerry, make up your mind and pick a coach. Your team is still a bunch of washed up head cases, and your dynasty is over. Go find Raymond Berry and put him at the helm.

• The Lakers made their claim as one of the NBA's elite by blowing out the Bulls last weekend. They proved that they are a team of young guns who have the capability to beat anyone. I know that it's still not even the All-Star break yet, but don't be surprised if L.A. makes a run to the finals come June.

• The NFL had its Pro Bowl in Hawaii last weekend. Who cares. The game was, and has always been, a joke. Just look at it this year. Warren Moon got the game's MVP award. Enough said.

• Proving once again that bureaucrats have no fun, University of Rhode Island officials have fired the school's mascot after it attacked a rival mascot during a game this week.

Well known in college hoop circles for its incessant wing– flapping, the St. Joesph's Hawk was apparently somewhat annoying to URI fans this week. So the Ram took matters into his own hands and tried to put the kibosh on the wing– waving by toss-

Turn to HORN, page 9

Women's hoop looks to continue winning ways at home

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

It has been a season of ups and downs for the Massachusetts women's basketball team. Tonight it looks to keep things on the upside when it hosts Atlantic 10 foe St. Bonaventure at 7 p.m.

The Bonnies (13–9, 5–5), will present a tough challenge for the Minutewomen (11–9, 5–5). They bring a gritty style of play that will keep UMass on It's toes.

"They are a very good team, they are extremely feisty," coach Joanie O'Brien said. "They scratch and claw, they do whatever they can."

UMass is coming off of a thrashing of Rhode Island on Wednesday, where it won, 62–43. The Minutewomen had a slow first half, and went into halftime with only a one–point lead. But they came out with more intensity in the second and proceeded to put the Rams away.

After changing leads five times in the opening minutes, the Minutewomen finally pulled ahead 39–35 with a layup from rookie guard Kathy Coyner at 8:59. From there UMass put together a 19–7 run that put them up 58–41 with 1:17 left to go.

Junior forward Tez Kraft led the Minutewomen in scoring with 17 points. Senior forward Kara Tudman had a season high 10 points, and Coyner finished with 11.

Kraft has had a streak of successful games for the Minutewomen, having stepped into the role of the team's leading scorer, with 13.9 points per game.

"We've been really struggling scoring, and Tez is just a natural–born scorer," O'Brien said. "She's been that way since she got here, and now she's coming on. She's just doing what naturally comes to her."

The win over the Rams was an important one for UMass, especially since the Minutewomen were coming off one of their worst games of the season in a home loss to Dayton last Saturday.

It's been a while since we've been able to put somebody away, so it was nice," O'Brien said. "[Dayton] stepped up and played the way they were capable of, and we didn't force them to do things that were their weakness. Against Rhode Island, we tried to force them Into their weaknesses. When you can make a team play against their weakness, you're going to do okay."

Tonight's game will be an important conference game for the Minutewomen, as they are currently tied for second place in the A–10 East Division with the Bonnies. SBU's stop in Amherst is the first in a pair of A–10 road games for the team. After taking on UMass they will head to Rhode Island to try their luck against the Rams. The Bonnies are also coming off of a Tuesday night home game against Temple University, which they won 86–73.

St. Bonaventure is being led this season by junior forward Hilary Waltman. Waltman, a preseason first team All– Conference prediction, is currently second in the conference in scoring. She has been leading the way for SBU with 19.7 points per game. Waltman is currently averaging .537 from the field. She has scored 30 or more points twice this season, and 20 or more 13 times.

She has been named the A–10 player of the week twice so far this season. Waltman eclipsed the 1,000 point mark earlier this season with 21 points against the Air Force.

Not only will UMass have to contend with Waltman in the post, but they will also have to deal with an offense that gets a lot of production from the perimeter as well.

"Their points come from the perimeter, whether it's shooting a three or slashing to the basket, they do them both," O'Brien said. "Our point players are going to have to have one of their best games so far this year. If they can do that, we can play to their weakness. Somebody's going to have to step up [offensively], and we're going to have to play great defense."

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Tez Kraft scored 17 points against Rhode Island Wednesday and will be looked to for scoring when the Minutewomen face St. Bonaventure tonight.

East–West in war of A–10's best

UM looks for redemption against high–scoring XU

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

You may remember the last time the Massachusetts basketball team traveled to play the Xavier Musketeers.

In the midst of its 1995–96 dream season, UMass received a three–pointer from Edgar Padilla in the final moments of regulation to send the game into overtime where a Padilla steal later secured the win, 78–74.

The magical ending — in front of a sold out Cincinnati Gardens — helped sustain the Minutemen's No. 1 ranking and perfect 21–0 record on its road to the Final Four.

"It was one of the great games," Massachusetts coach Bruiser Flint said. "Edgar hit the big shot and we snuck out of there with a win."

Flint's job this weekend, when his Minutemen (16–6, 8–1 A–10) again visit the No. 21 Musketeers (15–5, 7–3) Sunday at 3:30 p.m. (ABC, WHMP–FM), is to try to recapture the bit of momentum UMass lost in Tuesday night's drubbing to Temple, which snapped a 10–game Minutemen win streak.

"And we knew this would be a tough stretch for us," he said. "But we just want to play tough defense out there and give ourselves a chance to win the game."

The work is cut out for Flint and UMass, who'll have to contend with the A–10's most productive offense. Four members of the Xavier starting five average over 12 points per game, while the team tops out at just over 86 points per contest.

At the center of the offense is the A–10's best backcourt in juniors Lenny Brown and Gary Lumpkin. Brown, a legitimate long distance threat at 38 percent, leads the team with 16.4 points per game, while Lumpkin adds 12.3 points.

"They can play," Flint said. "They put up some numbers."

With exception to a road loss at Dayton on Jan. 24, Xavier has rolled through its conference schedule with relative ease. Posting an impressive 7–3 mark in the conference, the Musketeers sit atop the A–10 West Division along with George Washington.

The Musketeers owe a great deal of its success to its overwhelming home court advantage. The Cincinnati Gardens — which seats over 10,000 and sells out regularly — has been the site of 11 consecutive wins in as many tries this season for Xavier.

"It can get a little crazy in there," Flint said. "But we've played well there before."

For UMass to upend the Musketeers Sunday, it'll have to abandon a theory many Xavier opponents have adopted.

Teams who try to outscore Xavier almost always fail. Flint hopes a balanced inside/outside attack with center Lari Ketner, who scored only four points against Temple, and Tyrone Weeks will give Xavier fits all day.

"We haven't outscored anybody all year long," Flint said. "We just want to control the tempo, pound the ball inside and make them play to our speed."

With exception to Ketner's 33–point explosion against Dayton, UMass hasn't been getting the kind of production it needs from its big man.

On the defensive end, Ketner will be tested against talented Xavier center Torraye Braggs, who lit UMass up for 19 points last season. Braggs (12.0 ppg, 7.8 rebounds per game) is complimented by a pair of talented bookends in T.J. Johnson and Darnell Williams. Williams — who also see

Turn to BASKETBALL, page 9

PAUL BILODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Jonathan DePina has sparked the men's basketball team with his play off the bench. He and the Minutemen face Xavier in A–10 action Sunday.

UM swimming looks to finish the season with a perfect 10-0

By Jamie Jee
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team will be gunning for a perfect 10 as it closes out the dual meet season tomorrow. The Minutemen will host conference foe Fordham at Joseph R. Rogers Pool for a showdown at noon.

The Rams (3–5) are a young team comprised mostly of freshmen and few seniors. Although lacking leadership, it is the young teams that are sometimes the most surprising. UMass will have to keep that in mind along with the prospect of an undefeated season.

Currently 9–0, the Minutemen can join the ranks of the unbeaten if they manage to outswim the underdog Saturday and simply follow history's lead — UMass has never lost to Fordham. Of course that's easier said than done.

"On paper, it looks like we have the edge," coach Russ Yarworth said. "Some guys are feeling a little sluggish though. We've been doing some heavy training, classes have just started, and there's a flu bug going around."

Thus it appears that the added motivation of this being the last meet of the season for some, the last of their collegiate careers for others, may come in handy at some point. It doesn't hurt that it's parents weekend as well.

"We are looking pretty good," Yarworth said. "I think it would be great for the guys if we could finish with a win tomorrow. I think we'll be able to do well."

This team has been performing well all season and the Minutemen would like to carry that momentum as far as possible. Fordham may be another obstacle, but not much has been able to stop UMass thus far.

"These are definitely good kids with good talent," Yarworth said. "That combination has brought us this far and made us a tough team to beat."

Yarworth believes that not only is this team tough to beat, but that it could possibly be his best ever. That's a pretty high billing considering the talent that has passed through this school under Yarworth before.

In fact, if the Minutemen can finish off their Atlantic 10 conference rivals, they will become the seventh undefeated team under Yarworth. That includes the teams from 1984–88 that went a combined 34–0. UMass seems up for any and all great expectations both individually and as a team.

"After Saturday's meet we'll be resting up for A–10's," Yarworth said. "If we swim well then we'll be able to go in with an extra win, which will be good."

It will also improve Yarworth's chances to repeat as Atlantic 10 Conference Coach of the Year, as he won the honor in 1996 after heading the last undefeated team. That team won all eight of its dual meet contests and went on to become the A–10 champions.

Minuteman senior Sean Anderson will look to continue his own streak as well. Anderson, who has yet to lose in the 50 free during dual meet competition this year, also has the fastest time in the A–10 with a 20.84.

Hockey looks at UNH's daunting challenge

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Jeff Blanchard and the UMass hockey team face off against powerful New Hampshire tonight in hockey East action.

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

In the Hockey East quarterfinals last season at New Hampshire, senior goaltender Brian Regan did his best imitation of a circus act — complete with juggling and acrobatics — for the Massachusetts hockey team. Regan was a one–man show, setting a new HE record for saves made in the first game (55 saves), while making 90 saves in total in the Wildcats' two–game sweep.

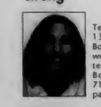
Tonight, the Minutemen (5–16–2, 2–11–1 in HE) return to Durham, N.H. for the first time since last season, and they will have to do a lot better defensively to succeed against No. 4 UNH (18–5–1, 10–4–1 in HE). The Wildcats are led by the leading scorer in the nation in junior forward Jason Krog (27 goals, 23 assists, 50 points), and the threesome of Tom Nolan, Derek Bekar and Mark Mowers have combined for a total of 116 points this season.

However, that is not all for UMass this weekend. Lowell (9–11–3, 6–6–3 in HE) will come into the Mullins Center on Sunday afternoon for the final game in the season series. Game time is 2 p.m.

For senior defenseman Tom O'Connor, the team's tough schedule for the last month of the season starts tonight, and the Minutemen can not be satisfied with just performing well against UNH. He realizes the job must be done in their defensive zone, and Regan will need more help than he received last season in the conference quarterfinals.

"We definitely have the toughest schedule in the confer-

Turn to HOCKEY, page 8



The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVII Issue 9 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Monday, February 9, 1998

Soap dish

The Soap Opera Digest awards will be announced on Feb. 27. Check inside for the scoop and more (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Coming on strong

Tez Kraft dropped 13 points on St. Bonaventure as the women's basketball team downed the Bonnies Friday, 71–52 (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Algeria refuses visit by European delegation

ALCIERS, Algeria (AP) —Algeria refused permission Sunday to a visiting European Parliament delegation that had asked to visit sites of recent massacres in the insurgency-wracked country. Nine European lawmakers arrived in the North African nation on Sunday to discuss ways of ending six years of violence that has claimed tens of thousands of lives.

During their five-day visit, the Europeans plan to meet with politicians, human rights and women's groups, and relatives of those killed in the Islamic insurgency.

"We have come to listen and understand," said delegation leader Andre Soulier, a member of the European People's Party from France. Algeria's former colonial ruler. The delegation also includes representatives from Germany, Austria, Belgium, Spain and Greece.

Algeria has long resisted visits by outsiders and even humanitarian aid, saying it amounted to meddling in the country's internal affairs.

Algerian Prime Minister Ahmed Ouyahia reiterated Saturday his rejection of "any foreign interference."

NATION

Injured nurse helps officials find suspect

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A nurse who was seriously injured in the nation's first fatal bombing at an abortion clinic has been speaking with investigators who have as evidence nails that were removed from her body during surgery.

Emily Lyons talked with federal agents in this week about the explosion, but no one was revealing what — if anything — she was able to tell them.

Jeff Lyons said Friday that his wife was asked "yes or no questions" about the Jan. 29 blast at the New Woman All Women Clinic. Authorities refused to comment on the interview, which Lyons said was conducted sometime before Wednesday.

Lyons would not say what his wife told FBI and Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents about the explosion. At the request of police, he also wouldn't say whether she remembers details of the bombing.

"I asked her how she felt about there being a bomb, and she kind of shrugged her shoulders like, "It's part of the job," Lyons said.

Doctors also said Friday that numerous nails were removed from Mrs. Lyons' body during surgery and given to investigators after the blast, which ripped through her legs, abdomen, her right hand and eyes.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 40	HIGH: 44	HIGH: 42
LOW: 17	LOW: 25	LOW: 31

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News.....page 2
Sports .....page 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Resource center on UM campus available to men

By Samantha Poulten
Collegian Staff

Most students know that almost all campus crime statistics show violence on college campuses is caused by male perpetrators. Men, like all students, deal with important issues including enormous college stress, questions of sexuality and masculinity, and problems communicating with others.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

George Moonlight works in his office Friday afternoon.

What many students don't realize, however, is that there is a place male students can go to deal with all the pressures of college life. It's called the Men's Resource Center (MRC).

"The Men's Resource Center was created to deal with the many areas where male students need support," George Moonlight, Office Manager of the Center, said.

"We need to make the services more available to assess the needs of the male students," he said.

Moonlight is trying to get the message out to University students that there is a place for males to go when they need help and support, or just a group of peers to talk with about daily pressures. Moonlight thinks all groups on campus should take part in sending the message to men.

"We need to connect with all the organizations on campus because only then can we begin to reach people," Moonlight said.

Turn to CENTER, page2

Atallah Shabazz Speaks at Bowker

By Edgar A. Barros
Collegian Staff

Atallah Shabazz, daughter of Malcolm X and Betty Shabazz spoke last Thursday on the University of Massachusetts campus. She was welcomed by La'Keisha Kennedy, president of the Black Student Union (BSU) and Latin and African–American studies professor John Bracey Jr.

The first topic Shabazz spoke on was how and why we should love ourselves. She said we should get to know who we truly are first before we can claim that we love ourselves.

Shabazz said we can find out who we really are by chasing our dreams and it is alright to change your dreams or have multiple dreams.

"Your dream is in your hand, if it changes, so what. It's okay to beat to a different drum," Shabazz said.

She reminded the audience that as young adults, we are responsible for ourselves and need to stop whining and stop making excuses. She spoke of how every single one of us has a legacy.

"Having a goal is fine, but shaping yourself is essential," she said.

Setting goals for oneself, shaping oneself, and finding out who we are, is vital in being able to love ourselves.

Next, Shabazz said we shouldn't let others judge us or tell us whether or not we are good enough to be loved.

"The greatest tool of the oppressor is the minds of the oppressed," she said quoting her father.

Shabazz was saying if you allow someone to judge you on the basis of intelligence, beauty, or skin color, you are allowing your mind to be controlled by a negative person in his quest to destroy who you are.

Shabazz encouraged students to "hear it, digest it, and dismiss it. You do not need an interpretation of yourself in order to discover yourself."

Shabazz then proceeded by focusing on her father, Malcolm. She addressed a common misconception about her father; the idea that he was an evil minded separatist, segregationalist, whose entire life was centered around hating white people.

"Malcolm was about revolution. Revolution means change," Shabazz said.

She explained any speeches that Malcolm made before 1963, were not his own words because he was the spokesman for the Nation of Islam. After 1963, when Malcolm was no

Turn to LECTURE, page 2

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Practice, practice, practice...

Bond Kim, a freshman music major, practices her cello in a Fine Arts center practice room yesterday afternoon.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Lights out!

Professor Judy Young, using a volunteer, explains the technicalities of the sunset to her astronomy 100 students at the UMass sunwheel Friday evening.

U.S. won't deploy from Saudi bases

By Susanne M. Schafer
Associated Press

JEDDAH, Saudi Arabia— The United States won't ask to launch air strikes against Iraq from military bases in Saudi Arabia, Defense Secretary William Cohen announced Sunday.

The defense secretary said such a request is unnecessary because enough firepower would be in place elsewhere in the region within a short time. But the acknowledgment appeared to recognize Saudi sensitivities over launching an attack on a fellow Arab state.

"We've not made such a request, and I don't intend to make such a request," Cohen told reporters accompanying him on a four-day series of meetings with Persian Gulf leaders on the standoff with Iraq. "It's not my intent to make such a request because we don't think it's necessary."

The surprise admission came as Cohen left Europe, where he had sought support for the tough U.S. stand against Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's refusal to abide by United Nations weapons inspectors.

The United States and Britain have threatened to attack Iraq if it does not give unconditional access to U.N inspectors who are charged with overseeing the dismantling of Iraq's chemical, biological and nuclear weapons.

Without the ability to launch strikes from Saudi soil, the two nations are forced to mount a bombing campaign based entirely on cruise missiles launched from ships and attack planes based in the tiny emirates of Kuwait, Bahrain and on the British island of Deigo Garcia in the Indian Ocean.

The decision effectively bars the United States from using about 50

Turn to SAUDI, page 3

Polymer science department teaches high school students

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts polymer science department held its first class on Saturday designed to teach local high school students about polymers by using the department's hi–tech equipment.

The "Aspire" program's first out of five sessions was a success due to the interest and enthusiasm of the students.

"They were really impressive students. They asked a lot of questions. They were very involved and very bright," Jennifer David, a graduate student who worked in creating and teaching the program, said.

"They were really impressive students. They asked a lot of questions. They were very involved and very bright," said Jennifer David a graduate student who worked in creating and teaching "Aspire."

The free program will last 10 weeks, one Saturday class every two weeks. The rest of the classes will cover polymer synthesis, polymer physics and then once they have made polymers in the experiments, they will test the materials they have made, David said.

The students will learn through experiments about the three main principles behind polymers; chemistry, physics and the engineering of polymers.

Experiments will include making nylon, polystyrene and looking through electron microscopes to teach students about the principles.

"The Aspire program will bring high school students into our department to use our equipment to do experiments a lot more in depth for students going to college or interested in science," David said.

The purpose of the first session was to get students oriented and introduce to them what a polymer is.

"They were given an introduction and a 'What is a polymer?' demonstration," David said.

The Department of Health and Safety spoke to the students about laboratory safety. The students also went on a tour of the polymer science building and saw the equipment they would be using.

"The next session will be on polymer synthesis," David said.

Six graduate students and a faculty advisor teach the 10 students in the program. The students had to apply to the program and were chosen from high schools in Amherst, Northampton and Springfield.

A year ago graduate students were involved in a program sponsored through the department that brought polymer science to junior high students.

Some graduate students wanted to get more young adults involved. From the initial junior high program two more programs were started. One of which is the Aspire program.

David hopes the Aspire program will be offered next fall as well as the spring.

"We'll see how it goes, if student input is positive then we'll do it next spring and maybe in the fall," David said.

A growing interest from graduate students and high school teachers will help continue the project.

UM Stockbridge School to sponsor first job fair

By Jason Eiseman
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Stockbridge School of Agriculture will sponsor their first job fair tomorrow in the Student Union Ballroom from 10 a.m.– to 4 p.m.

Professors from the School of Agriculture said there is a shortage of workers in the "green" industries and students have many options available to them. "Green" industries include arboriculture, turf–grass management, floriculture, and ornamental horticulture.

"Right now in the horticulture, tree–care industries we probably get 20–30 jobs for every student," Dennis Ryan, professor of arboriculture in the department of forestry said. Jobs range from beginner level pay to higher level pay in management positions depending on the students' experience, according to Ryan.

"We don't have a problem placing anyone," Nancy Garrabrants, professor of floriculture, and a co–organizer of the job fair, said.

"Graduates are going to have their pick of employers," Garrabrants said.

Ryan said there are three things which will get students a career in the agricultural field: good education, good experience, and a willingness to move.

Companies from the agricultural field have come to campus to meet students before, but it became too complicated, and the Stockbridge School decided to host all of the companies on one day.

"We've had to turn people away because of lack of space," Garrabrants said.

"There is a shortage in the green industry for trained professionals," Garrabrants said.

The shortage is expected to grow in the years to come.

She also said the boom in this industry is due to a change in culture.

According to Garrabrants, because both parents often work now, they do not have time to care for a lawn or a garden, and turn to private landscapers to maintain the area around a home.

She said this can also add value to property, and said people are becoming more environmentally friendly.

Many Stockbridge graduates work at golf courses which are becoming more common.

The job fair not only offers jobs after graduation, but also summer jobs and internships. In addition, the fair is opened to students of all majors.

Information about job opportunities can be accessed on the World Wide Web through the UMass landscape architecture homepage.

No date retrieved from recorder in marine jet crash

TRENTO, Italy (AP) — Investigators sought help from the manufacturer Sunday after they were unable to retrieve any data from the flight recorder of a Marine jet that caused the deadly crash of a ski gondola.

"The mission recorder's computer-type information can only be read by mission analysts using special equipment designed for that purposes," said a statement from Aviano, the U.S. air base where the jet was based.

Investigators were working with representatives of the system's manufacturer, "attempting to determine if information is on the tape and if it's recoverable," Aviano said.

A U.S.-Italian inquiry is under way to determine why the jet swept so low over an Alpine ski resort Tuesday, slicing a cable and sending the gondola crashing into the slopes of Mount Cermis, killing all 20 people aboard the car.

No one was immediately available at Aviano to elaborate on the statement, which insisted that any failure to retrieve the data "will not hinder the ... investigation."

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Year of the Tiger

Dancers celebrate the Vietnamese new year in a program at the campus center Saturday night. The event was sponsored by the Vietnamese Students Association.

■ center

continued from page 1

According to Moonlight, the MRC is not just another female-bashing group designed for male superiority. In fact, the MRC runs a program called the Mentor Advocates for Respect and Safety (MARS) program which works in collaboration with the Everywoman's Center (EWC) to train college and high school students to be mentors to junior high males and females, particularly focusing on sexual assault prevention education.

Joanne Land-Kazlauskas, Assistant Director of the Education Advocate Program for EWC, said the Men's Resource Center works closely with the Everywoman's Center to help provide community education to Amherst and surrounding towns.

"With all the violence against women, it is so good to have a male perspective from the group," Land-Kazlauskas said. She said it's good that co-ed groups can be developed to jointly educate the public.

The MRC tries to educate men by having them look at the reasons for the behaviors they display.

"Men need to look at who they are in order to fix the problems they endure," Moonlight said.

The Men's Resource Center was created 15 years ago by Steven Botkin. The Center was made to address the needs of a small group of men, and has now grown to cover many Multicultural and multi-ethnic groups.

The MRC has many programs and services that deal with the ever changing world of male students.

"We provide counseling, workshops, and programs to male students in order to ensure a better way of life for everyone," Moonlight said.

Some programs run by the MRC include the Survivors of Childhood Abuse group, the Youth Education programs (YEP), the Men Overcoming Violence program (MOVE), and the Alternative Families Project.

Each program provides necessary information and services which help not only male college students, but the male population as a whole.

The Men's Resource Center is located on 30 Boltwood Walk in Amherst. Moonlight encourages anyone who would like to find out more information on the MRC and its' programs to call the MRC at 253-9887, or fax at 253-4801.

■ lecture

continued from page 1

longer part of the Nation of Islam, the words he spoke were his own.

As Shabazz said it, "after 1963, you met Malcolm for the first time on behalf of himself."

The other common misconception people have about Shabazz's father is that he never had a family life beyond the streets of Boston and New York.

Shabazz reminded the audience that Malcolm had a mother, a father, a house, brothers and sisters, and a back yard before the Klu Klux Klan murdered his father.

In addition she said her grandfather, Malcolm's father, was the leader of the "Universal Negro Improvement" program, which was a sublet of Marcus Garvey's "Go Back to Africa" movement.

"When my father was out-reading the libraries in the prisons, it was not something new; it was a continuation of the past."

Shabazz showed that her father did not go from rags to riches, but from riches to rags, due to the loss of his parents, then back to riches.

Next, Shabazz discussed the household she grew up in. She spoke of her house as one which had warmth, and was constantly filled with love. She said her house was not filled with people who were "angry" about being black.

She spoke with great happiness of her parents' love for each other. "I grew up watching my father constantly rap to my mother. It was not strange for my father to come home and lay his head on my mother's lap while she stroked her fingers through his hair. I watched my parents give and take on a regular basis. My mother try to keep this going even after my father was taken away."

She encouraged us to work at being our whole selves. If your name is long and difficult for others to understand, "don't cut your name short, teach people how to say it," she said.

"Remember, every moment is yours," Shabazz said before she closed her talk with a poem.

Interested in writing for News?

Then come to the new writers meeting

TODAY!!

The meeting starts at 7 p.m. In the basement of the Campus Center. Call Leigh the News editor for more information.

WRITE FOR ARTS, NEWS, ED-OP, SPORTS!....Again..WRITE FOR SPORTS, ED-OP, NEWS, ARTS..Again..WRITE!!!

Shop off Campus?

Why Bother?

BACK TO SCHOOL SALE

Prices slashed on dozens of Clothing items!

Check out the February Health & Beauty specials!

Over 20 models of CALCULATORS on SALE! Discounts up to 30% OFF!!!

ALL POSTERS 20% OFF!

Sale ends Saturday, February 14.

UStore

We're not like a mall. We're better.

Union Billiards

1 PM TO 1 PM EVERY DAY!

The University Store

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

University Store

In the UMass Campus Center

Hours:

M-F 9 to 5 Sat. 11 to 4

(413) 545 - 2619

AMEX, MC, Visa, Discover and UCard cheerfully accepted!

COMING SOON...VALENTINE'S DAY!

Whether you...

Want to be funny/play a joke • Want to make a good friend smile

Be a secret admirer • Want to say a little "I love you"

Reserve Your Valentine's Day Collegian Personal by Tuesday, February 10th for the Collegian's Thursday, February 12th Valentine's Day Issue.

For more information call the Collegian @ 545-3500

Drop off order forms @ Collegian in the Campus Center basement or mail to 113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA 01003 (by 2/12)

Client: Date: Taken By: Office Use Only

Date to run: February 12, 1998 Headline: Personals

S.S.# Total Words: X .10¢ rate =

Total Cost (w/specials) Authorized signature:

Specials

Free Red Spot Color w/purchase of a graphic

$2.50 Heart Graphic at Beginning & End ❒

$5 Heart Graphic Border ❒

$7 Heart Shadowed Behind Message ❒

Graphic #1 ❒

Graphic #2 ❒

Graphic #3 ❒

Graphic #4 ❒

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN/UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS

VALENTINE'S DAY CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Cash ❒ Check # VISA/MC# Exp.

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character , space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used

President Clinton asks for smaller classes

By Robert Greene
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — A year after California began drastically reducing classroom size, teachers and parents alike are pleased with the change. Now President Clinton is campaigning for smaller classes everywhere.

Although classrooms across the nation already are far less crowded than they were in California, the administration wants to spend $12 billion over seven years to hire 100,000 new teachers for grades one through three. Officials cite research they say links smaller classes to better learning.

But the research is less supportive than public opinion polls, working teachers and common sense in favor of lower class sizes. Researchers have studied and debated the issue for decades, often harshly.

"When you ask teachers, they seem to know instinctively classrooms should be smaller," said Marshall S. Smith, acting deputy secretary of education, when questioned about dueling studies. In the Reagan and Bush years, the Education Department opposed class-size reduction as expensive and ineffective.

The National Education Association, the nation's largest teachers' union, has been pushing since the late 1960s for classes of 15 pupils.

Smith and others quote from a "fairly rigorous" study of a Tennessee experiment during the 1980s with cutting class sizes from 25 pupils to 15 in kindergarten through the third grade. The study found that pupils in smaller classes did better on standardized tests.

Other researchers say the starting and ending numbers in any reduction scheme are more important than the numbers in between. In California, average class size in the early grades went from 30 to the legally prescribed 20. Clinton wants to bring classes down from an average of 22 nationwide to 18.

"Reducing class size from 22 to 18 is unlikely to make a big difference," said Robert Slavin, a researcher at Baltimore's Johns Hopkins University and head of a successful reading program. "Reducing class size from 30 to 18 is probably going to make a much larger difference."

"It's very expensive, and probably has more to do with building morale and a positive environment with the schools than it does with achievement," said Slavin, who believes reducing class size is "a good thing to do."

Under the plan, California would get $124 million; New York, $101 million; Texas, $94 million; Florida, $50 million; Illinois and Pennsylvania, $49 million each; and Ohio, $45 million. Slavin praised Clinton for wanting to phase in the hiring of teachers and assure that they are qualified, hoping to avoid troubles California had in its crash program, and to stress reading. But he said the money could be more efficiently used on tutoring or other targeted approaches.

The proposal figures on an average teacher cost of $35,000 in salary and benefits. Local districts would pay 10 percent to 50 percent of the cost, with poor districts getting a higher subsidy. About 37,000 teachers would be hired the first year.

Gene V. Glass, at Arizona State University in Tempe, questioned the benefits.

"The difference in achievement between where we are now, which is 22, 23, 24 kids per class, and where the president is talking about, 18, is very small," he said.

"You have to go way, way down to get gains that are appreciable, that would even be noticeable to a teacher," he said. "Those numbers are 10 or six students in an instructional group." Eric A. Hanushek, a University of Rochester economist, said the small studies overlook the big picture: class sizes have been shrinking nationwide, with no gain in achievement on national standardized tests.

Polls consistently find voter support for smaller classes. In California's Orange County, some parents are putting their children back from private schools into public schools because of smaller classes.

"Teachers are thrilled, parents are thrilled," says Roni Ellis, principal of Harbour View Elementary School in Huntington Beach, Calif. "It's a quality program that allows teachers to better understand the needs of every child in their classroom."

■ Saudi

continued from page 1

combat aircraft currently based in Saudi Arabia for an offensive strike. But Cohen's discussions in Jeddah with Saudi Arabia's King Fahd will include the potential for moving those combat aircraft elsewhere in the region should a fight be mounted.

Cohen insisted his approach is "not a bow to any considerations other than what is necessary." The top U.S. commander in the region, Marine Gen. Anthony Zinni, "has made a determination that he can carry out whatever he needs to carry out with the forces that are now there, or will be there in the forseeable future," Cohen said.

He insisted America still plans a "substiantial" attack. In an appearance on CBS' "Face the Nation," Secretary of State Madeleine Albright used the same word several times in characterizing any attack.

Over the weekend, Cohen signed a formal order sending an additional 42 strike and support planes to the Persian Gulf region but not to Saudi Arabia.

It remains unclear whether the Saudis will allow U.S. support aircraft such as tankers or radar-communication planes to fly from their bases during any military confrontation, a senior Pentagon official traveling with the defense secretary said. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

Cohen said he is counting on Saudi cooperation to help keep support aircraft in the air, however, should a military strike be launched.

President Clinton has not yet made such a determination, Cohen said. "We are seeking a diplomatic solution if it can be found," he said.

Meanwhile, Clinton called Prime Minister Jean Chretien of Canada and Prime Minister Wim Kok of the Netherlands on Sunday about the prospect of support for either a diplomatic or other solution to the crisis with Iraq. U.S. officials suggested Chretien would publicly indicate soon "an interest in supporting or participating" in a military action should it come to that. Clinton, in earlier calls over the weekend, consulted with the leaders of Saudi Arabia and Australia.

Cohen met for 20 minutes with Saudi Arabia's King Fahd and reported afterward to his aides that "it was a positive meeting." The defense secretary then was treated to dinner by the defense minister, Prince Sultan, and they planned to have further meetings late into the night, as is the Saudi custom.

Meanwhile, Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon confirmed that the aircraft carrier USS Nimitz has now left the Persian Gulf. That leaves two aircraft carriers in the region, the USS Independence and the USS George Washington.

Cohen was accompanied by Zinni and two senior lawmakers — Sens. John Warner, R—Va., and Carl Levin, D—Mich.

A strong hint of the Saudi position came just hours before Cohen arrived in the desert kingdom when Sultan was quoted in the Saudi paper Arab News as saying: "We are against striking Iraq as a people and as a nation."

Police criticized at local universities

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)— Students are criticizing police at Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for purportedly withholding reports of major crimes.

At least three serious crimes since August were partially or completely omitted from documents issued by university police departments, although two of them were listed in police logs available for inspection at campus security offices.

"The campus police department is happy to go public about a new program or public service project," the MIT newspaper opined in an editorial. "But when an incident causes controversy or brings damaging media attention, it's another story all together." Police chiefs at the universities acknowledged inconsistencies, but said they are not trying to cover anything up.

At a news conference Sunday, MIT Police Chief Anne Glavin said the university has produced an annual crime report since 1975 and that all the incidents cited by the newspaper were included in the official log kept at the campus police station and open to the public.

"Those are hardly the actions of a university that wants to cover up crime," Glavin said Sunday.

Her Harvard counterpart, Chief Francis "Bud" Riley, earlier told The Boston Globe that there may have been times when information was omitted inadvertently.

"We're really trying hard to get information out to students and faculty so that they can see the types of calls we're responding to for them," Riley said. "We just haven't gotten over the threshold of total accuracy yet."

Federal and state laws require colleges to disclose reports of crimes.

But Harvard's police log last week failed to note Joshua Elster's arrest for allegedly raping another student. Elster, 19, was arrested after the alleged victim sought medical attention. When Harvard police arrested 25-year-old student Sun Hoon Cho for allegedly raping a female student in August, the incident was placed on the police blotter but not the department's internet log.

At MIT, the drinking incident that resulted in the death of freshman Scott L. Krueger at a fraternity in September was not noted on a police report sent to campus publications, although it was in the police log and the subject of a university news release the next morning.

The proposed Accuracy in Campus Crime Reporting Act would add several categories of crimes that colleges must include in their annual reports and would require them to report all incidents, not just those that result in an arrest.

Glavin called the proposed requirement "ridiculous."

"We give out the highlights on campus" in a weekly report to student publications, she said. "It's burdensome to record every single incident."

The new bill also proposes to punish schools that violate the law by withholding federal funds.

Student Affairs Special Services

Student Speaker

Undergraduate Commencement

Is there something you would like to say before graduating? If so, you are invited to submit a proposal for consideration as the Student Commencement Speaker.

Who is Eligible: Graduating Amherst Campus Senior (Class of 1998).

Subject Matter: Your proposed speech should be of general interest to graduating seniors as well as to parents and other guests, and address your impressions and experience(s) both academic and extra-curricular.

Format: Submit approximately three word-processed/typewritten pages, double-spaced, or the equivalent of 3-5 minutes speaking time. Speeches exceeding this limit will not be considered.

Selection Process: Authors' names will be deleted (by a non-voting staff person) after which a committee of students (majority), staff, and faculty will review the proposals. Three to five individuals will be invited to "audition" before the committee (in March), after which the speaker will be selected.

Deadline: Wednesday, February 11, 1998, 4:30 p.m.

Submit Proposals To: Paul R. Appleby, Chair, Student Speaker Selection Committee, 305 Whitmore (545-3464).

How to spend your college years.

You should spend your college years wisely. Study hard, have fun, and carry The Associates Visa® card. You can get:

- 3% cash back on purchases
- Discounts on brand name merchandise
- No annual fee
- Credit line up to $2,500

Call toll free 1-888-SEND-ONE.

*See Rebate Terms and Conditions accompanying the credit card.

Associates National Bank (Delaware)

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

New college unnecessary

For two years now, I have been a member of the University's Honors Program. It's not bad; you can take a few smaller classes, get more advising when you need it, and when you graduate there are a few more Latin words on your diploma.

I was happy with things the way they were. When I heard money had been allocated to convert the Honors Program into an Honors College, I got a little nervous.

No one really seemed to know how the change would alter things. Would Honors students have to live in Orchard Hill? How would you interact with the rest of the University? It didn't even seem like the Honors Office knew for sure what was going on. I know no one ever asked me or my friends in the Honors Program what we thought of the idea.

"The Honors College is nothing more than a fancy name and new buildings for a program that we already have on campus."

Mark Shea

As I learned a little more about what the change would do, I relaxed a bit. The changes seemed more cosmetic than anything else. The Program would move to Orchard Hill, most classes would take place in its buildings, some faculty would be assigned to the program, and it would expand to cover more disciplines of study.

I breathed a sigh of relief and then thought, if the changes are so superficial, why make them at all? Why are millions of dollars going to be spent to reconfigure something that is working fine as it is?

It seems that the creation of an Honors College will make UMass a more competitive university. In the report by the Academic Matters Council to the Faculty Senate last year, one of the Honors College's functions it is to "aggressively seek out prospective undergraduates demonstrating high levels of achievement; its high external visibility will provide a major impetus for these students to choose to come to UMass/Amherst."

Now perhaps I'm just imagining things, but it seems to this honors student that the University is just spending a lot of money on a trophy to keep on the mantle and show guests when they come by to visit.

I can't think of any other reason to build the Honors College "in such a way as to provide an attractive ambiance for prospective students and their parents when they visit the campus."

Speaking for myself, the decor of the Honors Office was rather low on my list of points for consideration when I made my college decision.

The Honors College is nothing more than a fancy name and new buildings for a program that we already have on campus.

Its supporters hope that it will lend a small college feel to UMass. The problem is that UMass is not a small college. When I chose to come here, one of my reasons was that it was a big place. I wanted to see all the people and things that we have on campus. I didn't want to be shut up on a high hill in an ivory tower looking down on the rest of the world.

That's the best feature of the Honors Program as it stands right now. It allows you academic achievement without having to sacrifice any freedom. I don't define myself as an "Honors Student", but as a UMass student.

The creation of an Honors College changes that. It adds an unnecessary division to the school for the purpose of impressing Mom and Dad when they come to view the campus.

It provides something solid for the administration to point to as proof of their devotion to academic excellence, even while they downsize the faculty. While it will bring some benefits with it, such as wider coverage of the University and thesis writing workshops, its main purpose is as a billboard advertising the school.

There are, however, ways of providing academic opportunities and gaining recognition for the school that don't include creating a class system on campus — which is what the Honors College will do.

Mark Shea is a UMass student.

The cost of apathy

Maybe someone ought to go back to 1970 and tell those who fought to get 18-year-olds the right to vote to forget about it.

Students in Southwest certainly seem to already have forgotten about it, if the number who turned out for a recent local election are any indication.

Every night, over 3,000 students in Southwest go to Hampden dining commons to eat. Another 3,000 students go to Franklin Dining Commons — 100 yards away from Hampden.

On Tuesday, when Amherst held a referendum vote to decide whether a parking garage should be placed in the center of town, polls were placed in Hampden so that students would have greater access to them.

Only four students in all of Southwest voted.

"Old enough to die, old enough to vote" supporters of the 26th amendment used to say. And now four people turn out to vote? Perhaps the other eligible voters are already dead — did Carla Faye-Tucker go on a farewell spree in Southwest lately?

Three for the garage, one against. For those of you keeping track that's 0.03 percent of all eligible voters in these districts.

Considering that 0.03 percent is lower than the blood alcohol content of your typical Southwest student on any given night, it's easy to get an idea of where many Southwest residents priorities lie.

As UMass students, it is easy to get caught up in our school work and forget about the town which surrounds us. I know that this semester I am more concerned with my classes, my internships, and trying to get a mouse out from under my stove than with the construction of a new Big Y store.

Businesses close down, a couple of windows are broken, a couple of fights break out — these things are bound to happen. And when it comes to the town's deciding what it wants to do with its money, our reaction might well be, "Hey, I don't really care."

But maybe there are times when students should care about what happens in Amherst, this town where many of us spend four — and in my case five — years of our lives. Like parents looking out for our sons and daughters, maybe we should work to improve Amherst for future generations of students.

Paul Hayes

At a school with over 20,000 potential voters, students could look out for their own interests and control town matters impacting them and the University.

Yet we have not taken advantage of this opportunity. At a school where many people talk about the importance of conserving our natural resources, to ensure we will have a healthy world, we are not ensuring students will have a healthy future in Amherst.

The town went so far as to put polling places in Southwest. Southwest used to belong to town meeting districts 10 and 4, and students living there had to go off campus to vote. A year ago the town turned Southwest into sub-precincts 4a and 10a, and allowed students there to vote in Hampden dining commons.

After months of hearing students complain that parking uptown was a problem, of saying something should be done about it, of saying they were in favor of a garage, only four students out of 6,000 felt compelled to walk as far as their dining commons to do something about the garage.

The garage passed, surviving a strong threat by anti-garage activists. These activists feel other solutions could have been employed to alleviate parking problems in downtown Amherst, such as restructuring existing parking to accommodate more vehicles. This solution was viable but shortsighted, and did not plan for the town's growth.

Many of these activists also feel a garage will destroy the character of downtown Amherst, and turn it from a quaint rural area into an impersonal urbanized shopping center. But considering the fact that six Amherst businesses have shut down since last August, with a seventh — Wootton's Books — announcing this week that it will be closing down during the summer, the parking garage seems to be the best chance this town has of attracting customers and saving locally owned businesses.

Those who do not want to change the image of Amherst don't seem to realize that even by doing nothing, they would be doing something. By refusing a garage in Amherst center, they would be allowing businesses to slip away and retail chains to slip in.

And student complacency does nothing to help the situation. We are allowing this town — of which we are residents — to be changed and shaped without our say so. The fact that a garage, which will greatly benefit students for years to come, is going to be built should not make us feel that our votes are not needed.

On Tuesday students revealed they can be taken lightly as a force at the polls. As a result, Amherst residents may choose to ignore UMass concerns, which could cost students dearly.

Paul Hayes is a Collegian staff member.

No news is bad news

If universities in this country held an open forum to debate crime reporting on college campuses, its participants would likely express three distinct opinions on the topic: the student body — outraged that the need to know more; college newspaper reporters — frustration about the limited amount of accessible information; the administration — preference to avoid the controversy altogether.

The recent discovery of omissions in campus police logs issued to student newspapers at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Harvard University has further fueled the debate, and a resolution may only occur if Congress passes a proposed bill regulating campus crime reports.

"Student media are accusing campus police of intentionally withholding information about criminal instances that would besmirch the reputation of their university".

Laura Stock

It's called the Accuracy in Campus Crime Reporting Act, and it might be just what college newspapers need to ensure they can provide all information to the student body. It would require universities to report all incidents of crime, not just those that result in arrest, as well as provide enforcement by restriction of federal monies to schools who violate the law.

According to a Boston Globe report yesterday, MIT Police Chief Anne Glavin is not too pleased with the proposed bill. Calling it "ridiculous," Glavin defended MIT's stance on editing the campus police log by saying it was "burdensome to record every single incident."

The greater burden, however, is placed on the student newspapers, who often lack the resources or the clout to access information as quickly as professional media. In conversations with editors from The Tech, I can tell you their number one problem is their relationship with MIT police. I certainly can't blame them; when the high-profile, binge-drinking death of freshman Scott Krueger occurred last September, the police statement issued to The Tech made no mention of the incident. Meanwhile, the Boston news media pounced on the story — and provided the only means of filtering information to the students.

The Harvard Crimson has become the latest college newspaper to issue complaints about missing police information, according to the Boston Globe. Back in August, the arrest of an alleged rapist was omitted from the Internet version of the police log, the version the newspaper apparently relies upon. Again last week, Harvard police failed to report another arrest of an alleged rapist in a separate incident. The Crimson, a daily publication, could not report the incident until four days later. Harvard Police Chief Francis Riley cited organizational problems as the reason for the omission.

Student media are accusing campus police of intentionally withholding information about criminal instances that would besmirch the reputation of their university. If this is true, not only does it taint the credibility of the campus newspaper, but it could pose a threat to the safety of students living on campus, who may not seek outside sources to read about incidents in their own backyard.

Here at the University of Massachusetts, in compliance with the 1990 Campus Security Act, police issue yearly reports on campus crime, including murder, assault, rape and underage drinking. And according to UMass Police Chief John Luippold, the police logs provided to the Collegian on a daily basis are not edited. Fortunately for the Collegian and the UMass community, incidents of dangerous crimes such as rape and assault are often alerted to reporters in addition to being listed in the police log.

Then just when it feels like you're out, they pull you back in. Despite the fact that information pertaining to campus safety at the University, however. The administration itself, through the UMass News Office, is a rich source of campus information, and oftentimes, quite lacking.

For example, mysteries surrounding the death of Nigerian graduate student in February 1997 were not put to rest until last Friday. An entire year later, the Collegian was finally able to report a heart condition caused his death. The cause of the January death of a UMass senior and former football player has yet to be released by the University. And back in December 1996, the discovery of a convicted sex offender living on campus — which the University knew about — was not made until Channel 40 News in Springfield aired a three-part series.

State officials and medical examiners do contribute to the delay in the release of information, but when the University refuses to issue statements regarding deaths or serious crimes, it only exacerbates fears and rumors that circulate around campus.

Caught between their duties to protect the well-being of students as police officers and their obligation to protect the reputation of the university as administrators, campus police chiefs are placed in a tough position. Hopefully, with support from university police across the country, Congress will pass the proposed bill and all information will be accessible to college media. Let the burden fall on us — we can handle it.

Laura Stock is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

SGA and basketball

To the editor:

As a former Senator, I have to applaud the SGA on our last meeting of the fall semester — we accomplished a lot in that meeting. I really hope that trend continues throughout this semester. The campus will only feel the effects of those meetings if Senators are able to legislate effectively, and are not bogged down by reports and trivial matters. I also encourage any students to step forward and sit on the Library Research Council, to provide insight into the students' perspectives to the librarians.

I am happy to see more people coming to the UMass basketball games, especially over the winter. It would have been nice to see more fans at the beginning of the season. There are plenty of activities at UMass students may take advantage of. Try to take in as much as you can there — it is much harder to do so once you graduate.

Scott C. Buchanan
Belchertown

Bombings good for Iraq

To the editor:

Hussein Ibish (Feb. 3) insists that U.S. policy on Iraq is a "failed policy based on a phony analysis." Something more substantial than some far–fetched theory of a U.S.-Israeli-Jewish American conspiracy against innocent Iraqis is needed. Daily Collegian readers need to grasp why an Iraq minus Saddam and advanced weapons is in America's best interest and worth some risk to attain.

U.S. policy has not been to unseat Hussein, but it should be. The threat posed by Saddam to the world community is substantially greater than the rogue, repressive regimes that reigned in Somalia and Haiti, and in both cases the U.S. worked to install a favorable government. The U.S. actively sought to boot out the bad guys. Saddam merits treatment no different.

Ibish argues that America's "failed" policy vis-a-vis Iran, for instance, "has only succeeded in isolating the United States". In 1981, another country stood alone against a regional threat. The Israeli bombing of Iraq's near-completed nuclear complex at Osirak guaranteed that the allied coalition ten years hence, and perhaps in mere days to come, did and will not face a nuclear Iraq. Isolation, in this case, should be an American ambition, not a fear.

Ibish opines that U.S. policies are a "pathetic fraud" and grounded on "fabricated claims of Iraqi exotic weapons programs and evil intentions." Military experts report that Iraq funnels oil earnings away from humanitarian needs to a rearmament effort. The Russians continue to send Iraq hardware and know-how. Such assessments of Saddam's weapons program must not be ignored.

It is not the threat of resumed bombing that makes Saddam sweat most; it is the thought of U.N. arms inspectors having free reign in Iraq to locate weapons of mass destruction. Do not be fooled. Saddam, who invites Iraqi women and children into his palaces to serve as human shields, will not fret much when the bombs begin to fall, so long as he survives atop Iraq.

Contrary to common belief, one thing about Saddam's psyche is predictable. That is, like generations of Middle East leaders, he understands only violence, and any diplomatic solution will serve only to buy Iraq time.

Bombings will convince Iraq that his game is over. This not only serves American interests, it serves the Iraqis themselves.

Jess Michael Sadick
SADICK@guanet.georgetown.edu

WRITE FOR ED-OP!!!
COME DOWN TO THE COLLEGIAN
AND SPEAK TO DAN or TAMAR

Hampshire, Smith, Mt. Holyoke, and Amherst students — we want you!

The Collegian Ed/Op page is planning to run a Four– College Commentary feature every Wednesday. Because the Collegian is distributed on the five Pioneer Valley campuses, we want the voices of all to have a place on this page.

Columns should be 700–900 words long, have your name and a phone number on them, and be submitted by Monday at noon. They can be sent to the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass; faxed to 545–1592; or emailed to letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu. Call Tamar Carroll or Dan Bodah at 545–1491 for more information.

We will be publishing a Point/Counterpoint featureon Wednesday, Feb. 18th, analyzing the War on Drugs.

Is it a success or a failure? Should it be continued? What effect has it had on the use and sale of drugs, the prison population, or civil liberties? What are the ethical issues involved in this legacy of the Reagan/Bush years?

Columns should be submitted no later than 5 p.m. on Monday, Feb. 16. They can be delivered to the Collegian offices at 113 Campus Center, UMass; faxed to 545–1592; or emailed to "letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu". Call Tamar Carroll or Dan Bodah at 545–1491 for more information.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Co-Editor
Tamar Carroll Editorial/Opinion Co-Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor

Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Leigh Faulkner News Editor
Lauren Kosky Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor

Joeseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
David Parmenter Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Puppas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Nominees for soap awards; Annie & Kristin sign off

Let me start off by wishing those of you with a significant other a Happy Valentine's Day (otherwise known as "Black Saturday" to my friend Susanne and I). No doubt, we'll be treated to a heavy dose of sappy love stuff on the soaps this week — troubled couples coming together, professing their love for one another, etc. (you know the drill). It's for exactly this reason that my love life is such a mess. Soaps, as much as I love them, have left me with a legacy of high expectations (same could be said for "Titanic " which I thought was superb). I mean, I've had my fair share of romance but it's never been to the extreme of , let's say... Sonny and Brenda on "General Hospital" or Bo and Hope on "Days of Our Lives."

I know it's only a soap, movie, etc., and that they tend to exaggerate things just a bit (somewhat of an understatement) but the hopeless romantic in me wants to buy into it. Isn't denial a great thing? Damn those soaps!

Well, did anyone happen to catch "GH" on Friday? After two years of waiting Carly finally bit the bullet and told Bobbie the truth about her paternity.

The entire Blue Wall was in a frenzy (or at least the 20 of us who were watching). It was incredible, definitely one of the all-time greatest moments in "GH's" long history and it's only the beginning. If you're a "GH" fan, I'd highly recommend that you watch today's episode.

Other soaps to watch this month... definitely "Guiding Light" (last week was a hoot) and "Days."

Tune in to get your last glimpse of two of daytime's nastiest vixens, Annie and Kristin respectively (sniff... what will I do without these two gems!). Both are slated to depart soon. On "GL," look for Allie's ex to show up in town (one guess as to who's behind this). On "Days," Jen's presumed dead and Laura wants revenge (she enlists the help of a gun).

I just wanted to remind the die hard fans out there that the Soap Opera Digest Awards will air on Feb. 27 on NBC. It's usually pretty fun although the nominees in some of this year's categories are a bit off the mark. Take the category hottest romance for instance. Mateo and Hayley from "All My Children" (they spent half the year bickering over Adam), Holden and Lily on "As The World Turns" and John and Marlena on "Days." Hello? Sappiest romance, maybe, but hottest? Cuteness aside (they are adorable), these couples haven't exactly been steaming up my television. Other wacky nominees... how about Ron Moss (Ridge on "Bold and the Beautiful")? My gal friends were chatting about this Friday night. When you have male booty like Tyler Christopher (Nikolas, "GH"), Frank Grillo (Hart, "GL"), the guy who plays Jack on "ATWT" (the name escapes me) and such (I know this sounds harsh but...), Ron's not looking so good anymore. I have a slight problem with Kin Shriner's nod for Lead Actor as well. It's not that he isn't an extremely good actor, it's just that he hasn't exactly had much to work with (story).

There are a few who have had a much more daunting acting task and have risen to the challenge. Some friends and I have decided to put together a list of the nominees, who we think is going to win and who we think should win. My friends, Gina and the "AMC" ladies (don't let the name fool you; they're a fan of more than just "AMC") are my partners in crime. Here are most of them:

Lead Actor
•John Callahan (Edmund Grey, "AMC")
•Tom Eplin (Jake, "Another World")
•Kin Shriner (Scott, "Port Charles")
Who's going to win: John Callahan
Who deserves it: same

Lead Actress:
•Eileen Davidson (Kristin, the Banks' triplets)
•Vanessa Marcil (Brenda, "GH")
•Kim Zimmer (Reva, "GL")
Who's going to win: Vanessa Marcil

Turn to SOAP, page 6

Another Girl surprises Iron Horse

By Kevin Monahan
Collegian Staff

ANOTHER GIRL
Iron Horse Music Hall
Feb. 7

NORTHAMPTON — The vibe was weak and the crowd was small, but singer/songwriter Lynne Kellman's band Another Girl impressed the majority of the audience at the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton Saturday with their surprisingly above average pop songs and tender acoustic ballads.

Working with songs mostly from her debut album In the Galaxy — on which she played all of the instruments except the drums — Kellman guided her band through a very short set that, despite its length, provided the best In the Galaxy has to offer. Opening with "Super Girl," which Kellman intended to call her band before deciding on the opposite extreme, Another Girl moved smoothly through their set. The songs were formulaic, but Kellman, supported on stage by a bassist and drummer, proved that the basic formula for a guitar driven pop song can still work. The songs from In the Galaxy can at times be clichéd, and can at other times be highly emotionally charged. Songs such as "Anything for You" fare better when performed live than when produced in the studio. Other songs such as "Growing Gold" are unexpectedly uplifting.

Kellman did face some technical problems during the show. Many times during the performance was Kellman's voice drowned out by feedback and her own guitar. However, these setbacks were few, and Another Girl sailed through most of their album with songs such as "Holiday" and "In Interstate."

Creating soundscapes without the complex instrumentation on the album, Another Girl manages to do without the violins and cello parts that feature prominently on In the Galaxy.

Kellman and company ended their 40-minute set with the punk-edged power pop of "Favorite."

Sounding better live than in the studio, Another Girl overcame the apathy of the audience Saturday night, and gave them something more than they expected. Kellman did a more than adequate job of proving that she is not just "another girl."

Vision of Disorder an intense concert

By Alexondria Lipka
Collegian Correspondent

VISION OF DISORDER
Pearl Street
Feb. 7

NORTHAMPTON — Keeping up with their reputation as one of the best live shows around, Vision of Disorder stormed Pearl Street last Saturday night leaving behind a tornado-like frenzy, complete with blood, sweat, and even tears. By the time the four opening bands had finished their sets, the crowd was more than ready to experience the highly anticipated headliner of the evening.

Among those bands aiding in the night's festivities were Crown of Thornz and One King Down who, for the most part, did a more than adequate job in warming up the audience for to energy–filled event which promised to take place soon enough.

Straying from their usual routine, V.O.D. opened with "Suffer," and thus began the night for the entire hardcore family respectfully assembled at their feet. "Element," a favorite among many, soon followed as lead singer Tim Williams clearly demonstrated his impressive vocal abilities, which are imitated by many singers, but duplicated by none. Playing most of the songs off of their self–titled, latest release, such as "Gloom," "Zone Zero" and "Ways to Destroy One's Ambition," Vision of Disorder tried to dispel all beliefs that one must act a certain way or comply with a certain lifestyle to enjoy their music.

The band also gave a sample off of their forth–coming album due out in mid–July, according to bassist Mike Fleischmann) in the form of a funky tune entitled "Impact." And what V.O.D. show would be complete without the old school classic, "Choke," which they played, as nearly everyone present whipped themselves into a furry. Ending the evening with "D.T.O." and their encore, "Through My Eyes," Vision of Disorder left many people happy and very few, if any, dissatisfied.

Although much criticism has been heaped upon this hard– working band in regards to what they do and do not stand for, nearly all of doubts were destroyed in this intense, live performance. Hardcore shows never cease to amaze as the bond between fans is second to none and the energy of those present and their loyalty towards the bands rate among the highest of any genre of music. This show was no exception.

UMASS DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

Something for Everyone

Workshops offered evenings, daytime, weekends, off and on campus

Nearly 100 noncredit workshops including:
• Mask Making
• Network Marketing
• Web Page Design
• Chocolate
• Songwriting
• Art Therapy
• Retirement Planning
• Genealogy
• UFOs
• Playback Theatre
• Bartending
• EMT Training

Spring semester workshops begin February 9
For a free course catalog, call 413-545-0107 or e-mail contined@admin.umass.edu
www.umass.edu/contined/

a quality education at an affordable price

• DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION •
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

AEROBICS
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
• Classes Daily
• Certified Instructors
• Suspended Wood Floor
• Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst 256-0949

Great Service! Great Products!
Nutrition Express
"For Your Fastest Gains"
Supplements, Personal Training, Nutrition Programs

Designer Whey Protein	$26
Creatine 400g	$29
Met Rx 20 ct	$38
Diet Fuel	$21
Androstenedionel

Fat Burners, Food Bars, & More
Ask for Garrett
253-1850

Ski or Ride just
Bus + Lift Ticket Included

Daily Bus Leaves: UMass	9:55 am
Amherst Center	10:00 am
Arrive: Mt. Tom	10:35 am
Leave: Mt. Tom	4:30 pm
Arrive: UMass	5:10 pm

Mt. TOM The Arts
Eastern Slope Ski & Sport
Paint Pan

amc
Hampshire 6 •584 7550
Hampshire Mall
Great Expectations (R)
Today at (5:30 @ $2.50) 8:30
Replacement Killers (R)
Today at (5:50 @ $2.50) 8:40
Spice World (PG)
Today at (5:50 @ $2.50) 8:40
Titanic (PG 13)
Today at (4:20 @ $2.50) 8:10
Good Will Hunting (R)
Today at (5:20 @ $2.50) 8:20
Deep Rising (R)
Today at (5:40 @ $2.50) 8:30
Special Engagement, no Passes or Coupons
Mt. Farms 4 •584 9153
Mt. Farms Mall
Wag The Dog (R)
Today at (5:50 @ $2.50) 8:40
Desperate Measures (R)
Today at (5:50 @ $2.50) 8:40
As Good As It Gets (PG-13)
Today at (5:30 @ $2.50) 8:20
Blues Brothers 2000 (PG-13)
Today at (5:40 @ $2.50) 8:30

LAST MINUTE SPECIAL!
SPRING BREAK '98!
BAHAMAS!
Cool Ship Dining
INCLUDES 21 HOURS OF FREE DRINKS!
From only $349! Per person
ALL SPRING BREAK TRIPS INCLUDE:
CLASS travel INTERNATIONAL
Call for more information today!
1-800-838-6411
FIND 15 FRIENDS AND YOU'LL TRAVEL FREE!

University Health Services
Mental Health Groups Spring '98

MONDAY
THE DREAM, THE BODY AND THE HIDDEN PSYCHE
Explore how our dreams reflect the dynamics of our bodies and emotions. Topics include: dreamwork, family dynamics, psychosomatic process, health and the unconscious mind.
Mon., 9 -10 am., 3/2 - 4/13

INTERPERSONAL GROUP
For college men and women who experience difficulties in interpersonal connections or who have concerns about their relationships.
Mon., 3:45 - 5:00 pm., 3/2 - 5/11

SUPPORTING GAY, LESBIAN AND BISEXUAL IDENTITIES
Exploring such issues as: coming out; building community; dating relationships; family of origin; and stress management.
Mon., 3:45 - 5:00 pm., 2/23 - 4/13

WEDNESDAY
ADULT CHILDREN OF DYSFUNCTIONAL FAMILIES
This 8 week group is for individuals wanting to explore the impact of family relationships on their lives as UMASS students.
Wed., 3:30 - 5:00 pm.

MEN OF COLOR
Focus will be on the academic, interpersonal, social and dating dynamics of men of color. Identifying body image, self esteem, sexuality and the reactions of society will also be explored.
Wed., 3:45 - 5:00 pm., 2/25 - 4/1

MORE Groups Beginning IN LATE SPRING
545-2337

THURSDAY
COUPLES SKILLS GROUP
Improve your communication and conflict resolution skills, to help deepen your relationship.
Thur., 8:30 - 10:00 am.

WOMEN'S SELF EXPLORATION GROUP–
(For older undergraduates, graduate students, student dependents and Kaiser members)
This group provides an opportunity for women to explore personal relationships, work, studies, family of origin, health, acculturation and other relevant concerns. This group is ongoing with members added as space permits.
Thur., 9 - 10:30 am.

COED SELF–EXPLORATION GROUP
(For older undergraduates, graduate students, student dependents and Kaiser members)
This group provides an opportunity for men and women to explore their interpersonal relationships. This group is ongoing with members added as space permits.
Thur., 3:30 - 5:00 pm.

FRIDAY
UNDERGRAOURTE WOMEN'S SELF EXPLORATION GROUP
Primarily focused on women with self esteem issues who want to explore how these issues may interfere with their ability to form satisfying interpersonal relationships.
Fri., 9 - 10:30 am., 2/13- 5/11

Groups are conducted by Mental Health Division staff. Group sessions are covered under UHS Basic Health Plan and Kaiser pre-paid plan. Groups require an initial screening appointment which can be arrang ed by calling 545-23 37 or by stopping at 127 Hills North
For further information please call 545-2337, Mon - Fri 8 am - 5 pm.
or refer to the Mental Health website at http: www.umass.edu/uhs/mentalhealth

COURTESY ROANNE TENNES

She's back!

My Best Friend's Wedding, starring Julia Roberts, is the number one movie video rental. Roberts stars as Julianne Potter, a restaurant critic, who realizes too late that she's in love with her best friend in this romantic comedy.

■ soap

continued from page 5

Who deserves it: Eileen (the fact that Cynthia Watros, Annie on "GL," didn't even get a nod is beyond ridiculous).

Hottest Male:
•Shemar Moore (Malcolm , "Young & the Restless)
•Ronn Moss (Ridge, "B&B")
•Ingo Rademacher (Jax, "GH")
Who's going to win: Ingo Rademacher
Who deserves it: same

Hottest Female:
•Jensen Buchanan (Vicky, "AW")
•Sharon Case (Sharon, "Y&R")
•Kassie DePaiva (Blair, "One Life To Live")
Who's going to win: tie between Kassie and Jensen
Who deserves it: Kassie DePaiva

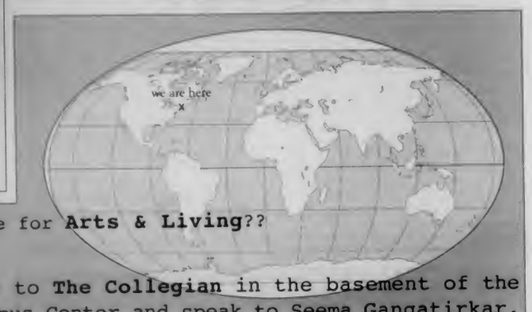
Hottest Romance:
•Mateo and Hayley, "AMC"
•Holden and Lily, "ATWT"
•John and Marlena, "Days"
Who's going to win : John and Marlena
Who deserves it : Holden and Lily

Outstanding Supporting Actor:
•Michael E. Knight (Tad, "AMC"),
•John McCook (Eric, "B&B"),
•Robert Newman (Josh, "GL")
Who's going to win: Michael E Knight
Who deserves it: same

Outstanding Supporting Actress:
•Tricia Cast (Nina, Y&R)
•Judi Evans Luciano (Paulina)
•Kelley Menighan-Hensley (Emily, "ATWT")
Who's going to win: Judi Evans
Who deserves it: same

Outstanding Younger Lead Actor:
•Steve Burton (Jason, "GH")
•Eddie Cibrian (Cole, "Sunset Beach")
•Daniel Markel (David, "ATWT")
Who's going to win: Steve Burton
Who deserves it: same

Outstanding Younger Lead Actress:
•Lauralee Bell (Christine, "Y&R")
•Sarah Brown (Carly, "GH")
•Gina Tognoni (Kelley, "One Life To Live")
Who's going to win: Sarah Brown
Who deserves it: same



Outstanding Villian:
•Sam Behrens (Gregory, "SB")
•Roger Howarth (Todd, "OLTL")
•Michael Nadar (Dimitri, "AMC")
Who's going to win: Roger Howarth
Who deserves it: Michael Nadar

Outstanding Villianess:
•Sarah Buxton (Annie, "SB")
•Alison Sweeney (Sami, "Days")
•Cynthia Watros (Annie, "GL")
Who's going to win: Alison Sweeney
Who deserves it: Cynthia Watros

Outstanding Male Newcomer:
•Jensen Ackles (Eric, "Days")
•Michael Park (Jack, "ATWT")
•Clive Robertson (Ben, "SB")
Who's going to win: Michael Park
Who deserves it: same

The rest of the nominations will be in next week's column.

Jacob Fanning is a Collegian columnist. Soap Chat appears on Mondays. You can e-mail any questions or comments about this column to jfanning@student.umass.edu.

Want to write for Arts & Living??

Come down to The Collegian in the basement of the Campus Center and speak to Seema Gangatirkar.

If you are interested in TELEVISION... UVC TV19

TV19

ATTEND our General Meeting TONIGHT at 7 PM in the UVC STUDIO

Find out about our beginning this Tuesday and our job opening for PRODUCTION COORDINATOR

545-1336 for more info...

BACK TO SCHOOL SPECIAL
Pentium 166MMX Complete System Starting at $999 with 32MB Ram & 14" Color Monitor
• Custom Configured Systems
• Upgrades and Components
• Network Cards starting at $29
• $5 off any Network Card with this ad
Looking for a Computer?
Green Leaf Computers
413 . 256 . 6110

Amherst Barbers
Tel. 253-1722
40 Main Street, Amherst, MA (Next to Newbury Comics)
Appointment Not Neccessary
The Right Place to Be! 3 Barbers Everyday Unisex Hair Styling
Jim Terri Gabe
Guys & Gals• Razor Cuts • Fades Clipper Cuts • Kids Cuts Layer Cuts • Flat Tops
9 & up Hours: Mon- Fri. 8-5:15 · Sat 8-4:45

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING
• 50% Student Discounts
• Right in Amherst
• Space is Limited! Call...
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
Free Info Session Wed. Feb. 25th @ 7:00 pm, Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst Common

COME SEE WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT...
SHAB
Gain Experience in Administrative Aspects of Health Care
Come join the Student Health Advisory Board
Informational meeting:
Wed. Feb. 11 & 25, 5:30 -6:30pm
University Health Services Rm. 304
For mora info call Tamara at tha Health Education Office 577-5181

SYRACUSE STUDY ABROAD
Zimbabwe • England • Italy
Hong Kong • Spain • France
• Wide-ranging courses
• Internships & service-learning
• Business programs in 3 countries
• Organized study-travel
• Grants, scholarships, loans
• Placement in foreign universities
Syracuse University 119 Euclid Avenue Syracuse, NY 13244
800-235-3472 soabroad@syr.edu http://sumweb.syr.edu/dlpa

Get in SHAPE!
NUTRITION EXPRESS
NUTRITIONAL SUPPLEMENTS & PERSONAL TRAINING
Amherst, Mass. 253-1850

"What a Great Experience!"

Learning the language. Meeting people. Coming face to face with history, art and architecture, culture, food and fun.

UNIVERSITY STUDIES ABROAD CONSORTIUM... Small classes. Personal attention. Fully accredited — receive university credit. We provide great classes in intensive, language, history, anthropology, art, business, economics, political science...

University Studies Abroad Consortium
University of Nevada Library / 323
Reno, Nevada 89557
(702) 784-6569
E-mail: usac@admin.unr.edu
http://www.scs.unr.edu/~usac

AUSTRALIA • CHILE • COSTA RICA • ENGLAND • FRANCE • GERMANY
ITALY • NEW ZEALAND • SPAIN • THAILAND • CHINA

UMass takes step back in Hockey East playoff race

Simply stated, the Massachusetts hockey team took a huge step backwards this weekend.

After enjoying its first pair of back-to-back wins of the season last weekend against Providence and Merrimack, the Minutemen put themselves right back in the thick of things for the final playoff spot in the Hockey East tournament.

With a key weekend against New Hampshire and UMass- Lowell, the Minutemen needed to pick up at least one victory to close the three-point deficit they faced.

However, they came away pointless and are now looking at an uphill battle over the final month of the season. Still lurking in the immediate future are games against Maine (three), UNH (two), Boston University (two) and Boston College (one). UMass still trails Merrimack for the last tournament spot by three points, although it does have two games in hand.

"We have to be like that chicken with the frog's hands wrapped around his neck. It ain't over 'til it's over," Massachusetts coach Joe Mallen said following his team's 3- 1 defeat at the hands of UMass–Lowell yesterday afternoon. "But since the program restarted, it's been never say never, never say die.

"We'll go right down to the wire and see if we catch some of these teams thinking that it's an easy game, and then all of a sudden it's a hard game," Mallen said. "I think that it's important for all of our guys to play hard down the stretch. It's important for our seniors, the guys that restarted the program from scratch, and that our younger players get more experience."

So what went wrong this weekend for UMass? Practically everything.

Friday night the Minutemen made the trip to Durham, N.H. and fell to the Wildcats 4–1. Odd–man rushes did the Minutemen in on numerous occasions, and only the spectacular goaltending of Brian Regan kept the high– powered New Hampshire attack from putting seven or eight goals up on the scoreboard.

"UNH plays really well in this rink. It suits their style of play," Regan said in regard to the Whittemore Center. "My job is to keep my team in the game. I like playing in this building. If you can't get up for playing here, then you can't get up for anything."

R.J. Gates tallied the lone goal for UMass, who seemed to still have some momentum heading into its Sunday matinee with the River Hawks.

But the anemic offense that prevailed so often early in the season returned to the Minutemen. After tallying only five shots in the first period, UMass didn't find the scoreboard until the 8:52 mark of the third period, when Dean Campanale split the Lowell defense and beat Martin Fillion to cut the UMass deficit to 2–1.

The comeback effort was short–lived when Mike Mulligan poked home a loose puck 1:06 later to seal the deal on the River Hawks season sweep over the Minutmen and recapturing of the Alumni Cup.

"We had a bunch of guys playing well, but we also had a bunch of guys that didn't come to play tonight," Campanale said. "We need to come to the rink with more intensity. When we play with intensity, the offense happens."

The Minutemen still were only down by two goals with five minutes to play in regulation, when leading scorer Tim Lovell crushed a River Hawk defender up against the boards. Lovell was then given a five–minute major and ejection for hitting from behind. The penalty appeared to be retaliation for the fact that Lovell was harassed throughout the game by the Lowell defense.

"You can't take a penalty like that, not at that point in the game," Mallen said. "We're trying to get back in the game, and one guy takes out his frustrations. That's just unacceptable."

So what's next for UMass? A trip to Orono, Maine to face the Black Bears in a weekend series. Will the Dr. Jekyll perspective of the Minutemen come to fruition, or will Mr. Hyde show up?

We'll just have to wait and see.

Mike Kobylanski is a Collegian columnist.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

In a massive lapse in defensive zone coverage, John Campbell was left alone in front of the net, and the sophomore forward took his sweet time to beat Regan high to his glove side for the 2–0 lead at the 8:07 mark of the third period. Campanale got the Minutemen on the board with a one–man stickhandling show at the 8:52 mark, scoring on Fillion high to his stick side for the 2–1 deficit.

But Mulligan's goal just 1:06 later was enough for Lowell, and after already winning the first two games in the season series, the Alumni Cup was for the River Hawks' taking.

On Friday night, UMass travelled to the hostile confines of the Whittemore Center to face off with fourth–ranked UNH. If a 4–1 loss could be respectable, this was an example of one, as the Minutemen faced both the daunting Wildcat offense, and the daunting capacity home crowd of 6,110.

Two goals in the first period by Springfield native Tom Nolan proved to be enough for the final score, but UMass came back with a strong second period effort only to have Mark Mowers score on a power play with :35 left. Freshman forward R.J. Gates scored his seventh goal of the season at the 2:18 mark of the third period to slice UNH's lead to 3–1, but Derek Bekar's breakaway goal at the 4:47 mark stopped any momentum for the Minutemen.

Regan stood on his head once again, making 28 saves in the place where he set the HE quarterfinal record of 55 saves last season. Mallen went into the game knowing that if his team gave up too many odd–man rushes, they would lose — and they did.

"We gave up way too many odd–man rushes, and we had a good game plan going into the game, but we just didn't execute it fully," Mallen said. "The problem was with our offense more than anything else, and if we bury our scoring chances, then maybe this game becomes a different story."

JOSHUA KANGAS/N– COLLEGIAN

UNH goalie Sean Matile could only watch as R.J. Gates scored his seventh goal of the season in hockey's 4–1 loss to the Wildcats Friday.

■ basketball

continued from page 10

hit 3–of–4 three–point attempts to finish with 11.

Rayside pulled down seven rebounds for the Minutewomen, helping them to outrebound SBU 31–24 and create some easy points.

"If you rebound the ball, you give yourself a chance to win every basketball game that you're in. We made a special effort tonight, and we talked about it in the locker room that defensively you have to block out, not letting them get anything easy. Take that extra step and keep things alive, and that allowed us to get some extra shots, or pull out and run the offense again," O'Brien said.

The Bonnies were led by junior forward Hilary Waltman, who had 20, along with senior forward Kelly Matthews, who put in eight.

The win was an important conference win for the Minutewomen. They were tied for second place in the Atlantic 10 East with St. Bonaventure, going into Friday's game. The win will most likely help UMass to earn an automatic bid into the A–10 tournament at the end of this month. UMass has five games left in the regular season, all of them against A–10 opponents.

"The second place team is the one that gets the bye for the first round, and right now as a team that's what you're going for," O'Brien said.

■ women's

continued from page 10

balanced offense and shot selection, through which they shot .509 from the floor, and .438 from three–point land.

Three Minutewomen, led by sophomore Alison MacFarland with 20, reached double digits. Junior Tez Kraft followed with 13, and there was another impressive effort by freshman Kathy Corner, who had 11. Forwards Kara Tudman and Yolanda Rayside also came up big with nine and eight points, respectively.

But it was MacFarland's efforts that jump–started UMass. Driving off the baseline or taking the jumper from 16 feet out, the sophomore seemed to exude confidence from the tip–off. She had eight points while playing just nine minutes in the first half.

"I just felt comfortable with my shot and let it go," MacFarland said. "Besides, it wasn't so much the shots made but our defense that made the difference."

In the second half, MacFarland simply lit up for 12 points, including a 3–for–5 outing from behind the arc. She also contributed three rebounds, and one steal while committing only two personal fouls.

Her spark led to an all–around influx of confidence for the Minutewomen as everyone seemed to do their part for the win. Sabriya Mitchell played another fine defensive game with three rebounds, one block and one steal to go along with her game–leading eight assists.

Coyner was ferocious when leading the offense from the point while raking in four rebounds. Also contributing to the win was Lucia Madajova, scoring a pair and adding two rebounds.

"A blocked shot, a rebound, a put–back, just playing the role of of being the rebounders, and giving us the option to score inside is going to make us do okay," Massachusetts coach Joanie O'Brien said.

The diversity of the offensive punch along with the rotation off the bench throughout the game gave UMass the advantage over St. Bonaventure, which couldn't find a way to contain the Minutewomen. The bench players simply did what the coaches and team expected of them and played their role doing the little things to keep the Bonnies running throughout game.

Women's gym undefeated after Fisher secures win

By Justin Rudd
Collegian Staff

Undefeated. That's the title the Massachusetts women's gymnastics team now holds. This past Friday the Minutewomen headed to Kingston, R.I. to take on their Atlantic 10 rivals, the Rhode Island Rams.

Led by freshman Jill Fisher, UMass captured its fourth straight win 189.525–187.850. With this win the Minutewomen improve to a 4–0 mark on the season.

UMass's scoring was sparked in the day's first event, the vault, with the Minutewomen jumping out to a 48.150– 47.350 lead. This edge was initiated by Fisher, who captured first, and senior Penny LeBeau, who grabbed second place.

As the events progressed, UMass managed to maintain its lead through the uneven bars, however the Minutewomen hit rough times and rocky roads when it came to the balance beam.

With UMass scoring a sub–par 46.400 on the beam, the Rams seized the moment and jumped ahead leading the competition into the next event. However, despite its efforts, Rhode Island was once again overtaken by the rallying UMass squad.

On the last event the Minutewomen made things exciting, scoring a 48.375 on floor exercise and sweeping the top three places to achieve the come from behind win.

A New York native and team stand–out, Fisher anchored the event for UMass by scoring a 9.925, which ranks second all–time at UMass just behind former All–American Tammy Marshall's 10.000.

Fisher, who hails from Dix Hills, N.Y., has made a major impact on this year's team. The 5–foot–1 freshman comes to UMass with an extremely impressive resume including the 1997 Junior Olympic national floor championship, and 1995 Junior Olympic national beam champinonship. She has been elected to a number of all–county and all–state teams as well, under the coaching of UMass' former NCAA champion, Marshall.

Fisher was followed by fellow N.Y. natives, junior Betsy Colucci and freshman Kyla Palombini. Colucci finished second and Palombin took third on the floor, both helping to secure the UMass win.

The Minutewomen take their undefeated tenure to Boyden Gymnasium for their next match–up, when they take on Atlantic 10 opponent George Washington University and Yale today at 7 p.m.

What's cheaper than a card?
Healthier than candy?
Comes in lots of colors?
Can be funny, cute or sexy?
CONDOMGRAMS!
Send one to that special someone.
Campus Center - 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.
Monday - February 9
Wednesday - February 11
Thursday - February 12
Sponsored by your Peer Health Educators
Health Education Division • University Health Services

AEROBICS
CARDIO–KICKBOXING • YOGA
• Classes Daily
• Certified Instructors
• Suspended Wood Floor
• Area's Largest Room
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
360 West Street
South Amherst 256 0050

Paris '98 SUMMER PROGRAMS
• Over 75 accredited courses
• French Immersion Program
• Fine Arts Program
• Advanced Photography and Web Design Programs
• Cultural Excursions
For more information, call or write:
The American University of Paris
Summer Programs, Box S-2000
102 rue St. Dominique
75007 Paris, France
Tel. (33/1) 40 62 06 14
Fax (33/1) 40 62 07 17
New York office: Tel. (212) 983-1414
Web site: http://www.aup.fr
E-mail: Summer@aup.fr

Internships
ADVERTISING
ACCOUNTING
DAILY COLLEGIAN
PROMOTIONS
FINANCE
MARKETING
The Collegian is looking for talented students to run its Business Department.
Pick up an application at the Collegian

THE EDWIN M. ROSSMAN ALUMNI CAREER FORUMS
MATHEMATICS

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Coma danca with Ishh at Walker's Grill on 2/10. 10pm.

$ WIN MONEY $
Win $ in the Centrel Area Battle of the Bands on March 6th. Demo tapes due by Feb 18. One member must be a Central Resident. Contact Chris 6-2168, Nick 6-5894

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Single room apartmeat at Cliffside. Available Feb onward. All utilities included $540/month. Please call Robin at 665-1281.

AUTO FOR SALE

Porchasing a osad car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Toyota Tarcel 94 Good condition. Extended. Dealer's Guaranty. $7500. Call 546-2430

88 Toyata Carolla 5 speed. Good condition. 149k. $2200 Call 256-1767

1989 BMW 325i Navy blue/grey interior. new tires, highway miles. Excellent student car. Runs great. $4500 or B/O. Call 546-5536

88 Chevy Cavaliar Good running car. Very reliable. Has new brakes, tires, radiator. Replaced engine and rebuilt alternator about 2 years ago. Selling for $1200 ($300 below NADA) Call 546-3842

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795.

COMPUTERS

City Communications Pentium Computers!!! Pentium 233 MHz with MMX Technology Loaded. Princeton 15" XVGA Monitor included. Only $1100!!! Call for specs 546-8826

Naw P166MMX from $895. Laptops $1295! Peripherals. ZetaVision 582-9198 V/MC/AMEX

EMPLOYMENT

CAMP WAYNE FOR GIRLS- Northeast Pennsylvania 6/20-8/18/98. Have the most memorable sommer of yoor life! Directors for Drama, Camping/Nature, Cheerleading, Golf, Counselors for Tennis, Gymnastics, Swim, Sail, Fine Arts, Video, Photography, Guitar, Waterskiing, Dance, Piano, Team Sports, Low Ropes, Karate, Head Chef and Assistant. Other positions available. On Campus Interviews March 3rd. Call 1-800-279-3019 for more information.

Toor Counselors/Toor Directors up lead teenagers on 3-6 week adventures in Canada and the U.S.A. Must be 20 years of age or older by July 1. Enormous responsibility coupled with unique travel opportunities. Contact Westcoast Connection 800-767-0227.

NATIONAL PARK EMPLOYMENT- Parks, Forests, Wildlife Preserves. Ask us how! 517-324-3109 Ext. N50012

Whitewater Raft Guidas Needed in Western MA. Full or Part-time available. No experience necessary. We will train. Looking for athletic, personable people who like to work hard in the outdoors. Call Crab Apple Whitewater (413)339-0188 for more information and an application.

EMPLOYMENT

Full-Time Summer Positios Available at Crab Apple Whitewater for a Photo Technicien at our Minilab. Job entails developing film and printing pictures. No experience necessary but some past use of lab helpful. Call (413)339-0188 for info and an application.

EXCEPTIONAL SUMMER OPPORTUNITY- Camp Wayne, NE PA (Divs/NYC)- Sports oriented. Counselor/Specialists for all Land/Water Sports including Tennis, Camping, Climbing/Ropes, Mountain Biking, Rocketry, Roller Hockey, Sailing/Waterskiing, A&C, Drama, Radio, Video. Campus Interviews Tues, March 3rd. Please call 1-888-737-9296 or 515-883-3067. Leave your name, phone number and mailing address.

MAINTENANCE PERSON Brandywine Apartments in Amherst. Full-time. General maintenance skills including electrical, plumbing, carpentry and ceramic tile work necessary. Must live on site. Duties include after hours "call" on rotating basis. Competitive salary with benefits, including apartment. Send resume to: 166 Brandywine Dr., Amherst, MA 01002. Or call (413)549-0600. Fax:(413)549-1313

CRUISE SHIP & LAND-TOUR JOBS Discover how to work in exotic locations, meet fun people, while earning a living in these exciting industries! For more information: 517-324-3092 Ext C50012

ENTERTAINMENT

Gorilla-Grams
Balloons, roses, poems, etc. Send the Crazy Gorilla on Valentine's Day. Sign up in the Newman Center on 2/10 and 2/12. Student Rates Available. Info call (413)781-9696

FOR RENT

SUMMER RENTALS
CAPE COD GROUP Sommar Rantals- Some waterfrant heauza, some with swimming poals. Falmouth area. Diamond Real Estate (508)477-1900

Fridga Rantals Free delivery. 253-8742

FOR SALE

Foll Size Futon Used one semester. $150/BO. 546-4841

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

To My Daar John,
"Just sit back,
Just smoke cigarettes,
Be the one with the loudest mouth."
CAUSE IT'S YOUR BIRTHDAY!!
Love, Ryanne

HEALTH & BEAUTY

Acupuncture and Herbal Medicine National Board Certified Licensed. 549-8542

INSTRUCTION

University Bartending Course 50% Student Discount. National Certification Available. Spring Sessions This Semester. Space is Limited. 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

MISCELLANEOUS

Motaata Agaioat Majority Organizatiaa is an assault on conformity. Booga

FREE T-SHIRT + $1000
Credit Card fundraisers for fraternities, sororities & groups. Any campus organization can raise up to $1000 by earning a whopping $5.00/VISA application. Call 1-800-932-0528 ext 65. Qualified callers receive FREE T-SHIRT.

MUSICIANS WANTED

No haircutting involved, just solid acapella singing. Call Daniel: 665-7581

PERSONALS

"You wara meant for mel"- Jewel. Free love and valentines a t www.studentadvaotaga.com /spid

ROOM FOR RENT

Oaa badroom available in Puffton Village. $257.50 per month. 1st and last month's down. Must be responsible, considerate, and like to party but still get work done. Call Jay, Jill, or Rob @ 549-7203

SERVICES

Know Your Rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find Out! Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Nead halp? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

STEREO & CD EQUIP

200 Watt 3-Way Speakers For Sale. Never used. $450 or B/O. Steve 546-3042

Car Audio Equipment for low, low prices. Face Off Cassette $45. Woofers- All sizes, from $40. Kicker Boxes from $60. Bass Tubes, Door Speakers, 700W Basshox, House Speakers 700W, Amps and Wirekits. Everything Wholesale!!! Call 253-4955 and ask for Jake.

STEREO & CD EQUIP

Car Stereo Equipment Kenwood Detach Face- 1 year old, paid $350. 1 emp 100x2, paid $150. 1 emp 100x4, paid $100. 1 pair Pioneer 6x9 speakers, 100w, paid $110. Whole system sounds great; needs nothing. Selling as package deal for $300. Call 546-3842

Tascam Multitrack Recorder 4 track mixing board and recorder. Only 8 months old. Received a 24 track as a gift over break. Will include: 1 mic, never been used; 4 professional recording tapes. Paid $550, will sell for $330. Call 546-3842

TRAVEL

Spring Break- Cancun and Nassau from $399. Air, hotel, transfers, parties, and more! Organize a small group- Earn free trips plus commission! Call 1-800-SPRING BREAK. 1-800-777-4642

#1 Spring Break from $119! FREE SPRING BREAK AND PARTIES- ORGANIZE A GROUP! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Barbados, Florida. Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

EARLY BIRD SPECIAL EUROPE- SUMMER '98
Northeast Dep's $329 R/T
Cardib/Mexico- $199 R/T
Florida- $79 O/W
Puerto Rico- $99 O/W
Call 800-326-2009
http://www.airhitch.org

SPRING BREAK 98
Free food and drinks! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica and Florida from $399. Organize a small group and travel FREE! Highest commissions and lowest prices. Call Surf & Sun Tours to become a campus representative (800)574-7577

TRAVEL

Spring Break '98 Get Going!!! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida. Group Discounts & Free Drink Parties! Sell 5 & go free! Book Now!!! Visa/MC/Disc/Amex 1-800-234-7007. http://www.endlessSummertours.com

Classifieds can be placed at The Collegian's Office in the Campus Center Basement. Or call us at 545-3500.

Internships Available!
Collegian BusinessOffice is Now Taking Applications Positions Available in:
•Marketing
•Promotions
•Finance
•Business
•Advertising
Applications are available at our office in room 113 Campus Center (in the basement) or Call 545-3500 if you have any questions.

Roses are red,
Violets are blue,
Put in a Classified
to a sweetheart from you.

Special Classifieds
Valentine's Day Issue
Deadline: February 10

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Personals may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section MUST be used to sell items, rent roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identity and/or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

NEW Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
AUTO PARTS
CHILDCARE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
COMPUTERS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FURNITURE
GREEK ANNOUNCEMENTS
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HEALTH & BEAUTY
HOUSES FOR RENT
HOUSES FOR SALE
HOUSESITTING
JEWELRY
INSTRUCTION
LOST & FOUND
6 DAYS FREE
MISCELLANEOUS
MISCELLANEOUS RENT
MOTORCYCLES
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
MUSIC LESSONS
MUSICIANS WANTED
PERSONALS
PETS FOR SALE
RESUMES
RIDES WANTED
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SPORTS
STEREO & CD EQUIP
SUMMER SUBLET
TELEWORK FOR SALE
TICKETS
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
TUTORING SERVICES
TUTOR WANTED
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED GENERAL
WORLD WIDE WEB
YARD SALES

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, FEB. 9

Discussion— "Women at the Wall", a discussion at Hillel House on tolerance and intolerence in Israel, will be held at 7 p.m.

Meeting— S.H.A.R.E. community service organization will be holding an informational meeting at 6 p.m. outside of room 504 Goodell. There will be free pizza.

Meeting— UVC-TV 19 is having its first general meeting of the semester at 7 p.m. in the studio, located at 216 Student Union. For more information call 545-1336.

TUESDAY, FEB. 10

Blood Drive— The American Red Cross will be holding a blood drive from 10:30 – 4:30 p.m. in Campus Center 101. Call 1-800-462-2229 for an appointment, walk-ins welcome.

Meeting— The Ballroom Dancing Club will meet from 5:30–7 p.m. in Totman 101. No experiences is necessary. For more information, contact Shannon at 546-2253.

Meeting— The Animal Rights Coalition will be holding their first general meeting for the semester at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. New members welcome, and food will be served. For more information call 545-1925.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 11

Auditions— Auditions for the UMass improvisational comedy troupe– Mission IMPROVable will be held at 7 p.m. in Campus Center 163. No experience necessary. For more information contact Aaron at 546-5225.

Blood Drive— The American Red Cross will be holding a blood drive from 10:30 – 4:30 p.m. in Campus Center 101. Call 1-800-462-2229 for an appointment, walk-ins welcome.

THURSDAY, FEB. 12

Auditions— Auditions for the UMass improvisational comedy troupe– Mission IMPROVable will be held at 7 p.m. in Campus Center 163. No experience necessary. For more information contact Aaron at 546-5225.

Class— Weekly yoga and meditation class will be held in Butterfield Lounge at 8 p.m. A visiting yoga monk will be teaching. For more information call 253-9555.

Meeting— The UMass Queen Fan Club will meet in the Cape Cod Lounge at 4 p.m. New members are welcome. For more information, contact Sabrina at 546-4938.

Talk— Robyn Ochs will be speaking as part of the GLBT Studies Lecture Series in Campus Center 803. The topic is to be announced. For more information contact the Stonewall Center at 545-4824.

FYI's are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

NOTICES

Writing — Spectrum Magazine is taking submission for the next edition of the magazine. The deadline is Feb. 12. For more information, call the office at 545–2240 or come by in the Student Union, room 406E.

Ever go straight home after classes and forget to grab a Collegian?
www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	17	HSCN Programming
3	CBS/3 Hartford	18	TV–19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	22	NBC/22 Springfield
6	PBS/57 Springfield	23	CNN
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	24	CNN SI
8	UPN/20 Hartford	25	Headline News
9	Weather Channel	26	UCTV
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
		33	Much Music

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 9, 1998

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	62	12	Washbone Ⓒ	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer Ⓒ		Antiques Roadshow Ⓒ		American Experience Ⓒ		Morehouse Men Ⓒ		Connecticut Journal
WFSB	3	3	News Ⓒ	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV Ⓒ	Olympic Winter Games Ⓒ					News Ⓒ	Late Show Ⓒ
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Extra Ⓒ	Ent. Tonight	Olympic Winter Games Ⓒ					News	Late Show Ⓒ
WCVB	5	5	News Ⓒ	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle Ⓒ	Funniest Home Videos		20/20 Ⓒ		Practice "The Trial" (In Stereo)	News Ⓒ	Nightline Ⓒ
WLVI	56		Full House Ⓒ	BoyWorld	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	7th Heaven "Homecoming" Ⓒ		Three "Hope" (In Stereo) Ⓒ		News	Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! Ⓒ	Sudden-Susan Fired Up Ⓒ		Caroline	Naked Truth	Dateline (In Stereo) Ⓒ	News	Tonight Show
WTXX		8	Cheers Ⓒ	Med Abo. You	Judge Judy Ⓒ	Judge Judy Ⓒ	In the House	In the House	Good News Ⓒ	Good News Ⓒ	News	Grace Under	Vibe
WVIT	30	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy Ⓒ	Sudden-Susan Fired Up Ⓒ		Caroline	Naked Truth	Dateline (In Stereo) Ⓒ	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	11	Home Imp.	Simpsons Ⓒ	Seinfeld Ⓒ	Frasier Ⓒ	Melrose Place "Last Train to Baghdad" (In Stereo) Ⓒ		News		Dateline (In Stereo) Ⓒ	News	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	22	News Ⓒ	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! Ⓒ	Sudden-Susan Fired Up Ⓒ		Caroline	Naked Truth	Dateline (In Stereo) Ⓒ	News Ⓒ	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	14	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer Ⓒ		Antiques Roadshow Ⓒ		American Experience Ⓒ		Truth Business: William Hulet	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	29	News Ⓒ	ABC News	Inside Edition	Frasier Ⓒ	Funniest Home Videos		20/20 Ⓒ		Practice "The Trial" (In Stereo)	News Ⓒ	Nightline Ⓒ
WSBK	38		Med Abo. You	Med Abo. You	Seinfeld Ⓒ	Frasier Ⓒ	In the House	In the House	Good News Ⓒ	Good News Ⓒ	News	Cheers Ⓒ	M*A*S*H Ⓒ
WTBS	72		Family Matters	Family Matters	Andy Griffith	Andy Griffith	★★½ "Dr. Kildare" (1961, Drama) Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore. Ⓒ					★★ "The Rescuers" (1977, Cartoon) Voices of Eva Gabor, Bob Newhart. Ⓒ
A&E	69		Northern Exposure Ⓒ		Law & Order Ⓒ		Biography "Baby Face Nelson"		American Justice "Cop Killers"		Sherlock Holmes Mysteries	Law & Order "Consultation" Ⓒ
CNN	60	24	Worldview Ⓒ		Moneyline Ⓒ	Crossfire Ⓒ	World Today Ⓒ		Larry King Live Ⓒ		World Today Ⓒ	Sports Illus.	Moneyline Ⓒ
COM	59	26	Lounge Liz.	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★ "Klondike" (1994, Comedy) Brendan Fraser, Steve Buscemi. Ⓒ				Canned Ham	Make-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	67		Wings "Medium Bomber"		Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery: Komodo		Ultimate Guide: Big Cats (R)		Breakout "P.O.W. Escapes"	Extra	Jessica Files "Psycho Killers"
ESPN	63		Up Close	Sportscenter		ESPY	ESPY Awards (Live)					ESPY Postgm.	Sportscenter Ⓒ
LIFE	52		Supermarket	Debt	Celebrity Weddings: In Style		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Woman Named Jackie (Part 1 of 3)				Almost Perfect Golden Girls
MTV	53		MTV Live (In Stereo)		House of Style House Party (R) (In Stereo)				Fashionably Loud III (In Stereo)		Road Rules	Dante (R)	Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	68		Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug Ⓒ	Rugrats Ⓒ	Hey Arnold! Ⓒ	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	I Love Lucy Ⓒ	M.T. Moore	Nanny Ⓒ	Newhart Ⓒ
SCIFI	66		Quantum Leap (In Stereo) Ⓒ		Sequest 2032 (In Stereo) Ⓒ		Sightings Ⓒ	Masters	Forever Knight "Blackwing" Ⓒ		VR.5 "Escape" (In Stereo) Ⓒ		Sequest 2032 (In Stereo) Ⓒ
TLC	65	28	Renovation	Renovation	Home Again	Home Again	Extreme Machines		Stealth		G-Force to Oblivion		Extreme Machines (R)
TNT	70		Law & Clark-Superman		Babylon 5 "A Distant Star" Ⓒ		WCW Nitro (In Stereo Live) Ⓒ						Mohammad Ali Story"
USA	55		Baywatch "Aftershock" Ⓒ		Highlander: The Series Ⓒ		Walker, Texas Ranger Ⓒ		WWF Raw (In Stereo) Ⓒ		WWF War Zone (In Stereo) Ⓒ	Silk Stalkings (R) (In Stereo) Ⓒ
HBO	91		(4:45)		★★ "Space Jam" (1996) Michael Jordan. PG. Ⓒ		★★ "The Substitute" (1996, Drama) Tom Berenger. R Ⓒ				★½ "The Glimmer Man" (1996) Steven Seagal. R Ⓒ		Comedy Hour
MAX	92		(4:30)		Swimsuit: The Movie (1997) Rebecca Bush.		★★ "The Evening Star" (1996) Shirley MacLaine. PG-13 Ⓒ				★½ "The Hunter" (1997, Suspense) Lisa Zane. (In Stereo) R Ⓒ
SHOW	95		(5:15) ★★★ "Orlando" (1992) R.		Filmmaker		Film-maker		★★½ "When a Man Loves a Woman" (1994) Andy Garcia. R Ⓒ		★★★½ "Richard III" (1996, Drama) Ian McKellen. (In Stereo) R Ⓒ

Bruno By C. Baldwin

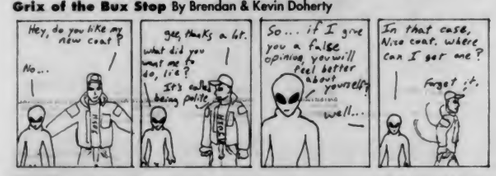
Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Fox Trot By Bill Amend

Thatch By Jeff Shesol



Non Sequitur By Wiley

Bork By Vin D'Agostino

Grix of the Bux Stop By Brendan & Kevin Doherty

Deadpan Taxi By C. Jones

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan 20.–Feb. 18) — You may be more concerned with your own pleasure today than you are with any kind of long-term gains. Take care you don't lose sight of a goal.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You may be annoyed easily today, but there are times when you must not show others just how close to the surface your feelings are.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Take care that you don't expend all of your energy early in the day. You must be conservative and save something for a late-hour effort.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — A small decision may prove critical today. You must be sure that others understand not only what that decision is, but why you have made it.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — It is essential that you keep all appointments today, even if it means neglecting a personal endeavor that you've been anticipated.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You are likely to realize today just what someone else is up to – and you'll realize, too, just how you fit into the overall plan.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You mustn't make the mistake of thinking that style and appearance do not matter today. Indeed, how you dress and how you behave are pivotal now.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You mustn't react too dramatically to an unintentional invasion of privacy today; take care that you say things in such a way that you invite agreement rather than argument.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You can't afford to pick any fights today; take care that you say things in such a way that you invite agreement rather than argument.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — Disappointment may be unavoidable today, but it's not likely to last long. Your spirits can be lifted by a new encounter later in the day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You mustn't respond to new influences in the same old way today. Be more willing to let change occur in a slow, organic way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — Domestic endeavors demand closer attention today. You can't afford to make even a minor error at this time, as others may not understand.

Quote of the Day

"I can be the million that you never made."

"
–Ani DiFranco

Close to Home By John McPherson

"For the hundredth time, no, I don't have the keys to the back of the truck! They're locked in the cab with the others!"

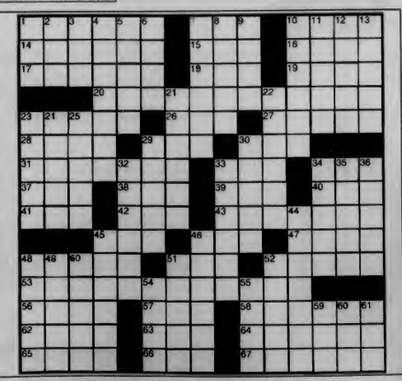
Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-3626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Grilled chicken Sandwich
Cheese Strata
Chiligetti
DINNER
Chicken Stir Fry
Fried Shrimp Dinner
Lentil Chili
Quarter Lb. Burger w/ or w/o Cheese

Worcester
LUNCH
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Barbecued Beef on a Bun
Fettuccini/Tomato (w/ or w/o Meat) Sauce
Golden Burger
DINNER
Beef Fajita
Fried Shrimp Dinner
Tofu Fajita
Manicotti in Sauce

Hampshire
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
American Chop Suey
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
DINNER
Beef Fajita
Ravioli with Tomato Sauce

Berkshire
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Rotini w/ Tomato Sauce
Golden Burger
DINNER
Beef Fajita
Fried Shrimp Dinner
Tofu Fajita
Manicotti in Sauce



ACROSS
1 Puget Sound port
7 Oklahoma city
10 Lickety-split
14 Dieters' needs
15 Block a stream
16 Shakespearean king
17 Dangers
18 Eggs
19 Encourage
20 Rover's doctor
23 Actor Davis
26 NYC opera house
27 Wave part
28 Like a button?
29 Food fish
30 It's for horses!
31 Salon offering
33 Bird of fable
34 Fitness center
37 First lady?
38 Prospector's find
39 Inventor Whitney
40 "Norma —"
41 Domicile: abbr.
42 Offer
43 Grasslands
45 Impress greatly
46 — relief
47 Hurries
48 Trap
51 Neither here — there
52 Flagmaker Ross
53 Outer wear
56 Entr'— intermission
57 FedEx competitor
58 Fixed potatoes
62 Watery
63 Nocturnal mammal
64 Cold spell
65 Denomination
66 Loop trains
67 Type of plan

DOWN
1 Recipe qty.
2 Expert
3 Sedan or convertible
4 "Hamlet" and "Othello" actor
5 Free-for-all
6 Subordinate: abbr.
7 Loved a lot
8 Boat crane
9 "— for All Seasons"
10 Snow shower
11 Eagle's nest
12 Long stories
13 Ontario river
21 Overacted
22 Spiny tree
23 Yellow pigment
24 Debonair
25 Animals' homes
29 Physicist Marie
30 Pits
32 Spider's creation
33 Comment
34 Mortar
35 Signs of drowsiness
36 Untidy
44 Boutique items
45 Passionate
46 Brags
48 Hits
49 Cranny
50 Prank
51 Himalayan country
52 Orthopedic appliance
54 Country cousin
55 Actor Jannings
59 Owns
60 Type of trip?
61 Cozy room

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

MOCK VALOR FOGS
IRAN ANODE ERIC
LYRE INLET ECRU
EXTERNAL AIBALD
LEE TILL LINEAR RELEASE
ALARM PROV CAM
RITO WRING OUI
GAM HEMS BURNT
EDTBLES HENNAS
IONS ANA
INNATE BASTIONS
OAKS VAULT DRIP
EPEE EMOTE ELLE
SETS RAYON DYED

2-9-98 © 1998 United Feature Syndicate

Publication Staff

Night Editor	Chris Stamm
Photo Technician	Brian McDermott
Copy Editor	Victoria Graves
Production Supervisor	Jocelyn Burrows
Production Staff	Susan Ely Teresa Rodrigues

SPORTS weekend
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Monday, February 9, 1998

U.S. women bring focus to Olympics

I went home for lunch yesterday afternoon and flipped on the television as I prepared myself a sandwich. I could hear the muffled Olympic ramblings wafting through the dining room, but I paid no attention to the sounds.

When I sat back in the armchair, grilled cheese in hand, I became much more interested in what CBS was showing.

Before me was not the 15K women's classical cross country skiing or the men's moguls (although for the brief seconds I saw the event looked pretty interesting).

Casey Kane

Instead, Sean McDonough's voice described the first broadcast of women's Olympic hockey. And before I could finish my soda, Cammi Granato scored the first ever women's Olympic hockey goal.

In the first year of women's hockey's inclusion in the quadrennial games, my attention is turned to the sport more than ever. I'll admit, my focus is partially due to the trials and tribulations of Stephanie O'Sullivan.

O'Sullivan, who was dismissed from the United States squad only weeks before the team left for Nagano, is one of 11 children whose parents both succumbed to cancer. O'Sullivan, the oldest girl, not only helped raise her younger siblings, but also went on to become one of the Boston area's strongest women's hockey players.

Only she wasn't included as one of the nation's best. She is vacationing in the Carribean for the duration of the Olympics. But she will try again for Olympic glory when the Games land on U.S. soil in 2002.

Another reason I am watching women's hockey is because of Granato. Only a handful of years older than me, Granato epitomizes all that is good about being a tomboy. She grew up shunning her sister's dolls, preferring instead to hit the frozen field near her house with her brothers.

Hockey is in Granato's blood. Her parents' first date was at a Chicago Blackhawk's game. Her brother, Tony, is a forward for the San Jose Sharks. She grew up the subject of scrutiny — and sometimes ridicule — in boys' youth leagues.

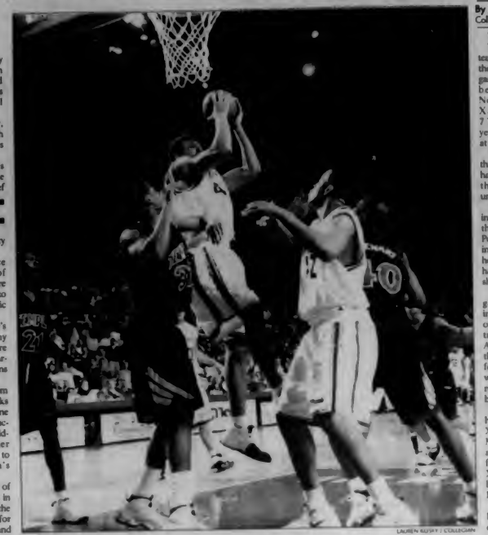
Granato's story in not unfamiliar for the rest of the women on the U.S. squad. Almost every one shoved their ponytails under their helmets and participated in boys' leagues. Most of them were roughed up by brothers, cousins or neighbors who would have traded anything if it meant not getting beat by a girl.

But Granato and her Olympic teammates have moved beyond that. Sure, those days laid the foundation for these women, but now things are different. These women played on college teams, in leagues of women. They are among the best in the world, favored along with Canada for the top two medal spots in the Nagano Games.

They are groundbreakers, that fact should not be forgotten. By using their natural abilities and by harnessing the increased attention heaped on women's sports in the last four or five years these American women, the other international women's skaters and the International Olympic Committee are making great strides — even if that wasn't their primary objective.

In keeping with the spotlight on women theme, another reason to watch these Games is snowboarding. The sport is making its Olympic debut and features a strong U.S. women's contingent, including several participants who are favored for at least some hue of medal.

Sondra Van Ert, a former skier turned boarder, is the reigning world giant slalom champion and appears headed for the same title on the Japanese mountains.



In addition to their own hopes of glory, these women have a burden to carry larger than any country's flag. They have the dreams of young girls resting on their shoulders — at least those girls who would rather rearrange the teeth of an opposing goalie than rearrange the interior of the Barbie Dream Van.

There is a whole jeans and t-shirt crowd expectantly waiting to see how Granato and company — or Van Ert and her teammates — will fare in Japan. Sure, Michelle Kwan, Tara Lipinski and Nicole Bobek may be America's ice princesses, but the women who compete on the U.S. hockey team aren't looking for royalty. They are looking for respect and recognition. Maybe even a little gold.

And because of them, girls everywhere will be pulling the ponytails out from under their hockey helmets.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

UM cements top spot in A–10 with win

LAUREN KUSHY / COLLEGIAN

Lan Ketner slammed home 12 points in the Minutemen's 73–62 win over Xavier last night.

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

What Temple game?

The No. 23 Massachusetts men's basketball team solidified its position as the best team in the Atlantic 10, and posted its 11th win in 12 games by beating No. 21 Xavier, 73–62, yesterday at the Cincinnati Gardens.

Massachusetts	73
Xavier	62

The Minutemen reverted back to the form that earned them a 10-game win streak, and have now passed through the toughest part of their Atlantic 10 schedule relatively unscathed.

UMass controlled the tempo with its bruising inside game, taking the Musketeers out of their usual frantic pace and holding James Posey— often regarded as the best sixth man in the country— to four points. Massachusetts held Xavier to 29 percent shooting in the first half, and built an 18-point halftime lead by shooting 63 percent.

Charlton Clarke played one of his best games this season, scoring 18 points — including four three-pointers. Despite fouling out with three minutes left, Lari Ketner contributed 12 points and four rebounds, and Ajmal Basit helped key UMass' domination in the paint with eight points, six rebounds and four blocks. Senior forward Tyrone Weeks, who scored 10 points and pulled down eight rebounds, rolled his ankle late in the game, but the injury didn't appear to be serious.

After almost ending Kansas' then 49-game home win streak on Dec. 10, UMass snaps Xavier's 16-game home win-streak. The Minutemen played sluggishly against Temple and its zone on Tuesday, but handled Xavier's full- court press well enough for the win. Xavier has won 23 of its last 25 games at home, but both losses have come to the Minutemen.

"We played well." UMass coach Bruiser Flint said. "Guys stepped it up when we needed it most. Charlton Clarke had a fantastic game, he hit some big buckets for us. Everyone had their moments [where they played well]."

It now looks like the road to the top seed in the Atlantic 10 tournament is the Minutemen's to lose, provided they keep playing like they have of late. Their AP ranking, currently at No. 23, shouldn't move too much following yesterday's win because of the loss to Temple on Tuesday.

But beating Xavier in such convincing fashion should impress NCAA tournament officials. With wins on the road against Rhode Island and Xavier and a 79–48 home win against George Washington on Jan. 10, Massachusetts has now beaten the three teams seen as roadblocks to an A–10 title. UMass now stands at 17–6 on the season, and atop the A–10 East at 9–1.

The Minutemen also now has two wins over Top 25 teams on the road, and all six losses have come to teams ranked in the Top 20 at one point during the 1997–1998 season. And even if UMass doesn't earn the automatic bid by winning an A–10 title, they're still in the position to go to the NCAA's for the eighth year in a row.

The Minutemen went on a 27–9 run to close out the first half, turning a tied game into a 43–25 lead. Sophomore forward Mike Babul converted a UMass miss into a basket to push the lead to 29–22, and Clarke nailed two straight three–pointers to give Massachusetts a 35–24 lead. Monty Mack then drew a charge, and knocked down a three at the other end for a 38–24 lead. Clarke buried another three, and the Minutemen took the 18-point lead into halftime.

Xavier cut the lead to seven late in the second half, but the Minutemen withstood the Musketeer's late–pressing flurry. Freshman guard Jonathan DePina, whose missed free throws late in the Cincinnati game allowed the Bearcats to climb back and eventually beat UMass, hit crucial free throws to cement this victory against Xavier.

Mack had 10 points below his season average of 14.4 points per game, but hit big shots when needed. Babul scored eight points and had a steal in 20 minutes.

Massachusetts returns to action tomorrow night when it travels to Duquesne in Pittsburgh. Game time is 7:30 pm., and the contest will be carried by the A–10 Television Network.

Material from WHMP–FM was used in this article.

Women's hoop destroys St. Bonaventure

MacFarland leads team with 20 points in weekend matchup

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Tez Kraft combined with Alison MacFarland and Kathy Coyner (both below) to help the women's hoop team cruise over St. Bonaventure Friday night.

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

Within the span of just under a week, the Massachusetts women's basketball team has gone from playing one of its worst games of the season, to one of its very best.

After losing to a lowly Dayton team on Jan. 31, the Minutewomen went on to thrash Rhode Island on Wednesday, and finally capped things off with an impressive win over St. Bonaventure Friday night, 71-52, at the William D. Mullins Center.

The Minutewomen shut the Bonnies down with aggressive defense and an offense that was on target.

"We tried to control the tempo by running ourselves and by trying to slow them down," coach Joanie O'Brien said. "They did a pretty good job of running, but we didn't really let them get into the flow of the game like they wanted to."

For the first nine minutes the Bonnies were able to hang with UMass. The score was notched at a tie four times, until junior center Yolanda Rayside hit two free throws at the 10:49 mark to break an 8–8 tie and send the Minutewomen on a 28–12 run. Sophomore guard Alison MacFarland keyed the run with eight points, to send UMass to the locker room up by 18 at halftime.

Massachusetts	71
St. Bonaventure	52

The Bonnies went on a small run of their own to start the second half and pull within nine points. That was as close as SBU would ever come. MacFarland scored an additional 12 points in the half, including three three–pointers, and the Minutewomen never looked back.

"We knew they were going to come and try to make a run [in the second half]," O'Brien said. "They are a very good shooting team, we just got a little flat on offense, took a timeout and made some adjustments."

MacFarland earned her 20 points on 7–12 shooting from the field, including 3–for–5 from three–point range, and 3–of–4 from the line. It was a nice change for the sophomore, who has been offensively quiet as of late.

"I was just shooting the ball better today," she said. "They left the middle open a lot of times, and a lot of our baskets were from the paint, and I think once I was able to see that was when I felt comfortable with my shot and I just let it go."

Despite not scoring until the second half, junior forward Tez Kraft chipped in 13 for UMass, along with four assists. Freshman guard Kathy Coyner found her outside shot, and

Turn to BASKETBALL, page 7

Regan, Campanale not enough in losses

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

You take a mulligan as opposed to giving your opponent a mulligan, right?

In the Massachusetts hockey team's 3–1 loss to rival Lowell yesterday afternoon at the William D. Mullins Center, instead of taking a mulligan, the Minutemen were on the losing side of one. At the 9:58 mark of the third period, junior forward Mike Mulligan scored the insurance goal for the River Hawks to puncture UMass' comeback bid.

New Hampshire	4
Massachusetts	1

After senior forward Dean Campanale sliced Lowell's lead to 2–1 with a goal at the 8:52 mark of the final period, the back–breaking goal got by the most unlikely of people. Senior goalie Brian Regan was outstanding all weekend for the Minutemen, matching his 28 spectacular saves in Friday night's 4–1 loss to No. 4 New Hampshire with 28 more saves in this loss.

UM - Lowell	3
Massachusetts	1

However, after Regan could not control the puck on a seemingly harmless play, Mulligan chipped in the loose puck over his left shoulder to give Lowell a 3–1 win. The damage was already done, though, and a somewhat sluggish effort by UMass on both ends of the ice throughout the game could be considered the real momentum killer.

Minuteman coach Joe Mallen credited the effort of two of his seniors, Regan and Campanale, but not his entire team. Campanale was almost a scratch due to a knee injury.

"Dean played with a lot of guts out there for us," Mallen said. "Lowell just played more physical out there today, and they beat us to the pucks along the boards, and played real tough. A few guys just didn't give enough to get us over that hump.

"A lot of guys played intensely, but not enough of them."

One of the tangible awards UMass hung on to the past two seasons was the Alumni Cup, awarded to the winner of the season series between these two teams — not this season. Lowell coach Tim Whitehead likes the fact the Cup is in River Hawk hands, but he likes the fact his team won a game without three out of its top five scorers even better.

"Its been frustrating lately, so to just win is definitely a relief," Whitehead said. "This is a real nice rivalry between our two teams, and it was good to grab the Cup back this year. I'm sure this series will be just as tough next year."

It was an unenigmatic start to the game, as both teams were only able to rack up a combined nine shots on Regan and Lowell senior goalie Martin Fillion. The Minutemen had a few scoring chances, with the best one coming at the hands of Campanale at the 15:25 mark as he drove the right wing and just missed the far post.

The River Hawks went up 1–0 on Anthony Cappelletti's power play goal at the 6:10 mark of the second period, but UMass almost tied the game at the 15:23 mark, as senior defenseman Mike Gaffney's booming slap shot from 20 feet out almost trickled past Fillion.

The Minutemen were given a two–man advantage at the end of the second frame, but could not capitalize, and after a series of quality scoring chances for UMass that came up empty, Lowell made the host team pay for its digressions.

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

UM's All–around effort key factor in decisive A–10 win

Alison MacFarland

Kathy Coyner

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

It was the little things. Just returning to the basics.

Everyone came to shoot. Everyone came to play defense. Everyone came to win.

That's about all there is to say about the Massachusetts women's basketball team's 71–52 victory over St. Bonaventure Friday night at the William D. Mullins Center.

It didn't matter that the Bonnies' leading scorer, Hilary Waltman, reached her points per game average with 20. That was about their only statistical highlight for the night.

At the end of the first half of Friday night's game, four Minutewomen had scored over six points. Waltman had just six points while four of her teammates had contributed a minute two points a piece. UMass took over the game after a few early and even exchanges to head into halftime leading, 36–18.

Two things can be said about UMass' win. The first is that the Minutewomen's focused defense, especially on rebounding and transition offense, at times suffocated the Bonnies. The second and key point to their victory was their

Turn to WOMEN'S, page 7

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVIII Issue 10 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, February 10, 1998

Let the hype begin anew!

After already celebrating its own greatness with the Golden Globes, the film industry announces its Oscar nominations today. Check out our predictions on possible nominees (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Bombs Away!

Kara Trent and the Massachusetts women's basketball team hope to continue their win streak against Rhode Island tonight at the Mullins Center at 7 p.m. (see Sports, page 12).

WORLD

Religious freedom promoted in China

BEIJING — American church leaders opened an unprecedented visit Monday to promote religious freedom in China, saying they are visiting this atheist state as friends, not as critics.

"Evangelical Christianity in China is booming," said the Rev. Don Argue, president of the National Association of Evangelicals. "We want to help the Chinese government understand that Christians are good citizens. They show up for work on time. They pay their bills. They're honest," Argue said.

Argue, Archbishop Theodore McCarrick of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Newark and Rabbi Arthur Schnier, president of the Appeal of Conscience Foundation, plan to meet with government officials and religious leaders in China during the 18-day trip. "We're not here to inspect but to share the importance of freedom of conscience," Argue told reporters upon arrival in Beijing.

NATION

AOL raising fees to finance upgrade

NEW YORK — America Online is raising its monthly fee for unlimited access by $2, to $21.95, saying it needs to upgrade its network to handle the onslaught of people taking advantage of its flat price.

AOL members are spending an average of 23 hours a month online, three times more than they did before the flat $19.95-a-month price went into effect in December 1996, Steve Case, chairman and chief executive of the nation's biggest online service, said yesterday. The increase goes into effect in April.

Case said the increase will pay for more upgrades of its network, which collapsed under an onslaught of new members early last year, forcing AOL to refund some customers' money.

The Dulles, Va., company grew to more than 11 million members in 1997 after it initiated the flat rate for unlimited access. Half of all American households that connect to the Internet now do so through AOL.

About 75 percent of AOL's members use the monthly rate. The rest pay $4.95 for three hours a month, plus $2.50 for each additional hour, and Case said those rates will not change.

Some customers were not impressed with AOL's explanation for the price increase.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 45 LOW: 22	HIGH: 50 LOW:35	HIGH: 46 LOW:30

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics .....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 12

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

DANIELLE GILARDI / COLLEGIAN

Stretched to the max

Freshman Julie Garvin, an SOM major, stretches out yesterday at the Boyden Body shop.

Help with state taxes available

Mass. Dept. of Revenue representatives on UM campus today

By Leigh Foulkner
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts Department of Revenue (DOR) Taxpayer Service Division representatives will be on the University of Massachusetts campus today to help students, faculty and administrators telefile their taxes and receive their refunds in less than four days.

UMass is one of eight colleges and universities in the state of Massachusetts that DOR representatives are visiting.

This year, the DOR has expanded its telefile and personal computer file programs, which allows taxpayers to file state taxes without the use of paper.

"Telefiling is the way to go for students. It's easy and quick. It takes only eight minutes to file and students have their refunds in less than four days. If they direct deposit their refunds, its even faster," Mitchell Adams, Revenue Commissioner, said in a press release.

In addition to telefiling, students also have the option of filing their taxes on their computers. Software can be downloaded for free from DOR's website at www.state.ma.us/dor. and then students can file their taxes online.

Over 500,000 taxpayers filed 1996 state income taxes through telefiling or through their PC. DOR personnel expects an increase this year.

Campus members who are unable to attend the workshop can contact the DOR customer service bureau for information on state tax filing. The customer service line is open Monday through Friday from 8:45 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., with extended hours until 7 p.m. on Thursday. DOR is also open on the weekends from 9 a.m. to 1p.m.

To reach DOR's customer service line call 1-800-392- 6089.

DOR representatives will be on the sixth floor of the Goodell Building today from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Memorial service to be held for John Orsak

A memorial service will be held on Monday, Feb. 16 at 5:15 p.m. in the Newman Center for University of Massachusetts senior John E. Orsak who died Jan. 11 at Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton.

Amherst Police and Amherst Fire Department ambulance service responded to a residence in Mill Valley Apartments at 1:05 a.m.

Upon arrival, they found Orsak, a sports management major, unresponsive and attempts to revive him by medical personnel were unsuccessful.

Foul play is not suspected in Orsak's death said the Amherst Police Department who is following up on the investigation, along with State Police investigators assigned to District Attorney Elizabeth Scheibel's office.

An autopsy was performed on Monday, Jan. 12, at the Medical Examiners office in Holyoke However, the cause of death and toxicology reports are "still incomplete" according to a spokeswoman for the office.

-Leigh Foulkner

Curfew imposed on east Indonesian town

By Geoff Spencer
Associated Press

JAKARTA, Indonesia — A dusk-to-dawn curfew was imposed yesterday in an eastern Indonesian town after rioters, angry over rising prices, attacked stores and homes owned by ethnic Chinese. It was the second day of rioting in Ende and came as Indonesia battles its worst economic crisis in three decades. Inflation and unemployment have risen dramatically, and austerity measures enacted under a $40 billion bailout by the International Monetary Fund have added to the discontent.

Although ethnic Chinese make up only about 4 percent of Indonesia's 202 million people, they dominate commerce and are often targeted when prices rise.

On Sunday, a mob of about 1,000 rioters burned 21 Chinese stores in Ende, 370 miles east of Jakarta. After an uneasy night, protesters returned to the streets yesterday, throwing rocks at other stores and homes, and smashing windows and damaging buildings. Sixty to 70 ethnic Chinese sought refuge with police, and later were escorted to relatives' homes, authorities said.

The violence in Ende was the worst so far linked to Indonesia's deepest economic crisis in 30 years.

Ende authorities imposed a 7 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew and dispatched hundreds of troops to patrol the streets overnight, army Sgt. Lalu Syaiful said. He said there were no reports of violence or injuries.

In the capital, Jakarta, about 300 people chanted "Hungry! Hungry!" in a noisy protest yesterday outside the nation's Central Bank, but there was no violence. Some protesters waved rupiah notes and U.S. dollars to symbolize the local currency's 80 percent slide over the past seven months.

The demonstrators then staged a street march to the office of a government body that controls the price of rice.

The protest in the capital came despite a three-day show of force last week by thousands of police and soldiers who took part in anti-riot exercises ahead of presidential elections next month. The security forces have warned government opponents that violent protests in Jakarta during the election period will be put down with force.

President Suharto, 76, is expected to win a seventh consecutive five-year term when a 1,000-member assembly votes on the presidency.

In a meeting with Muslim leaders yesterday, Suharto told them to urge their congregations not to believe reports of food shortages and price increases. Indonesia has the world's largest Muslim population.

Lawmakers urge hike in Mass. wages

By Jean McMillan
Associated Press

BOSTON — Former U.S. Labor Secretary Robert Reich joined Senate President Thomas Birmingham and others at the Statehouse yesterday to urge support for a proposal to raise the minimum wage to $6.75 over the next three years.

"We have a phrase now that we never used to have in this country. It's called the 'working poor.' It should be an oxymoron," said Reich, now a professor at Brandeis University. "If you're working full time, you should not be poor. You should not be impoverished."

Under the proposal, the current state minimum wage of $5.25 would increase by 50 cents this September and again the following two years, reaching $6.75 in the year 2000. It would then be tied to the consumer price index to keep up with inflation in subsequent years.

Reich refuted arguments that jobs will be lost if the minimum wage is raised by saying that many of the minimum wage jobs are in service industries — such as restaurants and hotels — which would not leave the state.

But Carolyn Boviard, state director of the National Federation of Independent Business, which represents 10,000 small businesses, said jobs might not move to another state, but they will dry up. She used the example of the husband and wife starting a business and wanting to hire a high school student to help out part-time. If the wages are too costly the couple would be forced to work the hours themselves, she said.

Boviard said they wouldn't have the chance to parlay that part-time into a higher paying full-time job as their business grows.

"I guess it's a great political issue if someone wants to jump on the bandwagon this election year, but it doesn't help the people the advocates say it's meant to help," Boviard said.

The Associated Industries of Massachusetts, the state's largest

Turn to WAGE, page 3

DANIELLE GILARDI / COLLEGIAN

Fairy jar

Nick Descognets, a junior, sketches in the background at the Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space yesterday... or was he just part of the exhibit?

Iraq to scatter Hussein's elite troops

By Wojiel Faleh
Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraq is poised to protect troops of Saddam Hussein's elite Republican Guard from a threatened American attack by scattering them throughout the country, Iraqi travelers arriving in Jordan said yesterday.

Word of the preparations, which confirmed an earlier report in a state-run Iraqi newspaper, came as Iraq dispatched diplomats to several Arab countries that had joined the U.S.-led coalition in the Persian Gulf War, seeking their support in the standoff over U.N. weapons inspections.

As a compromise to avert attack, the 22-nation Arab League was putting forward a proposal that would create a special U.N. team to search some of the Iraqi president's palaces for signs of banned weapon programs.

Iraq is taking steps to lessen the military impact of any American strike and to keep Saddam's government in power, even though the country may suffer heavy damage.

A commander of the Republican Guard, which Washington views as key to Saddam's power, was quoted in newspapers earlier this month as saying he expected to spread his troops — estimated at 60,000 to 75,000 — around the country.

Iraqi travelers arriving in Amman, Jordan, confirmed the reports yesterday, saying the government had ordered schools and other government buildings in towns and provinces be available to serve as temporary headquarters for the troops in the event of an attack. The travelers spoke on condition of anonymity.

Yesterday, Saddam talked to a meeting of the general command of the armed forces, the Iraqi News Agency reported. No details were provided.

After the Gulf War — despite massive bombing by U.S.-led forces that killed an estimated 100,000 Iraqi troops — the Republican Guard emerged largely unscathed.

Diplomats in Baghdad said that most of the one million members of Saddam's Arab Baath Socialist Party are also well-armed and prepared to keep order. The diplomats, who also spoke on condition of anonymity, said it was part of the government's plan to avoid the uprisings by Kurds and Shiite Muslim dissidents that followed the Gulf War.

In neighboring Kuwait, U.S. Defense Secretary William Cohen visited Al-Jaber Air Base, which might be used to launch a strike. Against a backdrop of fighter jets, he told the troops that force would only be used "when diplomacy fails."

A senior U.S. official, traveling

Turn to IRAQ, page 2

Shevardnadze survives attack on motorcade

By Misha Dzhindzhikhashvili
Associated Press

TBILISI, Georgia — Attackers armed with a grenade launcher and machine guns ambushed President Eduard Shevardnadze's motorcade yesterday, opening a 10-minute battle that killed one attacker and one bodyguard. The president escaped unharmed, aides said.

State television showed the 70-year-old leader talking by phone later with Azerbaijan's president, assuring him, "I am OK." The gunmen attacked about a half-mile from Shevardnadze's residence in the capital, Tbilisi, as the Georgian leader's four-car motorcade was returning home, presidential spokesman Vakhtang Maskhuliya said.

The slain bodyguard had been in Shevardnaze's car, which was badly damaged by a rocket-propelled grenade, officials said. Two other bodyguards were wounded in the shootout.

There was no claim of responsibility for the brutal attack, and authorities said they had yet to determine the motive. Shevardnadze said on state TV the dead attacker had not been identified, and there were no reports of any arrests.

Police and security forces stormed the area, searching vehicles and buildings for the assailants — although they didn't even know how many men they were looking for.

The attack appeared to be the second assassination attempt in four years on Shevardnadze, who once served as a Soviet foreign minister before Georgia gained independence from the Soviet Union. Shevardnadze was cut by flying glass when a bomb exploded in his motorcade on Aug. 29, 1995, as the president was leaving for a ceremonial signing of the country's constitution.

Georgian prosecutors have charged 14 people in connection with that attack. The suspects include Shevardnadze's former supporter Dzhaba Ioseliani, who along with some of the other suspects had been a member of the outlawed Mkhedrioni organization.

Campus Police Log

Accident— Pedestrian
Feb. 6
An individual sustained minor bruises when struck by a vehicle near the parking lot 71 crosswalk on Massachusetts Avenue.

Accident — Property Damage
Feb. 5
A parked vehicle was struck by an unknown vehicle on Infirmary Way.
Feb. 6
A vehicle backed into a parked vehicle on Washington Road.

Alarm— Fire
Feb. 6
A fire was extinguished on the second floor of James Residence Hall by the Amherst Fire Department.

Animal Complaint
Feb. 5
A dog was removed from Patterson Residence Hall.
Feb. 6
A dog who was bothering children at North Village Apartments was taken to the pound.
An individual called to check on a raccoon that approached him on Orchard Hill Drive.
Feb. 9
A raccoon was reported in the area of Eastman Lane.

Annoying Behavior
Feb. 6
An individual reported homophobic graffiti on a chalk board in Machmer Hall.
A female individual reported a male entered a bathroom in the Mullins Center.
A peeping tom was reported in the women's bathroom on the 8th floor of Kennedy Residence Hall.
Feb. 7
Residential staff from Kennedy Residence Hall reported a peeping tom.
Individuals on a balcony in Field Residence Hall were throwing snowballs at vehicles.
Bottles were being thrown from windows in Van Meter Residence Hall.
Feb. 8
An individual from Brett Residence Hall reported offensive photographs were placed under his door.

Assault and Battery
Feb. 7
An individual from Greenough Residence Hall reported a past assault and battery which occurred on the Southwest Residential Mall.
Feb. 8
Individuals were throwing snowballs at Cashin Residence Hall.

Assist Other PD's
Feb. 7
UMass police assisted Amherst Police with a fight at the PIKE house on North Pleasant Street.

Disturbance
Feb. 6
Residential Staff requested help from UMPD with a round robin.
Feb. 7
An individual was causing a disturbance in Kennedy Residence Hall.
Feb. 8
Individuals were causing problems waiting for Hampden Snack Bar to open.
A fight occurred between two residence halls in Southwest Residential Area.

Larceny
Feb. 5
An individual reported his movie rental card had been used illegally. The individual was referred to Amherst Police.
A backpack was reported stolen from the Hatch in the Campus Center.
An individual reported personal property stolen from Hills House.
A resident of Lincoln Apartments reported a telephone stolen. Estimated value: $100.
Feb. 6
An individual from Moore Residence Hall reported a past larceny of cash and video rental card.
An individual from Thoreau Residence Hall reported a laptop stolen from his room. Estimated value: $2000.
Feb. 8
A telephone was reported stolen form Crabtree Residence Hall.
An individual from Hamlin Residence Hall reported his bicycle stolen.
Feb. 9
A license plate was reported stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 11 on Stadium Drive.

Traffic Stop
Feb. 5
Seth A. Shapiro, 21, of 10 Oceanwoods Dr., North Kingston, RI was arrested on University Drive for unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle and failure to stop and yield.

Warrant Service
Feb. 5
Christopher J. Deluca, 27, of 161 Chapel St., Newton was arrested in Dickinson Residence Hall on a warrant.

Vandalism
Feb. 5
An individual from Brown Residence Hall reported a swastika drawing on a wall.
Feb. 6
A witness reported four individuals damaging cars in parking lot 22 on University Drive. A total of eleven cars were damaged.
Feb. 8
A vehicle in parking lot 11 on University Drive was reported damaged.
A vehicle in parking lot 32 on University Drive was damaged.

Aid slowly coming for Afghan quake victims

By Zahoorulddin Abdullah
Associated Press

RUSTAQ, Afghanistan — The first desperately needed aid trickled in yesterday for earthquake victims in Afghanistan's mountains — on trucks where roads were passable, on donkeys where snow and ice were too deep.

Survivors slowly walked out, with stories of whole families lost.

Frozen bodies were strewn across devastated towns and villages, many still unburied after Wednesday's 6.1-magnitude quake crumbled hillside homes of mud and brick or buried them under landslides. Rescue workers say as many as 5,000 died in the quake and a series of ruinous aftershocks.

One girl wept as she tried to recount how her entire family of seven was crushed under the rubble of their home in the northeastern village of Khojah Khirat.

"It's so painful, so painful," 7-year-old Bahrish whispered, her eyes brimming with tears. "I don't know if I have any relatives left."

She was among more than 100 people yesterday in the only clinic in the hard-hit town of Rustaq, reached by an Associated Press reporter on one of the first aid flights into the quake area. The patients lay in darkness on the building's dirt floor — the clinic's power had gone out.

Hundreds of villagers carried heavy bundles and led goat herds down muddy roads in the region, seeking shelter or fleeing in fear of more tremors.

A Pakistani air force cargo jet and a Red Cross turbo-prop plane landed in nearby Hajaghar yesterday, bringing medical and sanitation supplies, blankets and tents to the thousands left homeless in temperatures below freezing.

Military trucks carrying the relief supplies lumbered slowly toward Rustaq, 25 miles away, where hundreds of quake refugees were seeking shelter.

"We don't know where the [refugees] will stay, and we are trying to organize a camp so they don't just spread around the town," said Juan Martinez of the Red Cross.

Qari Amir Allam, an official with the military alliance that controls the region, said yesterday that at least 4,000 people were killed in the quake and subsequent aftershocks. Previous estimates have ranged from 2,000 to 5,000.

Twenty villages were destroyed or damaged by the landslides, said Allam, who met the cargo flight.

"The dead bodies now are frozen," Allam said. "We must dig them up and bury them properly."

Allam said the latest aftershock rumbled through one or two villages Sunday, killing more than 200 people.

"We desperately need outside help," he said, as Pakistani cadets and Afghan forces unloaded more than 200 blankets and 200 tents from the cargo jet, which later returned to Islamabad. Aid groups have been scrambling to reach the area, nestled at the junction of the Hindu Kush and Pamir mountains, since Friday, when reports of the first quake emerged.

A U.N team was approaching Rustaq on donkeys and horses after a U.N. truck convoy proved unable to make its way through snow-covered mountain passes.

The team reached a village on the outskirts of the affected area, where it reported 320 people had died and 400 were injured, local officials told Khalili.

The U.N. trucks, carrying thousands of pounds of blankets, plastic sheeting and high protein biscuits, were expected to reach Rustaq today by another route.

Volunteers from neighboring areas were bringing whatever food they could spare and even a few pairs of shoes for homeless survivors, Khalili said.

Aid workers initially were skeptical about the high casualty figures Afghan officials gave, noting that the region is sparsely populated and that officials have exaggerated natural disasters in the past.

But physicians from Doctors Without Borders, the first foreign aid agency to reach the area, have reported that 1,800 people died in one village alone, the Red Cross said.

Afghan military helicopters were helping ferry medical and sanitation supplies because the tremors cracked local roads, Afghan officials said.

Correction

The headline of yesterday's story on the Men's Resource Center incorrectly cited the Center's location. The Men's Resource Center is located in Amherst. The Collegian regrets the error.

■ Iraq

continued from page 1

with Cohen, said yesterday that Washington was sending 3,000 ground troops to Kuwait, bolstering defense of that country in the event of armed conflict with Iraq. For months, Iraq has challenged U.N. weapons inspectors, barring them from key sites on grounds that such visits would violate its national sovereignty.

Punishing sanctions imposed on Iraq after its 1990 invasion of Kuwait cannot be lifted until the inspectors certify that Iraq has eliminated its weapons of mass destruction.

Iraq sent diplomats to several Arab countries yesterday, including Syria and Egypt, which fought against Iraq in the Gulf War. Syria, in particular, has only recently improved relations with Iraq, a country it long considered one of its worst enemies.

In Damascus, Iraqi Foreign Minister Mohammed Saeed al-Sahhaf told his Syrian counterpart, Farouk al-Sharaa, that "Those who believe that they can divide Iraq by striking at it are fools and disillusioned."

Al-Sharaa said Syria believed "there is still room for a political and diplomatic solution."

Al-Sahhaf was expected to visit Lebanon and then Cairo on Thursday for talks with Egyptian Presidents Hosni Mubarak, who has been working with other Arab leaders to find a compromise. He then planned to visit the Jordanian capital Amman on Friday.

Russia, France and the Arab League, all of which have sent envoys to Baghdad, have gone on the record opposing the use of force and have sought to broker a deal to end the standoff. Yesterday, Arab League Secretary-General Esmat Abdel-Meguid, who met with representatives of the league's member nations, said the organization would offer a proposal to create a special U.N. team to look at eight of Saddam's palace compounds, which have been off-limits to U.N. inspectors.

He said the plan involved allowing regular U.N. inspectors to visit 60 other Iraqi sites closed to inspectors.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian:

Working hard to sponge spilled beer off your floor

Save on general books
EVERY DAY at UStore's
NEW Book Department

New York Times Bestseller
Hardcover ..... Save 35%

New York Times Bestseller
Paperback ..... Save 25%

All Other Books
Hardcover Fiction ...20% Off
Any other book* ..... 10% Off

University Store
On the UMass Campus Center Concourse
Hours:
M-F 9 to 5
Sat. 11 to 4
(413) 545 - 2619
We accept AMEX, Discover, MasterCard, Visa, and the UCard!

The NEW Union Billiards
NEW NAME, NEW LOOK, NEW ATMOSPHERE!
STOP IN BETWEEN 1PM AND 11PM ANY DAY OF THE WEEK TO SEE THE NEW UNION BILLIARDS. WE'D LOVE TO SEE YOU! COME BY AND MEET STRIDER AND THE GANG. WE'RE RIGHT ACROSS FROM THE HATCH IN THE OLD GAMES ROOM.

COMING SOON...VALENTINE'S DAY!
Whether you...
Want to be funny/play a joke • Want to make a good friend smile
Be a secret admirer • Want to say a little "I love you"

Reserve Your Valentine's Day Collegian Personal by Tuesday, February 10th for the Collegian's Thursday, February 12th Valentine's Day Issue.

For more information call the Collegian @ 545-3500
Drop off order forms @ Collegian in the Campus Center basement or mail to 113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA 01003 (by 2/12)

Client: Date: Taken By: Office Use Only
Date to run: February 12, 1998 Headline: Personals
S.S.# Total Words: X .10¢ rate =
Total Cost (w/specials) Authorized signature:

Specials
Free Red Spot Color w/purchase of a graphic
$2.50 Heart Graphic at Beginning & End ❒
$5 Heart Graphic Border ❒
$7 Heart Shadowed Behind Message ❒
Graphic #1 ♡ ❒
Graphic #2 ❣ ❒
Graphic #3 ❤ ❒
Graphic #4 ❦ ❒

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN/UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS
VALENTINE'S DAY CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Cash ❒ Check # _____ VISA/MC# _____ Exp. ____

ADVERTISING COPY
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply • Cost figured on each line of form used

DANIELLE GILARDI / COLLEGIAN

Utopia
Waiting for the bus, freshman Psychology major Josh Menke, soaks in a bit of Utopia.

Bank official arrested on bribe charge

By Kozo Mizoguchi
Associated Press

TOKYO — With the scandal in Japan's financial sector spreading, a former official of a leading bank was arrested yesterday on suspicion of bribing finance officials with lavish hospitality. Prosecutors arrested Kozo Umezu, 57, a former executive of the Industrial Bank of Japan, on suspicion of bribing a director of a highway company in exchange for being chosen to underwrite the company's bonds, a bank spokeswoman said.

Several other IBJ executives were also questioned.

The action comes as a series of financial scandals have highlighted the conflict between Japan's loosely enforced laws and its traditional forms of government-business collusion.

Last month, two Finance Ministry officials were arrested and accused of being wined and dined in return for tipping banks off about "surprise" inspections.

That scandal brought down the finance minister and his deputy. It also has shattered the powerful ministry's image as unquestioned custodian of the economy with news reports of lavish dinners and sex parties.

In a related case, the Bank of Japan, the central bank, announced it will investigate whether its employees have accepted any influence-peddling entertainment from commercial banks. The decision followed a report Saturday by the national newspaper Yomiuri that two Bank of Japan officials were treated to dinners and other entertainment worth more than $32,000 over the last five years by commercial bank executives.

The investigation will cover about 600 current and former officials in their dealings with private sector bankers, the central bank said.

The central bank's action follows a similar investigation by the Finance Ministry into the conduct of about 590 of its officials in the wake of its own bribery scandal.

Also yesterday, about 20 investigators from the Tokyo District Public Prosecutors Office raided the Industrial Bank of Japan headquarters in Tokyo to look for evidence.

The bank allegedly spent about $12,100 entertaining Takehiko Isaka, a director of the Japan Highway Public Corp., to convince him to choose the bank to manage the company's bond sales, the Yomiuri reported over the weekend.

■ wage

continued from page 1

employer association, is also opposed to the measure, arguing that employers will use automated equipment and other means to use fewer low-wage workers. And it would hurt communities along the state's borders.

"Cities like Fall River, New Bedford and Lawrence, could see a further erosion of economic activity since the cost of doing business will be much lower just a few miles away," AIM said in a prepared statement.

Many states' minimum wages equal the federal minimum, which currently stands at $5.15. However, U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy has proposed boosting the federal minimum wage to $6.65 by the year 2000 and state lawmakers modeled their plan after his.

Attorney General Scott Harshbarger, a Democratic gubernatorial candidate, has called for the state to increase its minimum wage to $6.50 by 2000. Democratic opponent Patricia McGovern said she favor's the Reich-backed proposal to lift the wage to $6.75 over the same time period.

Briefs

Faculty Awards
The University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees approved the appointment of political science professor Howard J. Wiarda to be the first Leonard J. Horowitz professor in Latin American politics and Studies.

The Horowitz professorship was established within the political science department in December of 1996 with a $700,000 gift from alumnus and retired foreign service officer Leonard Horowitz. It is designed to foster greater understanding of South America, Mexico and Central America; areas that were of great interest of Horowitz.

Wiarda has been a member of the UMass political science department since 1965. He is an internationally known scholar on Latin American politics, American foreign policy, comparative politics and Spanish and Portuguese politics. He has written many books and serves as an advisor to the US Department of State and the Department of the Army and consults with other government agencies on foreign policy issues.

UMass mechanical and industrial engineering faculty member Stephen Malkin, was appointed a Distinguished Professor by the University's Board of Trustees for his outstanding academic distinctions.

Malkin is the fifteenth faulty member to be given the award on the Amherst campus.

A researcher in manufacturing and materials processing Malkin is internationally recognized for his work on grinding and abrasive processes. He has written over 150 technical papers and one book.

Philosophy professor Gareth Matthews has been awarded a grant of $82,711 to conduct a Summer Seminar for College Teachers, sponsored by the National Endowment for the Humanities. The seminar will be held this summer and will focus on issues in the philosophies on childhood.

UMass student Colin Cushman recently completed a semester research in Canada with the School of Field Studies, an international program that focuses on environmental problem solving.

The School for Field Studies operates six environmental research centers worldwide. The centers are in Africa, Australia, Canada, Costa Rica, Mexico, and British West Indies.

Blood Drive
Saturn of Hadley and Saturn of Springfield will be participating in the Saturn National Donor Day on Feb. 14. The two companies will be holding informational drives to encourage people to sign donor cards and blood donation pledges. The informational drive will take place from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. in Springfield on East Columbus Avenue and in Hadley on Route 9.

Representatives from the Red Cross will be available to answer questions about blood and tissue donations.

DANIELLE GILARDI / COLLEGIAN

Passion for patterns
Susan LaBonte, a senior costume design major, prepares for an upcoming performance of Marasol in the FAC costume shop.

Telefile or PC File
Get Your State Tax Refund in 4 days or less

TELEFILE
YOUR 1997 STATE TAX FORM

(617) 660-1997 or (413) 827-7100 or www.state.ma.us/dor

Massachusetts Department of Revenue

Parking Services wants you!

Parking Hearing Review Board Members Needed

The Parking Services Office is seeking faculty and students to serve on the Parking Hearing Review Board. This Board will be part of a pool from which five members will be periodically scheduled to review and render decisions on previously contested campus parking citations. In preparation for becoming a Board member each person must take part in one formal two-hour training session that includes an explanation and review of the hearing process, and a "walk-through" of an actual hearing.

After training, Hearing Board members will serve on a rotating basis, meeting approximately once every three months. Members should be prepared to render fair and unbiased decisions based upon published UMASS parking regulations. Training sessions will be scheduled based on candidates' availability.

Individuals interested in serving on the Parking Hearing Review Board should contact Sharon Kennedy (s.kennedy@umassp.edu or hearings@admin.umass.edu) at the Parking Services Office (413-545-0065) located in the Lot 25 Trailer Complex just north of the Mullins Center.

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Fac Senate in the wrong

Tamar Carroll

A document on gender equity, entitled "Vision 2000," has got some Faculty Senate members hot under the collar.

Vision 2000, prepared collectively by Women's Studies programs and women's groups at all six of the New England Land–Grant Universities, is a blueprint for achieving "full and equitable participation by women" in the universities.

The document contains nine broad recommendations to improve the status of women on campus, including ending sexual harassment and violence against women and ending gender–bias and discrimination against women in the curriculum.

Vision 2000 also lists suggestions for implementing the nine recommendations, such as including measures of gender equity in student course evaluations and ensuring that all General Education courses include scholarship on and by women.

When Professor Ann Ferguson, co–chair of the Status of Women Council of the Faculty Senate, presented the document for approval in principle by the Senate at their last meeting of the fall semester, the response was both surprising and troubling.

Several Senate members were apparently more upset by the claim that gender bias exists at UMass than by Chairman of Higher Education James Carlin's recommendations to eliminate tenure.

The Senators decried the claim made in Vision 2000 that "Women continue to be under–represented in the curriculum, ignored or disparaged in the classroom, and under–represented in leadership roles and over–represented in entry–level and support positions" as ludicrous and inaccurate.

They also criticized the document as hindering their "academic freedom" by seeking to control aspects of their curriculum. Many were aghast at the suggestion to include measures of gender equity in student evaluations. Some even went so far as to claim that the whole thing was a plot by radical PC feminists to "take over" the University.

At the most recent Faculty Senate meeting, held Feb. 5, Chancellor Scott dipped into the fray, declaring the document to be "inflammatory rhetoric" written in an "accusatory tone."

However, Scott went on to endorse the nine principles of Vision 2000 before announcing he did "not know" if such gender inequities exist on the UMass campus.

Well, Chancellor Scott and critics of Vision 2000, such gender inequities do indeed exist here at UMass Amherst, and you do not have to look far to find them.

The Affirmative Action Report for Fiscal Year 1997 revealed that just 23.6 percent of tenure system faculty are women.

Not only are there far less female professors on campus, though, they are also clustered in a few departments across campus. There are no female faculty members in Polymer Science and Engineering, in Accounting and Information Systems, in Chemical, Mechanical, and Industrial Engineering. No wonder many students can go a full semester — or several — without being taught by a female professor. I know I have.

I have also sat through classes in which half of humanity was basically ignored. Take my Introduction to Art History class. We covered literally hundreds of artists — all of three were female. Now, I realize that historically there have been many more male artists than female. I am not asking for a 50/50 split. But I do think my professor could have included at least a few more female artists, if he cared enough to try.

I have listened to my friend — a female astronomy major — complain that her professor will not look her in the eye during their meetings; but rather addresses all his comments to her male lab partner. "What can I do?" she asks in frustration.

These are the inequities Vision 2000 seeks to end, by ensuring that professors consider gender equity — and the interests of their female students — when they design their curriculum, by giving students a way to report on professors who do not treat them fairly, and by encouraging administrators to actively hire and promote qualified women to University positions.

In no way is Vision 2000 a scheme to take over the University. Its authors simply want to better the lot of women on campus. The claims of infringing on academic freedom are not honest.

Chancellor Scott, I urge you to make good on your promise to "fix" gender inequities at UMass. And Faculty Senate members, I urge you to show your support of UMass women by voting to approve Vision 2000.

UMass is not an awful place to be a woman, but it could be a lot better, and that is what this document is all about.

Tamar Carroll is a Collegian staff member.

Lessons from the Spice Girls

Seth Koenig

The Spice Girls have put out a major motion picture now, and all of us — men and women alike — will at some point in time, whether it be at the theater or in the privacy of your own home, see that movie. For some people it will be because they really enjoy the upbeat pop music the Spice Girls play. Others will want to watch five attractive women cruise around in tight clothing (in which case, the privacy will come in handy, depending on how desperate the person is). Still more will see it out of general curiosity, and no matter what the reason, the Girls will get your money.

The Spice Girls have been called a group of scam artists, frauds, and no–talent, good–for–nothing zero–intellect superficial one–hit–wonders. In fact, they've been called all that by me. I will step out on a limb and admit I was wrong.

Although it is true that the band (if you can use the term liberally enough so that it applies) indeed has no musical talent, I can no longer call them zero–intellects. After looking at the Spice Girls a little closer, I realize now that they are geniuses (stop laughing).

Where the New Kids on the Block failed, the Spice Girls have succeeded. You see, the New Kids geared their music and their sex appeal toward the same audience. Being highly intelligent students of their game, the U.K.'s national daughters have doubled their income by selling to two different crowds: preteen girls think their music is "totally rad," and young adult males want to knock headboards with them. Brilliant, yes?

Both compact discs bubbling with flamboyant feminist tunes and video cassettes showing a Spice's bare bosom (Ginger Spice, that is, but I'm just guessing...) will be received by someone as a gift from God. You're probably starting to admit to yourself that these girls have the most powerful minds ever seen in the human race. Well, we're just at the tip of the iceberg, my friend. Let the brain– busting continue!

Realizing that they sell to one crowd's ears and to a separate crowd's... well, you know... the Brainiac Brits made "2 become 1" and sold both aspects at once through their movie, Spiceworld. Which brings us full circle — reread the opening paragraph.

Now all of this is very important, because I have studied the Spice Girls' ingenious logic and will bring fame and fortune upon myself by taking that brilliance to the next level. I will make myself the star of all stars, and appeal to every demographic there is!

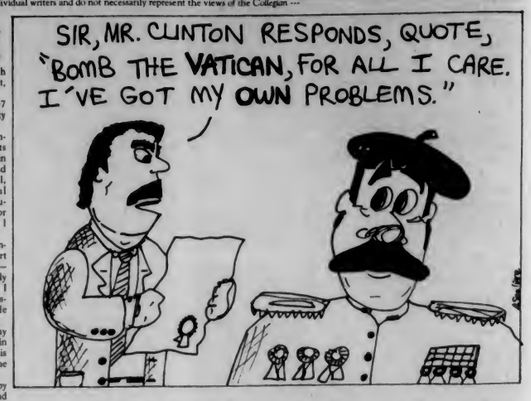
First of all, I will play light alternative rock like the Wallflowers, which doesn't offend anybody and can be played on easy–listening and heavy stations alike. With this, I target the young adult crowd. Unlike the Spice Girls, however, young male adults will listen, too (not being nauseating music and all).

I'm not a terribly unattractive guy, and with a little makeup and regular exercise, I could be the hunk that the teeny–boppers are all looking for. Tight pants will finish off this crowd, and before you know it, I've conquered two audiences.

I'd always dress in black leather and name myself Saint Death, to attract all those Marilyn Manson fans out there. I'd prove to the Goth audience that I was just as sacrilegious as the next Tom, Dick, or Satan. Every so often, I'd say "hell" in one of my songs. They'll be following me like I was the Pied Piper, I tell you.

My backing band will all dress up like colorful plush dinosaurs, so that I can extract money from the young children of the world. Perhaps I could talk Big Bird into joining me on a special duet album, and I could guest host "Sesame Street" in return. Everything is going according to plan.

To exploit the senior citizens out there, I will consistently take the stage at live shows with a walker and an overly visible Medic Alert bracelet. All the grannies and grampies in the world will feel like a part of the show when I collapse half way through my hit single, only to be hoisted back up to the mic by a team of nurses.



The rap crowd would be simply delighted as I thank the nurses by calling them "bitch" one by one, regardless of their sex or actual personality. Maybe I could pull the shocks out of my car so that it bounces when I pull up to the packed stadium at which I'll be playing. That would be phat.

I would toss the walker aside to slam dunk a basketball periodically throughout the concert, so as to not leave out the athletically inclined folks who might have money for me.

The computer fanatics of the world would get shaky in the knees as I demonstrate how I programmed the laser light show with only a laptop, and how I could tap into the nation's government files on me with my eyes closed. Time permitting, I would give tips on how to have a healthy relationship with your Gigapet, as well.

Yessiree, this master plan will make me millions, and the Spice Girls will be forgotten like the New Kids before them. Baby Spice will be charged with possession of narcotics and jailed, and Posh Spice will join Dionne Warwick on those late night Psychic Friends shows. I will be the king of all the planet, and you, my friend, heard it hear first. (Wink).

Seth Koenig is a Collegian staff member.

Nukes in Never-Never Land

Hussein Ibish

Following Boris Yeltsin's stern warnings about Americans provoking a new world war, the United States publicly backed down from weeks of implicit threats to nuke Iraq.

State Department spokesman James Rubin rushed to assure the Russians that "The United States has no plans or intentions of using nuclear weapons" in anticipated bombing raids.

American plans to nuke Iraq reportedly originated last November, when President Clinton issued the top–secret Presidential Policy Directive 60 authorizing the Pentagon to target Iraq with nuclear weapons.

The United States has given semi–public consideration to using the new B61–7 and B61–11 "penetrator" bombs to attack underground installations in Iraq. These "mini–nukes," with yields as "low" as .3 kilotons, explode on or several feet below the earth's surface crushing objects beneath.

In the early stages of the current crisis, U.S. officials consistently leaked dark threats that they were highly tempted to use these nukes against Iraq. The Associated Press, for example, reported that "Defense officials have said repeatedly, if anonymously, that they were concerned that the U.S. conventional arsenal would be incapable of penetrating some of Iraq's most hardened targets, such as deeply buried bunkers that may house biological or chemical weapons labs. The Pentagon has pointedly not ruled out the use of tactical nuclear weapons to attack these targets."

Until the grim Russian warnings, that is.

The so–called mini–nukes were developed following the end of the Cold War, when Pentagon planners began to worry that no president would accept the diplomatic and political costs of authorizing the use of existing multi–megaton nuclear weapons on the newly designated enemies — non–nuclear Third World states.

1992 was a crucial year in the re–orientation of the U.S. nuclear arsenal. In July, Los Alamos began agitating for the development of low yield nukes for use against Third World countries with its briefing "Potential uses for low–yield nuclear weapons in the New World Order." Meanwhile, U.S. strategic command began drawing up specific "silver book" plans targeting various non–nuclear Third World nations.

In this context, the B61–7 and B 6 1 – 1 1 were developed and deployed secretly, in violation of stated U.S. policy and treaty obligations under the Nuclear Non–Proliferation (NPT) and the Comprehensive Test Ban (CTB) Treaties.

Whether American officials are actually foolhardy enough to seriously consider the use of nuclear weapons in an unprovoked, criminal and widely opposed aggression against a crippled non–nuclear nation like Iraq is unclear.

Presidential Policy Directive 60 indicates that this was and may still be a genuine option in the minds of the Clinton regime. But these weapons were designed not only for use, but also to instill terror in potential target societies by providing a credible threat. They were designed for the kind of "measured ambiguity" Clinton's henchmen were employing against Iraq until Yeltsin told them to shut up.

The ostensible cause, Iraq's alleged ability to threaten its neighbors with unconventional weapons, is an utter fraud.

The United Nations' Security Council itself claims to have destroyed at least 817 of Iraq's 819 Scud missiles, and all of its fixed and mobile launch sites. The Iraqi air force has been gathering dust in Iran for 8 years. Iraq has no realistic delivery system.

Even Senior U.S. officials admit Iraq has no nuclear or chemical warfare capability. And the hysteria about alleged Iraqi biological weapons is absolutely fatuous, especially since Iraq lacks the means to deliver any such warheads.

Besides, there was nothing extraordinary about Iraq's special weapons programs, even when they did exist. They are paralleled or exceeded by all the other Middle East states of comparable size — Egypt, Turkey, Iran, Syria, and, of course, Israel, the region's only nuclear power and largest producer of chemical and biological weapons.

In contrast, Iraq has a negligible, if any, missile and unconventional weapons capacity. It is a devastated wreck, and, in the real world, not a threat to any other state.

Even the quasi–official New York Times cautiously admitted that the bombing was in fact intended to "serve several long–term American interests in the region" by reinforcing the realities of American military power.

The Times quoted Jonathan Eyal, of the Royal Institute of Strategic Studies, explaining that "It may not sound that glorious, and it's much less exciting than the talk of biological weapons, but it's critically important."

Richard Butler's claim that Iraq possesses the capability to "blow away Tel Aviv" and Tony Blair's assertion that Iraq could wipe out all of humanity merely ignore the fact that the rhetoric about Iraq's special weapons programs is a hoax. The whole discourse is taking place in a paranoid Never–Never Land that exists only in the minds of the western press and public.

In reality, these fabrications are a pretext for an almighty demonstration of American military power, in vain hopes of shoring up the dysfunctional and dying system that the United States constructed in the Middle East since the Gulf War.

It is meant to terrorize the region, mainly the United States' Arab dependencies, into once again toeing the American line no matter how incoherent and self–defeating its policies are.

Hussein Ibish is a UMass graduate student.

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.

Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words long, and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes.

They can be submitted by mail to Ed/Op Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst MA 01003; by email to letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu; or by fax to (413) 545–1592

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Hampshire, Smith, Mt. Holyoke and Amherst students — we want you!

The Collegian Ed/Op page is planning to run a Four– College Commentary feature every Wednesday. Because the Collegian is distributed on the five Pioneer Valley campuses, we want the voices of all to have a place on this page.

Columns should be 700–900 words long, include your name and phone number, and be submitted by Monday at noon. They can be sent to the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass; faxed to 545–1592; or e–mailed to letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu. Call Dan Bodah or Tamar Carroll at 545–1491 for more information.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangasirkar Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Co-Editor
Tamar Carroll Editorial/Opinion Co-Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Leigh Faulkner News Editor
Lauren Korky Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor
Joeseph D. Savich Editorial Production Manager
David Parmenter Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Presten Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Oscar nominations forecast

By Bryan McAllister
Collegian Staff

If Hollywood is consistently good at anything, it's whetting our appetites. Today, after already celebrating its own greatness with the Golden Globes, the film industry will announce its nominees for best picture and the rest; the hype of the true award show — the Oscars — has officially begun.

The Academy Award nominations are always a stressful time for actors, filmmakers, and critics who try to predict them. This is the only time of year that an actress will skip her morning beauty sleep to see if she's the next Jodie Foster. And Jodie will probably be up too.

In the Best Picture category, it's a safe bet Titanic — the cultural phenomenon steaming through the list of all–time box office grossers — will get a well–deserved nomination. Joining that epic is our other boat movie, Steven Spielberg's moving Amistad. Their original screenplay award is a lock, but Matt Damon and Ben Affleck's Good Will Hunting is the sleeper candidate here, a small film with big emotional involvement. The crime drama L.A. Confidential, the most complex film of last year, is in too. The Golden Globe performance of As Good as it Gets almost ensures a spot for that engaging comedy, but the last nomination also could go to Donnie Brasco, The Wings of the Dove, The Full Monty, or Boogie Nights.

The Best Director category usually mirrors best picture, and this year is no exception. James Cameron's (Titanic) perfectionist style, as well as his beautiful camera movement, demands a definite nomination. Curtis Hanson should be there for his gritty, kinetic L.A. Confidential. Gus Van Sant didn't film a bad scene in Good Will Hunting. The voters love newcomers, so Paul Anderson and Mike Newell have a good shot for Boogie Nights and Donnie Brasco, respectively. And despite the plagiarism controversy and the Academy's contempt for Steven Spielberg, his involvement in a picture can never be overlooked.

The stiff competition for Best Actor should be between a couple of veterans — the Golden Globe winning Peter Fonda (Ulee's Gold), Jack Nicholson, and Robert Duvall in The Apostle. Newcomer Djimon Hounsou has a very well– deserved place here too — his rich performance in Amistad should not be overlooked. The final spot is a toss–up; the possibilities being Matt Damon, Al Pacino, and the whole slew of talented actors in L.A. Confidential.

Despite the fact that Mrs. Brown was seen by less people than a Saturday night showing of "TV Bloopers," its leading lady, Judi Dench, is a lock for Best Actress. The other forerunner is Helena Bonham Carter in the passionate Wings of the Dove. Helen Hunt was brilliant in As Good as it Gets, an almost total departure from her "Mad About You" character. Pam Grier may have a chance for her turn as Jackie Brown. Kate Winslet could ride Titanic's waves, but I hope the Academy won't forget Jodie Foster in Contact. Foster was her usual brilliant, independent self, and carried that remarkable, introspective film.

Ironically, perhaps the most talent lies in the Best Supporting Actor and Best Supporting Actress categories. For the first, expect Burt Reynolds (Boogie Nights), fellow comeback kid Robert Forster (Jackie Brown), Anthony Hopkins (Amistad), Robin Williams (Good Will Hunting), and possibly Greg Kinnear. Lost in the mix may be Rupert Everett in My Best Friend's Wedding, although he well deserves it. For supporting actress, there's Kim Basinger (L.A. Confidential), Gloria Stuart's 101 year old Rose In Titanic, Sigourney Weaver for The Ice Storm, and the multi–talented Julianne Moore in Boogie Nights. But the Academy is known for surprises, so expect a few today. And feel lucky that there's no reason to get up as early as those hopeful actors and actresses.

COURTESY RALPH NELSON

Carol Connelly (Helen Hunt) offers Melvin Udall (Jack Nicholson) an overwhelming thank–you note for his unexpected kindness to her son in As Good As It Gets.

COURTESY PARAMOUNT PICTURES

The epic Titanic is expected to contend for several Academy Awards.

Grape living up to expectations

By Marty Keane
Collegian Staff

STUPID STUPID STUPID
Black Grape
Radioactive

Driving rhythms. Pitiless sarcasm. Shout em–from–the–rooftop choruses. Sheer vocal lunacy. Beats that get under your skin and make you choose some goofy, body–jacking manifestation of enjoyment, be it lurching your head or shuffling your feet.

It seems as if the more things change in Shaun Ryder's life, the more they seem to stay the same.

In his case however, this juxtaposition serves Ryder well. Stupid Stupid Stupid (Radioactive) — while certainly not a major artistic leap forward from their debut (1995's It's Great When Your Straight...Yeah) — is a subtle move towards refining their already potent hybrid of the decadence of rock and dance cultures.

When dealing with someone of Ryder's esteemed stature, it's best to just relax, take a deep breath, and buy whatever the hell he's peddling. Sit back and enjoy the hallucinogenic ride if you please.

In large measure, the drug–infused blurs that defined life in his notorious rave–rock outfit Happy Mondays are gone. That's not to say that a semi–sober Ryder and his mates in Black Grape still don't achieve a sort of "higher consciousness," though. Far from it in fact, but they are now able to fully realize their musical abilities and perfect their simply delectable sonic palette.

As one might expect from the title of the album's lead track "Get Higher," it deals with a familiar topic to the Black Grape camp — drugs, drugs and more drugs. The song itself is a self–effacing parody of what working class stiff's like Ryder really think about all day. A hilarious spliced voice–over courtesy of Ronald and Nancy Reagan note: "Tonight I can report to you that former president George Bush smokes marijuana regularly...Nancy and I are hooked on heroin."

The album's finest song, the giddy "Dadi Was a Badi" is a reckless lighthearted look into the pleasures of crime and bad role models. In the instantly memorable chorus, Ryder spews "You got it, I want it. You know I'm gonna get it," never once doubting his ability to get inside the listeners' collective heads. With a refrain this catchy, what's there to doubt anyway?

Stupid Stupid Stupid, then, is best described as having dance/house tendencies liberally turn to GRAPE, page 6

Internships in Business

ADVERTISING
ACCOUNTING
PROMOTIONS
FINANCE
MARKETING

The Collegian is looking for talented students to run its Business Department. Pick up an application at the Collegian in the Campus Center Basement. Applications due Friday, February 13th. Questions? Call 545–3500.

Live Music Tonight
at
WALKER'S GRILL

Free 9:30 Wings While they last

$1.00 Budlight Drafts

Featuring LABB 10:00 pm.
$2 Cover 21+ pos ID Required

$1.50 Cape Codders
$2.50 Beam & Coke 16oz.

41 Boltwood Walk, Amherst 253-4040

A Reminder
Please Note Deadline Below

SCHOLARSHIP APPLICATIONS NOW AVAILABLE
Attention all Undergraduate Students affiliated with:

CCEBMS UALRC BCP MEP DIMES

Are you providing some service to your UMass or hometown community that demostrates leadership, caring, or initiative?

or

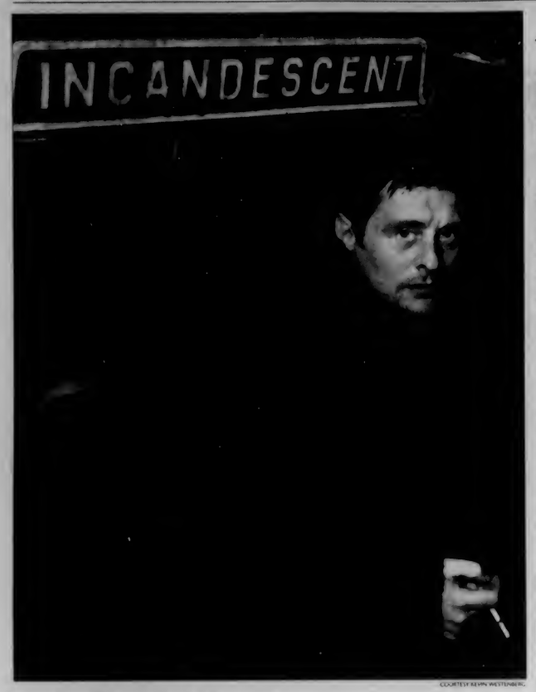
Do you have a special talent, gift, or skill?

& Do your grades reflect positive academic achievement?

if so, You may qualify for a scholarship for the academic year 1998-1999 Inquire or pick up an application at:

BCP
Wilder Hall
545-1987

CCEBMS
New Africa House
545-0031



UALRC
Knowlton Building
545-1844

MEP
Marston Hall
545-2030

DIMES
School of Managment
545-5618

Enrollment Services
208 Whitmore
545-0428

All completed applications must be submitted by Monday, March 9, 1998!

COURTESY KEVIN WETTENBERG

Shaun Ryder of Black Grape gives off an "incandescent" glow.

Another helping of Urban Soundz

Here It is, round two of hip hop 401. That's right, this is a four-hundred level column so check yourself at the title. Before I go into the music, I'd like to take a couple of lines and talk about the All-Star game. First, thank you to Kobe Bryant for giving us the thrill of the slam dunk contest without Kenny Walker's high-top fade. He brought a level of showmanship that is too often forgotten in the All-Star game. I'm also curious about what's going on with the Cleveland Cavaliers brain trust. I want to know who sat in their board meeting and dropped this gem, "I know how to make us look more exciting; we'll have all white uniforms and throw a streak of aqua across it so we look like we're up with the fashion." Someone give Shawn Kemp a decent uniform — he deserves one.

Due to the explosion of mix tapes, a couple of industry heads have rubbed their noggins together and realized they could do mix CD's. Funk Master Flex opened the field with his Mix Tape Vol 1etl, and now everyone's yelling "Ooh this is hot" on disc.

First to bat we have Soundbooming by Evil Dee. It says on the cover that this is "The Ultimate Guide to Underground Hip–Hop If you expect that, you're dumb as this is good, but not that good. The album basically serves as a sampler for his label Rawkus and it features all of the 12 inches they released in 1997. The initial issue is that he wants to showcase his records so he lets most of them play through and rarely flexes his technique.

On the other hand there are some dope tracks that all you DJ's need to buy so you can be connected like the Stereo MC's. Mos Def is all over this like Puff Daddy on an eighties remix and is the highlight of this album. Ra The Rugged Man begins this album with a middle finger to the industry and follows up with "Till My Heart Stops" which is equally ill. Some other highlights are Company Flow, who also appear under the name Indelible MC's, and make you understand why so many DJ's are throwing them on mix tapes. Other highlights include Kweli and Shabaam Saheed.

The negatives are Evil Dee hyping up his web page over a phat beat. There's no need for the infomercial, as well as some tracks that just should not have been showcased. Overall this album grabs about seven punches on your Antonio's card.

Beat Junkies Volume I featuring DJ Babu has taken up a permanent position in my headphones. This album is the first in a series designed to show off the DJ's who make up the Beat Junkies. Simply put, you need to own this album if you want to look like you know what time it is. This is so off the hook it might as well be a cellular. Babu throws on some more mainstream tracks like "Luchini" by Camp Lo and "Who You Want It, You Got It" by Jungle Brothers featuring De La Soul and Q–Tip. He also mixes in more underground artists like J–Live and a whole host of others.

What separates Babu from your average DJ is his ability to mix scientific, experimental beats with the kind that will make you jump up and say "Damn!" Forget the punches on the Antonio's card, you don't get albums this good for free.

Since I am your faithful servant, I will now list some vinyl that you don't need to ask about because if it's listed, it's top billing.

First off, Q–Tip's new release is under the name Lone Ranger and it's on the White Label, the b–side features "The Consequences" by Consequence. Q–Tip makes another underground appearance on "The Body Rock" with Mos Def and Tash of the "Liks on Rawkus Records. The Hieroglyphics are back with a single on Hieroglyphic Imperium. Peep J–Live with "School's In" and "Shiesty" on Rawshack/Payday. Old school heads will appreciate Seven L and Esoteric's "Protocol" on Brick Records.

Big Willie story of the week: I went out on the limb the other day to find out if Biggie's words "Pimpin ain't easy but it sure is fun" were true when I kicked some yak about my ability to snowboard to a girl. The problem being I had only done it once two years ago and she pulled my card on it the other day, so now I can't sit down and my knees feel worse then Darren Daulton's. Yeah, I got played.

Zev Love X, former frontman of KMD, is back under the name M.F Doom and he will hurt you. Look for a release soon.

If you are wondering where you can buy those tapes I was talking about in the last column, you can pick most of them up at the Grow Room in Amherst.

If any DJ's want to get their name out, drop off your tapes in the Collegian Arts and Living mail box. Failure if you do not have the proverbial skills to pay the bills you will get dissed for everyone to see.

Quote of the week: "This year Gang Starr got a lot of changes made/No wack shit played/No fake macks on the radio getting played/No Versace emcees with a mouth full of MoMoSounding like a lisp/Spitting that old-fashion show flow" Krumb Snatcha on "Make 'Em Pay" from Gang Starr's Moment of Truth.

Adam Dlugacz is a Collegian Columnist.

Entertainment at its most carefree

But original 1980's Blues Brothers Film remains on top

By Bryan McAllister
Collegian Staff

BLUES BROTHERS 2000
Directed by John Landis with Dan Aykroyd, John Goodman, Joe Morton
Playing at Mountain Farms Theaters

It is an entertainment travesty that there are few movies like Blues Brothers 2000. But it's also a blessing, because no copycats could come close to the over–the–top silliness and high–energy performances that Dan Aykroyd and director John Landis elicit. Aykroyd and Landis have only themselves to top, but the original 1980's Blues Brothers remains a superior film. Still, 2000 isn't without its deliciously entertaining moments.

Part chase film, part musical, the film always demands that you suspend your disbelief, such as when a tent revival sends a cop through the curtain towards the heavens, and the movie's funniest scene — an outrageous multi cop car pile–up.

The picture also demands that you love blues, R&B, and soul. In this department, it has no problems. In fact, despite its tongue–in–cheek atmosphere, the film takes its music very seriously. Like the first film, it celebrates the lost art of blues and criticizes audience fickleness. In one engaging scene, the Blues Brothers are confused for a bluegrass band which is decidedly more popular. The Brothers are forced to get a bit more folky, but they of course succeed. They may be destructive and informal, but they're never at a loss for ideas.

The film takes place eighteen years after the first movie. Elwood Blues (Aykroyd) has been released from prison, but finds out his brother Jake (the late John Belushi, to whom this movie is co–dedicated) passed away and that he is in charge of a young orphan (J. Evan Bonifont). The simple plot has Elwood bringing the band back together, but not before a dozen police chases, numerous musical numbers, and a few other mix–ups can occur.

The characterizations, despite the blandness of a hesitant John Goodman as Elwood's new partner, are all superb. Aykroyd's deadpan Elwood is one of the comedy genre's best creations. Bonifont, in a role originally designed for Macaulay Culkin, is a perfect foil for the proceedings. There is also "Saturday Night Live"'s Darryl Hammond as a white supremacist leader who talks like a cross between George Bush and Bill Clinton.

It's the music, though, which provides most of the movie's more indulging moments. Aretha Franklin gets "Respect." Eddie Floyd and Johnny Lang get all the women in a phone sex service dancing and, in the film's final scene, Erykah Badu plays a 130–year old voodoo queen with a taste for Caribbean music.

Blues Brothers 2000 has a lot going on, but surprisingly it suffers from not being polished enough. Some scenes go nowhere at all, and even a few musical numbers, such as the tent revival, don't live up to their potential. The movie is refreshing at first, but once you get the hang of its anything– goes style, the surprises, even cameos from the likes of Eric Clapton, become fewer and fewer.

But it isn't as if director and co–writer Landis, one of the most creative forces in the business and the man behind Animal House, Trading Places, Michael Jackson's "Thriller" video and Coming to America, doesn't try hard enough. Landis' love affair with police cars, big trucks, explosions, music, and dancing zombies reminds you of an elementary school class clown who suddenly decided to make movies. His latest addition is kinetic, refreshing material — not entertainment at its finest, but at its most carefree and fun. B–

■ grape

continued from page 5

sprinkled with a pop/rock sensibility. The album plays like an ideal soundtrack of dance–music for the apocalyptic frat–boy crowd. Jovial and cheesy to be sure, but in a twisted sort of way that only someone as nutty as Ryder could articulate without coming off as a contrived wanker. Stupid Stupid Stupid's freewheelin' good time still belies the fact that Ryder is not altogether sane. His success in subversion lies in his ability to internalize his own demons and regurgitate them as pure, eminently danceable energy — not an easy task.

Will tons of people rush out and go buy this album? Probably not. Should they? Let's just say you'd be "Stupid, stupid, stupid" not to. A–

Thank you for reading the Massachusetts Daily Collegian. Without you there'd be no us!

Spring Break Fever
Party Hard Travel Safe
Cheap Tickets
Great Advice Nice people
Lima $603
Hong Kong $753
Tel Aviv $693
Los Angeles $355
Orlando $177
Council Travel
CIEE: Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main Street
Amherst
(413) 256-1261

AEROBICS
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
• Classes Daily
• Certified Instructors
• Suspended Wood Floor
• Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathlete.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst 256-0060

amc
Movies to a Different Beat
Silence to Clothes. No child under 9 to any PG-13 or R rated film after 6pm
Mt. Farms 4 •584-9153
Mt. Farms Mall
Wag The Dog (R)
Today at (5:50 @ $2.50) 8:40
Desperate Measures (R)
Today at (5:50 @ $2.50) 8:40
As Good As It Gets (PG-13)
Today at (5:30 @ $2.50) 8:20
Blues Brothers 2000 (PG-13)
Today at (5:40 @ $2.50) 8:30
Hampshire 8 •584-7550
Hampshire Mall
Great Expectations (R)
Today at (5:30 @ $2.50) 8:30
Replacement Killers (R)
Today at (5:50 @ $2.50) 8:40
Spice World (PG)
Today at (5:50 @ $2.50) 8:40
Titanic (PG 13)
Today at (4:20 @ $2.50) 8:10
Good Will Hunting (R)
Today at (5:20 @ $2.50) 8:20
Deep Rising (R)
Today at (5:40 @ $2.50) 8:30
Special Engagements, no Passes or Coupons
$2.50 (Plus Late) Show Daily

A Healthy Investment in Your Future
Health Care. Those two words have been the source of much discussion recently. Probably because we as a nation know the importance of investing in a healthy future.
So do millions of patients who choose chiropractic as their preferred source of health care. The chiropractic beliefs in fitness, nutrition, prevention, and natural maintenance make good sense.
Wellness, you see, is the normal state of being.
New York State government agrees. They have recently passed the Insurance Equality bill that mandates insurance coverage for chiropractic care.
For over 75 years, New York Chiropractic College has upheld a tradition of excellence in chiropractic higher education. Our combined traditions, old and new, have built the base from which the chiropractic doctors of the future are created.
Choose New York Chiropractic College. A healthy investment for today and tomorrow.
Call us today at 800-234-NYCC (6922) to schedule a visit of our beautiful 286-acre campus in central New York.
NEW YORK CHIROPRACTIC COLLEGE
2360 Route 89 Seneca Falls, NY 13148-0800
Phone: 315/568-3040 or 800/234-NYCC (6922)
Fax: 315/568-3087
E-mail: enrollnow@nycc.edu

University Health Services
Mental Health Groups Spring '98

MONDAY	WEDNESDAY	THURSDAY	FRIDAY
THE DREAM, THE BODY AND THE HIDDEN PSYCHE Explore how our dreams reflect the dynamics of our bodies and emotions. Topics include: dreamwork; family dynamics; psychosomatic process; health and the unconscious mind. Mon., 9 -10 am., 3/2 - 4/13	ADULT CHILDREN OF DYSFUNCTIONAL FAMILIES This 8 week group is for individuals wanting to explore the impact of family relationships on their lives as UMASS students. Wed., 3:30 - 5:00 pm.	COUPLES SKILLS GROUP Improve your communication and conflict resolution skills, to help deepen your relationship. Thur., 8:30 - 10:00 am.	UNDERGRADUATE WOMEN'S SELF EXPLORATION GROUP Primarily focused on women with self esteem issues who want to explore how these issues may interfere with their ability to form satisfying interpersonal relationships. Fri., 9 - 10:30 am., 2/13- 5/11
INTERPERSONAL GROUP For college men and women who experience difficulties in interpersonal connections or who have concerns about their relationships. Mon., 3:45 - 5:00 pm., 3/2 - 5/11	MEN OF COLOR Focus will be on the academic, interpersonal, social and dating dynamics of men of color. Identifying body image, self esteem, sexuality and the reactions of society will also be explored. Wed., 3:45 - 5:00 pm., 2/25 - 4/1	WOMEN'S SELF EXPLORATION GROUP– (For older undergraduates, graduate students, student dependents and Kaiser members) This group provides an opportunity for women to explore personal relationships, work, studies, family of origin, health, acculturation and other relevant concerns. This group is ongoing with members added as space permits. Thur., 9 - 10:30 am.	Groups are conducted by Mental Health Division staff. Group sessions are covered under UHS Basic Health Plan and Kaiser pre-paid plan. Groups require an initial screening appointment which can be arrang ed by calling 545-23 37 or by stopping at 127 Hills North For further information please call 545-2337, Mon - Fri 8 am - 5 pm. or refer to the Mental Health website at http: www.umass.edu/uhs/mentalhealth
SUPPORTING GAY, LESBIAN AND BISEXUAL IDENTITIES Exploring such issues as: coming out; building community; dating relationships; family of origin; and stress management. Mon., 3:45 - 5:00 pm., 2/23 - 4/13	MORE Groups Beginning IN LATE SPRING 545-2337	COED SELF–EXPLORATION GROUP (For older undergraduates, graduate students, student dependents and Kaiser members) This group provides an opportunity for men and women to explore their interpersonal relationships. This group is ongoing with members added as space permits. Thur., 3:30 - 5:00 pm.

Delta Blues at Augusta Savage

By Emily Trask
Collegian Staff

The Augusta Savage Gallery at the University of Massachusetts will be presenting a number of events during February in celebration of Black History month.

Veteran Delta Blues guitarist Larry Johnson will present a solo concert on Feb. 11 at 7 p.m. Johnson's style has been inspired by many of the great blues masters such as Blind Lemon and Blind Blake, Leroy Carr, Blind Boy Fuller, Bo Carter, Big Bill, Lee Green and Washboard Sam. Johnson, who has been studiously carrying out the legacy of these great musicians, takes his place among them as one of the most articulate and genuine practitioners of the blues.

Johnson was introduced to the blues at a very early age, while traveling with his father who was a preacher. Through his travels, Johnson was exposed to many different people and experiences, and also to the sounds of music.

Johnson began his musical career by playing the harmonica. But the harmonica was not alluring enough to keep his musical genius satisfied. After five years of service in the Navy, he anchored in Harlem, where he started playing the guitar.

Johnson gives most of the credit for his musical development to such influences as Rev. Gary Davis, Jimmy Reed, Washboard Sam, and Leroy Carr, as well as gospel guitarist Pop Staples and the Kingston Trio.

Johnson's true transformation from a good to a great blues guitarist did not begin until 1968. After spending time in the hospital and losing some of the suppleness in his fingers, Johnson recalls thinking, "Now is the time to start on a new chord structure." Beginning with this experience and with the assistance of his mentor, Gary Davis, Johnson developed his trademark finger–picking style that he now calls "stride guitar." Through the subtleties and intricacies of techniques and interpretation, Johnson found his own artistic voice.

As Johnson reminds us, "You don't think about the blues and then live it; it's the other way around. You've got to live it and then sing it."

This performance is free and open to the public. Augusta Savage is located in the New Africa House in the Central Residential Area. This gallery is a program of the Fine Arts Center and the WEB DuBois Afro–American Studies Dept.

Musicals from UK to Broadway

by Matt Wolf
Associated Press

LONDON — Think London theater and, for much of the 1980s, the megamusical came to mind, as show after show wowed the West End before taking on Broadway and the world.

Return to the topic now and the preferred word might be flop. The once–bullish genre is passing the baton back to Broadway, which is generating musical hits of the sort London can only imagine.

Consider the following.

• Last year saw the near–simultaneous closings on both sides of the Atlantic of "Sunset Boulevard," the Andrew Lloyd Webber musical whose international losses have been estimated as high as $50 million.

• Feb. 28 is the last performance after 20 months at London's Prince Edward Theater of "Martin Guerre," a $7 million failure from producer Cameron Mackintosh, who not long ago was considered the leading musical Midas of the West End and Broadway.

• On March 28, the current revival of "Jesus Christ Superstar" calls it quits at the Lyceum, having paid back a scant 15 percent of its $6 million–plus cost. Its producer? None other than Lloyd Webber, who composed the rock opera more than 25 years ago.

To be sure, London, like Broadway, has always had flops — shows that open and close so quickly that the paint on the theater marquee doesn't have time to dry.

What's different about the higher–profile misfires is that they come from the two men — Lloyd Webber and Mackintosh — who set the global agenda for musicals throughout the 1980s with such still–vibrant money–spinners as "Cats," "Les Miserables" and "The Phantom of the Opera."

There hasn't been a commercially successful new English musical to play the West End since "Miss Saigon" — and that was nine years ago.

These days, both men can merely look on as the likes of the Disney Co. and Canadian producer Garth Drabinsky's "Livent" reinvigorate Broadway with such musicals as "The Lion King" and "Ragtime," even as the West End's biggest new hit is the London version of Broadway's smash revival of "Chicago."

The fact is, Broadway may be booming musically, but it no longer has the British to thank.

"What you've got suddenly is all sorts of different artists firing on different fronts," Sam Mendes, the English director who makes his Broadway directing debut next month with a revival of "Cabaret," says about New York. "There's still an excitement generated by big–scale, big–cast musicals that just doesn't happen in London."

Indeed, the current London trend is to think small, or at least smaller. Lloyd Webber's next show "Whistle Down the Wind," will open July 1 at the Aldwych, a theater generally given over to plays.

And whereas the adaptation of the Mary Hayley Bell novel and subsequent 1961 film once was intended as a big Broadway deal, the West End version has been scaled back to a $3.6 million production, less than half the original American estimate.

"Everything I've ever done has always been when we didn't have the money to do it, or it was at least a real fight," Lloyd Webber recalled in a recent interview at his London home. Costs, the composer–impresario said, have spiraled out of control, an assertion borne out by the abortive Washington, D.C., tryout of the same show just over a year ago.

And while Mackintosh insists that Frenchmen Alain Boublil and Claude Michel Schonberg, the creators of "Martin Guerre" and "Les Miserables," have "probably two to three more musicals in them, with me anyway," his next projects will be cushioned by first appearing in the not–for–profit theater, mostly in the United States.

Pre–Emptive Strike rocks the house

PRE–EMPTIVE STRIKE
DJ Shadow
Mo Wax/ffrr

Living up to the expectations of his debut release, Josh Davis (a.k.a. DJ Shadow), has successfully put out another creative and ingenious album. Although off to a slower start, Pre–emptive Strike, elegantly eases into a laid back but highly sophisticated album. Taking familiar sounds from previous recordings, Davis re–interperates them into a creative mix of slow and smooth tunes which complement the remaining, faster beats.

The calming rhythms of "What Does Your Soul Look Like (Part 3)" neatly contrasts the eerie but full–bodied sounds of organs on the correctly named "Organ Donor." And earning the title of one of the best songs that Shadow has ever put out is "High Noon," whose fast–paced and melodic flow offers even more splendor to an already amazing release.

Pre–emptive Strike takes a little getting used to. At first listen, it may seem sluggish and drawn out, but once you get over the slower first half of the album, the second half is nothing but a collection of creative bliss, which should be granted heavy rotation in anyone's stereo. A– (Alexandria Lipka)

GOT NO SHADOW
Mary Lou Lord
Work

Oh, Mary Lou, you let me down. I got caught in all the indie rock hype. I bought your first seven inch, I bought your two EPs, I liked them, they showed more than a hint of promise.

But on your new one... I don't know. It's like low rent Jewel. Not that it's all bad "His Lament Flame" is nice, as are the new versions of the two songs off of your first seven–inch (even though I prefer the raw, original versions). It's very ...nice.

But that's the best I can do. Sorry, I want to say it's better, I really do, but the record as a whole is so lite–FM. There's no fire or soul evident on the album. It's not as compelling as either EP. There's this acoustic guitar overdub on one song that's just a little too Phil Collins, if you know what I mean. If I wanted No Jacket Required, I would have bought it.

But keep your chin up, I'll give you a favorable grade because all in all it's good enough. But I expect more from you next time. B– (Mike Messaros)

UNSOUND METHODS
Recoil
Reprise

The side project of Depeche Mode keyboardist Alan Wilder is without a doubt the most interesting release since David Bowie's Earthling. Recoil's Unsound Methods is more innovative and avant–garde than anything that Depeche Mode has ever come out with (even though Depeche Mode has always been synonymous with these terms).

Collaborating with Maggie Estep, Douglas McCarthy and Siobhan Lynch to name a few, Wilder creates an album that is both atmospheric and chaotic. Estep's vocals on "Luscious Apparatus" clash with Wilder's dream–like music producing the highlight of the disc. Unsound Methods' experimental sound works on most, if not all levels. B+ (Kevin Monahan)

IN THE GALAXY
Another Girl
RCA

Exploring a wide range of mood swings, singer/songwriter Lynne Kellman's project Another Girl takes the listener through anguish, euphoria, innocence, and lack thereof.

On Another Girl's debut In the Galaxy, Kellman sometimes detracts from the raw emotional power of her songs with cheesy pop formulas and cliched lyrics, but the majority of goals that she intends to achieve remain intact. The album opens with "In Interstate" and moves on to the less–than–perfect track "Anything for You." The more interesting tracks come midway through the disc. "Do You Want Me To" is a highly emotional song which captures the feelings of never being enough for one's self. Also, "Favorite" is one of the more fun songs on the album. The highlight of In the Galaxy is clearly "Growing Gold," which goes through the highs and lows that are the essence of the album.

With her ballads and punk flavored pop, simple rock and classical instrumentation, Kellman's album is very erratic. But Another Girl's Cranberries–like brand of music is an exercise in being so. B– (KM)

CON LIMON
Hellbender
Reservoir Records

Sometimes you buy an album and everything just seems to work out. The new Hellbender album is just like that. It starts out well, and you may think, "Yeah, this is good, this is better than just throwing twelve bucks down the sewer." Then the fourth track — "Untrusting You" — kicks in slowly with acoustic guitars, and then with electric. Then you may think, "Hey, this is one hell of an album."

Con Limon harkens back to latter day Jawbreaker, especially to Dear You. The music is tuneful and raw, the lyrics poetic, alternately angry and wistful. The whole thing is a pleasant surprise. Even though at times it may come off as melancholy — especially in "Make Up And Excuse." and "Graveyarded" — the band finds humor in "A Song About Some Girls," where the singer laments the fact that he never had "big muscles or a switchblade knife" and a hidden rap cover at the end.

After Jawbreaker broke up, there seemed to be no band that could take up the mantle of the poetic/romantic indie rock trio, but with this album, Hellbender should be considered as a rightful heir. This album could turn out to be the jam of the year. And it's a lot better than tossing twelve bucks down the sewer. A– (MM)

Read the Collegian...Blah Blah Blah...Cool thing to do...Blah Blah...New England's Largest College Daily...Blah Blah Blah.. Get yours today...Blah Blah...

THE EDWIN M. ROSSMAN ALUMNI CAREER FORUMS
MATHEMATICS
DATE: Tuesday, FEBRUARY 10, 1998
TIME: 4pm-6pm
LOCATION: Lederle GRADUATE RESEARCH TOWER
DAVID GARDOLA
LAUREN GRIFFITH NETWORK REPRESENTATIVE
For more information, please contact: Mather Career Center 545-2224

Collegian Arts
Collegian Arts

JAMAICA
SPRING BREAK MONTEGO BAY!!!
$399
ONE LOVE. ONE HEART. ONE GREAT PARTY!!!
IT'S THAT TIME OF YEAR WHEN THOUSANDS OF STUDENTS COME TO JAMAICA TO FEEL ALRIGHT - FOR AN UNBELIEVABLE PRICE!!!
PACKAGE INCLUDES:
• Round-Trip Airfare
• 7 Nights Hotel Accommodations
• Round-Trip Airport & Hotel Transfers
• Free Welcome, Beach & Freedom Parties
• Free Admission to Night Clubs
• Discounts on Restaurants, Water Sports & Side Excursions
• Hotel Packages Available from $450
• Professional On-Site Tour Reps
• Complete Weekly Activities Program Offering Optional Sunset Cruise, Booze Cruise, Toga Party & More!
• Free Booze Party Pack
SUN SPLASH TOURS
1 800-426-7710
STUDENT TRAVEL SERVICES
1 800-648-4849
Price is per person based on quad occupancy. NY, DW, Wash. Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus, Nashville, New Orleans, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh departures. Other cities may qualify for reduction or require surcharge. US and Jamaica departure taxes (currently $57) and $9 handling charge additional. Add $30 for 3/6 / 8/98 bookings. Rates increase $30 on 12/15/97. Peak week surcharges/off-week discounts may apply. Restrictions and cancellation penalties apply. Limited availability. Subject to change without notice. Call for full details on hotel selection and availability.

■ ski

continued from page 12

had something to do with the fact that it was gorgeous weather up there, perfect for racing."

In addition to their balance in the slalom, the Minutemen also exhibited the same well-roundedness in the giant slalom, placing four of their skiers amongst the event's top 20 finishers. Holden finished a UMass-best fourth in the event, followed by senior captain, Eric McCormick, who placed sixth. Griffin, a sophomore newcomer to the team, continued to impress MacConnell with an admirable performance for the second consecutive weekend. He is expected to jump from the fifth to the third spot on the UMass roster.

"John Griffin had a particularly good weekend," MacConnell said. "We are very impressed with what he has done so far. He is a skier that we've followed for quite some time. He is from Carabasset Valley Academy, just as Tom Holden is, and he was part of the Stockbridge School of Agriculture last year."

In addition to the satisfaction of a solid showing, Holden was greeted with another accolade last weekend, as the recipient of the John Davidson Award. The award is presented by Boston College to an outstanding skier in the league in honor of a former Eagle standout skier who died of cancer.

In contrast to their male counterparts, the women's team struggled last weekend, placing a respectable fifth in the giant slalom, but a disappointing seventh in the slalom.

"The women had a real tough day in the slalom," MacConnell said, after his Minutewomen skied to fourth and fifth–place finishes two weekends ago. "It could have been much worse though, but some of our skiers deeper (in the line-up) stepped it up for us."

Senior captain and two–time All–American Leah Muliero led UMass in both events, taking tenth place in the giant slalom and eighth in the slalom. Freshmen Margaret LaBombard finished a Minutewomen second–best at 21st in the giant slalom, but had difficulty with her skies in the slalom causing her to fall. Anchoring the women's squad was sophomore Lacey Perlenfein, who required eight stitches to close a wound on Saturday. But returned to ski well for a UMass squad which MacConnell still feels extremely optimistic about.

"We had a tough time, but if the women ski reasonably well, they will qualify for the regionals," MacConnell said.

After four consecutive meets away from home, the ski teams will finally compete on the familiar slopes of Berkshire East Mountain at this weekend's Smith College Tournament, where MacConnell feels his teams should ski both comfortably and well.

■ women hoop

continued from page 12

game, the Minutewomen have shot over 50 percent from the field... UMass held their last two opponents to 18 points in the first half...They shot 5–7 for an impressive .714 percent from behind the arc...The Minutewomen lead the overall series 21–19.

Absolut Collegian Sports

■ NBA

continued from page 12

board catch.

Cleveland center Zydrunas Ilgauskas of the victorious East team that won 85–80 took home Rookie MVP honors back home along with teammates Brevin Knight and Cedric Henderson who should help propel the Cavs to a few more notches in the win column in the near future.

Utah Jazz guard Jeff Hornacek outshot Dallas guard Hubert Davis to take the three point contest for his sons Ryan and Tyler. Apparently they wanted to come to New York for a little family vacation (Hornacek included). Now that's incentive.

Of concern among some players and the league is whether marijuana should be added to its list of banned substances. This seems like just another way the NBA Players Association can feel important. The Union's executive director Billy Hunter has said that he feels the media's perception of the players are that they are "gang–bangers, hip–hoppers and guys who go around doing drugs and drinking a lot of alcohol."

That actually has nothing to do with the issue which shouldn't be an issue at all. Both David Robinson and Larry Bird support the ban. Robinson thinks "it's a no–brainer" while Bird has said that "they should test everyone."

Well, we saw the Lakers crush the Bulls before the mid– season break, and this week they'll try to do the same to the visiting and league–leading Seattle Supersonics. Expect a show that may turn into a battle when L.A. has to go up against a tough Sonic defense.

Quote of the Week: "It's unfortunate. Mase is a good guy. I don't know him real well, but we go to chapel before games together and he seems like a righteous brother." — Detroit forward Grant Hill on Charlotte forward Anthony Mason after Mason was arrested Saturday on third–degree rape charges.

Jamie Jee is a Collegian columnist.

Freeze Frame!

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Freshman Kathy Coyner hopes to have another fine game against the Rams of Rhode Island tonight.

Japan symbol enrages viewers

By Josh Dubow
Associated Press

One symbol is an ancient Japanese spiritual marking that resembles a swastika. The other is a commercial logo signifying global corporate business.

CBS has reasons for displaying both symbols, but only one is legitimate.

The swastika–like symbol, the Japanese manji, appears on front of the Zenko–ji Temple, the home of CBS' prime–time studio, and was seen during Olympic coverage last weekend.

Far more apparent was the Nike swoosh, which was pasted all over the apparel of the network's announcers.

CBS has tried to keep the swastika symbol off camera, but it did creep into the coverage a few times on Saturday night, drawing phone calls from viewers. Prime–time host Jim Nantz quickly addressed the question Sunday, explaining the symbol during a piece on the history of the temple.

The symbol is called the manji, or mark of 10,000. The number 10,000 in Asian tradition is a metaphor for good fortune. Today in Japan, the symbol is used in its original meaning of temple. It is frequently seen on the front of Buddhist temples, and is often used on maps to indicate the position of temples, much like a cross is used to mark a church in the United States.

The Nazi party adapted the manji to use as the symbol for its quest for Aryan dominance. They reversed it, flipping it over right to left, and rotated it 45 degrees to create the Nazi swastika. While the explanation for the manji is grounded in history, the presence of the swoosh is solely a financial decision.

Nike — a major advertiser for the games — has outfitted CBS announcers in Nagano with jackets, turtlenecks and other apparel with its all–too–familiar swoosh. As part of the deal, the logo will be visible on announcers when they are on the air.

"That has a pretty big impact for Nike," said Fred Fried, the executive vice president of Integrated Sports International marketing firm. "You're talking about 17 days of prime–time coverage; it can certainly add up."

This is not the first time the Nike logo has been at the center of an Olympic controversy. At Barcelona in 1992, some U.S. Dream Teamers, most notably Nike endorser Michael Jordan, draped themselves with U.S. flags on the medal stand to cover the Reebok logo on their official warmup jackets.

In 1992 and 1994, CBS announcers wore apparel outfitted by U.S. Olympic Committee sponsors Sun Ice and Columbia, respectively. Those logos, however, were not nearly as recognizable on the air as the ever–present swoosh.

To put the swoosh on these jackets, CBS had to remove the Olympic rings because Nike is not a USOC sponsor.

The news division did not agree with the deal, however, and reporters such as Harry Smith and Anthony Mason will not wear the swoosh. (On some pieces taped before the games, CBS News reporters do wear the swoosh).

TNT also rejected a sponsor's logo, a path most networks follow. ABC, Fox and ESPN said they do not allow advertising logos to be visible on the clothes of on–air talent. NBC had no logo on its Olympic apparel, but does have a Pro Player logo on the sleeve of its NFL jackets.

"This is not unprecedented," CBS Sports spokeswoman LeslieAnne Wade said. "A lot of TV personalities wear clothes provided to them by companies looking for promotional value. This just happens to be Nike and it's symbol is so recognizable."

While most networks do have apparel deals, CBS' is different because the logo is so prevalent. The money–first decision has turned its announcers into billboards.

If the time comes at these games for CBS to do hard–news reporting on Nike, will the credibility of its announcers be tarnished?

That's not a question the other networks — such as ESPN, which is planning a piece on shoe and apparel factories in Southeast Asia — have to answer.

Nagano storms world stage; U.S. personal stories leak

NAGANO, Japan (AP) — Wendel Suckow's last Olympics weren't a total loss.

Suckow, America's best hope for a medal in the luge, finished sixth in the singles competition. Afterward, he proposed to girlfriend Kim Fluhmann and gave her a diamond ring.

He had kept the ring in his backpack in the athletes' waiting room during his two runs yesterday.

Fluhmann said yes, and now an August wedding is planned. Fluhmann manages a clothing store in Lake Placid, N.Y. Suckow, whose third Olympics were his last, probably will become a coach with the U.S. luge team.

MOB MENTALITY: City officials want Olympic visitors to enjoy the sights and sports. And while they're at it, beware of organized crime.

In "The Guide to Nagano," published by one of Japan's largest newspapers, guests are urged to show their solidarity with Japanese police by patronizing only those bars, restaurants, hotels and stores that have posted anti–organized crime stickers in their windows.

In English, the stickers proclaim: "We have NO relations with YAKUZA," the generic Japanese word for gangsters.

Police estimate there are 42 yakuza gangs in Nagano, with about 1,000 members operating in the area.

The rival gangs usually target each other, but police official Shotchi Kinoshita is guarding against the following scenario: Out–of–town revelers would be sampling sushi or sipping sake at some nightspot when a group of drunken gangsters decides to bully a shop owner.

"We don't want guests to be exposed to that or endangered by it," he said.

—

HAPPY COMMUTING: Heavy restrictions on traffic during the Olympics got their first real test in a weekday rush hour yesterday, and held up better than expected.

Traffic was actually lighter in some areas of town than usual, police said, reflecting increased use of carpools and buses. Concerns over transportation during the games have been high because of Nagano's narrow, crowded streets and relatively poor mass transit system.

International Olympic Committee spokeswoman Michele Verdier said the roads remain an issue.

"Transportation is still a problem," she said. She added that organizers have promised to beef up the system.

—

NICE TRY: The new Olympic sport of women's hockey may not be the most popular ticket in town, but it gets high marks for trying. Fans at yesterday's match at the Aqua Wing arena, where Finland beat Japan 11–1, were told to be quiet for an important pre–game tip. The crowd, most of them rooting for the hometown Japanese, were then given a simple rundown on the basic rules of hockey on the large–screen video.

MJ wins NBA All–Star MVP; Is it the end of the Jordan Era?

By Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

NEW YORK — This might have been Michael Jordan's final All–Star game, and it will be followed by what might be a farewell tour and what might be a last championship push.

Through it all, there will be believers and nonbelievers. Some think it's the end of the Jordan Era, some think it's all a big charade.

"How many times do you want me to say it?" Jordan asked Sunday after winning his third All–Star MVP award. "I'll say it once more. If Phil (Jackson) is not in Chicago, I'm not playing." Jordan did not change his stance during All–Star weekend. He simply reiterated what he has been saying for weeks: If the Bulls change coaches, as management maintains it will, he will retire. Neither side figures to blink until the playoffs are over and it's clear whether the Bulls have added to their dynasty with a sixth title in eight years.

If they win, the pressure to capitulate will be on owner Jerry Reinsdorf and general manager Jerry Krause.

If they lose, it will be on Jordan to lose him," Eastern Conference All–Star coach Larry Bird said.

Bird, like nearly everyone at All–Star weekend, heard the Jordan question over and over. And like everyone, he didn't know whether to believe it.

"Michael will be here again next year and will win the MVP again," Jayson Williams said. "I don't know why Mike needs so much drama in his life."

"I think this was his last (All–Star) game," Penny Hardaway said.

"We hope he won't retire," Gary Payton said. "We hope he comes back because he makes it more competitive."

Added West coach George Karl: "The league will learn how to function without Michael, but I'll go on record right now that I personally think Michael should continue to play.

"I think we all want to try to beat him. He has set the standard at such a height that anybody who has the opportunity wants to go after the best. And he has proven to be the best many, many times."

Jordan won the MVP award after leading all scorers with 23 points as the East beat the West 135–114. Jordan shot 10–for–18 with eight assists, six rebounds and three steals.

"If that was his last, it was a great way to go out," Jason Kidd said. "If he does decide to retire, he's going out at the right time — out on top."

There is skepticism regarding Jordan's pronouncements because he has gone back on his word before.

When he retired in 1993 to become a baseball player, he said he was finished playing basketball.

When he returned in 1995, he wore uniform No. 45 and said he would never wear No. 23 again.

In both cases, Jordan flip–flopped. Now, people are looking for any sliver of hedging on his part.

If he won't play or any coach other than Jackson, would he consider being a player–coach?

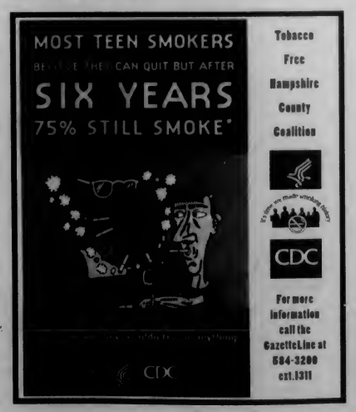
"No. That was just an appetizer thrown out by Phil," Jordan said.

Would he play elsewhere next season if Jackson gets a job coaching another team?

"Nowhere else," Jordan said.

Would he play for the Knicks?

"No. I said I'd only do that if I was single. I'm not single," Jordan said.



Why don't people believe him?

"I don't know," he said. "I guess you'll have to wait and see. People don't want to see it or people just don't want it to happen. But this day was going to happen sooner or later.

"I've always said I would not walk out of the game limping. If I walk out of the game, I want to walk out knowing I can still play. People have to believe that."

Collegian Sports, we're bigger than Titanic!

Men's tennis team faces uncertainty

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

Team competition has not even begun this spring for the Massachusetts men's tennis team and already there are complications. The Minutemen learned last month that they would be without their No. 2 singles player Pat Slyman, who has taken this semester off from school.

However, UMass did receive some compensation in the form of Beau Navarro who has returned to UMass after missing the fall season.

The Minutemen rolled to a 7–1 fall season, while relying on their 1–2–3 punch in singles from Todd Cheney, Slyman and Rob Manchester. However, one third of that equation is now absent, and Coach Judy Dixon is scrambling to revamp the lineup.

"Losing a player like Slyman really affects our situation, Dixon said. "He made the top of our singles lineup almost invincible. We will be counting on some of our other players to step up for the remainder of the season."

At the moment, it looks as if Manchester who was very solid this fall will move up to the No. 2 slot, and Alex Aller will assume the role of No. 3.

Parsa Samii who has never competed at a spot higher than No. 5 will slide up to No. 4. Navarro — who needs to regain last year's form — will begin at No. 5, and Kevin Curley will round out the singles lineup for now.

"I am counting very heavily on Alex to play the type of tennis he is capable of playing," Dixon said. "He will be of vital importance to our overall success."

Right now Beau needs to get back into competitive shape. But I am hoping he will come around for us as well, to help cushion the blow of losing Pat [Slyman]."

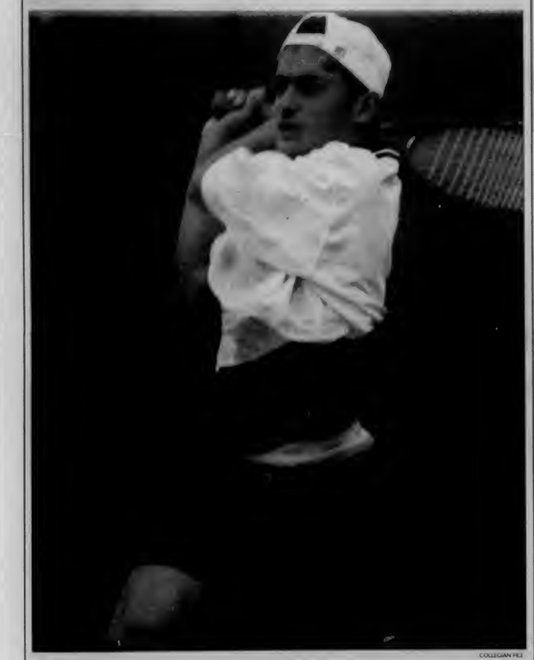
The Minutemen opened up the spring season at the Cornell Invitational this past weekend, but in flight competitions. In this tournament, the players were playing in individual groupings.

In the A flights, Todd Cheney and Rob Manchester represented the Minutemen in fairly successful fashion.

Cheney beat the No. 3 seed from Dartmouth, Robert Chen, 6–2 6–2. Cheney fell to Greg Aretzi from Cornell 3–6, 1–6 in the A flight quarterfinals.

Manchester was defeated by Tom Brownlei from Cornell 3–6, 6–7 in the first round, but then made it to the finals of the consolations.

"I was very pleased with Todd and Rob's performances throughout the weekend," Dixon said. "They were playing top notch competition, and they more than held their own. We need these types of performances from them, once team play begins."



Aller and Samii played in the B flights for UMass. Aller beat David Martin from Dartmouth 6–3, 6–4 in the first round. He then fell in the quarterfinals in a tough three–set match.

Samii was handed a loss in the first round by Tyler Hansburger of Bloomberg College 0–6, 6–3, 4–6. He rebounded to win the B flight consolation round by knocking off David Martin 8–6 in a proset.

"I was very encouraged by the way Aller and Samii performed for us in the B flights," Dixon said. "They will certainly help to solidify us in singles play, if they compete like this."

The C and D flights were disappointments for UMass at Cornell, as only Jason Lin managed a victory in the D flights. Keith Schumann won a consolation match in the D flights by default.

"Right now, I am focused on getting our lineup set, and getting back to playing the true UMass brand of tennis" Dixon said. "That means we have to go back to basics, which translates into better play from the bottom of the singles order, and certainly better doubles play."

COLLEGIAN FILE

The Massachusetts men's tennis team competed this past weekend.

Getting back into the swing of things.

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts women's softball team return to the diamond for the start of the 1998 season this Friday.

■ hoops

continued from page 12

Minutemen notes...

UMass has won 21 of its last 23 conference road games since the start of the 1994–1995 season, the two defeats coming at Temple in 1995 and at Dayton on Feb. 23, 1997...The Minutemen are 84–0 in games where they have held leads of 10 points or more since 1994–1995...UMass is 71–4 when they've held opponents to under 50 percent shooting, and have held 15 opponents to under 40 percent...UMass leads the A–10 in shots blocked at 6.3 bpg, led by Lari Ketner with 2.4 bpg.

■ women's swim

continued from page 12

A–10's.

"In the last couple of weeks the team really has come together as a group. They're having fun, which is something that is important," said Newcomb. "We've been swimming in meets since Oct. 25, and we're ready to have one good final meet."

Minutewomen Notes: Freshman Sarah Newell holds top–five times in the conference in two events. She is third in the 200 breast with a time of 2:24.28, and fifth in the 100 breast with a time of 1:07.45. Hickey is third in the 500 free with a time of 5:03.98. Sophomore Lia Lansky currently ranks fifth in the 200 fly with a time of 2:09.11...Newcomb, who is in his 14th year at the helm of the Minutewomen, now sports a 98–62–1 mark during his tenure. He was the New England Swimming and Diving Coach of the Year in 1988 and 1989...UMass was strong across the board in the Fordham meet. Julie Alexander (twice), Irina Kossenko, Dragon, Lyndsay Crenshaw, Robin Velona, Spencer, Sharyn Harrison, Stacie Hymes, and Amy Mullen all added second–place finishes to propel the Minutewomen to victory.

Men's swim drowns Fordham

By Jamie Jee
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's swimming team capped an undefeated dual meet season Saturday by defeating Fordham, 207–92, to give them their seventh home win of the season.

"I'm glad that we were able to finish on an up–note," said Coach Russ Yarworth. "We really had a lot of guys finish the season strong and help out the team."

The Minutemen (10–0) were never really threatened by the Rams as they cruised to their second perfect dual meet season in three years. Since the 1985–86 season, UMass has swam without a loss in seven seasons.

"We were able to relax a bit," said Yarworth. "Now we just need to rest up a bit and prepare for the most important part of the season."

The Minutemen will begin that part after a week and a half hiatus to prepare themselves for the challenge ahead. Then, on February 19 they travel to Buffalo, N.Y. for the Atlantic 10 Conference Championship meet, hoping to bring home a third straight A–10 title.

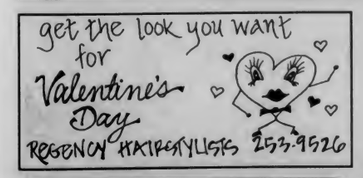
Integral to the chances of UMass pulling off the three–peat will be senior Sean Anderson and freshman Billy Brown. Both kept with the "Refuse to Lose" theme as they each went undefeated in their respective events.

Anderson managed to compile a perfect record in the 50m freestyle while Brown added youth to experience and also went undefeated in his event, the 100m breaststroke.

The senior and freshman also have more in common. Both hold the second fastest times in those events as well. Anderson's mark is 20.51 in the 50m and Brown is on the all–time list with a time of 57.58 for the 100m.

A look at the Atlantic 10 leader board reveals even more similarity between the two swimmers. Each leads the conference with the fastest times for their events. Anderson has the fastest 50m (20.84) and 100m freestyle (46.31) times while Brown remains atop the board with his school record 2:03.20 in the 200m breaststroke.

Junimar B.J. Brannan has also swam well thus far as he holds the best conference mark for the 500m freestyle at 4:35.67. At the meet, sophomore Bryan Grimes swam a personal best in the 1000m freestyle.



Adding to outstanding individual performances have been the relay teams as the Minutemen have the fastest conference times in the 400m medley (3:27.34) and 800m freestyle (6:52.90).

With strong individual and team efforts, UMass has consistently been among the teams to beat in the A–10 over the years and this year is no different. The Minutemen will look to take their winning momentum into the conference championships.

"St. Bonaventure and George Washington should both be right there," said Yarworth. "We just have to hit the tapering period well and prepare ourselves."

The regular season has indicated that the Minutemen know how to do just that and they will use that knowledge to get themselves ready for the big meets and carry on the UMass swimming tradition.

"I look at the dual meet season as the time to set the table," said Yarworth. "Now it's time to go in and show them who's boss."

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Come dance with Iobb at Walker's Grill on 2/10. 10pm.

$ WIN MONEY $
Win $ in the Central Area Battle of the Bands on March 6th. Demo tapes due by Feb 18. One member must be a Central Resident. Contact Chris 6-2169, Nick 6-5694.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Single room apartment at Cliffside. Available Feb onward. All utilities included. $540/month. Please call Robin at 665-1281

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center. 545-1995.

Toyota Tercel 94 Good condition. Extended Dealer's Guaranty. $7500 Call 546-2430

88 Toyota Corolla 5 speed Good condition. 149k. $2200 Call 256-1767.

1989 BMW 325i Navy blue/grey interior, new tires, highway miles. Excellent student car. Runs great $4500 or B/O Call 546-5536

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday 1-800-649-4795

COMPUTERS

City Communications Pentium Computers!!! Pentium 233 MHz with MMX Technology. Loaded. Princeton 15" XVGA Monitor included. Only $1100!! Call for specs 546-8826

COMPUTERS

Now P166MMX from $895. Laptops, $1295! Peripherals. ZarVision 582-9198 V/MC/AMEX

EMPLOYMENT

COUNSELORS: TOP BOYS SPORTS CAMP IN MAINE! Exciting, fun summer! Instruct, coach, or assist. Openings in: All Land Sports, All Water Sports. PLUS: Camping/Hiking, Ropes/Climbing Wall, SCUBA, Archery, Riflery, Martial Arts, RN's, Secretaries. Top salaries. Awesome facilities. Rm/Bd/Lndry. Travel. CALL the (800) NUMBER NOW, (800)473-6104, or E-MAIL cobbachief@aol.com or write: Steve Rubin, CAMP COBBOSSEE, 10 Silvermine Dr., South Salem, NY 10590.

Counselors for co-ed Northeast PA overnight Jewish camp- 3 hours from NYC- general, sports, drama, H20 & arts 1-800-973-3865

SUMMER OPPORTUNITIES Mutsker Tours and Summer Discovery are looking for counselors for our student travelprograms and/or our pre-college enrichment programs. Applicants must be 21 years old by June15,1998. We need mature, hardworking, energetic, individuals who can dedicate 4-7 weeks this summer working with teenagers. A director will be on campus at UMASS ON February 24.Please call for more information/application or set up an interview at 888-8SUMMER

EMPLOYMENT

NATIONAL PARK EMPLOYMENT- Parks, Forests, Wildlife Preserves. Ask us how! 517-324-3109 Ext. N50012

WHITEWATER RAFT GUIDES NEEDED in Western MA. Full or Part-time available. No experience necessary. We will train. Looking for athletic, personable people who like to work hard in the outdoors Call Crab Apple Whitewater (413)339-0188 for more information and an application.

Full-Time Summer Position Available at Crab Apple Whitewater for a Photo Technician at our Miniab. Job entails developing film and printing pictures. No experience necessary but some past use of lab helpful. Call (413)339-0188 for info and an application

EXCEPTIONAL SUMMER OPPORTUNITY- Camp Wayne, NE PA (3hrs/NYC)- Sports oriented Counselor/Specialists for all Land/Water Sports including Tennis, Camping, Climbing/Ropes, Mountain Biking, Rocketry, Roller Hockey, Sailing/Waterskiing, A&C, Drama, Radio, Video Campus Interviews Tues, March 3rd. Please call 1-888-737-9296 or 516-883-3067 Leave your name, phone number and mailing address

EMPLOYMENT

MAINTENANCE PERSON Brandywine Apartments in Amherst. Full-time, General maintenance skills including electrical, plumbing, carpentry and ceramic tile work necessary. Must live on site. Duties include after hours "call" on rotating basis. Competitive salary with benefits, including apartment. Send resume to: 16G Brandywine Dr., Amherst, MA 01002. Or call: (413)549-0600. Fax (413)549-1319.

CRUISE SHIP & LAND-TOUR JOBS Discover how to work in exotic locations, meet fun people, while earning a living in these exciting industries! For more information: 517-324-3092 Ext C50012

ENTERTAINMENT

Gorilla-Grams
Balloons, roses, poems, etc. Send the Crazy Gorilla on Valentine's Day. Sign up in the Newman Center on 2/10 and 2/12. Student Rates Available. Info call (413)781-3696.

FOR RENT

SUMMER RENTALS CAPE COD GROUP Summer Rentals- Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Diamond Real Estate (508)477-1900

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742

FOR SALE

CORWOOD FOR SALE $125 cord call 549-5456

FOR SALE

Full Size Futon Used one semester. $150/BO 546-4841

HEALTH & BEAUTY

Acupuncture and Herbal Medicine National Board Certified Licensed. 549-6542

INSTRUCTION

DANCE AWAY THE WINTER BLUES! BALLET FOR BEGINNERS and Intermediates taught by Heather Clark-Warner, Pioneer Valley Ballet School, Wednesday evenings. Call 586-4142

MISCELLANEOUS

University Barteading Coursa 50% Student Discount National Certification Available. Spring Sessions This Semester. Space Is Limited. 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

FREE T-SHIRT + $1000 Credit Card fundraisers for fraternities, sororities & groups. Any campus organization can raise up to $1000 by earning a whopping $5.00/VISA application. Call 1-800-932-0528 ext.65. Qualified callers receive FREE T-SHIRT.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

For Sale- Oidjeridu Hand made, hand painted, by student. $20 with lesson. 253-7342

MUSICIANS WANTED

STARTING BARBARSHOP QUARTET

No haircutting involved, just solid acapella singing Call Daniel 665-7581

PERSONALS

"Show me love and what it's all about!"- Robyn. Free love and valentines at www.studentodvantage.com/qpid

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

STEREO & CD EQUIP

200 Watt 3-Way Speakers For Sale. Never used. $450 or B/O. Steve 546-3042

Car Stereo Equipment Kenwood Detach Face- 1 year old, paid $350, 1 amp 100x2, paid $150 1 amp 100x4 paid $100. 1 pair Pioneer 6x9 speakers, 100w, paid $110. Whole system sounds great, needs nothing. Selling as package deal for $300. Call 546-3842

TRAVEL

KILLINGTON- SPRING BREAK Want a great time for a low price? Go to Killington for Spring Break! Starting @ $249, including 5 day lift ticket, 5 nights @ Mountain Green. UMASS SKI N BOARD CLUB 545-3437

#1 Spring Break from $119! FREE SPRING BREAK AND PARTIES- ORGANIZE A GROUP! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Barbados, Florida Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK! CANCUN * BAHAMAS 24 HOURS OF FREE DRINKS! 7 nights from $299! Includes all taxes. 24 hours of free drinks and resort parties, exclusive all inclusive resorts, Organize 15 friends and Endless a FREE TRIP! CLASS Travel Inc. 1-800-838-5411

JAMAICA- SPRING BREAK IN NEGRIL Don't get ripped off! Go with who you can trust. No hidden costs; starting @ $539. 7 nights, round trip air, transfers. Collegiate Beach & Party Events. On-site staff. UMASS SKI N BOARD CLUB 545-3437

Spring Break- Cancun and Nassau from $399. Air, hotel, transfers, parties, and more! Organize a small group- Earn free trips plus commission! Call 1-800-SPRING BREAK, 1-800-777-4642

SPRING BREAK '98
Free food and drinks! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica and Florida from $399. Organize a small group and travel FREE! Highest commissions and lowest prices. Call Surf & Sun Tours to become a campus representative (800)574-7577

Spring Break '98 Get Going!!!
Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida. Group Discounts & Free Drink Parties! Sell 5 & go free! Book Now!!! Visa/MC/Disc/Amex 1-800-234-7007 http://www.endlesssummertours.com

WANTED

Internships Available! Collegian Business Office is Now Taking Applications Positions Available in: •Marketing •Promotions •Finance •Business •Advertising

Applications are available at our office in room 113 Campus Center (in the basement) or call 545-1500 if you have any questions.

V-DAY ARE YOU PREPARED? CLASSIFIEDS SPECIAL VALENTINES DAY ISSUE

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be processed by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classifieds.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO 976 PERSONALS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals; this means no PO Boxes or street addresses.
5. Personals with a commercial or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Personals may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad. Ads placed in person must show a valid UMass I.D. and provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the computer order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to University judicial action.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to edit or refuse any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day

All Others
40¢ per word /day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or typographical errors.

$2.00 min/day

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
AUTO PARTS
CHILDCARE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
COMPUTERS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FURNITURE
GREEK ANNOUNCEMENTS
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HEALTH & BEAUTY
HOUSES FOR RENT
HOUSES FOR SALE
HOUSESITTING
JEWELERY
INSTRUCTION
LOST & FOUND
13 DAYS PRIOR
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MISCELLANEOUS FOR RENT
MOTORCYCLES
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
MUSIC LESSONS
MUSICIANS WANTED
PERSONALS
PETS FOR SALE
RESUMES
RIDES WANTED
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SPORTS
STEREO & CD EQUIP
SUMMER SUBLET
TELEMERCHO FOR SALE
TICKETS
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
TUTORING SERVICES
TUTOR WANTED
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED GENERAL
WORLD WIDE WEB
YARD SALES

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, FEB. 10

Blood Drive— The American Red Cross will be holding a blood drive from 10:30-4:30 p.m. in Campus Center 101. Call 1-800-462-2229 for an appointment, walk-ins welcome.

Meeting— The Ballroom Dancing Club will meet from 5:30-7 p.m. in Totman 101. No experience is necessary. For more information, contact Shannon at 546-2253.

Meeting— The Animal Rights Coalition will be holding their first general meeting for the semester at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. New members welcome and food will be served. For more information, call 545-1925.

Social— The Pride Alliance will be holding an informational social in Campus Center 917 at 7 p.m. For more information call 545-0154 or visit the office at 413B Student Union.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 11

Auditions— Auditions for the UMass improvisational comedy troupe, Mission IMPROVable, will be held at 7 p.m. in Campus Center 163. No experience necessary. For more information, contact Aaron at 546-5225.

Blood Drive— The American Red Cross will be holding a blood drive from 10:30-4:30 p.m. in Campus Center 101. Call 1-800-462-2229 for an appointment, walk-ins welcome.

Meeting— The Prevet/Animal Science Club will be holding its first in a series of meetings in Paige Lab 202 at 7 p.m. Any questions, please contact Brian at 256-6022. Refreshments will be served.

Meeting— Circle K International, a campus and community service group, will meet at 6:30 p.m. in Stockbridge 114. For more information, call 548-3959.

THURSDAY, FEB. 12

Auditions— Auditions for the UMass improvisational comedy troupe, Mission IMPROVable, will be held at 7 p.m. in Campus Center 163. No experience necessary. For more information, contact Aaron at 546-5225.

Meeting— The Prevet/Animal Science Club will be holding its second in a series of meetings in Paige Lab 202 at 7 p.m. Any questions, please contact Brian at 256-6022. Refreshments will be served.

Class— Weekly yoga and meditation class will be held in Butterfield Lounge at 8 p.m. A visiting yoga monk will be teaching. For more information, call 253-9553.

Meeting— The UMass Queen Fan Club will meet in the Cape Cod Lounge at 4 p.m. New members are welcome. For more information, contact Sabrina at 549-4918.

Meeting— The Prevet/Animal Science Club will be holding its second in a series of meetings in Paige Lab 202 at 7 p.m. Any questions, please contact Brian at 256-6022. Refreshments will be served.

Talk— Robyn Ochs will be speaking as part of the GLBT Studies Lecture Series in the Campus Center room 803. The topic is to be announced. For more information contact the Stonewall Center at 545-4824.

FRIDAY, FEB. 13

Concert— The Outing Club will be presenting a free concert featuring Entrain with special guest Particle Zoo. It will take place at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium.

Services— Shabbat Service will be held at 6 p.m. at Hillel House.

NOTICES

Writing — Spectrum Magazine is taking submissions for the next edition of the magazine. The deadline is Feb. 12. For more information, call the office at 545-2240 or come by in the Student Union, room 408E.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Have you read the Daily Collegian Today?

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	17	HSCN Programming
3	CBS/3 Hartford	18	TV-19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	22	NBC/22 Springfield
6	PBS/57 Springfield	23	CNN
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	24	CNN SI
8	UPN/20 Hartford	25	Headline News
9	Weather Channel	28	UCTV
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
		33	Much Music

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 10, 1998

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	16	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		G. Auriemma	Women's College Basketball: Connecticut at Rutgers. (Live)			Nova "The Brain Eaters"		Frontline (In Stereo)			Breakthrough
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV	Olympic Winter Games						News
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Olympic Winter Games						News
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Drew Carey	Soul Man	Home Imp.	Grace Under	NYPD Blue "Twin Peles"	News		Nightline
WLVI	56	Full House	BoyWorld	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Buffy the Vampire Slayer		Dawson's Creek (In Stereo)		News	Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Med Abo. You	Caroline	Frasier (R)	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WTXX	9	Cheers	Mad Abo. You	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Moesha (R)	Clueless (R)	Moesha (R)	Clueless (R)	News	Grace Under	Vibe
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Med Abo. You	Caroline	Frasier (R)	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	Bad Boys" (1995, Drama) Martin Lawrence. (In Stereo)				News	Simpsons	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Med Abo. You	Caroline	Frasier (R)	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "The Brain Eaters"		Frontline (In Stereo)		No Time to Be a Child		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Drew Carey	Soul Men	Home Imp.	Grace Under	NYPD Blue "Twin Peles"	News		Nightline
WSBK	38	Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	Moesha (R)	Clueless (R)	NBA Basketball: Boston Celtics at Denver Nuggets. (Live)					Real TV
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Andy Griffith	Andy Griffith	"Flight of the Intruder" (1991)		Adventure) Danny Glover, Willem Dafoe.			"The Mighty Man" (1991) Alec Baldwin,
A&E	69	Northern Exposure		Law & Order		Biography "Louis Lepke"		American Justice "Godfathers vs. the Law" (R)			Law & Order "Profile"
CNN	53	Worldview		Moneyline	Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		World Today	Sports Bus.	Moneyline
COM	63	Premium	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Brett Butler	Foxworthy	Young Comedians (R)		Viva Variety	Make-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	62	Wings "The Flying Tanks" (R)		Gimme Shelter (R)		Wild Discovery: African		New Detectives: Case Studies		Breakout "Island Escapes"		Justice Files (R)
ESPN	43	Up Close	Sportscenter		College Basketball: Indiana at Purdue. (Live)				College Basketball: Arkansas at Georgia. (Live)				Sportscenter
LIFE	67	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Women Named Jackie (Part 2 of 3)				Almost Perfect	Golden Girls
MTV	33	MTV Live (In Stereo)		My So-Called Life (In Stereo)		Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	68	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Secret of Alex	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	I Love Lucy	M.T. Moore	Taxi	Newhart
SCIFI	66	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Seaquest 2032	"Spindrift"	Sightings (In Stereo)		Forever Knights "Blind Faith"		Tekwar "Cyberhunt" (In Stereo)		Seaquest 2032	"Spindrift"
TLC	78	Renovation	Renovation	Home Again	Home Again	Trauma II – Life in the ER (R)		Top Gun Academy		Extreme Machines (R)		Trauma II – Life in the ER (R)
TNT	70	Lois & Clark-Superman		Babylon 5 "The Long Dark"		NBA Basketball: Seattle SuperSonics at Houston Rockets (In Stereo Live)					Inside-NBA
USA	59	Baywatch "Rea Fun"		Highlander: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger		Boxing: Brian Barbosa vs. Antwun Echols. (In Stereo Live)			Stir Steelings "Yes Or Dice"
HBO	93	"Turbo: A Power Rangers Movie" (1997) Jason David Frank.				"Private Parts" (1997, Comedy) Howard Stern. (R)				Best of Autopsy (In Stereo)	Tracey Takes	"People"
MAX	94	"Ferris Bueller's Day Off" (1986) PG-13		Spice World		"The Men Who Loved Women" (1983) Burt Reynolds. (R)				"Turbulence" (1997) Ray Liotta. (R)		Intimate Sess.
SHOW	95	(5:30) "Hero" (1992) Dustin Hoffman.		Filmmaker		"Bats: Wire" (1996) Pamela Anderson Lee.		"The Rat" (1994, Comedy) Denis Leary. (In Stereo)				Red Shoe

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Fox Trot By Bill Amend

Non Sequitur By Wiley

Loser Cow Comics By Alan DeMonde

Sven By Stephen Higgens

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan 20.–Feb. 18) — You are going to have to make an early start today if you wish to stay on schedule. Some unknown variables will exert a strong influence.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You may have trouble today turning away from something that proves attractive yet risky — with little hope of any real payoff.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — A decision may have to be made today that is based solely upon financial realities. Be sure to keep personal concerns out of it for the time being.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You may be challenged today in a manner you had not expected. Seek counsel when it comes to any decision involving a leap of faith.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — It will be up to you to put things in the proper perspective today — not only for yourself, but for many of those around you as well.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — Do not hold back at this time; you're going to want to share any and all information you may have with those in your inner circle.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — Practice usually makes perfect, but today it may only result in your becoming bored or frustrated with the task at hand. Make every shot count!

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You will learn a thing or two from someone much younger than yourself — and someone much older can, in turn, learn something from you as well.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — What appears to be an even trade demands greater scrutiny today. The fact is that you may be getting the short end of the stick.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You have every reason to be more concerned about another today than you are about yourself. Those protective feelings must not be ignored.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You can ensure greater freedom from stress and tension today simply by following your instincts when you feel things becoming complicated.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — Someone near you is willing to do something special for you — or with you — today. You must make yourself available, of course.

Quote of the Day

"Wisdom corrupts because it shows you how corruption can serve your interests. But it also shows you what your interests really are, so it's self-limiting. Kind of."

–Alexis Gilliland

Close to Home By John McPherson

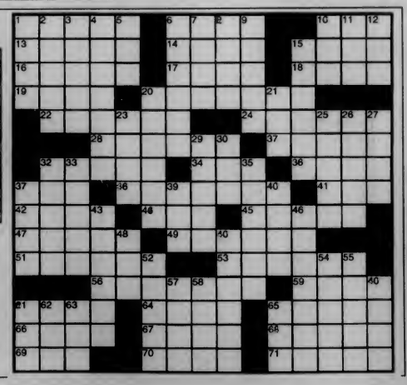
Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-3626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Chicken Burrito
And,like, other stuff...
DINNER
Pineapple Ham Steak
(Chicken) Breasts with (Rice) Stuffing
Dolphin Safe Eggplant Cutlet
Dolphin Safe Grilled Cheese Sandwich

Worcester
LUNCH
Stir Fry Pasta & Vegetables
Ziti/ Tomato Sauce
Chicken Burrito
Bean Burrito
DINNER
Q.P. Burger
Chicken Parmesan
Harvest Burger
Pasta Bilities

Hempshare
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Chicken Burrito
Mystery Meal
DINNER
Quarter Pound Burger
Chicken Breasts with Rice Stuffing
As Above...
...So Below

Berkshire
LUNCH
Chicken Burrito
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Chef's Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Dolphin Safe Bean Burrito
DINNER
Hot n' Heavy Chicken Wings
Dolphin Safe Quarter Pounder
Harvest Burger
Cheese Lasagna



ACROSS
1 Lasso
6 Brilliant move
10 Brokaw or Snyder
13 Nile dam
14 Tiny bit
15 Empty
16 Thick slices
17 Scorch
18 Once — a time
19 Mother of 64-Across
20 Gallant
22 Examined
24 Comfort
28 Kind of melon
31 Aquarium fish
32 Certain New Zealander
34 Tavern drink
36 Leading player
37 Hog
38 Pizzeria item
41 Lodge
42 Baseballer Slaughter
44 Energy unit
45 Slap
47 Junk
49 Native of Damascus
51 — up: cooperated
53 Concurred
56 Robbery
59 Send
61 Dancer Ellen
64 War god
65 Church doctrine
66 Iowa city
67 Row
68 Cove
69 Essence
70 Makes lace
71 Silly ones

DOWN
1 Poison ivy symptom
2 Dot in the ocean
3 Conscious
4 Hot sauce
5 Ques. comeback
6 Shrill insect
7 — and aahs
8 Provo's state
9 Eiffel Tower site
10 Type of dance
11 Gold, in Toledo
12 Guys
15 Reveille instruments
20 Long for
21 Negative word
23 Polynesian food
25 Top story
26 Wind up
27 Get, as salary
29 Like some pants
30 — mode
32 Type of pie
33 Plato's market
35 Naval officer
37 Nuisance
39 Ums' relatives
40 General Bradley
43 Brazilian dances
46 Windflower
48 For each
50 Grows
52 Passed out the cards
54 Aerie resident
55 Coins
57 Diva's solo
58 Superman's alias
60 Tardy
61 Actor Heflin
62 Ostrichlike bird
63 Johnny —
65 Excavate

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

TACOMA ADA FAST
SCALES DAM LEAR
PERILLS OVIA URGE VETERINARIAN
OSSIE MET CREST
CUTE COD HAY
HAIRCUT ROC GYM
EVE ORE ELI RAE
RES BID MEADOWS
AWE BAS RUNS
SNARE NOR BETSY
WINDBREAKERS
ACTE UPS MASHED
TRIN DAM ICEAGE
SECT ELS LESSON

2-10-98 © 1998, United Feature Syndicate

Night Editor: Erin Murphy
Photo Technician: Danielle Gilardi
Copy Editor: Marty Keane
Production Supervisor: Rob Snow
Production Staff: Thang Vo, Mike Krozy

SPORTS

UMass hoop teams take on the Atlantic 10

Men's team jumps to Number 20 in AP poll

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

Fresh off a brilliant 73-62 win over No. 22 Xavier in Cincinnati on Sunday, the Massachusetts men's basketball team (17-6, 9-1 A-10) finishes up a brief two-game road trip with a date against Duquesne (10-13, 4-6 A-10) tonight at the A.J. Palumbo Center in Pittsburgh. Game time is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. and will be televised by the A-10 Television Network.

The big news from the Massachusetts camp is their improved spot in the Top 25 polls. Despite losing for the first time in the A-10 against Temple last Thursday, the Xavier win has catapulted the Minutemen to new heights in both the AP and the coaches poll. UMass has climbed to No. 20 in the AP poll and No. 22 in the coaches poll.

Sunday's win kicked in a good omen for the Minutemen. This is the fourth time in school history UMass has started A-10 play at 9-1, and the Minutemen have gone on to capture the Atlantic 10 title each time. The only time UMass started better was in 1995-1996, when the Minutemen started 14-0 in the A-10, en route to an eventual Final Four appearance.

LAUREN ROSATI \ COLLEGIAN

Lari Ketner and the Massachusetts men's basketball team take on Duquesne tonight in Pittsburgh.

Massachusetts has played some of its best basketball on the road this season. UMass is 5-0 on the road in the A-10, and 6-1 overall in opposing gyms. The only loss came at the buzzer at No. 3 Kansas, 73-71, back on Dec. 10.

UMass is on a stretch in which they've won 10 of their last 11 games, and seem to be back on track after thumping the Musketeers on Sunday. They rest one game above Rhode Island in the A-10's East Division, and are tied with George Washington for the best record in the Atlantic 10.

Currently, sophomore guard Monty Mack leads the team in scoring at 14.1 ppg. Mack has already picked up three A-10 Rookie of the Week honors, the most by a UMass player since Marcus Camby had five in 1993-94.

Junior center Lari Ketner ranks second at 13.7 ppg, and is also second on the team with 7.3 rpg. Tyrone Weeks leads the Minutemen with 9.6 rpg,— third in the A-10— along with 11.0 ppg. Junior guard Charlton Clarke ranks third in scoring at 11.5 ppg, and is coming off an 18-point game against Xavier.

This should be a happy homecoming for UMass sophomore forward Chris Kirkland. After struggling his freshman year and early this season, Kirkland has come on of late. The former Pittsburgh Post-Gazette Player of the Year from Sto Rox High School is getting significant playing time and has helped provide stability at small forward. After employing a three-guard offense most of last season, Kirkland and sophomore Mike Babul have kept the small forward position in the UMass lineup, something many doubted would exist this late in the season.

Turn to HOOPS, page 9

Women's hoop takes on Rhode Island tonight

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's basketball team are in the midst of a seven game Atlantic 10 mini pre-tournament to finish out the season before the actual A-10 championships. Tonight they play their fourth straight A-10 game as they face Rhode Island at 7 p.m. at the William D. Mullins Center. Currently, they stand at 12-9 overall, 6-5 in conference.

This is the second meeting within a week for the two squads. Last week UMass traveled to Kingston to demolish the Rams, 62-43. Tez Kraft, UMass's leading scorer, led the Minutewomen with 17 points. Senior center Kara Tudman reached a season-high 10 points followed by freshman Kathy Coyner's impressive 11 point output.

In their last meeting, both UMass and Rhode Island began the first half in slow-motion while the two exchanged equal baskets through the early minutes. But then Kraft exploded with her aggressive style of play and led the way to their eventual commanding win.

Rhode Island has been struggling this season with a 5-17 overall record, including three wins in the A-10. The Rams entire roster is comprised of five freshman and six sophomores. Their last win was on Sunday when they defeated St. Bonaventure at home 70-63. Freshman center Amber Jansen led the Rams with 22 points, 7 rebounds, 3 steals and 2 assists. Sophomore forward Megan Gibson chipped in 14 points and sophomore captain Dena Cocchiola added 11.

On Friday, UMass defeated St. Bonaventure, 71-52 as well. Sophomore Alison MacFarland led with 20 points followed by strong showings by junior Tez Kraft — 13 points in the second half — and freshman Kathy Coyner who contributed 11 points. Massachusetts coach Joanie O'Brien mixed up the offense with an effectlve eight-woman rotation. The Bonnies struggled to adjust with the shuffling positions as UMass took full advantage with their effective transition offense.

The Rams, who are averaging 58.1 ppg, have their work cut out for them as the Minutewomen are on a strong two game win streak. Forwards Tudman and Yolanda Rayside have begun to step it up inside, pulling down clutch rebounds to trigger their improving offense. The guards have enjoyed a nice rotation between the aggressive defense of Sabriya Mitchell and the scoring punch of Kathy Coyner at the point. MacFarland, Kraft, and Kara Trent have improved their outside shooting as they rotate as well at the two and three guards.

Minutewomen Notes: UMass has won four of their last five games...For the second straight

Turn to WOMEN HOOP, page 8

BRIAN MCDERMOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Tez Kraft leads the charge for the women's hoop team as they face Rhode Island tonight at 7 p.m. in the William D. Mullins Center.

Women swim to victory; defeat Fordham, 196–106

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

Senior Day at Rodgers Pool for the Massachusetts swimming and diving team gave the Minutewomen seniors one final opportunity to swim in front of their home crowd.

And to their delight, UMass easily disposed of Fordham 193-106 to round out its regular season with an 8-3 mark heading into the Atlantic 10 Championships on Feb. 19.

"We swam the way that I thought that we were going to. We knew that Fordham was a weaker team. It wasn't our most inspired meet," said UMass coach Bob Newcomb. "Senior Day is always an emotional meet because it gives the seniors a chance to swim in front of their peers and their parents for the last time."

One of the five Minutewomen seniors, Barbara Hickey made a huge splash in her final home meet. The Reading native finished first in the 200 and 500 freestyle to pace UMass.

"Barbara really came into her own this year. She really put the work in," said Newcomb. "She's really looking forward to the A-10's because she knows that she's going to finish better than she did in year's past."

Sophomore Andrea Spencer also continued her winning ways with a pair of firsts in the 50 free and the 200 IM. Freshmen Julie Dragon and Shannon Rowell also were members of the 200 medley and 200 freestyle relay teams that captured first-place finishes.

The Minutewomen enjoyed another successful campaign in 1997-98. With the final tally producing an 8-3 record, Newcomb was satisfied with the end result.

"That was right about what we were expecting. We knew that we would have some close meets and that there would also be some meets against teams that we would have difficulty beating," said Newcomb. "The team did a good job all year and has done a good job preparing for the meets."

After working non-stop for the past five months, the Minutewomen will be able to relax a little for the next week and a half before the

Turn to WOMEN'S SWIM, page 9

JORMA KANSANEN \ COLLEGIAN

The women's swim team faced off against Fordham this past weekend.

Men's track trail URI, UNH

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's indoor track team is quickly growing tired of the University of New Hampshire Wildcats. At Rhode Island this weekend, the Minutemen placed third out of four teams, placing below UNH for the second straight week. The host Rams won the meet with 63 points to New Hampshire's 50. UMass and Rider rounded out the competition with 45 and 27 points respectively.

"We've had a great competition with New Hampshire over the years," coach Ken O'Brien said. "It's usually a five point meet either way. They cleaned our clock last week, but this time we brought it back down around five points."

Although the Minutemen did not defeat the Wildcats, their five point deficit was a far cry from the forty point shellacking they took at the hands of UNH a week earlier. Gone from the previous meet, however, were four of UMass' leading sprinters, who were in Boston for the Terrier Classic that weekend. This time around, Massachusetts was expected by some to overtake their New England rivals.

"Would I like to have won? Yes," O'Brien said. "But was I surprised? No. I expected a five point difference. I'm just disappointed that we were on the low side."

Junior Tom Toye, who ran in the 400m was one of three UMass runners to win events. Junior Ben Baraldi continued in what has turned out to be a stellar season by winning the 55m hurdles for the second straight meet. Albie Vazquez cleared 14'0" in tying for first in that event.

Senior Scott Price came home with a new school record and a second place overall in the 55m. His time of 6.45 seconds was two hundredths of a second faster than the previous record run — most recently by Rawle Crichlow twelve years ago in 1986.

Price came close to his own 200m record as well with a time of 21.97 while placing second in that event as well. He set the record earlier this year by running a 21.92 second race.

The Massachusetts indoor track team will be in action again this coming Saturday, as they travel to Boston University for the Valentine Invitational, where the squad will attempt to improve on their last near miss.

Holden leads UM skiers

By Aaron Soykin
Collegian Staff

After stumbling a bit two weeks ago, the Massachusetts' men's skiing squad rebounded from their uncharacteristically sluggish performance with an exceptional showing last weekend at the Boston College Tournament in Ascutney Mountain, Vt.

Hoping to atone for a sixth-place disappointment in its previous meet, the UMass squad bounced back with its second-best showing of the 1998 season. With the help of third place finishes in both the slalom and giant slalom events, the Minutemen have once again established themselves as a powerful force in the Eastern College Ski Conference.

Leading the UMass charge in the slalom was junior All- American Tom Holden, who won the individual competition, boasting a mountain-best time of 37.08 seconds on his first run. Although Holden may have been the lone Minutemen skier to finish in the event's top ten, his teammates Jordan Kingdon, John Griffin, Justin Rouleau and James Cranston occupied the 13th through 16th spots, respectively.

"After this weekend, the men's team has finished third in the slalom three times," said 38-year Massachusetts coach Bill MacConnell. "We skied exceptionally well in the slalom, and it may have

Turn to SKI, page 8

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Tom Holden won the all-around this weekend at the Boston College Tournament.

Jordan sets rules; Kobe fabulous; Bird favors ban

Jamie Jee on the NBA

As the All-Star game unfolded Sunday, we saw spectacular play after play as Michael Jordan led the East to a decisive victory over the West, 135-114. At the same time, we saw that the game will go on without His Airness although it certainly will not be the same.

It was Jordan who ended up with his third All-Star MVP title, but not before L.A. Laker phenom Kobe Bryant got things off to a quick, high-flying start.

With energizing dunks, Bryant put the pressure on Jordan early. The neophyte, however, would have to eventually yield to the erudite mentor as Jordan would finish with 23 points, eight assists, six rebounds and three steals, all after being in bed the previous two days with a fever.

Jordan has said that these are "changing times" and has made it clear that he does not intend to stay in the NBA if Phil Jackson does not remain with Chicago.

With Bulls management not exactly endorsing Jackson to remain as head coach, many fans have begun to get a lump in their throat when thinking about the possibility of Jordan leaving at the end of the season — for good.

Jordan sounded like he was already on the outside looking in and said about the game Sunday that he "just wanted to fit in" and "make sure Kobe (Bryant) didn't dominate me."

Along more certain lines, we can almost assume Bryant will take home the Sixth Man of the Year Award after being named a starter for the West despite coming off the bench for the Lakers.

Now, how about that 2-Ball Competition? Houston Rocket Clyde Drexler and WNBA standout Cynthia Cooper were the inaugural winners in an event that should have been an addition to the weekend's festivities, not a replacement. Then again, there's always next year.

Also preceding the game was the All-Rookie Game which set the stage with their own high-flying slams including Toronto's Tracy McGrady who had three in a row and Denver guard Bobby Jackson who, at 6-1, had to go way up for an alley-oop windmill jam after an off-the back-

Turn to NBA, page 8

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVIII Issue 11 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Wednesday, February 11, 1998

"A Strange Angel"

The latest solo offering from Kristin Hersh, as well as new stuff from Hepcat, Sasha and Freakwater highlight new releases. Check out the latest installment of Trax (see Arts & Living, page 7).

To The Hoop

Lari Ketner scored 23 points last night as the Minutemen downed host Duquesne in Atlantic 10 action (see Sports, page 12).

WORLD

Four customs agents killed in shootings

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Fatal shootings on two German borders yesterday shocked a government intent on securing its frontiers against illegal immigrants and contraband from southern and eastern Europe.

The killings of four customs agents in unrelated attacks on the Polish and Swiss borders were — in the words of the Finance Ministry — "unprecedented." In postwar Germany.

Germany is a party to agreements to loosen border checks among western European nations, but it has beefed-up security against illegal immigrants — primarily Kurds.

Responding to similar concerns, Poles have tightened their visa requirements to block Eastern refugees and smugglers trying to sneak into the West through Poland.

Despite the renewed attention on border controls, yesterday's attacks caught German customs by surprise. Customs agents, though armed, perform routine document and vehicle inspections.

"We can't assume that everyone is a potential criminal and ready for violence," said Bernhard Busse, a customs spokesman in Frankfurt.

NATION

Man pleads guilty to clinic fires

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A man pleaded guilty yesterday to torching seven abortion clinics under a plea agreement that could send him to prison for nearly seven years.

Richard T. Andrews, 60, of Wenatchee, Wash., admitted a three-year arson spree at clinics in California, Montana, Idaho and Wyoming.

Andrews, a retired insurance company executive with a long history of anti-abortion activities, stood with his hands clasped behind his back as he was questioned by U.S. District Judge Lawrence Karlton.

He acknowledged his responsibility for the fires and his understanding of the agreement with the government. He made no other statement.

Under the terms of the agreement, Andrews faces up to 81 months in prison and three years of probation at sentencing April 21. He will be ordered to pay $400 in restitution.

Andrews, who had been free on $35,000 bond, was immediately taken into custody.

"Because of his family concerns, he felt this is the best thing for him," defense lawyer Kevin Gibbs said outside court.

In each of the attacks, investigators found a red plastic gasoline can wrapped in a dark garbage bag.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 48 LOW: 37	HIGH: 48 LOW: 31	HIGH: 39 LOW: 16

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 7
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics.....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 12

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Proposal to reduce UM tuition by five percent approved

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

Final approval was given last Wednesday by the University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees to a plan that would cut undergraduate tuition by as much as $100.

According to a press release, President William M. Bulger said much of the credit is due to legislators and the five UMass chancellors.

"To be able to bring about a third consecutive decrease is a formidable achievement and a credit to each of our five chancellors and their management teams," Bulger said. "Additionally, it must be noted that the generous support we have received from the governor and the legislature is allowing us to keep student costs as low as possible," he said.

Under this plan, tuition is expected to be cut by 5 percent and mandatory fees will be frozen at the University's undergraduate campuses in Amherst, Boston, Dartmouth and Lowell for the academic year 1998-1999. The proposed savings for students average 2 percent and range from 1.9 percent to 2.3 percent.

Undergraduate students will save $100 on tuition at the Amherst campus, slating annual tuition and fees to be $5,229.

Amherst student Trustee to the Board of Trustees Brian Tirrell announced this proposal at last week's Student Government Association (SGA) Student Senate meeting.

"The students of Amherst were very happy that we have a strong leader in the president and we appreciate his efforts and those of the rest of the administration to keep costs down," Tirrell said.

"This will make the University more accessible at a time when other colleges and universities are increasing these charges," said Lowell campus Student Trustee Keith Tremblay.

Between 1992 and 1998, the University's flagship campus in Amherst has dropped from second to fifth among New England's six public universities in the cost of tuition, fees, room and board, according to information released by the president's office.

The average 4-year college/university tuition and fee charge jumped 5 percent nationwide this past academic year.

ALEXANDER KOROMILAS \ COLLEGIAN

Got milk?
Kit Lee, an undeclared sophomore, drinks his daily bottle of milk.

Hillel discussion focuses on Judaism's most holy site, Kotel

Questions raised about tradition, women's place

By Bryan Schwartzman
Collegian Staff

On Monday evening, a dozen University of Massachusetts students and community members gathered in the Hillel House to discuss the place of women at Judaism's holiest site, the Western Wall.

The Western Wall (Kotel), a remnant of the Second Temple of Israel, is the landmark most often associated with Jerusalem; it has also been the place which has powerfully illustrated the divisions in Israeli society.

Orthodox custom dictates that men and women must pray in different places and in different ways. Attempts to change this custom has led to violence at the Kotel.

The focus of the evening was a presentation made by Felicia Mednick, an American who lived in Israel for several years.

Mednick said she was inspired by the manmade object but was upset at the confines in which women were expected to pray.

"The experience [of first seeing the Wall] was powerful, but it was also alienating and painful," said Mednick.

She described the area directly in front of the Kotel which separates men and women and reserves three quarters of the space for men. While men are encour-

COURTESY LISSA LOEB

Jerusalem's Western Wall

Turn to KOTEL, page 2

Latino self esteem focus of EWC group

By Samantha Poulten
Collegian Staff

Beginning in March, a group for Latino women will be exploring issues of "being a woman, being Latino, and being Latino in the United States."

The group, run by social worker Mari Vicente, will be encouraged to share personal experiences with each other, and take part in exercises to develop greater self-esteem.

"We will be doing workshops which will make the women become aware of self-talk," Vicente said. "What you say to yourself often reflects how you feel about yourself."

The group talks about acculturation, the conscious process through which one is made aware of his or her culture, and the differences between it and other cultures. Through acculturation, one can then choose the extent to which he or she will take part in the other cultures.

According to Vicente, all Latino women go through some acculturation during their life, adjusting to the differences between their native culture, and that of the United States.

"Latino women can come together in the group to discuss being a different culture and being in the United States. It helps us all because we have all shared some of the same experiences." — social worker Mari Vicente

"These women need to realize that they are not alone," Vicente said. "And that is a powerful feeling."

The idea for the group came to Vicente while she was an undergraduate in college. She took part in a class which discussed cultural differences between the United States and Latin America. Upon coming to the United States, Vicente had some experiences which made her realize that the differences she had learned in class were actually true.

Vicente spoke of the differences which arise between cultures when

Turn to VICENTE, page 2

Lewinsky's mom called to testify for grand jury

By Pete Yost
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Monica Lewinsky's mother was summoned before a grand jury yesterday for questioning about allegations that her daughter had an affair with President Clinton, as an attorney for Ms. Lewinsky complained that prosecutors were trying to "squeeze" her family.

Attorney William Ginsburg signaled that the former White House intern is prepared to testify herself about the alleged presidential affair and cover-up if prosecutors obtain a court order forcing her to do so.

"She has no intention of falling on her sword," Ginsburg told reporters in California. Ms. Lewinsky is scheduled to appear before the grand jury tomorrow.

Ginsburg said Ms. Lewinsky is "absolutely mortified" to have her family entangled in the investigation.

"It's a terrible thing to have her mother dragged into this," Ginsburg said. He added, "it seems like they were trying to squeeze us by interrogating the brother" of Ms. Lewinsky, who was questioned by FBI agents at his fraternity house in Pennsylvania last week.

Ms. Lewinsky's mother, Marcia Lewis, battled her own subpoena, but by early afternoon she was at the U.S. Courthouse as the grand jury moved swiftly into its third week of investi-

Turn to LEWINSKY, page 2

U.S. forces have avanced arsenal for potential use

By John Diamond
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Titanium-tipped cruise missiles, big bombs that break up into scores of little bombs, weapons that can find targets through clouds and expanded computer power are among the war-fighting tools the U.S. military could use against Iraq.

A smaller but, the generals insist, more effective force is carrying new weaponry — some of it still experimental — to the Persian Gulf region as the possibility of airstrikes against Iraq increases. In addition to the B-1 and B-2 bombers and some new bunker-penetrating bombs, the military has acquired greatly expanded computer power since 1991.

"We certainly have made some improvements in the accuracy of the weapons," said retired Air Force Gen. Buster Glosson, one of the senior air war commanders in the Gulf War. "The deep-penetrating weapons and their accuracy is a second improvement."

Not all the military's technological advances in the past seven years have been translated into weapons in the field. Top military commanders and weapons planners describe an intensive Pentagon effort since the 1991 Gulf War to exploit and develop precision weaponry but say many of the fruits of that effort are still in the planning stages.

Yet, new bunker-penetrating bombs, satellite-guided bombs and missiles that retain accuracy in bad weather, titanium-tipped cruise missiles and sophisticated sensor fuses are gradually emerging from weapons labs. The ability to destroy a target while reducing the risk of unintended damage, and the ability to reduce pilot losses by using fewer planes for each target, are the two key advantages.

"Since the war, I think we've made some gigantic strides in improving accuracy or precision with which we can hit targets," said Ken Koval, an Air Force weapons planner. "We don't target buildings; we target specific features on buildings, and we're able to hit them very accurately."

The Air Force, though smaller, has more planes that can drop precision-guided bombs. The two carriers in the Persian Gulf today — the USS Independence and USS George Washington — carry more laser-guided weapons than the Navy launched throughout the entire Gulf War from six carriers.

Potentially as important, the Navy has expanded the computer and communications capability of its warships, eliminating cumbersome ways of doing business.

"During the Gulf War, the daily air tasking order had to be physically flown out to the carriers because the Navy did not have the communications and computer pipelines to handle that," said Dan Kuehl, who helped plan the Gulf War air campaign and now teaches an air power course at the National Defense University. Now all that information — targets, routes,

Turn to MILITARY, page 3

ALEXANDER KOROMILAS \ COLLEGIAN

Absolute protection
Omar Guessous, a sophomore psychology and sociology major, hands out condom cards at the safer sex health education table at the Campus Center on Monday afternoon.

■ Vicente

continued from page 1

meeting new people. In the Latino culture, if one is introduced to a new person, and runs into the person again several months later, the two will greet each other and chat. However, in the United States this is not necessarily the case. The two may meet and avoid each other completely.

Vicente said that if she hadn't taken the class, she would have been very hurt and bewildered when this experience happened to her. That is why she formed this group.

"Latino women can come together in the group to discuss being a different culture and being in the United States," Vicente said. "It helps us all because we have all shared some of the same experiences."

The group is being funded by the Everywoman's Center, the Bilingual Collegiate Program, and ALANA. It begins on March 5 at 4:15 p.m. at the Everywoman's Center, and runs for eight weeks. Anyone interested in joining the group can contact Lynn Schacne in the Everywoman's Center at 545- 5822.

■ Lewinsky

continued from page 1

gation.

Mrs. Lewis is a New Yorker who rented a Watergate apartment in Washington where her daughter lived while working at the White House and Pentagon. Ms. Lewinsky confided to her mother about the alleged presidential affair, according to several individuals familiar with the relationship between mother and daughter. Mrs. Lewis also was in constant contact with her daughter over the past two months, when Ms. Lewinsky was trying to figure out how to avoid testifying in the Paula Jones sexual harassment lawsuit against the president, the sources said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Ms. Lewinsky signed an affidavit Jan. 7 denying having sex with Clinton.

On Jan. 7 or Jan. 8, longtime presidential friend Vernon Jordan contacted businessman Ronald O. Perelman recommending Ms. Lewinsky for a job at Revlon, one of the New York billionaire's holdings. A job offer followed several days later.

Ms. Lewinsky outlined Jordan's help in getting a job in secretly taperecorded conversations with friend Linda Tripp, who turned the recordings over to Whitewater prosecutors. Those tapes also captured Ms. Lewinsky saying she had a sexual relationship with Clinton and that the president and Jordan encouraged her to deny it.

Ms. Lewinsky "will appear before the grand jury whenever she is ordered to appear before the grand jury," Ginsburg said; "She will not defy either a federal court order or a subpoena. And she will do what she has to do given the situation she finds herself in. She will not go to jail like Susan McDougal."

Mrs. McDougal has been jailed for contempt since September 1996 for refusing to testify in the Whitewater investigation.

Ginsburg told reporters he would come to Washington tomorrow or Friday, but he did not talk about any effort to resist a subpoena for his client.

■ Kotel

continued from page 1

aged to pray loudly in groups women are expected to pray quietly and by themselves.

She said the reasoning was the voices of women, especially singing voices, were so sexually alluring that they distracted men from prayer.

In 1988 she joined a group of women to pray openly and read from Torah on the women's side of the area facing the Kotel. She said the group prayed on several occasions without notice, but one occasion resulted in taunting and eventually violence from the men.

"Men started screaming, climbing over, throwing them at the women. It was pretty hairy," she said.

She said this happened on numerous occasions, and that the old city police and Israeli soldiers often looked the other way.

The women met with the Rabbi of the Kotel and were offered a compromise, to pray at his synagogue out of public view.

"It was not about being public, it was about praying," she said.

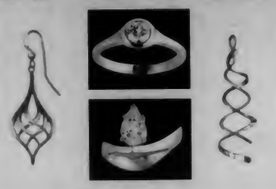
Yet the Rabbi rescinded his offer because of what Mednick called "public pressure." The women decided to take their case to the courts citing a passage in Israel's Declaration of Independence which guaranteed "free access to the holy sites." The women did have physical access to the Wall, the question war, were they Infringing upon tradition or was tradition infringing upon their rights as Jews and citizens?

In 1992, after Mednick had already returned to the United States, the Supreme Court ruled that the legislature was responsible for the case, essentially passing the buck.

The fate of prayer at the wall was put in the hands of the Ne'eman committee, who are in the world spotlight for their pending recommendations on non-orthodox conversions. Mednick said she hopes the committee will come to a different decision but the political situation and the power of the Religious Right will make It difficult to do so.

The event was sponsored by Hamagshimim, a college Zionist organization and led by Sophomore School of Management student Dan Deutch. Deutch who was made over half a dozen visits to Israel said he hopes the situation can be resolved by granting women more religious expression without offending the Orthodox.

The event had several interactive elements which fostered debate and had students defending a position they might not have agreed with. Each participant also discussed the Wall and their experiences with it and impressions of It.



Last August, the prayers of a different group incited violence at the Wall and covered the world's papers. A group of conservative men and women prayed behind the area directly in front of the Wall, yet the mixed sex prayer ritual ignited a near riot.

From 1948 through 1967 the Western Wall and the Old City were part of Jordan until Israel defeated Jordan in the six day war.

silverscape designs

is celebrating 21 years in Amherst

10-40% Off

Feb. 1st-14th

Amherst Store Only. Does not include Layaways/special orders

GOLDSMITHS GEM GALLERY

264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-3324 • Mon.-Sat. 10-6, Sunday 12-5

ALEXANDER KOROMILAS / COLLEGIAN

Ice cold healing.

Eric Bacon, a freshman pre-med major, is treated for a light back injury in Boyden Gymnasium Athletic Injury Care yesterday afternoon.

Why Bother going off campus for Art Supplies?

UStore's giant Art Department has the best prices in the area on hundreds of items, including the materials you need for your art class.

UStore's Just Better. Ask a Pro. They know.

Prices slashed on dozens of U Mass Clothing items!

Over 20 models of CALCULATORS on SALE! Discounts up to 30% OFF!!!

Check out the February Health & Beauty specials!

ALL POSTERS 20% OFF!

Sale ends this Saturday, February 14.

UStore

We're not like a mall. We're better.

Union Billiards

1PM TO 11PM EVERY DAY!

The University Ustore

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

University Store

In the UMass Campus Center

Hours:

M-F 9 to 5 Sat. 11 to 4

(413) 545 - 2619

AMEX, MC, Visa, Discover and UCard cheerfully accepted!

Telefile or PC File

Get Your State Tax Refund in 4 days or less

TELEFILE

YOUR 1997 STATE TAX FORM

(617) 660-1997 or (413) 827-7100 or www.state.ma.us/dor

Massachusetts Department of Revenue

ALEXANDER KOROMILAS / COLLEGIAN

Cleaned, folded and ready for bed

Jennifer Twomey, a junior SOM major and Tino Tiberii, a senior Spanish major fold washed linens at the Student Union Laundry Room.

■ military

continued from page 1

air-refueling rendezvous points, radio frequencies and more — can be piped to the carriers electronically, the result of greatly expanded "bandwidth" available throughout the military.

"The technology of getting massive amounts of information down to planners and targeters has been revolutionized," Kuehl said. Some Navy attack submarines and surface warships carry the latest "Block III" version of the Tomahawk cruise missile. Its warhead is encased in titanium to increase its penetration of hardened targets and its targeting system is much simpler than earlier versions.

The Navy deployed a limited number of new Joint Standoff Attack Weapons, or JSOWs, directly from a testing program to the USS Nimitz. The JSOW is a bomb that carries up to 145 "submunitions" — bomblets that are released before impact and which can strike numerous targets. The Navy had to transfer its limited inventory of JSOWs from the Nimitz to the Independence and George Washington when the Nimitz left the Gulf this week.

Another post-Gulf War weapon, the Sensor Fused Weapon, is an unguided gravity bomb that carries 40 "skeet" submunitions, each one of which carries an infrared sensor that can pick up the heat signature of a tank or armored vehicle. The B-1 bomber can carry 30 of these bombs so that, in theory, a single bomb load could destroy a densely packed force of 1,200 armored vehicles.

The arrival of the B-1 bombers in Bahrain illustrates the difficulty of fielding weapons. The plane was developed in the 1970s, only to emerge with an array of performance problems. A long and costly program converted the B-1 from a nuclear-weapons carrier to a conventional bomb dropper.

Marijuana gaining acceptance

Student support for legalization has doubled in the past 10 years

By Paul Shepherd
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Much like their parents a generation ago, today's college students are just saying yes to marijuana and are increasingly supportive of its legalization.

"It's out there, but it isn't a big deal. If you don't smoke, you just disregard it," said Amy Kim, a freshman at the University of Arizona. "I'm not surprised students think it should be legalized because it's the most accessible thing out there next to liquor."

Craig Brooks, 18, a freshman at George Washington University in Washington, D.C. said, "Cigarettes are worse. We all know that."

Fellow freshman Michelle Rubinstein piped up, "We just don't make an issue of it. Marijuana is accepted."

The student comments underscore a growing trend among American youth.

Call it a shift from reefer madness to reefer gladness, as use of marijuana rises along with support for its legalization, according to recent surveys of student attitudes.

The affinity for marijuana flies in the face of growing conservatism in other areas, according to surveys that show today's college freshmen are more apt to favor restricting abortion rights and are less accepting of gay relationships than students in recent years.

Support for marijuana legalization has grown among college freshmen from just 16.7 percent in 1989 to 35.2 percent in 1997, according to a study by the University of California, Los Angeles, for the Washington-based American Council on Education.

Marijuana use among high school seniors also is rising. More than 50 percent of seniors say they have smoked it, compared to 33 percent who admitted to its use in 1992, according to Dr. Lloyd Johnston, author of an annual report on youth trends involving drugs for the National Institute on Drug Abuse.

Reasons vary, according to experts. Some say the debate over medical marijuana and possible beneficial effects for some Ill people have softened its image.

"The perception of risks in smoking marijuana is eroding. They don't see it as dangerous," said Dr. Lloyd Johnston, program director at the University of Michigan Institute for Social Research.

Others point to the fact that many parents of today's crop of college age smokers are no strangers to marijuana use themselves during the pot-filled days of the 1960s and '70s.

"More people are going by their own experiences," said Keith Stroup, founder and executive director of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws.

"For a long time, the government put out these reefer madness reports, and they molded opinions. But now, when a third of the population have experience with marijuana, they don't believe the government."

Steve Dnistrian, senior vice president of Partnership for a Drug-Free America, said he is disappointed by the survey results but not surprised.

The 1980s saw new laws allowing the forfeiture of property seized during drug arrests and an expansion of drug testing for public and private work places in addition to first lady Nancy Reagan's "just say no" to drugs campaign.

But those days are little more than a hazy recollection for some.

"We had the media focus. We had the government focus," Dnistrian said. "Kids were exposed to the message and decided it wasn't worth it to smoke. We burned out giving the message and the public burned out on hearing it."

ALEXANDER KOROMILAS / COLLEGIAN

Throw your bones in the waste basket

Jenny St. Sauveur, a junior music education major, and Laura Bowley, an undeclared freshman, working their shift in Worcester dinning hall dishroom.

Yeltsin and pope hold talks at Vatican

By Candice Hughes
Associated Press

VATICAN CITY — Pope John Paul II and Russian President Boris Yeltsin held long, warm talks yesterday that fell short of arranging a papal visit or a meeting with the head of the Russian Orthodox Church.

The talks in John Paul's private library lasted 50 minutes, and the Vatican described them as "extremely cordial."

But Yeltsin's spokesman, Sergei Yastrzhembsky, said the two men did not even discuss a visit by the much-traveled pope to Russia or a first-ever meeting with the Russian Orthodox patriarch, which the Vatican has been trying to set up.

The pope still has a standing invitation to Moscow, first issued by Mikhail Gorbachev in 1989, papal spokesman Joaquin Navarro-Valls said after the talks.

Such a visit would be unlikely anytime soon because of long-standing differences between the Vatican and the Russian Orthodox Church. While restrictions on religion were lifted with the fall of communism, that opened Russia up to what Orthodox leaders call overzealous missionary work by Catholics.

The pope pleaded with Yeltsin to block passage of Russia's religion law, which he signed in September. The legislation enshrined Orthodoxy as the leading faith while curbing the rights of other churches.

Yeltsin's spokesman said the Russian leader talked about the law and the circumstances of Catholics in Russia.

"John Paul II was extremely satisfied with this meeting," Yastrzhembsky said.

The Vatican said the two discussed "the contribution of the faithful toward an ever more harmonious and united society." The foreign ministers of Russia and the Holy See also discussed international crises, including Iraq, during meetings yesterday. The pope and Yeltsin, who both have been ailing, seemed pleased during a photo session after the meeting.

UMass Campus Activities presents

Exposure Musical Revenes

Friday February 13, 1998
Bluewall Cafe...8pm

It's never too early to start thinking about your future...

COME TO THE

CO-OP JOB FAIR

AND GET REAL WORK EXPERIENCE!

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY, 19th

10-3 Campus Center Auditorium

Check out opportunities at The Boston Globe, Filene's, Reebok, State Street Bank, GTE and many, many more...

Summer and Semester Paid Positions.

All Majors Welcome!

Need to get started?

Attend a "Welcome to Field Experience" workshop.

- Tuesdays at 2:30, Wednesdays at 3pm.
-Campus Center 804

sponsored by:

Campus Career Network

University of Massachusetts Amherst

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Cloning: great advance or ethical nightmare?

Cloning not in our best interest

Point Counterpoint

Catherine Schmitt & Erin C. Williams

Two professors at our esteemed University have succeeded in cloning two calves. In so doing, they have entered the race of scientists all over the world who are competing to create new life, and promising benefits to humankind. Yet I believe that as our planet spins into the millennium, the wonders of cloning will cease to be wonderful, and any promises will be unfulfilled.

First I would like to note that I am a scientist myself, one who is deeply concerned with the dignity and respectability of science as a public service. The continued success of cloning is an exciting and monumental event for science — but the implications for society as a whole are not something to look forward to. Cloning in itself is not bad. What is bad is the way in which the scientific community is conducting the research. Cloning is part of a growing trend that is placing the manipulation and creation of life into the hands of private business, with no public control.

Important decisions are being made behind closed doors, and the outcomes of these decisions affect every one of us. Yet we have no control over the methods or the rate of cloning experimentation. Public opinion is not guiding the research; instead, science comes first, and we struggle with the ethical issues after the fact.

One of the problems I have with the University's involvement in the cloning race is the private nature of the operation. We all have ideas about what goes on behind the walls of the churning, steaming science buildings, and it is our right as students to know what UMass is up to. I am sure if students knew what was going on out in the barn, there would have been some kind of outcry, and that's exactly why we just found out about the cloning experiments recently. Maybe this could be a warning that we need to pay more attention.

I found it interesting that the professors who created the twin cows have their own company that "works closely with the University." Private companies do not belong in public institutions. It is a conflict of interests: business's interest in profit versus education's need for a free and neutral ground for learning. Such collaborations create biases for certain kinds of knowledge against others.

The issue of cloning has raised many questions for all of us. And it seems that as cloning becomes more widespread, the questions will only breed more questions. There are very real, legitimate reasons why people are uncomfortable with the idea of cloning, why they are afraid or skeptical. But really, the major question I have is "Why?" Why do we need to be doing all of this cloning? Science is selecting which characteristics are desirable, which biological products are in demand, and forcing the genes for those characteristics and products into living creatures. And why is this good?

Turning animals into factories to produce substances that certain people will benefit from is not a very visionary ambition. Of all the environmental and social problems affecting the planet, I'm not sure if this is where we need to be placing our time and money. Things seem to be happening in the world today faster than we can decide if they are good or not, and cloning is perhaps the greatest example.

Great risk is involved in blindly tinkering with the basis of life on this planet. Altering DNA with the intent to create a product for profit is not the same as genetic engineering with medical purpose. Cloning today is a business endeavor, producing patentable life forms with technology to be packaged and sold. I do not believe that we should not take these risks. There are many times when science has sounded crazy and yet been revolutionary. But the way that the cloning business is taking shape is exactly that: a business, not a service for the benefit of all people.

Cloning ultimately leads to homogenization. By its very definition, cloning contradicts diversity. Genetic diversity, cultural diversity, biological diversity: none of these are encouraged by cloning. If UMass wishes to be known as a place of scientific integrity and vision, let it have a vision that is solid, safe and in the best interests of the entire human race. Our success and survival lies in diversity, and anything that does not promote the natural variation and mystery of life should not be encouraged.

MATTHEW MARTIN

Catherine Schmitt is a UMass student.

Cloning technology boon to society

Ever since Watson and Crick discovered the molecular code of life, DNA, biologists have embraced that every organism, from the smallest amoeba to the largest whale, has been and continues to be linked by this complex molecule.

It has been demonstrated consistently that DNA is interchangeable between members of the animal kingdom. Human genes can be transferred to a variety of hosts: mice, fruit flies, and recently, cows. There is a dual accomplishment with the UMass cows — not only are they genetically engineered animals, but also clones.

"Cloning is not the newest evil of science, but rather the newest biological and medical tool"

The firestorm surrounding the cloning issue stems from public fear and misunderstanding. Biologists seek not to create a master race, a perfect human, or even a clone of themselves. Cloning is not the newest evil of science, but rather the newest biological and medical tool.

The future of this science has applications across the board. Cloning may be used in medicine, food production, and species preservation, just to name a few.

The medical aspect of this science is evident in the cows. The human albumin gene was introduced in the cows, in hopes that it can be harvested from the milk.

The fact that the cows, George and Charlie, are male is not discouraging. They are future breeding stock. Female calves, still in utero, will be the decisive measure of the gene transfer. George and Charlie will be a measure of the inheritability of this gene.

Cloning of individuals will help introduce beneficial gene combinations in larger quantities in populations. Genetically manipulating embryos can help to introduce genes, like the albumin gene, into a breeding stock. These genetically-altered animals can provide a more efficient way of producing a variety of medicines.

Albumin is the first protein that may be harvested from cow's milk. The support for cheaper, more efficient pharmacological harvesting is overwhelming. A variety of chemotherapy treatments may be lower in cost if we can clone and breed genetically-altered animals.

Many industries can use cloning technology. The food industry is constantly perfecting breeding stock of animals. Desired traits can be lost in future generations, due to a wide variety of genetic factors. Breeding selectively for traits is a tedious process and usually takes many generations before a whole population of animals is affected. If scientists were to clone individuals containing the desired traits then the desired genes would be present in larger quantities, thus perfecting future breeding stock. Imagine beef being lower in fat, or chickens containing more meat.

Human preservation is not the only use for cloning. This tool can be used to bolster wild populations of animals. Populations on the brink of survival may greatly benefit from this technology. Individuals of an animal population that are successful breeders or adept at survival can be cloned and introduced back into the wild. Species that are on the brink of survival now may be able to be taken out of the endangered category and sustain healthy populations.

We shouldn't clone whole species over again, rather a few individuals to aid breeding and further the perpetuation of these species. We can reestablish animals into reclaimed habitats, slowly building lost populations.

Cloning, like many other scientific discoveries, has been met with great opposition from those who fail to see the significance of this accomplishment. Those who seek to pursue this breakthrough are those who see a future for this technology. Scientists, on the forefront, keep pushing the limits of our biologic knowledge to the brink so that mankind can reap the multitudes of benefits.

There is no mad scientist pushing to create the perfect being — that is not the purpose or the pursuit of biologists. They pursue this endeavor to benefit all people and increase the quality of our lives.

Cloning is not a discovery we should deny science. Instead we should herald it as one of the most important scientific breakthroughs of this century.

Erin C. Williams is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Likes GEO, dislikes graffiti

To the editor:

As an employed graduate student, I respect the efforts of the Graduate Employee Organization to formalize our contracts and negotiate with the administration on our behalf.

But what an embarrassment to walk through campus and see the immature chalk scratch graffiti covering all our buildings — when the contract negotiations were months ago.

How can an administration respect a group that graffitis the entire campus and then doesn't even clean it up? Yuck! Contract clean up now!

Kathryn Hardesty
Department of Landscape Architecture
kar@larp.umass.ed

Hampshire, Smith, Mt. Holyoke, and Amherst students — we want you!

The Collegian Ed/Op page is planning to run a Four– College Commentary feature every Wednesday. Because the Collegian is distributed on the five Pioneer Valley campuses, we want the voices of all to have a place on this page.

Columns should be 700–900 words long, have your name and a phone number on them, and be submitted by Monday at noon. They can be sent to the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass; faxed to 545–1592; or e–mailed to letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu. Call Tamar Carroll or Dan Bodah at 545–1491 for more information.

Doonesbury GARRY TRUDEAU

Gettin' the message across

Nine out of 10 dentists would agree you're an absolute moron.

It's only three days until Valentine's Day, and you still haven't dumped your current flame. You have all the spine of a quadriplegic amoeba. You've beaten around the bush, hinting at the imminent doom of your relationship, but the genius you're dating hasn't picked up the clues.

You've tried all the basics up until now. Your significant other didn't get the message when you called out another's name during "boinky–boink." Now the moment is at hand, that most deadly of holidays, and you've already made plans with someone else.

C. Taylor Connor

You. Creek. Poop. No paddle.

Fret not, I say, for when all hope is seemingly lost, a little ingenuity will balance your abject desperation. But just in case you've bugged out beyond the limits of logic, I have generously provided a few tidbits to help you along in this most morally reprehensible effort. And at no additional charge, feel free to clip and save these nuggets for post–V– Day usage as well.

- Psychosis works. Unless your significant other is a Prozac and/or lithium fiend, sociopathic behavior is clutch in scaring that used–to–be–special someone far, far away. If executed properly, that'll put more distance between you and them than the average Kenyan and the top American runner.

While you can certainly think up some wonderfully twisted schemes on your own, here's one from me to you that's a sure–shot:

Step One — Break into a laboratory. Steal a few animal hearts, roughly human–sized. Keep in your freezer.

Step Two — Place foam on all walls of house.

Step Three — Invite mate over to house.

Step Four — Ask mate this question exactly: "Can I have your heart forever and ever, my sweet?"

Step Five — When mate answers goo–gly–eyed "Yes," reveal animal hearts in freezer. Accompanying line (sinister cackle optional): "I was hoping you'd say that. You all have."

Step Six — Don't worry about screaming. Foam will muffle it.

Step Seven — Repair door or window broken as mate departs like bat out of hell. Dispose of hearts before real date arrives.

- Make it a family affair. Start at the start. Go back to the roots. If you want to disturb someone, shoot for the jugular by throwing some love in the direction of the folks who disturb them most: the 'rents.

That's right. Turn the tables on The Graduate and seduce Mrs. Robinson (or Mr. Robinson, if need be). Sure, the experience will without doubt ruin the childhood of the significant other, not to mention their entire psychological fabric, but the new blood is waiting and the transfusion must occur.

- Kill him/her. I believe this may be illegal in most states within the continental United States. Check with your local police department before proceeding.

- John Ritter possessed the most subtle cunning of the modern American era. As Jack Tripper, Ritter had a million tricks up that polyester sleeve. We're talking acting chops, baby. You too can use the Ritter technique and coast to success.

The next time the unwitting dumpee visits, take a wicked header and knock your head hard on the nearest available brick, wood or metal object. Remember, this is method acting, so make it look good. When you "awaken" (and these quotation marks may be unnecessary as you may actually clock yourself goofy) feign a second personality, à la Ritter.

The key is in making certain that the "new you" is one eerie mother. For tips on how this might be achieved, refer to the "psychosis" section above.

- Fake your identity. As with the last example, you will be required to become a bit of a thespian, but this endeavor does not involve the possibility of a nifty headache, concussion or cerebral hemorrhaging.

It's quite simple; and should go something like this:

Knock, knock, knock.
SCOTT: Who is it?
JESSIE: It's me.
SCOTT: Me who?
JESSIE: Stop playing around and let me in, Scott.
SCOTT: Ma'am, my name's Neil, I don't want whatever you're selling, and I have a very powerful hose. Good day.

Well, that's about all I have. Try to avoid any semblance of a conscience. And of course, keep sacred the cardinal rule: We never, ever had this discussion.

C. Taylor Conner is a Collegian columnist.

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor. Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words long, and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted by mail to Ed/Op Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst MA 01003; by e–mail to letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu; or by fax to (413) 545–1592. The Collegian reserves the right to edit letters for length, clarity and style.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Co-Editor
Tamar Carroll Editorial/Opinion Co-Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor

Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Leigh Faulkner News Editor
Lauren Korsky Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor

Joeseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
David Parmenier Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prentee Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Just another day

Seema Gangatirkar

I was sitting in class the other day and my friend swooped down on me, with an expression of panic on her face.

"Do you know what Saturday is?" she asked frantically. "Do you know?"

"Uh, no," I answered.

"It's Black Saturday."

"Black Saturday? What's that? Is the stock market going to crash? Is the Asian financial crisis finally going to hit us, as Alan Greenspan threatened?" I asked concerned.

"No! It's Valentine's Day!"

Ah, Valentine's Day. I should have seen the signs: the sales on roses, the racks of sappy, pink and red cards.

"Valentine's Day," I mused. "And I thought it was something important."

"It is important. Don't you realize that everyone's going to have something to do on Valentine's Day except for me?" she moaned.

"Well, I don't think it's quite that bad. It's just a Saturday like any other Saturday."

"But it makes single people like me feel bad."

"Why? Because you aren't getting boxes of chocolates from a special someone? Chocolates are bad for you anyway," I told her.

"But it's for attached people to make the rest of us feel bad. It's like rubbing salt in the wound, you know. Valentine's Day is just so painful."

"All Valentine's Day is is a blatant display of commercialism. A way to sell more cards on Hallmark's part. I bet the execs at Hallmark panicked when they realized that after Christmas, no one would buy any cards unless it was his or her birthday. So they came up with all these holidays to sell more cards."

"Are you saying that Hallmark is selling out on love?" she asked.

"Well, you don't need to be that cynical. But think about it; who created Secretary's Day? It's not enough just to thank your secretary anymore, you have to buy him or her roses or a card and take them out to lunch. It's all a clever marketing ploy, really."

"But holidays do mean something, don't they? We have President's Day next week and that's really important, isn't it?"

"Well, sort of. But it's actually just another reason to have a sale. Does anyone really think about Lincoln or Jefferson on President's Day?" I asked.

"But we get the day off, so it has to be important," she said.

"We get the day off so we can go shopping."

"Oh. But that's President's Day. It's a stuffy holiday anyway. But you've got to do something on Valentine's Day, don't you?"

"Why? Do you tell someone that you love him or her just because it's Valentine's Day and that's what you do on that day?"

"No, I suppose not."

"You don't just spend time with someone because it's Valentine's Day either, do you?"

"Well, it would be nice to share the day with someone special."

"What makes that day, your so–called Black Saturday, any more important than any other day of the week?"

My friend considered for a moment. "But all these restaurants and clubs, they're doing all sorts of special things."

"At the risk of sounding cynical, all these places are putting a premium on love, guilting you into feeling that you have to buy into the idea of a day completely dedicated to love," I answered. "It's boring."

"Boring? But it's so romantic," my friend sighed.

"I guess so, if you find pink and red motifs romantic."

"But are you going to do anything for Valentine's Day?"

"No, nothing special. It's just a day. And if I really wanted to tell someone how I felt about him, I would say it whenever I felt like it, regardless of the day."

"Oh. So what are you going to do after class?"

"I'm going to buy some chocolates for my valentine," I answered.

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian columnist.

Better late than never

Nicole Lavin

The other night a friend of mine was struggling with a tedious task — that of statistics homework. Exhausted, with sore eyes and cramped hands from writing, he looked up to check the ridiculous hour. The digital clock read 1:30 a.m. In his sleepy delirium he muttered, "Whoa, it got way too late way too early."

For the past few days I have found myself chuckling every once in a while, upon recollection of his ridiculous paradoxical declaration. Today my laughter turned into anxiety and guilt, though, Justin's statement referring to the quick lapse of time reminded me of my grandmother and my negligence.

Since I transferred to UMass last semester, I think I have called my Grandma Rose a total of two times. When she sees my mother, she is full of inquiries as to how I am doing, what I have been up to and when I will be coming home to visit. My mother responds to these questions, the ones that I should be answering directly when conversing with my grandmother. I could do so, with great ease, but I don't phone her.

Why I don't call perplexes me. We always have so much fun together. She is the cutest, greatest grandmother. I love everything about her. I love that her favorite movie is Pretty Woman, and that when she gets nervous she sells at the actors, full well knowing that they can't hear her.

I love how she still puts X's and O's for kisses and hugs in every greeting card she gives me, and that she makes zucchini bread (my favorite food) for my birthday. It cracks me up that every time she sees my brother's girlfriend she asks her if she's gained weight. What a nut.

I love that I am 19–years–old, and she still calls me her little "Tootsabell." She is my favorite dance partner and my partner in "ice cream crime." Again, why don't I call?

The price of the phone bill, possibly? No. She lives a half–hour from Amherst. The charges would be minimal.

Have I nothing to say to her? That's not the case. There is a lot going on in both of our lives. It must be that I am caught up in academia here. I have a lot of work to do. I've been studying. How studious of me… and dishonest too. I seem to manage to find time for my friends, so why can't I find the time for Grandma Rose?

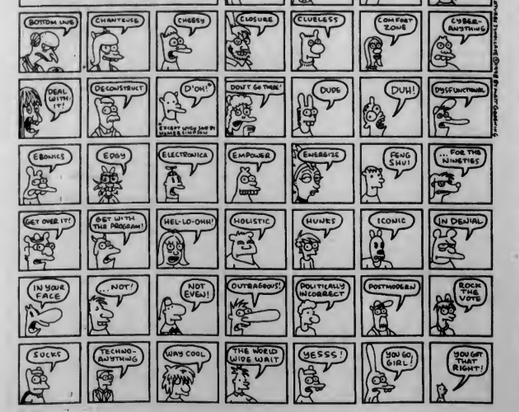
I can't shake this enormous guilt I feel for not calling and for not having any idea as to why I don't. Yet I still don't reach for the phone as often as I should. Even when I go home, I make no effort to contact her, but instead wait for her to call or come to my house. When she comes over, we talk and carry on, having a great time, possibly watching Oprah or an old black and white movie. The time we spend together I certainly value, but for some reason it is just too much for me to drive the quick 10 minutes from my house to go see her. I am a hypocrite.

I can't help but wonder if I am the only person guilty of such a crime. Perhaps someone else understands this confusing selfishness I am experiencing. Is this a "college" thing? Maybe it is more of a trend than I thought. Not that I would find the multiplicity of such actions comforting. I just think that I can't be the only person here who is irresponsibly leaving someone behind.

I hate how this feels, so something must change. I must change. Grandma Rose loves and misses me, and I love and miss her too. I also can't help but think about the fact that she is 75–years–old. I should be spending as much time as possible with her. Who knows how much longer I will be fortunate to be blessed with her presence in my life. She is in good health now, but one never knows…

I have no idea what has driven me to neglect my relationship with the beautiful, wonderful, loving woman I call Grandma. All I know is that she is steadily aging and I fear that it is getting "way too late way too early." I don't know what I'll do when it really is too late.

But I need to stop typing. I have a phone call to make.



Nicole Lavin is a UMass student.

We will be publishing a Point/Counterpoint feature on Wednesday, Feb. 18, analyzing the War on Drugs.

Is it o success or o failure? Should it be continued? What effect has it had on the use and sale of drugs, the prison population, or civil liberties? What ore the ethicol issues involved in this legacy of the Reagan/Bush years?

Columns should be submitted no later than 5 p.m. on Monday, Feb. 16. They can be delivered to the Collegian offices ot 113 Campus Center, UMass; foxed to 545–1592; or e–mailed to letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu. Call Tomar Carroll or Dan Bodah at 545–1491 for more information.

LIFE IN HELL ©1998 BY MATT GROENING

Faith is a hard sell

I think I've been spending too much time alone recently. Apparently, to some, enjoying a few minutes of solitude — particularly in a public place — ranks among the seven deadly sins.

Whenever I am alone in the Campus Center, it seems, one of the Lord's loyal servants unfailingly sidles up to offer salvation.

These high pressure tactics only serve to push people farther away.

Gerrit DeYoung

"Hi, my name is Kevin…" and the spiel begins. He's a member of a Bible study group, and wonders if I'd be interested in joining. I rather gruffly say no and hope he'll leave it at that. Of course he doesn't; my soul's at stake, and it's his heaven–sent duty to save it.

In his crusade to unshackle me from my Godless ways, he starts grilling me on my religious beliefs. Admittedly, I don't have very many, but those I find to be the most meaningful generally come from the East (Japan, not New York). Upon hearing this, Kevin realizes he's met his match. I'm too far gone. He wanders away, mourning yet another soul doomed to languish in the pits of hell.

If this hadn't happened to me before, or if I didn't have a particular aversion to people trying to manipulate me into joining their organizations, I may have felt obligated to attend a meeting. It's obvious to me that that's exactly what these groups hope for.

There's a reason they approach people who are alone. First, people who are with a friend feel more self–confident; it's easier for them to say no if they want to say no. Second, people who are by themselves are more likely to feel lonely and isolated and welcome any fellowship.

Even if these groups' intentions are ultimately altruistic, their recruitment tactics are unjustifiable. They're simply annoying to most, and cruelly manipulative to some. Taking advantage of people's innate tendency to want to say yes or other's longing for friendship and connection is not a very positive way to spread the Bible's teachings.

These unfortunate interactions are more than just annoyances. I'm sure the various groups (I know of at least two) that practice this type of recruitment intend to bring religion to UMass' predominantly secular population. But these high pressure tactics only serve to push people farther away.

Religion can seem like a scary thing. For some it seems like nothing more than a laundry list of rules written up by some killjoy in the sky. Being bombarded with questions about one's spiritual life by some pushy recruiter can't improve religion's image with these people.

For those of us who realize how important a role religion can play in our lives, this kind of solicitation is even more distasteful. Like I said before, I don't have much of a religious life. But I do hope to form one.

However, I'm about as likely to accept religious beliefs from someone in the Campus Center as I am to buy a vacuum cleaner from someone who shows up at my front door. And spiritual questions are far more important than whether or not to get the shag attachment or the crevice tool. They affect just about every aspect of one's life. I'm not about to allow someone I don't even know to affect me that profoundly.

While I'm sure the groups who try to recruit members in this fashion intend to help people, they're doing everyone a disservice. Taking such a pushy tack not only discourages people from exploring their own spiritual life, it makes all religious groups look bad, even the majority that don't employ such tactics. To the casual observer, the difference between many of the groups isn't apparent. Rather than investigate, many just steer clear of them all.

For the various religious groups on campus to be effective, they all need to be mindful of how they attract new members. Nobody wants to feel coerced. There are certainly enough seekers on this campus that they shouldn't have to be sought. It seems to me that any group that genuinely acts to improve lives shouldn't have to strong–arm people into joining their organization.

Gerrit DeYoung is a UMass undergraduate.

The doublespeak of the 90's

American Newspeak

Wayne Grytting

Stand and deliver

The Air Force unveiled a new program to improve the math and science skills of our youth.

At the Museum of Aviation in Warner Robbins, Georgia, Air Force pilots are training teenage students to operate military plane simulators and perform missions over Iraq. While students in a C-130 cargo plane simulator deliver "food" and "medicine" to Baghdad, their peers ride shotgun in fighter planes ready to rid the skies of "enemy" aircraft.

Fortunately, the program is not meant to serve a military agenda, according to its director, Major Tim Ham. He reports that "Here, they get to see how the stuff they are learning in the classrooms can be used in everyday kind of jobs."

And what, besides flying missions over Iraq, constitutes an "everyday kind of job?" Try search and rescue, surveillance and reconnaissance, all according to Major. Ham. (Associated Press 2/1)

Quiz Tim

Which of the following words is used incorrectly if left uncapitalized or standing by itself: velero, popsicle, mace, ping-pong, sheetrock, dumpster, hula-hoop, play-doh, and fribee? The correct answer, of course, is all of them because all these terms are owned by someone.

This invaluable information appears in an ad in the Columbia Journalism Review sponsored by the International Trademark Association. The INTA is eager to let editors and journalists learn "a few important guidelines that will help prevent letters of complaint from trademark owners."

They want it known that trademarks are proper adjectives, requiring capitalization and a noun or noun phrase. So in the interest of protecting private property, here are their approved ways to use these terms: Velero hoop and loop fasteners, Popsicle flavored ices, Mace tear gas, Ping-Pong tennis table equipment, Sheetrock plaster wallboard, Dumpster trash container, Hula-Hoop plastic hoop, Play-Doh modeling compound and Frisbee flying discs. So let's all toe the line. (Columbia Journalism Review 1/98)

Beyond Narcissism

Dial Soap announced they are dumping their classic advertising slogan, "Aren't you glad you use Dial."

The jingle's demise may provide anthropologists of the future with major insights into the culture of the 90's. In the words of the Wall Street Journal, the slogan "wasn't relevant any longer because of what is going on inside of soap users heads."

Dial's ad people argue people today are not primarily worried about offending others with body odor, but mainly want protection from the germs of the outside world. In the words of DDB Needham ad executive Joe Belmonte, "It used to be 'I'm trying to make myself presentable to you.' Now its more about 'I've got to wash you off of me'."

This would make Jack Nicholson's Melvin in As Good As It Gets a candidate for poster child of the 90's. (Wall Street Journal 1/20)

Military-Industrial Logic 101

Traditionally, our citadels of higher learning have strived to avoid looking like mere store fronts for the Pentagon. But a recent report by the Natural Resources Defense Council has criticized many major universities for their involvement in nuclear weapons research.

The most visible target is a program at five schools to build a supercomputer to simulate the effects of nuclear explosions for the U.S. Energy Department.

Fending off criticism of involving academia in the creation of weapons of mass destruction, Joan Rohlfing, a senior energy advisor to the Energy Department, made a fine distinction obviously missed by fat–headed opponents. "The purpose of the department's simulation research financing," she said, "is to improve our ability to maintain the nation's nuclear stockpile, not to improve its performance."

In other words, we don't give a damn what it does, just keep the cash cow happy. (New York Times 1/25)

A rose by any other name…

The American Red Cross takes great pride in the fact they, to quote their Legal Resources Manual, "do not endorse, either explicitly or implicitly, any commercial products."

That may be why some confusion arose when the Laerdal company, a manufacturer of the mannequins used in many CPR classes, printed a manual with the Red Cross logo emblazoned across its front. Not only that, they printed a letter from a Red Cross vice president named Susan Morrissey Livingstone describing Laerdal as "a trusted name worldwide," praising "their dedication to quality manufacturing," and offering discounted mannequins to Red Cross chapters.

What sounded much like a commercial endorsement turned out to be something else entirely. It was, in the words of the Red Cross, a "non-exclusive alliance" and not an "endorsement." (New York Times, 1/26)

Wayne Grytting is a syndicated columnist. More American Newspeak can be found on the internet at http://www.scn.org/newspeak.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Black Affairs

Wednesday, February 11, 1998

Organic farmer takes strong stand

By Edgar A. Barros
Collegian Staff

Wesley Daniel Price, 21, an organic farmer from Belchertown, and companions who wish to remain anonymous, will head to Washington D.C. this afternoon in an attempt to demonstrate their support for the release of political prisoners, Mumia Abu-Jamal and Leonard Peltier. Price will stop in New York City and Philadelphia to gather more supporters for the cause.

When he reaches Washington D.C., Price and his fellow demonstrators plan to engage in a protest in hopes of persuading President Bill Clinton to issue presidential clemency to both prisoners.

Price has been fasting since Feb. 2 of this year in support for Abu-Jamal and Peltier. Mumia Abu-Jamal and Leonard Peltier have been serving life sentences for what Price claims to be "trumped up charges."

"These two cases represent the injustice in the American prison system, which for the most part, only incarcerates blacks, poor whites and other already oppressed people," said Price.

In a formal statement Price stated, "Both cases are imbedded in strong feeling and misinformation. Both cases reveal the systematic racism which has maligned this country since its inception. I need not recount here the innumerable atrocities which Indigenous People and all "Minorities" have been subject to over the last 600 years. It will suffice for me to say that if we do not amend the present, then we will never be able to transcend the past. I have lived in darkness long enough to see the Light and I do not wish to pass this darkness on to any other generation".

Price is encouraging "all those who have been disempowered and oppressed by this unjust global economy" to support the cause by fasting.

Price also stated, "It is my intention to no longer accept the 'white' privilege which my skin color had endowed me within this society."

Price believes that right now is a good time to approach the White House with this issue.

"The president is looking for something to save his butt right now," said Price. "So freeing Abu-Jamal and Peltier could be good way of going about it. He is vulnerable right now."

The stereotypical African-American Or is it?!

My friends, my sisters and my brothers,
Question.
What makes one Black, material items, one's actions or one's color?
I mean just because I like fried chicken, collard greens and macaroni, golden biscuits, things like that...
Does this mean I must, or that I should,
Just because my skin is Black?
Is it the food I eat?
The clothes I wear?
The sneakers on my feet?
Does that make me Black?
Do these material items stereotype me?
So, What does?
What makes one Black?
What makes one Yellow?
What makes one White?
I really couldn't tell you
However, I can't deny many of my Black brothers and sisters live up the stereotypes deemed the nature of the Black woman and the Black man.
If it isn't the baggy jeans and twisted hats
It's diamond rings and things like that Ghetto sex with the girl he just macked
Basketball hoops to hard core rap.
Remember
It used to be Motown, Jazz, and Tap
Aretha Franklin, Lou Rawls and James
Then Jimi Hendrix made Purple Haze.
Yeah, I often wonder.
What ever happened to them days?
I mean, I'm not complaining about the present
But now,
It's gangsters, guns and drugs
The most notorious biggie thugs gambling celo on the corner drinking beer and everywhere
The big time cars
you know the scene,
The Acura, the Benz, the Lexus coup
The female trophy with whom they troop
Her sexy clothes and polished nails
Her brand new weave in ponytails
Or, the eccentric braids that are very cute
The attitude which is very rude
Witty wits knife sharp and shrewd
"Yo whuz up, can we get some food?"
Her tennis bracelet and Reebok sneakers
The guys all saying
"Yeah she's a keeper"
Yet have no idea about how to treat her
(but that's another production)
Funny isn't it?
Funny how these images all seem true
But one has to remember
Not all Black people act or dress this way just because of the ones that do
So who's to say what makes one Black?
Who's to say you are acting Black?
Who's to say you are acting White, Purple
Mulatto, Asian, Haitian, Puerto Rican or Green
Who's to say anything?
I really couldn't tell you.
What do I know, is who I am on the inside and it shouldn't matter the color
I am on the outside. No one should judge another based on stereotypes,
the color of one's skin or the clothes their in.
Let's stop the stereotypes and see others foe who they are:
individuals.
Henceforth I ask once again my friends,
my sisters and my brothers
What makes one Black?
One's actions or one's color?

— Cassandra I. Carty

A plan of action

It's the new year. The old is gone. The new has come. On the threshold of the millennium, many find themselves contemplating their fate. What are your hopes for the future? What kind of life do you envision yourself living five to 10 years from now? Do you see yourself as happy and whole? Are you striving or struggling? Are you productive and contributing to our cause? Are your relationships rich and satisfying?

One thing we can be certain of is that our lives will be different tomorrow from what they are today. Life moves forward, and change is guaranteed. If we think critically about the future we want, we lay the foundation for it and do the work possible to make our dreams a reality. We can make the process of change an ally rather than an adversary. If we know where we want to go we can create a map for getting there. Without a plan or goal we may wander about aimlessly. Without something special to act upon we react to everything, frustrating ourselves.

We all want a better life for ourselves. We want to feel productive, prosperous and secure. Often the energy we need to create the future we envision is given to worthless pursuits or needless worry and fear. We need to reflect inwardly and ask what it is that we want, that we need. To be able to do this we need to be able to clearly differentiate between the two. A want is something desired that can enhance our life: a new car, that promotion, that new piece of sporting equipment. Whereas a need is something vital for our very existence (food, water, shelter, clothing).

Knowing what we want and need makes all the difference, somehow making things very clear. All the good things we desire are within our reach, though they may be sitting in blind spots of our persistent anxiety.

What is your plan? How will you go about making it happen? In order to feel confident and at peace we must live authentically. We must design a life in harmony with the truth of who we are.

Give a gift of love to yourself by scheduling quiet time alone. Set goals. Know your plan. Declare them. Your word is a part of the plan. Above all else never forget to give thanks. Gratitude unlocks the fullness of life. It turns what we have into enough and more. It turns denial into acceptance, chaos to order, confusion to clarity. It can turn a meal into a feast, a house into a home, a stranger into a friend. Gratitude makes sense of your past, brings peace for today and creates a vision for tomorrow.

A part of the plan is to start a gratitude journal. Sarah Ban Breathnack, best selling author of Simple Abundance, A Day Book of Comfort and Joy suggests starting a journal and at the end of each day writing five things for which you are grateful. Some days may be filled with amazing things, most days just simple joys. Simplicity, order, harmony, beauty and joy are all the other principles that can transform your life. Your life cannot blossom and flourish without it.

A proverb reminds us that "Gratitude is the heart's memory." Gratitude is a part of the plan. Appreciate the clear blue sky, your health, your family and friends. When we take the focus off what we don't have and concentrate more on what we do have, we are learning the fundamental lesson for making our action of plan come to fruition.

Self-mastery begins with making your plan clear and understanding the only limitations are those we devise in our mind. There is always something we can do to change an undesirable situation. God gives us the power to choose. In large measure, it is the miracle of life and what we are here to discover.

Millicent Jackson is a Collegian columnist.

What is your plan? How will you go about making it happen? In order to feel confident and at peace we must live authentically. We must design a life in harmony with the truth of who we are.

Millicent Jackson

One Time For The Mind

Ladies and gentleman, as your president I would like to give you the inside scoop on what our new "States of the United" (formerly known as the United States) mission will be in order to have no forms of oppression.

People of the States of the United, you are looked at as an individual and a Statunan. With this Statunan status (pronounced sta-choo-naan) you are now an official citizen of this new nation.

The fact that you have come from other foreign lands does not exclude your distinct heritage, but allows you to contribute to the many Statunans in our land.

In the school systems there won't be African, Asian, or Native American history classes. There will only be Statunan history. This history will be based on factual information that born Statunans have been part of. In order for this transition into a non-class distinction society, we will do our best to instill Statunan values and moral codes. By this we will not be assuming any type of inferiority because of race or class. We are all one race — Statunans.

There will be no economic term used for upper or lower class. Our goal is to take care of our people. After all, as Statunan people we are all similar in our humanity. Due to economic stratification though, some people will be at the top of the economic ladder, and others on the bottom of the ladder, but only because of their job capabilities. With this in mind we give the best Statunan education for our first and secondary students.

Boys and girls will have to participate in computer, mathematics and home economic classes. As the children begin to advance in classes, we will no longer call this information history, but Factual Information Classes. This new name will give students pride in knowing what both genders and distinct peoples have done for the Statunan States.

People, as we embark on living in a new nation we have to start from a clean slate. In order to record factual history on the way Statunans live, the government will delete all forms of statistical information which showed how the former labels of Asians, African Americans and Latinos, were when compared to the majority (at the time whites).

In our old nation (United States) we had the mentality that the whites were the overall breadwinners. We killed hundreds and thousands of Africans and brought them to our land. We also colonized the Native Americans. We blamed the people we labeled (blacks, Latinos) for lack of skill, but in fact, it was due to our old nations' past downfall. With the one Statunan concept, we will redeem ourselves and now implement only Statunan principles.

Will we ever have a nation that supersedes race and class? This question has been debated for decades. If the answers to this question were clear then this article would not be necessary.

Allana E. Todman

By hearing my statements above, it is my strongest will and conviction that you begin to understand what the new Statunan approach is all about. With a people who looks out for all, we need to look out for each other. All of these places in the States of the United are ours, we need to claim our States back. As Statunans we have forgotten all of our brothers and sisters.

The former people known to have labels of being European American, African American, Latin American and so on will be deleted. This will allow one to understand the Statunan. It is understandable if we say what shade a person is, but as far as colors are concerned, they all are part of the Statunan rainbow.

Now you may say, "Ms. President, how can we implement such radical morals?" The actual task will not be an easy task to achieve at all, but we must start somewhere.

A utopian society is one that is demonstrated here in the States of the United. For some critiques, an ideology of such a belief is impossible. But for others this type of concept may shed some light. In an American nation where our civilization was based on exploitation and colonization, examining the deep rooted effects this has had on America is very evident.

Will we ever have a nation that supersedes race and class? This question has been debated for decades. If the answer to this question was clear then this article would not be necessary. Unfortunately we must each ask ourselves these questions. At the same time maybe we can observe the Statunan people and learn something from them.

This is One Time for Your Mind.

Allana E. Todman is a Collegian columnist.

Black Affairs

is looking for a few good writers to contribute to the WORD! If you have an interest in making change, call the Collegian at 545-1851 or call Edgar A. Barros at 546-5397. News writers are especially needed, but all are encouraged to call. Peace, love and unity.

Destined to Live

Friday Night, Frenzy in the house of Brothers,
Cold Air, Loud Music, Loud People, with no thoughts of a racial show.
Hmmm, as I think to myself and watch the beer lovers devour their bodies,
I became scared because I stood out as a non-alchy.
As Hip-hop echoes & and roars through the chamber of hell,
My attempt to fit in wasn't enough for the fiesta quarrel, Initiated by a secret society they felt it was their duty to bring forth brutality on my body.
They approached me, intoxicated by the poison, screaming "You are not worthy you dumb nigg, and if you don't e-x-i-t then prepare for jeopardy!" Baffled by their poor attempt at manhood, it seemed deathless for reasoning with ignorant human beings who failed to exhibit the true meaning of embracing, on a night when I was just in the mood for partying. As I stood in the middle of the stunk onlookers, listening to my heart, and the wizard KRS, an unexpected blast to my chest, eradicated my thoughts of forgiveness, falling like a stoner, I felt my facial figure become toothless.
Heart screaming for a witness to end their prejudicial injustice,
On a man who doesn't know the true meaning of heartless.
Stadium voice racial cries leap in my ears silencing my sense to deafness.
Muscles weak, tears in my eyes, pride gone, I sense this is the end without the chance to move on. I try, I try, to flee for safety, but the haters grab me, push me, and bite me to convince me that I'm still a dumb Nigg, who will never feel free in the land of the W-H-I-T-E.
The racial fiesta has ended, for now,
As I lay shaking, physically and emotionally wounded in my pool of life,
I close my eye's, trusting that tomorrow won't be so trife.

— Stanley L.P. Sterlin

The pursuit of knowledge: Thoughts on Atallah

It was this night that I truly realized my own ignorance. The pursuit of knowledge is said to be noble, but as soon as we humans possess a speck, we forget our own limitations.

Such was the case on this Thursday night, Feb. 5, when Atallah Shabazz spoke at the Bowker auditorium. After one has read and read the pages of history, one forgets the true mortality of these people in question. I'm talking about such martyrs as Marcus Garvey, El-Hajj Malik El-Shabazz, Martin Luther King Jr., etc.

This night though was focused on the legacy of Mr. Shabazz, through his eldest daughter Atallah Shabazz, who reminded us that, "the legacy is in all of us."

After asking Ms. Shabazz two questions, it was self evident that indeed Confucius was right. "Learning is not just the accumulation of facts, but rather manifestation of one's [en (humanity) through self reflection." How many times have we made broad sweeping prejudicial statements about another race, strictly based on lies that have been the downfall of clever culture. This great lie is profit to some and cultural annihilation for the unfortunates.

"A black man is a dream that can't come true," said Richard Wright in A Long Dream. That's what it means to be in a struggle, one that is continuous both in nature and in theory, for it was Confucius who proclaimed rightness to be innate, and it is that intrinsic (human?) reaction to rightness that still causes me headaches. To say the least, American streets are paved with dirt-stained blood from the ropes of trees, where even the uniform of the United States Army could not save us from the predictability of violence begot of ignorance derived from hatred.

However, to say the least, these are not ideal situations for humane existence, but rather a breeding ground for the requirement of war. However, war is not the solution but rather the reaction.

Omar Goyle

This reaction though evolved from that which is only necessary in order to proclaim the God given right to freedom. At any age, oppression infringes upon the soul of its victims, sometimes in such unfair ways that even to the naked eye the acts seem unreal, and therefore revenge proclaims itself essential. In this case though all that was/is asked for was/is equality, not blood.

Nevertheless, visibility of segregation in America did not go away, but rather transformed in order to hide itself behind economic growth. However, we must not forget that although these words seem to be the same thing (another black person crying), the plot is even greater.

Until our society is ridden of such evils, we must continue to labor for that which is God given... "Come to Jesus."

This evening, however, the focus was on the legacy of one of our most notable of heros El-Hajj Malik El-Shabazz. In 1963, this man came upon a land that bore witness to his birth and three years later "Amerikkka" consumed his flesh. I just don't understand how we as a people can survive when we seek lies against each other to plot our brother's and sister's death.

Atallah reminded me that anger takes too much maintenance, which reminded me of a statement she quoted from her father, "The greatest tool of the oppressor is the mind of the oppressed."

Indeed this is so, because what else could cause the oppressed to fight amongst themselves? This internal fight gave way to the death of this fearless man, Mr. Shabazz, and will give way to the deaths of many more on every level.

"A man who wishes to make a profession of goodness in everything must necessarily come to grief among so many who are not good. Therefore, it is necessary... to learn how not to be good, and use this knowledge and not use it, according to the necessity of the case."

This statement, made by Machiavelli, has rendered to me many wondering days and tireless nights. Who is good? Who is not good? In what case is this knowledge necessary? Was this knowledge ours in the first place?

It is said that, "The cultivator of humanity is a wise man, but a wise man is not necessarily a cultivator of humanity." Who then is a wise man?

All these curiosities remain the burden of my nights and days. Until said curiosities are sorted out, I remain a wondering fool immersed in the force, which seems to consume the world, waiting for the day when it (force) will discord the waste material that is my flesh, reaping as its ultimate reward, my soul.

I'll be just like the rest who have failed to defy, for even Jesus could not escape it. On the other hand, if our divine could not escape this force why ask about mere men? The answer to such questions have only accomplished one thing — further frustrate me.

Omar Gayle is a Collegian columnist.

Wednesday, February 11, 1998 The Massachusetts Daily Collegian Page 7

ARTS & LIVING

V Records founding fathers Jumping Jack Frost and Bryan Gee shine on V Classic — Volume 1. COURTESY ALEX BRATTELL

Sounds from the underground

V CLASSIC — VOLUME 1
Various Artists
Konkrete Jungle/Ultra

NORTHERN EXPOSURE 2: EAST COAST & WEST COAST EDITIONS
Sasha and John Digweed
Ministry of Sound/Ultra

Trax On Trax Off

Perhaps it is the sudden proliferation of haphazardly put together (mostly out of sheer record company greed) "compilation" albums that makes both these excellent, and altogether coherent works stand out like a lonely beacon on a dark horizon. Whatever the case, both V Classic — Volume 1 and Sasha and John Digweed's Northern Exposure 2 both brashly reflect the excitement of cut-and-splice DJ sounds that emanate from today's urban dance clubs.

Collecting the majority of V Records' singles (many are hard-to-find in the U.S.) released since founders Bryan Gee and Jumping Jack Frost founded the seminal U.K. drum 'n bass label in 1993, Volume 1 features many of the labels mainstays — including DJ Krust, Roni Size and DJ Die.

Since nearly everyone on the label hails from the old English shipping town of Bristol, their predilection for abstract, dark beats is quite understandable. The album succeeds because, instead of resting on their collective laurels, each track is a challenging — and nearly always rewarding — exploration of unexplored territory. Of course, being a newish genre helps, but the sheer innovation of DJ Krust's gorgeous "Maintain" achieves a moment of almost unparalleled transcendence in the ever-mutating realm of jungle.

Finally available domestically on two separate CD's, Sasha and John Digweed's Northern Exposure 2 plays like two hours of non-stop breakbeats and lurching rhythms — which makes perfect sense seeing as the entire album was recorded straight off vinyl.

The difference with the Sasha and Digweed project lies in the fact that their vision of progressive dance music is refracted through an interpretive lens rather than a unilateral one. Taking tracks from artists such as Gus Gus and Speedy J, they seamlessly segue in disparate works by not only using turntables and mixers, but by utilizing technology to loop, cut and sequence the songs into a completely new and exciting score. Both V Classic — Volume 1 & Northern Exposure 2: East Coast/West Coast A- (Marty Keane)

Turn to UNDERGROUND SOUNDS, page 8

Titanic receives 14 Oscar nods

By John Horn
Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Titanic, the epic account of a fateful love affair on the doomed ocean liner, captured a record-tying 14 Academy Award nominations yesterday, including best picture, actress and director. L.A. Confidential and Good Will Hunting each received nine nominations, including best picture. The other best picture nominees were As Good As It Gets and, in a mild surprise, The Full Monty.

Robert Duvall's self-financed role in The Apostle earned him a best actor nomination. He will face Matt Damon from Good Will Hunting, Peter Fonda from Ulee's Gold, Dustin Hoffman from Wag the Dog and Jack Nicholson from As Good As It Gets.

Fonda, son of the late Henry Fonda, said Ulee's Gold wasn't a comeback role. "You just haven't gone to the art houses," he said. "I make 1.2 movies a year. This was just a part that got a lot of critical acclaim." He added, "I carried my dad's watch during the movie for good luck."

Kate Winslet of Titanic was nominated for best actress, as were fellow Britons Helena Bonham Carter in The Wings of the Dove, Julie Christie in Afterglow and Dame Judi Dench in Mrs. Brown and the sole American on the list, Helen Hunt in As Good As It Gets.

"I'm extremely shaky. I am very thrilled," said a clearly moved Dench, a London theater legend who has reached a whole new public as Queen Victoria in Mrs. Brown.

Winslet, a supporting actress nominee two years ago for Sense and Sensibility, said, "It felt very unreal last time, and it sort of feels the same this time." On the strong lineup by British women in her category, Winslet said she never thought English actresses were better; the nominees, she suggested, were lucky to get good roles. Still, she added excitedly, "One can't help but feel, good on the Brits."

Among those missing from the nominations was Steven Spielberg, whose Amistad was not selected for best picture or best director. The film's notable newcomer actor, Djimon Hounsou, also did not receive a bid. Aside from Titanic, the only other film to get 14 nominations was All About Eve, released in 1950. It went on to win six, including best picture. Ben Hur holds the title for Oscar trophies: 11.

The 87-year-old Gloria Stuart was nominated for supporting actress as the Winslet character in old age in Titanic. A star in the '30s who all but retired from film a half-century ago, she is the oldest performer ever nominated. Also nominated in the category were Joan Cusack in In & Out, Minnie Driver in Good Will Hunting, Julianne Moore in Boogie Nights and Kim Basinger in L.A. Confidential.

Burt Reynolds was nominated for supporting actor for Boogie Nights as were Robert Forster for Jackie Brown, Anthony Hopkins for Amistad, Greg Kinnear for As Good As It Gets and Robin Williams for Good Will Hunting.

James Cameron, the driving force behind the $200 million Titanic, received two nominations — as producer of the film for best picture and as its director. He was not nominated for the film's script.

Others up for directing are Peter Cattaneo for The Full Monty, Gus Van Sant for Good Will Hunting, Curtis Hanson for L.A. Confidential and Atom Egoyan for The Sweet Hearafter. Hanson was just glad to be in the same ocean with Titanic. "Titanic is 'titanic'," Hanson said from New York. "Like the ship, it's huge. What can you do? I just sort of feel we are surfing along in their wake. But I'm sky high and it's good to be here."

Titanic also got bids for art direction, cinematography, costume design, editing, makeup, score, song ("My Heart Will Go On"), sound, sound effects editing and visual effects. But its male lead, teen heartthrob Leonardo DiCaprio, was passed over as best actor. Two of 1997's highest-grossing films failed to collect any top nominations. Men in Black and The Lost World: Jurassic Park combined for four minor selections. The critically acclaimed The Ice Storm and The Boxer got snubbed.

The script by actors Matt Damon and Ben Affleck for Good Will Hunting was named in the original screenplay competition. The other nominees: As Good As It Gets, Boogie Nights, The Full Monty and Woody Allen's Deconstructing Harry.

The adapted screenplay nominees were Donnie Brasco, L.A. Confidential, The Sweet Hearafter, The Wings of the Dove and Wag the Dog, the timely story about a presidential sex scandal. With his nomination for As Good As It Gets, Nicholson passed Laurence Olivier for the most nominations (11) for a male performer. Allen's writing nomination, his 13th, put him past Billy Wilder for the most screenplay bids.

The foreign-language films honored were Germany's Beyond Silence, Holland's Character, Brazil's Four Days in September, Spain's Secrets of the Heart and Russia's The Thief.

Already on pace to become history's highest-grossing movie, Titanic may have relatively little to gain from the publicity of the Academy Awards. Not so for L.A. Confidential.

Titanic has been the nation's most popular film for two months, earning $337.5 million in North America alone. In part because of today's high ticket prices, only three films in history have ever grossed more. L.A. Confidential, the underachieving darling of the critics, grossed $41.6 million, not bad for a period crime drama with an ensemble cast, but not a breakout hit despite its accolades. The story of 1950s Los Angeles police won best-picture awards from the National Society of Film Critics, New York Film Critics Circle, Los Angeles Film Critics Association and the National Board of Review.

Warner Bros. will expand the national release of L.A. Confidential on Friday from fewer than 300 theaters to more than 800. New advertising will emphasize the anticipated Oscar nominations and play up the film's rich characters.

Star Wars and E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial — numbers one and two on the all-time box-office lists — also were nominated for best picture but neither won the top prize: No. 3 — Jurassic Park wasn't nominated. The 70th annual Academy Awards show will be held at the Shrine Auditorium on March 23.

big.

big technology. Intelligent test programming environments. High speed digital instruments. Next generation supercchips. And more. Teradyne is your source for innovation, quality and leadership in Automatic Test Equipment, complex connection systems and telecommunications and software test. Our ability to bring the most exciting products to market started more than 40 years ago with the introduction of the first automatic diode tester. Since then, we've continued to set the standard with products such as the first tester with tester-per-pin architecture, the industry's first million-dollar tester and the world's largest most complex backplane. And all the while continuing our excellence in innovation recognized by the R & D 100 award for the revolutionary tester device docking system.

big customers. While we can't possibly name them all, we help today's leading electronics companies deliver their products to a fast-evolving market. Whether it's automotive electronics, cellular phones, PCs, or computer networks, Teradyne is the power behind the products. We're a worldwide presence working in partnership with all the big names.

big possibilities. To an engineering or business grad, Teradyne represents the opportunity to gain real involvement on real projects from day one. As soon as you join us, you will benefit from an informal culture where creativity and teamwork prevail. Whether your specialty is Software, Hardware, Mechanical, or Application Engineering, or Business, Teradyne perfectly suits your background. We have exciting opportunities in all our locations from California to Boston, and even internationally.

not-so-big name

TERADYNE

www.teradyne.com

To find out more about Teradyne, see us on campus or send your resume to: Teradyne, Inc., Attn: University Relations, 321 Harrison Ave., Boston, MA 02118. Or e-mail joan.oclay@teradyne.com. An equal opportunity employer.

WE'RE COMING TO YOUR CAMPUS SOON!
See your placement office for details.

Boston, MA • Nashua, NH • Deerfield, IL • Agoura Hills, CA • San Jose, CA • Walnut Creek, CA • Dublin, Ireland • Kumamoto, Japan

■ underground sounds

continued from page 7

RIGHT ON TIME
Hepcat
Hellcat

Plain and simple, if you like good music you will like this album. Hepcat are based in the ska genre, but their music transcends boundaries. If you like ska, soul, reggae, calypso, sunny weather and trees you will love Right On Time.

Vocalists Greg Lee and Alex Desert are easily two of the best vocalists ska has seen since the days of Prince Buster and Desmon Dekker. Furthermore, while most ska bands are either trying to bite the Mighty Mighty Bosstones or sound like a lame rehashed version of the two-tone days, Hepcat plays beautiful soulful music. The horn section of Efren Santana, Raul Talavera and Kincaid Smith are clearly more influenced by artists such as Toots and the Maytals or the Wailers then anyone else.

Songs like "I Can't Wait," "Goodbye Street," and "The Secret" deal with relationships, but in a way that makes you happy. Rather then singing about typical girl/boy love dramas, they prefer to offer insights on relationships so that each track resembles a story. "Mama Used To Say" continues the theme of lessons learned and how you need to be your own person to get by these days. As you listen to Right On Time, you notice the smile on your face growing larger, your knees beginning to bend, your head nodding; you start to dance, you start to sing. This as close to musical nirvana as you're going to get.

This CD is best saved for those days when it seems like things can't get any worse because Right On Time will make you feel better. This album is a tribute to the great artists who made ska and reggae something special. I can't think of anything better to rescue you from the winter doldrums. So grab your girl, your pork-pie hat and your spliff and skank to the exquisite sounds of Hepcat. A (Adam Dlugacz)

STRANGE ANGELS
Kristin Hersh
Rykodisc

Strange Angels is spare, lovely music. As was true of her first solo release — the excellent, haunted Hips and Makers — most of the songs consist of only Hersh and her careful, delicate guitar work, occasionally rounded out by an understated cello or piano. Her lyrics are, as always, distinctive, surreal, wildly uneven and consistently engaging. In "Heaven," she sings a stunning image: "Like a river, you fight your own bed" and follows it one line later with the seemingly incomprehensible: "I'm on breaktime, where the sissies hang."

The music is so quietly forceful that the awkward lyrics are forgivable at first, and upon repeated listening begin to make their own kind of sense. Hersh's gift is this ability to envelop the listener in her own strange world where rivers fight and sissies hang. The record has a glow about it, like the sacred music of a tiny, forgotten church. It's not as consistently mind-blowing as Hips and Makers, but Strange Angels is warmer and has plenty of transcendent moments. The perfect little guitar solo in "Like You" alone makes the world a slightly more beautiful place. B+ (Rob Roensch)

SPRINGTIME
Freakwater
Thrill Jockey

Freakwater is frequently filed under the header "alterna- country," but they should not be lumped in with the solid, big-hearted, bar band rock-and-roll of many No Depression acts like Wilco and the Bottlerockets. Freakwater separate themselves from standard alterna-country units by their complete dependence on acoustic guitars and to-kill-for two-girl vocal harmonies.

Listening to Springtime is like sitting on a back porch of a house in disrepair surrounded by the sound of worn-in guitars and worn-in voices. It must be said that Freakwater are not banjo picking virtuosos, just good players working at the limit of their talents. They play their hearts out here in songs of whiskey, death and dancing that are lyrically as dark as death metal and musically as involving as any pop ditty. Mainstream country music doesn't play anything this intense, and for that matter, neither does rock radio. This is music to cherish and fear. A- (R.R.)

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING
• 50% Student Discounts
• Right in Amherst
• Space is Limited! Call...
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
Free Info Session Wed. Feb. 25th @ 7:00 pm, Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst Common

NEW AEROBICS
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
* Classes Daily
* Certified Instructors
* Suspended Wood Floor
* Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst 256-0080

Spring Break Fever
Party Hard Travel Safe
Cheap Tickets
Great Advice Nice people
Lima $603
Hong Kong $753
Tel Aviv $693
Los Angeles $355
Orlando $177
FARES ARE ROUND TRIP, DO NOT INCLUDE TAXES. RESTRICTIONS APPLY.
Council Travel
CIEE Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main Street
Amherst
(413) 256-1261

PARTY NITE
AMERICA'S WESTERN CAFE
TRY MIKES 16oz. BIG ONE BUD OR BUD LITE $1.50
MIKES BOTTLE BEER OF THE WEEK ICE HOUSE $1.50
COCKTAIL OF THE WEEK SEA BREEZE
THURSDAY NITE
SNACK BASKETS 9 TO 12

Internships in Business
ADVERTISING
ACCOUNTING
PROMOTIONS
FINANCE
MARKETING
The Collegian is looking for talented students to run its Business Department. Pick up an application at the Collegian in the Campus Center Basement. Applications due Friday, February 13th. Questions? Call 545-3500.

ONE LOVE. ONE HEART. ONE GREAT PARTY!!!
IT'S THAT TIME OF YEAR WHEN THOUSANDS OF STUDENTS COME TO JAMAICA TO FEEL ALRIGHT - FOR AN UNBELIEVABLE PRICE!!!
PACKAGE INCLUDES:
• Round-Trip Airfare
• 7 Nights Hotel Accommodations
• Round-Trip Airport & Hotel Transfers
• Free Welcome, Beach & Evening Parties
• Free Admission to Night Clubs
• Discounts on Restaurants, Water Sports & Side Excursions
• Montego Bay Packages Available from $389
• Professional On-Site Tour Reps
• Complete Weekly Activities Program Offering Optional Sunset Cruise, Beach Cruise, Yoga Party a Hora!
• Free Bonus Party Pack
SUN SPLASH TOURS
1 800-426-7710
STUDENT TRAVEL SERVICES
1 800-648-4849
Price is per person based on quad occupancy, NY, BW/Wash, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus, Nashville, New Orleans, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh departures. Other cities may qualify for reduction or require surcharge. US and Jamaica departure taxes (currently $57) and $9 handling charge additional. Add $30 for 3/6,7,8/98 bookings. Rates increase $30 on 12/15/97. Peak-week surcharges/off-week discounts may apply. Restrictions and cancellation penalties apply. Limited availability. Subject to change without notice. Call for full details on ticket selection and availability.

Older actors recognized by Oscar voters

By John Horn
Associated Press

COURTESY PARAMOUNT PICTURES

Gloria Stuart became the oldest Oscar nominee yesterday for her role in Titanic.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — The Academy Award nominees yesterday included performers whose heydays were the '60s, the '70s — and even the '30s. Four show business veterans who haven't been much in the Hollywood spotlight for years were honored with Oscar nominations. The comeback kids: Burt Reynolds, Peter Fonda, Julie Christie and Gloria Stuart.

The 87-year-old Ms. Stuart became the oldest performer nominated for an acting award, getting a nod for best supporting actress for her depiction of the 101-year-old Rose DeWitt Bukater in Titanic.

The actress was a star of the 1930s, where her credits included The Old Dark House, Air Mail and Gold Diggers of 1935. She has spent most of the last several decades painting, gardening and traveling. Ms. Christie, 56, was nominated for the role of a faded actress in a troubled marriage in Afterglow. She was last nominated 26 years ago for McCabe and Mrs. Miller. She won an Oscar for her performance in the 1965 film Darling. Of her five films in the 1990s — including Fools of Fortune and The Railway Station Man — few attracted any attention.

Reynolds, who turns 62 today, was nominated for best supporting actor for his depiction of adult filmmaker Jack Horner in Boogie Nights. It was the Deliverance star's first Oscar nomination. He also won a Golden Globe for the role in January. Reynolds' last films have all fizzled: Striptease, Citizen Ruth, Two if by Sea, The Maddening and Mad Dog Time.

Fonda, who shot to fame as the writer and co-star of 1969's Easy Rider, was nominated for best actor for his role as the beekeeper Ulee Jackson in Ulee's Gold. The performance also won him a Golden Globe last month.

Like many of his comeback peers, the 58-year-old Fonda's most recent work has gone largely unseen: Grace of My Heart and Bodies, Rest & Motion.

What's cheaper than a card?
Healthier than candy?
Comes in lots of colors?
Can be funny, cute or sexy?
CONDOMGRAMS!
Send one to that special someone.
Campus Center - 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.
Monday - February 9
Wednesday - February 11
Thursday - February 12
Sponsored by your Peer Health Educators
Health Education Division • University Health Services

In this era of hit songs and one hit wonders, you're invited to discover an album.

The new album featuring
"Phenomenon Of Flight" and "Birthday Suit"
Play Start. And leave the skip button behind.
Appearing at: Iron Horse Music Hall
Available at: For The Record

■ mens' hoop

continued from page 12

49-42 with 14:00 to play.

With the game seemingly slipping away, Massachusetts went on a 6-0 run to pull to within a point of Duquesne, 49-48. Mack opened the run with a 11-foot jump shot. Chris Kirkland — returning home to Pittsburgh — fought for an offensive rebound and hit a short jumper in the lane.

Ajmal Basit finished the scoring with an uncontested lay- in off a Jonathan DePina drive and dish.

DePina, who has struggled of late, handled the Duquesne press and played perhaps his best game in a UMass uniform. He finished with four points, a game-high seven assists and a rebound.

"Jonathan changed the pace of the game," Flint said. "He helped us get back in a position to win."

Trailing 49-48, UMass appeared to have let the momentum sway when Kevin Price converted on a short hook to give the Dukes a three-point edge.

But two possessions later, Clarke knocked down a wide open three-pointer off a DePina drive and kick-out to even the score at 51-51.

Duquesne answered with a 4-0 run, but DePina's acrobatic lay-up with nine minutes to play followed by his loose-ball rebound set the stage for a pair of free-throws by Ketner to even the score at 55-55.

Clarke added another three to give UMass the lead, 58-55, which they held on to until James tied the game up again at 61-61 with a rainbow three minutes later. James was the Dukes' high scorer with 20 points.

Following a Courtney Wallace free throw, which gave the Dukes its final lead at 62-61, Clark, who finished with 16 points, hit his final and biggest three-pointer of the game with 3:10 to play. The shot gave Massachusetts a 64-62 edge.

"He [Clarke] hit some huge shots for us," Flint said. "Everybody who played in the second half made plays for us."

UMass hit six of eight free throws down the stretch to preserve the win.

"It just showed you that we're a good team," Flint said. "We didn't play well and we still won."

Material from WHMP-FM was used in this article.

■ womens' hoop

continued from page 12

gled to control the ball. And even though they held the advantage in rebounding in the first half, 17-12, they just couldn't convert for any easy layups at the other end.

Jansen was held to eight points in the first half, six of those from the free throw line. The rest of the team mustered 12 points from four other players to reach their 20 point half-time total.

In the second half, UMass got off to a slow start and it seemed they would be in cruise control over Rhode Island. But Rhody proved its resilience by not allowing the game to get out of reach. The Rams emotional leader, Cocchiola, never really gained any rhythm and finished the night with a quiet seven points to go along with her dismal 12 turnovers.

The rest of the team didn't give up though, as sophomore Megan Gibson kept the team intact with 13 points and five rebounds. She was the only outside threat for URI, as she produced an amazing 40 percent of the offense from the foul line.

Freshman guard Rhonda Pacheco was aggressive at the point and finished up with 10 points including two three- pointers. Rhode Island seemed to be making a comeback as UMass floundered mid way through the second half.

Five players had at least three fouls and the Rams couldn't miss at the line as they shot an impressive .765 from the stripe. But it just wasn't enough in the end.

"I thought we played good defense, we limited what they wanted to do," O'Brien said. "They threw up an awful lot of shots."

The Minutewomen's fast break offense was working as they converted for 17 points compared to Rhode Island's four points. They also looked to take the early shot rather than the guards forcing a shot in the last five seconds of the shot clock.

The tandem of Coyner and Sabriya Mitchell along with Rayside refused to relinquish to the Rams. Rayside was a consistent option inside all night as she scored 12 points, ripped down seven rebounds and also had one block. Coyner, who eventually fouled out, made a key pull-up bucket and the subsequent foul shot with just over a minute left to shelf the game and key the Minutewomen to their third straight win.

"Any good team is going to make a run at you," O'Brien said. "But when push came to shove and we needed a bucket, we were able to get one."

■ Rams

continued from page 12

coach Jeanie O'Brien. "But we have an awful lot of good players and when they play together we're pretty good.

"When you have that, teams don't know how to focus on you. We know when we play certain teams they've got one player scoring 20, and the next one scoring six. You know who you're going to focus on and dictate the defense around that. Where with us, people may think they know, and may try to stop certain players, but somebody else always steps up."

The Minutewomen pulled together last night to outscore URI 49-28 in the paint, 12-4 on second chance points, 11-6 on points off turnovers, and 17-4 on fast break points.

UMass forced the Rams to 30 turnovers, compared to the Minutewomen's 20. As a team they totaled 13 assists to Rhode Island's seven, with Mitchell handing out eight. The only statistic where UMass was lacking was in the rebound category, where the Minutewomen were beaten 38-26.

UMass' collective efforts have kept it steadily afloat in the A-10. With their current conference record of 7-5 (13-9 overall) the Minutewomen hold the second spot in the A-10 East standings, behind powerful St. Joseph's.

The Minutewomen will host Fordham on Thursday.

Positive drug test taints first Olympic snowboarding gold

TORONTO (AP) — Ross Rabagliati of Canada, the first Olympic snowboard gold medalist, tested positive for marijuana after his winning run, it was reported.

Canadian Press quoted Dick Pound, an IOC vice president from Canada, as saying Rabagliati had flunked a drug test at the Winter Games in Nagano.

The Canadian Olympic Association said it would appeal to an independent court of arbitration. That body would have to make a ruling within 24 hours of the appeal.

A positive drug test, if it stands, would result in the Canadian being stripped of the gold medal.

The International Olympic Committee called a news conference in Nagano for today. The subject was not announced but it was expected to involve drug cases from the opening days of the games.

Snowboarding was added to the Olympics this year, in part to attract a younger audience. Rabagliati said at his post-victory news conference Monday that he realized his sport was really part of the games when drug testers started showing up at meets.

■ PGA

continued from page 12

wheelchair hits a ball into a sand trap, that player would be allowed to drop a ball rather then venture into the trap.

Reading from the preamble to the rules, Wiswall noted that there is no mention that they should not apply to any golf competition, but Bell disagreed.

"I would have to say they apply to recreational golf," she said, explaining that at the pro level there is a premise that everybody is playing under the same rules.

Under cross-examination, Finchem acknowledged that there was no mention of walking in the USGA Rules of Golf definition of the game.

Finchem also conceded that professional golfers are allowed to ride carts in so-called "Monday qualifier" rounds, whereby they qualify to play in a specific open tournament.

Granted temporary permission to ride a cart pending the outcome of this trial, Martin gained widespread public support when he won the first tournament of the second-tier Nike Tour last month. Though he failed to make the cut for the second tournament, he ranked highest in all-around Nike Tour performance statistics.

WRITE FOR SPORTS!!!!!

■ gymnastics

continued from page 12

Over on the uneven bars, freshman Iobi Goldberg continued her success on the event, scoring a 9.85. Sanyal's 9.85 on the balance beam netted her a first place finish and junior Colucci tied a career-high on the vault with a 9.75.

The deciding factor was the bars where UMass outdistanced both opponents by at least two points.

"I think tonight we were really a team. After coming out a little slow against Rhode Island, I think confidence-wise, this win tonight is great," said Sanyal.

The two victories now places the Minutewomen at a perfect 6-0 on the season going into Friday's home meet against New Hampshire, who ranks third in the northeast, one spot ahead of UMass. Last year, the Minutewomen defeated the Wildcats by just under a point. Start time is set for 7 p.m.

■ Olympics

continued from page 12

Hat Arena on Friday when favorites Canada, the United States and Russia take the ice. This unprecedented 17-day midseason break for the NHL enables competitors like Wayne Gretzky and Pavel Bure to compete for an honor which has eluded them.

"We're not sending a Dream Team, we're sending a Dream Tournament," Brian Burke, the Senior Vice President and Director of Hockey Operations, said to USA Today.

This is a message to NHL fans. Don't look at this as an interruption in the season, but as a chance to watch the greatest players on earth compete for their respective countries in the Olympics.

Of the 124 NHL Players in the Nagano Olympics, seven have been awarded the Conn Smythe Trophy for playoff MVP, and nine have won the Calder Trophy for Rookie of the Year.

Be prepared to watch an All-Star game everyday for the next seven days.

Paul Teves is a UMass student.

Collegian Sports!!!!

Need a Car Loan?
We can help you establish your credit. We finance people with credit problems: no credit, bad credit, bankruptcy, divorced. No co-signers required!
Call Eric at 584-3030
or stop by Saturn of Hadley and ask for Eric Emet.
BALISE CREDIT EXPRESS

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM BOSTON
One Way / Round-trip
LONDON $145 $264
PARIS $219 $403
MADRID $228 $419
ROME $259 $477
Subsidized flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave. NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NY

Great Service! Great Products!
Nutrition Express
"For Your Fastest Gains"
Supplements, Personal Training, Nutrition Programs
Designer Whey Protein $26
Creatine 400g $29
Met Rx 20 ct. $38
Diet Fuel $21
Androstenedionel
Fat Burners, Feed Bars, & More
Ask for Garrett
253-1850

NEW AEROBICS
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
* Classes Daily
* Certified Instructors
* Suspended Wood Floor
* Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst 256-0080

amc
Movies in Different
Showcase Cinemas Dolby Digital SDDS
Mt. Farms 4 •584-9153
Mt. Farms Mall
Weg The Dog (R) Today at (5:50 @ $2.50) 8:40
Desperate Measures (R) Today at (5:50 @ $2.50) 8:40
As Good As It Gets (PG-13) Today at (5:30 @ $2.50) 8:20
Blues Brothers 2000 (PG-13) Today at (5:40 @ $2.50) 8:30
Hampshire 8 •584-7550
Hampshire Mall
Great Expectations (R) Today at (5:30 @ $2.50) 8:30
Replacement Killers (R) Today at (5:50 @ $2.50) 8:40
Spice World (PG) Today at (5:50 @ $2.50) 8:40
Titanic (PG-13) Today at (4:20 @ $2.50) 8:10
Good Will Hunting (R) Today at (5:20 @ $2.50) 8:20
Deep Rising (R) Today at (5:40 @ $2.50) 8:30
Special Engagement no Passes or Coupons $2.50 (The Lion King) Show Daily

University Health Services
Mental Health Groups Spring '98
MONDAY
THE DREAM, THE BODY AND THE HIDDEN PSYCHE
Explore how our dreams reflect the dynamics of our bodies and emotions. Topics include: dreamwork; family dynamics; psychosomatic process; health and the unconscious mind.
Mon., 9 -10 am., 3/2 - 4/13
INTERPERSONAL GROUP
For college men and women who experience difficulties in interpersonal connections or who have concerns about their relationships.
Mon., 3:45 - 5:00 pm., 3/2 - 5/11
SUPPORTING GAY, LESBIAN AND BISEXUAL IDENTITIES
Exploring such issues as: coming out; building community; dating relationships; family of origin; and stress management.
Mon., 3:45 - 5:00 pm., 2/23 - 4/13
WEDNESDAY
ADULT CHILDREN OF DYSFUNCTIONAL FAMILIES
This 8 week group is for individuals wanting to explore the impact of family relationships on their lives as UMASS students.
Wed., 3:30 - 5:00 pm.
MEN OF COLOR
Focus will be on the academic, interpersonal, social and dating dynamics of men of color. Identifying body image, self esteem, sexuality and the reactions of society will also be explored.
Wed., 3:45 - 5:00 pm., 2/25 - 4/1
MORE Groups Beginning IN LATE SPRING
545-2337
THURSDAY
COUPLES SKILLS GROUP
Improve your communication and conflict resolution skills, to help deepen your relationship.
Thur., 8:30 - 10:00 am.
WOMEN'S SELF EXPLORATION GROUP-
(For older undergraduates, graduate students, student dependents and Kaiser members)
This group provides an opportunity for women to explore personal relationships, work, studies, family of origin, health, acculturation and other relevant concerns. This group is ongoing with members added as space permits.
Thur., 9 - 10:30 am.
COED SELF-EXPLORATION GROUP
(For older undergraduates, graduate students, student dependents and Kaiser members)
This group provides an opportunity for men and women to explore their interpersonal relationships. This group is ongoing with members added as space permits.
Thur., 3:30 - 5:00 pm.
FRIDAY
UNDERGRADUATE WOMEN'S SELF EXPLORATION GROUP
Primarily focused on women with self esteem issues who want to explore how these issues may interfere with their ability to form satisfying interpersonal relationships.
Fri., 9 - 10:30 am., 2/13- 5/11
Groups are conducted by Mental Health Division staff. Group sessions are covered under UHS Basic Health Plan and Kaiser pre-paid plan. Groups require an initial screening appointment which can be arrang ed by calling 545-23 37 or by stopping at 127 Hills North
For further information please call 545-2337, Mon - Fri 8 am - 5 pm.
or refer to the Mental Health website at http: www.umass.edu/uhs/mentalhealth

COME SEE WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT...
SHAB
Gain Experience in Administrative Aspects of Health Care
Come join the Student Health Advisory Board
Informational meeting:
Wed. Feb. 11 & 25, 5:30 -6:30pm
University Health Services Rm. 304
For more info call Tamara at the Health Education Office 577-5181

LAST MINUTE SPECIAL
SPRING BREAK '98
BAHAMAS!
From only $349! Per person*
Cocktails Desserts
INCLUDES 21 HOURS OF FREE DRINKS!*
ALL SPRING BREAK TRIPS INCLUDE:
CLASS travel
Call for more information today!
1-800-838-5411
FIND 15 FRIENDS AND YOU'LL TRAVEL FREE!
Applies to new bookings only. Expires 3/13/98. Restrictions apply.

FORGET THE REST & PARTY WITH THE BEST!
COLLEGE TOURS
SPRING BREAK '98 in CANCUN
INCLUDES
7 Breakfasts/7 Lunches
7 NIGHT HOTEL R/T TRANSFERS
from $419
For information on a FREE Trip or Reservations call Amanda at 800-244-4463
or visit our website at www.collegetours.com!

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Single room apartment at Cliffside. Available Feb onward. All utilities included. $540/month. Please Call Robin at 665-1281.

AUTO FOR SALE

VW Fox 89 165000 miles. Good condition. New starter, tires, muffler, brakes. Oil changed every 3000 miles. Great car for $1075. 546-3060

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795

FOR RENT

New P186MMX from $895. Laptops, $1295! Peripherals. ZenVision 582-9198 V/MC/AMEX

Check out Thursday's Paper for Special Classified Valentines.

EMPLOYMENT

Undergraduate Business Consultant Gain Accounting Experience, Leadership Skills, and General Business Experience. 10-15 hrs per week, flexible schedule. Must be self motivated, able to work as part of a team. Sophomores and Juniors encouraged to apply. Pick up an application at the Center for Student Business, 406 Student Union. Questions, call 545-2188. Deadline for apps- Mon, Feb 18.

Personal Care Attendant for male quad. Weekday mornings and Saturday evenings. $7.85 per hour. Call 546-0686

College Marketing Opportunity Student Advantage seeks aggressive, reliable Campus Managers to develop and maintain local program for nations largest savings program. Sales experience preferred. Comp: $1,000-$2,000 Flexible hours. Fax resume HR Dept Student Advantage (817)268-6882 or call Anthony at (617)912-2040

Summer Opportunities Musiker Tours and Summar Discovary are looking for counselors for our student travel programs and/or our pre-college enrichment programs.

EMPLOYMENT

Applicants must be 21 years old by June 15, 1998. We need mature, hardworking, energetic individuals who can dedicate 4-7 weeks this summar working with teenagers. A director will be on campus at UMASS on Febraury 24. Plesse call for mora information/application or to set up an interview at 888-8SUMMER.

RA Position Available for the Jewish Living Community/Hillel House for Fall 1998. Applications available in the Hillel House Office, 388 North Pleasant Street. Deadline March 6, 1998. For information call 549-1710.

NATIONAL PARK EMPLOYMENT- Parks, Forests, Wildlife Preserves Ask us how! 517-324-3109 Ext. N50012

Whitewater Raft Guides Needed in Western MA. Full or Part-time available. No experience necessary. We will train. Looking for athletic, personable people who like to work hard in the outdoors. Call Crab Apple Whitewater (413)339-0188 for mora information and an application.

Full-Time Summer

EMPLOYMENT

Position Available at Crab Apple Whitewater for a Photo Technician at our Miniab. Job entails developing film and printing pictures. No experience necessary but some past use of lab helpful. Call (413)339-0188 for info and an application.

EXCEPTIONAL SUMMER OPPORTUNITY- Camp Wayne, NE PA (3hrs/NYC)- Sports oriented. Counselor/Specialists for all Land/Water Sports Including Tennis, Camping, Climbing/Ropes, Mountain Biking, Rocketry, Roller Hockey, Sailing/Waterskiing, A&C, Drama, Radio, Video. Campus Interviews Tues, March 3rd. Please call 1-888-737-9296 or 516-883-3067. Leave your name, phone number and mailing address.

CRUISE SHIP & LAND-TOUR JOBS Discover how to work in exotic locations, meet fun people, while earning a living in these exciting industries! For more information: 517-324-3092 Ext C50012

DJ For Hire: Professional

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ spinning all types of music now booking for Spring Semester. Check me out at Pruddy's on Thursday. Tim (DJ Fooz) 253-6593

Gorilla-Grams

ENTERTAINMENT

Balloons, roses, poems, etc. Send the Crazy Gorilla on Valentine's Day. Sign up in the Newman Center on 2/10 and 2/12. Student Rates Available. Info call (413)781-9696.

SUMMER RENTALS

FOR SALE

CAPE COD GROUP Summer Rentals- Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Diamond Real Estate (508)477-1900

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742

Pick-Up Cap Black, used on Toyota 4x4. $350. River 548-6363

Corwood For Sale $125 Cord Call 549-5456

New Metabolism

HEALTH &BEAUTY

Breakthrough Lose 5-100 pounds. Dr Approved! Cost $35. 800-563-0386

Acupuncture and Herbal Medicine Nstional Board Certified Licensed. 549-8542

DANCE AWAY THE WIN-

INSTRUCTION

TER BLUES! BALLET FOR BEGINNERS and Intarmadiates taught by Heather Clark-Warner, Pionear Valley Ballet School, Wednesday evenings. Call 586-4142

University Bartending

MISCELLANEOUS

Course 50% Student Discount. National Cartification Availabla. Spring Sessions This Semester. Space Is Limited. 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

Lost- Black Sweatar Herter Hall on Jan 28th. Please call 665-8394

EARN $750-$1500/WEEK Raise all the money your student group needs by sponsoring a VISA Fundraiser on your campus. No investment & very little time needed. There's no obligation, so why not call for information today. Call 1-800-323-8454 x 95.

FREE T-SHIRT + $1000 Credit Card fundraisers for fraternities, sororities & groups. Any campus organization can raise up to $1000 by earning a whopping $5.00/VISA application. Call 1-800-932-0528 ext 65. Qualified callers receive FREE T-SHIRT.

For Sale- Didjeridu Hand made, hand painted, by student. $20 with lesson. 253-7342

No haircutting involved.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

just solid acapella singing. Call Daniel 665-7581

Help! Need a rida to

PERSONALS

Spring Break. Any suitcase size will do. To hook up, meet me at www.ebswim.com

"Love will keep us alive!"- The Eagles Free love and valentines at www.studentadvantage.com/qpid

Rooms For Rent Very close to campus. Females only. $1200 semester. Call 549-7148 or (506)655-5922.

Pregnant? Need help?

SERVICES

Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

200 Watt 3-Way

STEREO &CD EQUIP

Speakers For Sale. Never used. $450 or B/O. Steve 546-3042

Car Stereo Equipment Kenwood Detach Face- 1 year old, paid $350. 1 amp 100x2, paid $150. 1 amp 100x4, paid $100. 1 pair Pioneer 6x9 speakers, 100w, paid $110 Whole system sounds great, needs nothing. Selling as package deal for $300. Call 546-3842

Sarah McLachlan/Billy

TICKETS

Joel/NCAA Men's Basketball/Eric Clapton. 2 Guys Tickets. 1-888-345-TIXX

Alternative Spring Break

TRAVEL

YogaFest Week, Music, Dance, Meditation, Vegetarian, Missouri Ozarks, Ride Shares, $165. FREE MAGAZINE. 800-896-2387 http://members.aol.com/yogafest

KILLINGTON- SPRING BREAK Want a great time for a low price? Go to Killington for Spring Break! Starting @ $249, including 5 day lift ticket, 5 nights @ Mountain Green. UMASS SKI N BOARD CLUB 545-3437

JAMAICA- SPRING BREAK IN NEGRIL Don't get ripped off! Go with who you can trust. No hidden costs, starting @ $539. 7 nights, round trip air, transfers. Collegiate Beach & Party Events. On-site staff. UMASS SKI N BOARD CLUB 545-3437

Spring Break- Cancun and Nassau from $399. Air, hotel, transfers, parties, and more! Organize a small group- Earn free trips plus commission! Call 1-800-SPRING BREAK, 1-800-777-4642

#1 Spring Break from $119! FREE SPRING BREAK AND PARTIES-ORGANIZE A GROUP! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Barbados, Florida. Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK 98

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before placement and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used in the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be written on the insertion order. Use of fake identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or typo.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
- - - ROOM FOR RENT - - -
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 11

Auditions— Auditions for the UMass improvisational comedy troupe Mission: IMPROVable will be held at 7 p.m. in Campus Center 163. No experience necessary. For more information contact Aaron at 546–5225.

Blood Drive— The American Red Cross will be holding a blood drive from 10:30–4:30 p.m. in Campus Center 101. Call 1–800–462–2229 for an appointment, walk–ins welcome.

Meeting— The Prevet/Animal Science Club will be holding its first in a series of meetings in Paige Lab 202 at 7 p.m. Any questions, please contact Brian at 256–6022. Refreshments will be served.

Meeting— Circle K International, a campus and community service group will meet at 6:30 p.m. in Stockbridge 114. For more information, call 548–3939.

THURSDAY, FEB. 12

Auditions— Auditions for the UMass improvisational comedy troupe Mission: IMPROVable will be held at 7 p.m. in Campus Center 163. No experience necessary. For more information contact Aaron at 546–5225.

Auditions— Auditions for a co–ed a capella group will take place between 6–7 p.m. at Brett dorm basement in lower Central Residential Area. Bring music to show off your voice– without accompaniment.

Class— Weekly yoga and meditation class will be held in Butterfield Lounge at 8 p.m. A visiting yoga monk will be teaching. For more information call 253–9553.

Meeting— The co–ed service fraternity Alpha Phi Omega will be holding an informational meeting at 7 p.m. in the Kennedy dormitory in Southwest Residential Area. More information is available in the concourse.

Meeting— The UMass Queen Fan Club will meet in the Cape Cod Lounge at 4 p.m. New members are welcome. For more information, contact Sabrina at 546–4938.

Meeting— The Prevet/Animal Science Club will be holding its second in a series of meetings in Paige Lab 202 at 7 p.m. Any questions, please contact Brian at 256–6022. Refreshments will be served.

Meeting— The Student Film Society will be meeting at 6:30 p.m. in Campus Center 174–176. For more information please contact the film studies department at 545–3659.

Talk— Robyn Ochs will be speaking as part of the GLBT Studies Lecture Series in Campus Center 803. The topic is to be announced. For more information contact the Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

FRIDAY, FEB. 13

Concert— The Outing Club will be presenting a free concert featuring Entrain with special guest Particle Zoo. It will take place at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium.

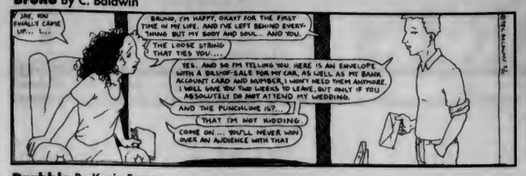
Service— Shabbat Service will be held at 6 p.m. at Hillel House.

FYI's are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

NOTICES

Writing — Spectrum Magazine is taking submission for the next edition of the magazine. The deadline is Feb. 12. For more information, call the office at 545–2240 or come by in the Student Union, room 406E.

Surfing the Web?!?
Stop By Anytime!!!
www.umass.edu/rso/colegian



HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	17	HSCN Programming
3	CBS/3 Hartford	19	TV–19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	22	NBC/22 Springfield
6	PBS/57 Springfield	23	CNN
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	24	CNN SI
8	UPN/20 Hartford	25	Headline News
9	Weather Channel	26	UCTV
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
		33	Much Music

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 11, 1998

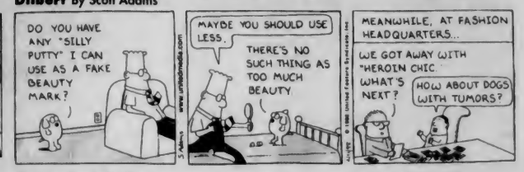
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	(12) Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Living Edens		Art of Magic (In Stereo)				News	Foto-Novelas
WFSB	3	(3) News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV	Olympic Winter Games						News	Late Show
WBZ	4	(4) News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Olympic Winter Games						News	Late Show
WCVB	5	(5) News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Spin City	Dharma-Greg	Drew Carey	Ellen	Primetime Live		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Full House	BoyWorld	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Sister, Sister	Smart Guy	Wayans Bros.	Steve Harvey	News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	3rd Rock From the Sun (R)		"Playing to Win, A Moment of Truth Movie" (1998, Drama)				News	Tonight Show
WTXX	4	Cheers	Mad Abo. You	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Star Trek: Voyager "Hunters"		Sentinel Mirror Image		News		Grace Under	Vibe
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	3rd Rock From the Sun (R)		"Playing to Win, A Moment of Truth Movie" (1998, Drama)				News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Moms Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Party of Five (In Stereo)		News		Simpsons	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	3rd Rock From the Sun (R)		"Playing to Win, A Moment of Truth Movie" (1998, Drama)				News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Living Edens		Art of Magic (In Stereo)					Charlie Rose
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Spin City	Dharma-Greg	Drew Carey	Ellen	Primetime Live		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	Star Trek: Voyager "Hunters"		Sentinel Mirror Image		News	Cheers	M*A*S*H	Real TV
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Andy Griffith	Andy Griffith	NBA Basketball: Seattle SuperSonics at San Antonio Spurs (Live)				NBA		(4:15) "Flesh"(1968)
AAE	61	Northern Exposure		Law & Order		Biography: Sam Giancana		American Justice (R)		Foot Soldier "The Vikings"		Law & Order "Performance"
CNN	43	Worldview		Moneyline	Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	28	Canned Ham	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	(4:15) "Heaven Help Us"(1985, Comedy) Donald Sutherland,				South Park	Make-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	63	Wings (R)		Gimme Shelter (R)		Wild Discovery: "Kodiak" (R)		Discover Magazine (R)		Beyond T. Rex (R)		Justice Files "Fugitives" (R)
ESPN	51	Up Close	Sportscenter	College Basketball: Connecticut at West Virginia. (Live)				College Basketball: North Carolina at Virginia. (Live)				Sportscenter
LIFE	62	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Woman Named Jackie (Part 3 of 3)				Almost Perfect	Golden Girls
MTV	53	MTV Live (In Stereo)		My So-Called Life "Halloween"		Real World 3	Real World 3	Real World 3	Real World 3	Real World 3	Austin Stories	Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	55	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	I Love Lucy	M.T. Moore	Taxi	Newhart
SCIFI	45	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Seaquest 2032 "Equilibrium"		Sightings	Sphere	Forever Knight (In Stereo)		M.A.N.T.I.S. "Progenitor"		Seaquest 2032 "Equilibrium"
TLC	69	28 Renovation	Renovation	Home Again	Home Again	Ultrascience	Sea Tek (R)	Skypower: Fighter 2000		Extreme Machines (R)		Ultrascience	Sea Tek (R)
TNT	54	Lois & Clark-Superman		Babylon 5 (In Stereo)		(4:15) "Shakedown"(1988, Drama) Peter Weller, Sam Elliott,				Babylon 5 (In Stereo)		Rough Cut	"Shakedown"
USA	52	Baywatch "Air Buchannon"		Highlander: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger		(4:15) "Clever" (1997, Drama) Elizabeth McGovern. (In Stereo)				Silk Stalkings "Mrs. Carlisle"
HBO	59	(4:30)		"Police Academy 4: Citizens on Patrol" (1987)		(4:15) "Thinner" (1996) Robert John Burke.		(4:15) "Broken Arrow" (1996, Adventure) John Travolta.		(4:15) "Love Nuns Girls" (1995) Dana Delany.		"Prisoner"	Real Sex 19
MAX	60	(4:15) "King David" (1985, Drama) Richard Gere.				(4:15) "Fear Inc" (1993, Drama) Jeff Bridges. (In Stereo)				(4:15) "Love Nuns Girls" (1995) Dana Delany.		"Prisoner"
SHOW	58	(4:15) "Who's Harry Crumb?" (1989) John Candy.				(4:15) "Get Shorty" (1995, Comedy) John Travolta.				Dead Man's		Fast Track "Good Old Days"

Bruno By C. Baldwin



Robotman By Jim Meddick

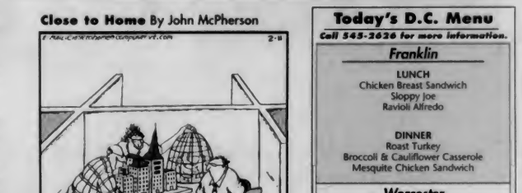
Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Non Sequitor By Wiley



Spunk By Mike LaRiccia

Grix of the Bus stop By Brendan & Kevin Doherty

Absolute Zero By Brad Turner

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan 20–Feb. 18) — You may have to turn to someone who knows a little more than you do about the kinds of situations you're getting yourself into today.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You may not be able to keep up with someone who is so far ahead of the game that he or she is redefining success. Stick to your own schedule.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Issues that arise today must not be ignored or put off until tomorrow. It is important that you address things as they come up.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — A close friend may have you going down memory lane today, but in the end you must remember that what happens right now is most important.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You can't let yourself be dictated entirely by what has happened in the past. Listen to that voice that tells you to do things in a new way.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — What began as a casual endeavor may be turning into something far more formal and complicated. Take care you don't let frustration win out.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — Today, you should be able to capitalize on an error someone else made in the past day or two. Take care you're not overly aggressive, however.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You may have difficulty closing a deal today, as those on the periphery are working against you unwittingly. Try to inspire unity.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) —You may find yourself falling into old patterns of behavior before you know it today. Take care you don't put any real gains at risk.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You may feel sluggish and unenthusiastic as the day begins, but later you'll receive a piece of news that will inspire and motivate you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You will want to take some time today to focus on your own thoughts without having to cope with distractions of any kind.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — What you do on your own today can be quite important to your future success. Take care you don't leave someone special out of the loop.

Quote of the Day

"I don't believe in quantum physics when it comes to matters of the heart."

– Kevin Costner Bull Durham

Close to Home By John McPherson

"As part of our commitment to employee morale, anyone who isn't near a window is being given this scale model of the downtown skyline and three pigeons."

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Chicken Breast Sandwich
Sloppy Joe
Ravioli Alfredo

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Broccoli & Cauliflower Casserole
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich

Worcester

LUNCH
Grilled Steak Sandwich
Homemade Chicken Pot Pie
Rotini/Tomato Meat Sauce
Rotini/Tomato Lentil Sauce

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Cauliflower Eggplant Casserole
Pastabilities
Cheese Lasagna

Hampshire

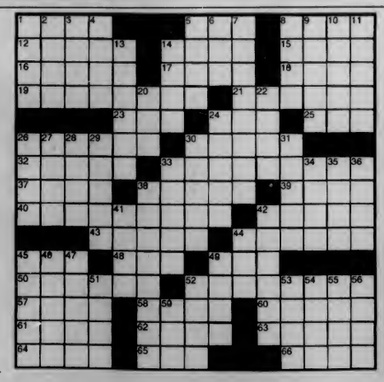
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Barbecued Pork on a Bun
Grilled Cheese Sandwich

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Fried Shrimp Dinner

Berkshire

LUNCH
Grilled Steak Sandwich
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich
Rotini/Tomato Lentil Sauce

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Handcut Cod sub
Penne w/Tomatoes and Spinach
Pastabilities



ACROSS
1 Not up yet
5 Stir-fry need
8 Expense
12 Niven or Letterman
14 Stable occupant
15 Long walk
16 Rock's Cooper
17 Spacious
18 Director Kazan
19 Highway marker
21 Arbors
23 Monk's home
24 Pop's mate
25 Map abbr
28 Shocked
30 Reddish-brown horses
32 Feudal lord
33 Block off
37 Ending for "Cinder"
38 Seeped
39 Approve
40 Portable seat
42 Join forces
43 Food consumer
44 Unwrapped
45 Mineral spring
48 Jupiter or Thor
49 Prickly sensation
50 Bicycle built for two
52 Hair lightener
57 Old Norse inscription
58 Actor Ladd
60 Love, in Paris
61 India's place
62 Social misfit
63 Chiller
64 Apple's skin
65 Perched
66 Lip

DOWN
1 Actor Arkin
2 Java's neighbor
3 Malicious
4 Vegas cubes
5 Bide one's time
6 Boston Bruin great
7 Data-entry need
8 Masticate
9 Edmonton hockey player
10 Fashion item
11 Make fun of 13 Overthrow
14 Facial treatment
20 Morsel
22 Hawks' arena
24 Gourmet mushroom
26 Writer Waugh
27 — monster
28 Ship's steering mechanism
29 Dumbfounded
30 Barber's tool
31 Breakfast treat
33 Showed displeasure
34 Similar
35 Sticky fruit
36 Looked at 38 Hassocks
41 Philosopher
42 Pandemonium
44 "— Town"
45 Purse handle
46 VCR button
47 Actress Potts
49 Lean
51 Agreement
52 Section
53 Dec. holiday
54 Des Moines is its capital
55 Membership fees
56 Miscalculates
59 Meadow

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

BHATA COUP HOM
ASWAN IOTA BARE
SLABS CHAR UPON
HERA DASHING
TESTED SOLACE
CABABA TETRA
MAORI ALE STAR
PIG OREGANO INN
ENOS ERG SMACK
SCRAP SYRIAN
TEAMED AGREED
BREAKIN MAIL
VERA ARES DOGMA
AMES LINE INLET
NUB TATS GEESE

2-11-98 © 1998, United Feature Syndicate

Editor's Staff

Night Editor — Casey Kane
Photo Technician — Alexander Koromilas
Copy Editor — Lorraine Kennedy
Production Supervisor — Jennie Huang
Production Staff — Keren Charles, Angie Annese

SPORTS

Massachusetts mens' hoop team barely beats Dusquesne

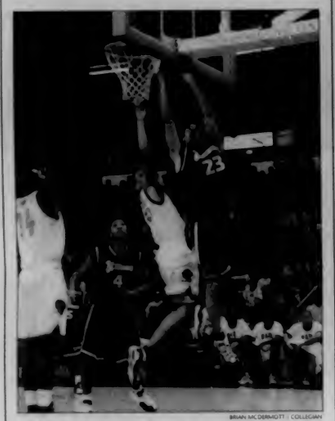
By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

PITTSBURGH — The Massachusetts basketball team and its new No. 20 ranking got a real scare from an underdog Duquesne University ball club last night.

But Massachusetts coach Bruiser Flint and his troops employed a deadly inside/outside attack with center Lari Ketner and guards Charlton Clarke and Monty Mack and rallied from a second-half deficit that reached as high as seven points to defeat the Dukes, 74-68, before 5,507 at the A.J. Palumbo Center in Pittsburgh.

Massachusetts	74
Duquesne	68

Ketner, playing without foul trouble, was able to roam freely in the paint among the smaller Dukes. He finished with a game-high 23 points, eight rebounds and three blocks in 35 minutes of action.



The highly-touted Duquesne press, which had forced 20 turnovers per game, hardly affected UMass who committed only six turnovers all game while forcing 10.

However, the Dukes (10-14, 4-7 Atlantic 10) seemed to be well on their way to an upset victory in the second half when Mike James opened the frame with a slashing lay-in and foul, and suddenly UMass — which had led by as many as seven in the first half — trailed by three. Duquesne and UMass were knotted at 34-34 at the intermission.

To further the Minutemen's problems, senior Tyrone Weeks picked up his fourth foul with 19:03 to play and Flint — trying to keep his team in the game — called on Mack to re-enter the game. Mack sat out the first minute of the half with three personal fouls.

Mack (15 points) responded with two medium-range jump shots to pull UMass (18-6, 10-1) to within a bucket at 43- 41. But Duquesne struck back with a quick 6-1 run that lengthened the lead to seven at

Turn to MENS' HOOP, page 9

BRIAN MCDERMOTT | COLLEGIAN

Mike Babul and the Massachusetts men's basketball team stifled Duquesne University last night in Atlantic 10 action.

Experience key for women's hoop

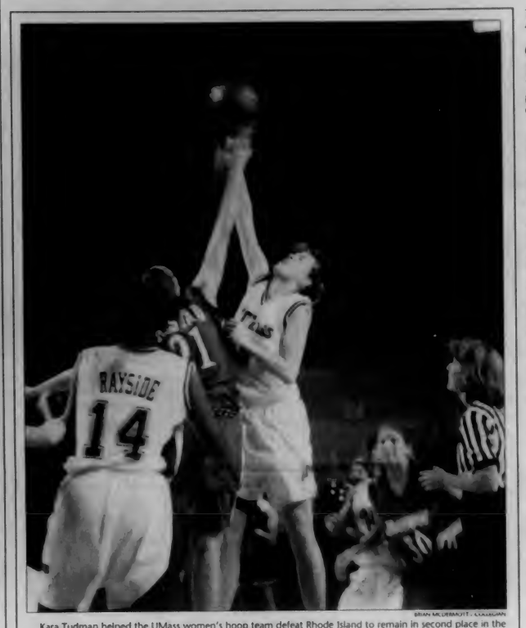
By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's basketball team improved its record to 16-9 overall and 7-5 in the Atlantic 10 with a 65- 55 win over a struggling Rhode Island team (12-10, 6-6 A- 10) last night at the William D. Mullins Center.

Massachusetts	65
Rhode Island	55

With the victory, UMass improved their lead to two over St. Bonaventure, while maintaining second place in the A-10 East.

UMass held the advantage over the young Ram team, which is comprised of six sophomores and four freshmen. Rookie center Amber Jensen leads the team with 13.0 points per game, 6.3 rebounds per game, and a .750 free throw percentage. She is followed by an explosive captain In Dena Cucchiola with 7.1 ppg, and 4.2 rpg. The rest of the starting squad is solid and packs a lot of size, but lacks experience and leadership, as it showed tonight.



The first half was an uneven affair with both teams going on 7-0 runs. UMass jumped out of the blocks first with junior Yolanda Rayside scoring inside and junior Tez Kraft connecting for three. Kraft would have seven going into halftime. Offensive spark, Alison MacFarland, came off the bench to contribute 10 first half points to lead all scorers.

"She made a big contribution tonight especially in the first half," Massachusetts coach Joanie O'Brien said. "She's been a lift offensively off the bench."

Freshman guard Kathy Coyner filled in the holes for the UMass offense as she scored four points, dealt out two assists, and also pickpocketed three Rhody players.

The jumbled Rams couldn't seem to set up their offense as they strug-

Turn to WOMEN'S HOOP, page 9

BRIAN MCDERMOTT | COLLEGIAN

Kara Tudman helped the UMass women's hoop team defeat Rhode Island to remain in second place in the A-10 East.

Minutewomen easily outscore Rams, 65-55

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

When life gives you lemons, make lemonade. That's exactly what the Massachusetts women's basketball team has done this season. The Minutewomen were looking at a dismal season back in December. They had just lost their leading scorer, sophomore Kelly Van Huisen, to a torn ACL.

Not only was Van Huisen tops in scoring, she was also their go to player, the one her teammates looked to when they needed a big shot. Van Huisen was very strong on the defensive end of the floor as well. All in all, her season- ending injury looked to be a giant blow to the Minutewomen.

But any team that has any hope of being competitive must learn to pull through in tough situations. UMass did not let the loss of Van Huisen affect its dreams of not only a successful season, but of making it to the Atlantic 10 tournament and bringing the title to Amherst. Instead the Minutewomen pulled through. Since the loss of Van Huisen, the Minutewomen have pulled together and put forth a strong team effort.

Every game has had its own star player, be it senior Sabriya Mitchell, juniors Tez Kraft and Yolanda Rayside, sophomore Alison Macfarland, or freshman Kathy Coyner. In each game a different player has stepped up, given their all and done whatever was needed to add another "W" to the record book.

Last night's game was a classic example of UMass' teamwork. All but one player scored in the contest against the University of Rhode Island. Rayside led the way with 12, Coyner had 11, MacFarland had 10, freshman Kara Trent had nine, senior Kara Tudman had eight, Kraft had seven, Mitchell had nine, and junior Lucia Madajova chipped in two.

"You'd love to have someone who's just so good they can do it every night, that's what great players are about," said

Turn to RAMS, page 9

Olympic break like 7-day All-Star game

For all National Hockey League fans that thought they would lose their minds without NHL action for the next two weeks, there is the drama of the Olympic Games in Nagano.

Some of the NHL superstars made the long trip to Nagano just to sit by and watch their team be eliminated in the preliminary round. Stars like Peter Bondra and Olaf Kolzig from the Washington Capitals, and Uwe Krupp (Colorado) and Zigmund Palffy (NY Islanders), all watched as Belarusian and German teammates didn't even qualify for the final round.

Belarus and Germany were two of six teams that didn't qualify for the final round of eight, which included the USA, Canada, Sweden and Kazakhstan in Group C. Finland, Russia, Czech Republic and Belarus make up Group D.

Belarus won Group B in impressive fashion. Andrei Mezin, the Belarusian goaltender, Paul Teves earned his team a 4-0 shutout victory over France. In their second game, Belarus clinched the group with an 8–2 victory over Germany, which was without any of their NHL superstars, including goalie Kolzig and Krupp.

Kazakhstan advanced to the final round with a victory over the Slovak Republic on Tuesday, 4–3. Kazakhstan scored with 1:21 left in regulation. One of the major reasons that Kazakhstan was able to stay close was because the Slovak coach only saved two spots for his NHL players in the preliminary round. That move backfired. They lost and were eliminated, which means superstars like Palffy, Jozef Stumpel and Miroslav Satan never had a chance to take the ice during these Olympic Games.

Kazakhstan looks like the Cinderella of the Nagano Games with its last second victory over the Slovaks, a 5–5 tie against the Austrians and a 5–3 come from behind win against Italy.

Their victory over Austria caused the first controversy of the Olympic men's hockey tournament. Austrian Ice Hockey Federation President Dieter Kalt filed a protest before the game with the International Ice Hockey Federation due to the choice of Russian Leonid Vaisfeld as the referee. Kalt claimed that most of the Kazakhstan players were familiar with Vaisfeld, and therefore had an unfair advantage.

It gets tougher now for Cinderella (Kazakhstan), as It has to meet the big six.

The NHL will officially take over Nagano and the Big

Turn to OLYMPICS, page 9

Anita Sanyal's impressive night gives women's gym win at home

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

Coach Dave Kuzara of the Massachusetts women's gymnastics team went out on a limb. He took a chance. At the beginning of the season, he told junior Anita Sanyal that he wanted to try to work her into the all-around mix.

Monday night against George Washington and Yale, Sanyal was put to the test. After fighting her way back from a stress fracture, the Beltsville, Md. resident took the gymnastics floor for the first time as an all-around competitor.

Not only did Sanyal get through the competition unscathed, but her 39.075 all-around mark helped UMass to an impressive win in the home opener at Boyden Gym in front of fiery crowd.

UMass disposed of Atlantic 10 rival GW 193.925–191.325. Yale finished third at 188.125. After squeezing out a victory against Rhode Island on the road on Friday, the Minutewomen came out firing.

"We didn't really compete up to our potential, but tonight, we looked more like the team that I think we're going to be at the end of the year, which I think will be very competitive nationally," Kuzara said.

Sanyal used consistency as the key to her victory, scoring no lower than a 9.700 (vault) in the four events. Her total placed her in a third place tie with on the all-time individual all-around list. Then-freshman Mandy Mosby registered that same mark last March against West Virginia.

"It's hard to put Anita's performance into words," Kuzara said. "But she's worked really to get to this point, and I'm really happy for her."

Overall, the Minutewomen set season-highs in all four events as a team and also individually. Freshman Jill Fisher capped the night with an exhilirating 9.95 on the floor. The routine had the crowd chanting for a 10, but to no avail. She was coming off a tremendous 9.925 performance versus the Rams. Nobody ever in UMass history has ever scored a 10 on any event in Amherst.

Mosby finished second on the floor with a 9.85. The quintet of gymnasts, which included Fisher, Mosby, Sanyal, Betsy Colucci, and freshman Kyla Palombini, accumulated a school record 49.000 on the floor.

Turn to GYMNASTICS, page xx

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Mandy Mosby works on a routine that helped the Minutewomen defeat George Washington and Yale in women's gym action.

PGA rests its case in Martin trial

By Jeff Barnard
Associated Press

EUGENE, Ore. — The PGA Tour rested its case Tuesday after its top executive testified that allowing Casey Martin to ride a cart in pro golf tournaments would give him an edge in a game where little things mean a lot.

PGA Tour commissioner Tim Finchem noted that, on average, the top 100 players on the tour all play within two strokes of each other for every 18 holes, yet Tiger Woods at the top won $2 million last year, and the 100th finisher won only $250,000.

"Often times, one stroke in the course of a year can make a difference," Finchem said. "If you provide access to one player or some subset of players, you are changing the level playing field."

Finchem and Judy Bell, immediate past president of the U.S. Golf Association, were the final witnesses called to refute Martin's argument that the Americans with Disabilities Act requires the tour accommodate his physical limitations and let him ride a cart. Martin suffers from a rare circulatory disorder in his right leg that makes it painful and dangerous for him to walk. His doctors warn that he could easily break the weakened leg, which might require amputation.

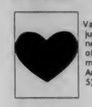
Lawyers will make their final arguments this morning in U.S. District Court. Magistrate Thomas Coffin said he will resume court Wednesday afternoon, apparently to render his verdict in this case that has ignited a national debate on the rights of the disabled to play pro sports.

Outside the courtroom, Finchem acknowledged the public has strongly supported Martin, and added that he was unhappy that Coffin had no background in golf.

PGA Tour lawyer William Maledon said he had received hate mail at his hotel and disturbing phone calls to his home.

"I could only hope, as emotionally attached as people have become to Casey, they would understand our position," Finchem told reporters. "Most people out there watching don't understand it."

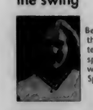
In testimony, Finchem said he could not imagine a way to allow Martin to ride a cart without taking away from the fairness of competition.



"If I knew of a way, I would have advanced it," he said. "I don't."

Under cross-examination from Martin attorney William Wiswall, Bell acknowledged that the USGA adopted additional rules last year to allow disabled golfers to compete against able-bodied players. For example, if a player in a

Turn to PGA, page 9



The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVIII Issue 12 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday, February 12, 1998

Love is in the air

Valentine's Day is just around the corner. Learn the rules of the game and more inside (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Back in the swing

Becky George and the UMass softball team will start their spring season this weekend (see Sports, page 16).

WORLD

American expelled from Mexico City

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government has expelled a North Carolina woman it accuses of participating in a march supporting Zapatista rebels — an apparent warning to foreigners to avoid meddling in Mexican politics.

The Interior Ministry said Maria Bullitt Darlington was put on a plane for the United States from Mexico City on Tuesday night. It said videotapes showed that Darlington had taken part in a pro-Zapatista march in April, violating the terms of her tourist visa.

Acquaintances said the woman had gone to an immigration office in San Cristobal de las Casas in the southern state of Chiapas at midday Tuesday in response to an official request. They said she was from the Raleigh, N.C., area but there was no answer at her telephone there yesterday.

Mexico has expelled several foreigners it accuses of political activities in Chiapas, where a peasant rebellion broke out in 1994.

The foreigners ranged from tourists to human rights activists.

The largely Indian revolt drew widespread sympathy abroad, and the government has often accused foreigners of trying to become involved.

NATION

El Nino storm hits Calif. coastal hills

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — California was struck with another El Nino storm yesterday, but it was timid compared to last week's deluges. Following a welcome day of sunshine, Tuesday's storm brought as much as an inch of rain to the state's coastal hills and Central Valley and snow to the Sierra.

The precipitation, however, produced nothing close to the catastrophic flooding that last week forced thousands of people from their homes, caused $275 million worth of damage and killed seven.

Trouble spots remained, though. Among them was Rio Nido, along the Russian River, where waterlogged canyon hillsides continued to crack and slip. After six homes slid last weekend, the area's heavily forested hills held up without incident Tuesday. Still, mandatory evacuations remained in effect for 26 homes and voluntary evacuations for more than 200.

At Clear Lake, 80 miles north of San Francisco, the water rose to 1 1/2 feet above flood level, much less than had been feared. Some 360 homes were threatened, but only about 25 suffered any damage, officials said. Evacuation orders remained in place.

Elsewhere, homes across the state were undermined by sliding hills and crumbling cliff sides. Rivers remained at high levels even as forecasters warned of at least two more storms marching across the Pacific.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 48 LOW: 29	HIGH: 40 LOW: 14	HIGH: 29 LOW: 9

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 14
Comics .....page 15
Crossword .....page 15
Editorial .....page 4
FYI .....page 14
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 16

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Gorney gives talk on abortion wars

KEN MC DONALD/ COLLEGIAN

Cynthia Gorney spoke last night about her recent book Articles of Faith.

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

Award-winning reporter Cynthia Gorney spoke about her work in covering the abortion wars last night in Memorial Hall.

Gorney began her lecture by explaining the assignment which led her to write a narrative history of the abortion wars in this country.

She was a feature reporter for the Washington Post, and her editor sent her to Missouri in 1989 to cover Webster v. Reproductive Health Services, a case which challenged the landmark Supreme Court decision to legalize abortion in Roe v. Wade.

Like any good reporter, Gorney said, she went to the library to get

Turn to SPEAKER page 2

SGA spends meeting debating internal affairs

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Student Government Association speaker's (SGA) request for at least one motion for the students be passed last night was not heeded as debate over senate spending and controversy filled the meeting time of three hours.

"I would like to at least pass one motion that affects the student body," Peter Kilbourne, speaker of the SGA, said.

The only motions passed were concerning internal SGA spending and conflict.

In response to a motion passed on Feb. 4 requiring Secretary of Administrative Affairs Khemchrist Lacoste to attend last night's meeting and provide an officer report, another motion to give him a vote of "no confidence" and a request for his resignation was passed when he failed to attend.

There was concern that Lacoste had not received fair notice that he would be asked to resign.

"You need to have the person you're talking about here," Student Trustee Brian Tirrell said. "He did give you a report. At least table this until a time when he can be here."

This concern was echoed in a reaction letter written by Lacoste and read by SGA President Lia Wong.

"Never in my years of understanding the governmental process have I heard of bringing up a motion against a member of the cabinet without him/her there to provide a counter argument," Wong read.

Certain language used in Lacoste's letter sparked controversy among the senate, and Kilbourne asked Wong to leave out words calling the actions of the senators as "spineless, cowardly actions committed by some of the participants to bring about their own personal agendas."

During commotion and outcries from the senate that Lacoste was not performing his job, Kilbourne accused Lacoste of not writing the letter himself.

"President Wong was typing it herself. I was right there and watched for 20 minutes," Kilbourne said.

After a short recess Kilbourne apologized for the outburst, but not for what he said.

"I do feel I said the right thing. I do apologize for saying it as the speaker of the senate," Kilbourne said.

Senator Jenn Casasanto (Southwest at-large) noted

Turn to SGA, page 2

SGA elections set for March 9 & 10

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

Elections for University of Massachusetts Student Government Association (SGA) president and trustee will take place March 9 and 10, but candidates this year will have to strictly comply with all election rules or face stiff penalties.

Chancellor of Elections Carlos Alvarez announced the election dates Tuesday, along with a warning to all nominated candidates that he will be strictly enforcing all SGA rules regarding campaigning.

The rules governing a nominee are written in the SGA Constitution, SGA Code of Conduct and the Student Code of Conduct.

According to the SGA Constitution, after being nominated a candidate must obtain 250 signatures from UMass undergraduates, sign a Candidate Code of Conduct and provide a list of people that will be working on their individual campaigns.

The signed Student Code of Conduct requires the candidate to not slander opponents or use funds not allocated by the SGA.

These three requirements are due Feb. 23. There will be a meeting with all nominees and the elections committee at 2 p.m. on Feb. 24. After this meeting the candidates may begin campaigning.

If any nominated candidate campaigns before Feb. 24, Alvarez promises strict punishment which may result in the nomination being annulled.

"If any of these rules are broken by any of you, I will bring your name in front of the elections committee and will seek annulment of your candidacy. No exceptions," Alvarez wrote in a recent memo to nominated candidates.

Campaigning is defined as giving any public speech regardless of its content. It also is defined as a candidate's name appearing in the media for any reason.

Giving a speech at the upcoming SGA dinner, even if the speech is not about the elections, is also considered campaigning. The nominees will have to write the speech and have someone who is not nominated read it.

If a nominee's name appears in the Massachusetts Daily Collegian or another media form for any reason, this is also considered campaigning.

Citizens rally to protest U.S.–Iraq situation

By Nicole Lewenson
Collegian Correspondent

AMHERST — A group of citizens formed a circle on the Amherst Common yesterday to protest the current situation between the United States and Iraq.

Sunny Miller, program coordinator for the Traprock Peace Center, located in Deerfield, organized the group of citizens to share their sentiments and feelings about probable U.S. action towards Iraq.

Among the protestors gathered downtown was Frances Crowe, a Pioneer Valley resident.

"Question authority," Crowe said. "Just because something is on TV doesn't mean it is true."

Crowe urged everyone "to listen to the voice of the Third World."

One sentiment expressed by citizens who gathered is the American people are not receiving the whole picture, according to Miller.

The way the media presents the situation is "all to easily thought of as a great big video game," Miller said. "I'd like to think I'm not to busy to save another person's life."

Several people at the rally felt that before the U.S. takes military action against Iraq, Americans should take responsibility before a tragedy occurs.

"We all need to try to take a step back from the mainstream culture and communication of this and get in touch with our own hearts," said Clare Carter, of the Peace Pagoda.

Bringing out the truth and taking responsibility were themes were echoed in the small group discussions following the march to the University of Massachusetts Campus Center Auditorium.

While in small groups, the citizens felt they had to let people know they have a personal responsibility to the well- being of Iraqis.

The goal of the rally and the forum was to demonstrate ways the average as a citizen can help the situation in Iraq. A teach-in will be held at Smith College on Monday, Feb. 16 at 7 p.m.

Turn to RALLY page 3

DANIELLE GIARDI/ COLLEGIAN

A large group gathered in Amherst yesterday to protest possible military action by the United States against Iraq.

Positive pot test raises questions

By Ted Anthony
Associated Press

NAGANO, Japan — OK, was anybody really surprised when a snowboarder was stripped of his gold medal because marijuana was found in his system?

The people who put together the 1998 Winter Olympics should have expected something — anything — in allowing snowboarding to become a medal sport. It would have been hard to miss the brash, countercultural attitude of this rock 'n' roll, Generation X sport. "If you were going to predict anything happening at the Olympics with a recreational drug, this is the sport you'd predict it in," said Art Taylor, director of youth sports at Northeastern University's Center for the Study of Sport in Society.

"Maybe," he said, "it moved into the Olympics too quickly." Few wanted snowboarding in the Olympics more than Ross Rebagliati, 26, a spirited Canadian with tousled blond hair, angled jaw and carefree grin — a surfer dude straight out of central casting. He won the first-ever Olympic snowboarding gold Sunday in the men's giant slalom.

Today, he finds himself at the center of the first major controversy since the games began. Not only was marijuana residue found in his urine, but he faces the added humiliation of being sanctioned for a drug that few would con-

Turn to POT, page 3

KEN MC DONALD/ COLLEGIAN

Everything's Zen?

This display is a work in progress at the Hampden gallery.

Iraqis brace for attack; Baghad citizens in fear

By G.G. LaBelle
Associated Press Writer

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Across the street from a row of brick and stucco homes, a huge block of a building under an Arab-style dome is being built — a new palace compound for President Saddam Hussein.

Another of Saddam's four Baghdad palaces also has families living just outside its 12-foot-high concrete walls. Like many public buildings, some targeted in past U.S. air raids, both are in densely populated parts of this city of five million.

Given this geography — and threats of a new American attack — Iraqis are worrying about what will happen to them if bombs and missiles strike again, especially since hospitals are ill-prepared for casualties.

"It's the talk all over the city," said Walid Rashid, a student at Mustansariya University.

A few Iraqis privately admit they fear death or injury in any attack. One said he and his wife whisper about it after the children are in bed. But those talking to reporters, who almost always are accompanied by government escorts, say they are not afraid of American bombs.

Some say this is because of the Islamic belief that everyone's day of death is fated. Others claim their fears have disappeared over the years following the 1980-88 Iran-Iraq War, the Persian Gulf War and two American strikes since.

Saddam is believed to have about 60 palaces nationwide. Always wary, the president is thought to sleep in a different place — often various palaces — each night. U.N. inspectors fear Iraq is concealing vital weapons components in these sprawling presidential compounds.

Iraq maintains that allowing arms inspectors into the palaces would violate its national sovereignty. The inspectors must certify all such lethal weapons have been destroyed before the lifting of U.N. sanctions, imposed after the 1990 invasion of Kuwait, which led to the Gulf War.

Besides the Baghdad palaces in well-off Qadissiya and middle-class Adhamiya neighborhoods, there is a third palace in a park near the monument to Iraq's unknown soldier. It often is used for ceremonies. The fourth capital palace, built in the 1950s and damaged in 1991 bombing, occupies a long stretch on the banks of the River Tigris.

It's uncertain whether the palaces will be targets. U.S. officials say the attacks would strike at bunkers storing chemical and biological weapons, which Iraq denies it possesses.

American analysts and congressmen also have talked about the need to hit at the country's infrastructure

Turn to FEAR, page 3

■ SGA

continued from page 1

that this motion is only a request and has no power to force Lacoste to resign.

Lacoste was unavailable for comment last night.

Senators also debated overriding a veto by Wong to take money from an emergency Registered Student Organization fund to pay for a new SGA computer.

The veto was not overturned. The new computer will not be paid for from the emergency fund.

Casasanto then proposed to amend the original motion and pay for the computer from the equipment operations account.

"It is a bad idea to take it out of the finance reserve account," Casasanto said. "I would like to amend the motion and take the money out of the $2,000 in the [equipment operations] account."

Others were concerned a new computer would only be used SGA meeting agendas, and therefore was unnecessary.

"I think the computer is unnecessary for the SGA. If we ever have to wait 15 minutes to have the agenda delivered ... it would waste a lot less time than we are now talking about it," Senator Adam Feldman (Commuter at-large) said.

Casasanto's motion was passed, and computer will be purchased using the equipment operations fund.

Yale follows Princeton; aid made more available

By Brigitte Greenberg
Associated Press

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Following Princeton's lead, Yale University is overhauling its financial aid policy to make it easier for middle-class families to send their children without dipping into retirement savings or further mortgaging the house. The changes are expected to pressure other highly selective schools, including the other Ivies, into taking similar action. Yale has decided to exempt up to $150,000 of a family's savings, home equity and other assets from consideration in determining what parents are expected to contribute toward their child's education. No such exemption now exists at Yale, where tuition, room and board will top $30,000 next year. For years, Ivy League schools have admitted students on a "need-blind" basis, meaning that finances are not a consideration in admission.

When a poor or middle-income student gets an offer of admission, the schools works out a financial aid package, typically a mix of grants, bank loans, contributions from parents and work-study options. Yale's portion of the mix averaged about $13,000 a year in 1997.

The change means that parents will not be penalized for having sunk all of their money into paying off their mortgage or saving for retirement.

"A lot of students feel bad that their parents are paying such incredible amounts for them to come here," said Mackenzie Baris, a 19-year-old freshman from Binghamton, N.Y., who uses federal grants, student loans and work-study pay to supplement her Yale aid.

"Any kind of help is good," she said.

Says her mother, Carrie Wingate: "It's wonderful. Now I'll be able to put some money away and still put her through school. For a lot of people like me in the middle-income brackets, retirement savings is where the only extra money is."

Princeton decided to stop counting home equity for most families with incomes below $90,000. The school's plan also would alter financial aid packages to increase grants and decrease loans for students with family incomes between $40,000 and $57,500.

Additionally, Princeton will replace loans with grants for students whose family incomes are below $40,000.

The message is "we will make ourselves as affordable as that state university you're thinking about," said Princeton spokesman Justin Harmon.

Princeton acted in response to an alarming dip in the number of students entering on financial aid — from 49 percent three years ago to 39 percent last year.

Yale has not experienced a significant drop in financial aid students, but said it wanted to avoid such a problem.

■ speaker

continued from page 1

background information on the subject. However, when she got there, Gorney found there was no history of the abortion wars; no one had attempted to record the events with perspectives from people on both sides of the issue.

That's where the idea for her book, "Articles of Faith: A Frontline History of the Abortion Wars" was born.

"I didn't know what I was getting into," Gorney said. "This project consumed six years of my life."

Gorney went on to explain how she gathered the material for her book, and how she went about constructing the narrative.

She flew to Missouri to cover the Webster case, and realized she could express the national story of the abortion conflicts through the battles of that state.

"The more I learned, the more two things became clear," Gorney said. "First, the state of Missouri was going to make a pretty good place to tell a national story."

The second lesson, she said, was that there was no neutral language to use in describing abortion.

"It is described in two entirely different languages," Gorney said. "It's either a fetus or an unborn child, depending on what side you're on."

For this reason, Gorney decided to tell the history using both sets of vocabulary.

"I knew I was going to have to divide it up and alternate chapter by chapter from different people's points of view," Gorney said.

She picked two ordinary people — a registered nurse who was a leader in the underground abortion network, and a Jesuit priest who lead the anti-abortion movement in Missouri — to tell the bulk of each side's story and to dramatize the conflict.

Gorney then read passages from her book. Introducing each of the two main characters to the audience, before summing up her experience.

Although she sees no forthcoming resolution to the abortion conflict, Gorney said, she is hopeful that her book will help lay out the issues clearly and aid both sides in engaging in positive dialogue.

"There is no clear resolution [to the book], just as I think there's no clear resolution to this issue," Gorney said. "... I do think, though, that a better understanding improves things, and a less vitriolic public dialogue may help."

Gorney then accepted questions from the audience. She would not reveal her own personal feelings on the issue, saying it was more important for her to forget her own opinions and "become" the characters she was writing about.

"I tried to empty out my own vessel and live in an other world," Gorney said. "It was a total immersion kind of deal."

Gorney, who is 44, was a reporter for the Washington Post from 1975–91. She is currently writing from her home in Oakland, Calif.

The lecture, which was attended by 100 students and faculty members, was part of the Art of Nonfiction lecture series sponsored by the University of Massachusetts journalism department.

Madeleine Blais, a professor in the journalism department and Pulitzer-prize winning author, said the department brought Gorney to campus in part to inspire students.

"She is a five-star reporter and historian," Blais said. "All the students get to decide they want to be her when they graduate from UMass."

http://www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Shop off Campus?
Why Bother?
BACK TO SCHOOL SALE
Prices slashed on dozens of Clothing items!
Check out the February Health & Beauty specials!
Over 20 models of CALCULATORS on SALE! Discounts up to 30% OFF!!!
ALL POSTERS 20% OFF!
Sale ends Saturday, February 14
UStore
We're not like a mall. We're better.
Union Billiards
1PM TO 11PM EVERY DAY!
The University Ustore
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST
University Store
In the UMass Campus Center
Hours:
M-F 9 to 5 Sat. 11 to 4
(413) 545 - 2619
AMEX, MC, Visa, Discover and UCard cheerfully accepted!

PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S
OPEN 'TIL 3AM FRIDAY & SATURDAY
331 Russell Street, Hadley
5 8 6 - 7 2 7 2
Welcome Back
Carry-out Special
NO LIMIT
$3.99 PLUS TAX
Large Cheese Pizza
(Offer expires February 15, 1998)
NEW HOURS OF OPERATION
Sunday - Wednesday 11am - 1am
Thursday 11am - 2am
Friday & Saturday 11am - 3am
LARGE ONE-TOPPING PIZZA $6.98 Offer expires 5/31/98 • Not Valid with any other offer • Valid only at participating locations • Customer pays all applicable sales tax • Additional toppings extra
PAPA'S CHOICE 1 LG UP TO 5 TOPPINGS $9.98 Offer expires 5/31/98 • Not Valid with any other offer • Valid only at participating locations • Customer pays all applicable sales tax • Additional toppings extra
LARGE MEATS PIZZA DELIVERED $9.98 Offer expires 5/31/98 • Not Valid with any other offer • Valid only at participating locations • Customer pays all applicable sales tax • Additional toppings extra

Someone misses you.
1-800-COLLECT®

■ fear

continued from page 1

and the elite

Republican Guard, which one Iraqi said was deployed "everywhere" to protect the president.

Philippe Heflinck, director for the U.N. Children's Fund in Baghdad, would not speculate how a new attack might affect Iraqi families, but said Iraq's infrastructure remained fragile seven years after the Gulf War damage. This includes schools and hospitals as well as possible targets, such as factories and electrical plants.

When talk of a new U.S. attack first arose, there was a run on kerosene lanterns because electricity plants were hit during the Gulf War. Rashid, the 21-year-old student, said his parents worry about food shortages.

Most people feel "nothing worse can happen" than in 1991, he said.

The civilian death toll in the 43 days of Gulf War bombing is much disputed. Iraq says it was at least 35,000; U.S. estimates are 2,500 to 3,000; the environmental group Greenpeace put it at 5,000 to 15,000, based on a survey of Iraqi rescue workers and American officials.

On Feb. 13, 1991, missiles hit what U.S. officials believed was an underground command post in Baghdad. It turned out to be the al-Ameriya civilian shelter, and nearly 400 men, women and children were killed.

At least six civilians also died in U.S. attacks in 1993 and 1996 to punish Iraq. One was Leila al-Attar, a painter whose house next to the targeted Iraqi intelligence headquarters was flattened by a missile.

This time, U.S. officials say attacks could last four or five days and be harsher than the '93 and '96 "pin pricks" should Iraq persist in defying U.N. demands for free access to sensitive sites, especially Saddam's palace compounds.

Iraqi doctors said Baghdad's hospitals would be hard-pressed to handle a large number of casualties in an attack. They gave a long list of equipment now in short supply that would be needed in an emergency.

KEN MC DONALD/ COLLEGIAN

Down, but not out...

Sam Frey, a senior turf and grass management major, dives for the ball yesterday while playing racquetball.

UM alums sell "see–mails" electronic valentine cards

By Jason Eiseman
Collegian Staff

Move over Hallmark.

A University of Massachusetts alumni–founded company will be selling electronic Valentine's Day cards, or "see– mails" on the Campus Center Concourse today and tomorrow.

Mike Wilson, a graduate from the class of '92, is president and co–founder of Tortoise Tek, a company that provides information and Internet solutions for businesses and is selling the "see–mails."

"UMass has been good to us, so we're trying to be good to UMass," Wilson said.

The valentines are called "see–mails," because instead of just text they are also animated e–mails that you can see.

The company is selling two different "see–mails." The first is an animation of a man tap dancing with a cane and a top hat, who pulls a bunch of roses from behind his back.

The message included says "Happy Valentine's Day," and allows the writer to add a personal message.

Wilson said that they may also add music to the "see–mails."

The second "see–mail" is the animation of a "strikingly gorgeous woman," according to Wilson, in a dress, who strides up to the screen and puckers her lips, leaving her two lip marks on the screen.

Again the message says "Happy Valentine's Day," and again, the student may add a personal message.

Wilson said that there are two parts to the team at Tortoise Tek, the artists and animators, and the engineers and programmers, "freaks and geeks," Wilson said. This explains their logo, a two headed tortoise.

"We think the forum is right for something like this," Wilson said. He said during the December holidays they sold electronic holiday cards which sold very well.

Wilson said he founded the company with Bo Feng who was getting his masters degree in computer animation when the two met.

Wilson also gave credit to three students who interned at Tortoise Tek during intersession. "It was a whole effort, but they did the art," Wilson said. Sean Cahoon, John Zaccone, and Amanda Snyder were the students interns.

"I think it's a cute idea," Snyder said. "It's a new kind of greeting card through e–mail." She said that Cahoon and Zaccone did most of the work on the Valentine see–mails.

Snyder said that the electronic cards are good for personalizing e–mails, and establishing and keeping good relations, not just between students, she said, but they can also be used as business cards, and for other means of office communications.

The "see–mails" will cost one dollar with a coupon.

■ pot

continued from page 1

sider performance-enhancing.

"This will undoubtedly be tough for the sport," said Carol Anne Letheren, head of Canada's Olympic association.

Rebagliati maintains that the 17.8 nanograms per milliliter of marijuana in his system came from secondhand smoke at a going-away party last month in Canada, and that he hasn't smoked pot since last April.

"The public sort of looks at this and thinks, 'Ah — snowboarders are all wild and crazy'," said Rob Roy, a coach for the U.S. snowboarding team. "That's not good."

The perception has precedent.

Consider this from Rebagliati, interviewed by Associated Press Television hours before he learned of the test results: "I've always just done the things I wanted to do and don't do the things I don't want to do."

Or this: "I don't care if they accept us or don't accept us. Snowboarding is a fact of life."

Such statements, while made goodnaturedly in the glow of gold-medal euphoria, underscore the risk the Olympics establishment took in admitting snowboarding.

"These kids live on the edge," said Lewis H. Carlson, head of the American Studies program at Western Michigan University, who has studied the popular culture of the Olympics. "Snowboarding captures a lot of the verve of America — the speed, the gambling and taking chances, the creativity. But any sport that we associate with surfing eventually goes back to California, which Americans in the heartland have been suspicious of for a long time."

They're not the only ones. Many ski resorts ban or severely restrict snowboarding, and some say the close votes on Rebagliati's sanction reflect the ambivalence many in the Olympic establishment feel toward the sport.

"For these Olympic organizers, this probably makes them ask, 'Why did we bring these people in who have these funny habits?'" Taylor said. "We're dealing with a sport that's new, and suddenly it's in this highly cultured, highly international environment. And that does create a culture shock."

Snowboarding in the Olympics is governed by the rules of the International Ski Federation. That raised hackles among snowboarders, who wanted to be represented by the International Snowboarding Federation.

■ rally

continued from page 1

in Stoddard Hall for interested students or citizens who want to be further educated.

There is also a call to all students to dress in black and join in remembering the al-Amariyah shelter bombing on Friday at 1 p.m. on the Southside steps of the Student Union, outside the Cape Cod Lounge.

Campus Center Network We're here for you!
ANNUAL CAMPUS WIDE CAREER FAIR
February 18th 10am-3pm
Campus Center Auditorium
*The Alana Job Fair is also being held on February 18th from 7pm-9pm
*The Co-Op Job Fair is being held February 19th from 10am-3pm
Campus Center Auditorium
Over 100 Companies and organizations will be there!
The perfect chance to meet with representatives of employers that you are interested in and who are interested in you! Or, just come and find out what companies are suited to what you are looking for in a career!
Opportunity is knocking... You better be there to open the door!

UMass Campus Activities presents

Exposure Musical Revues
Friday February 13, 1998
Bluewall Cafe...8pm

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

How much for books?

So, have you bought your books yet? Expensive? Obviously. What if there were some kind of deal you could work out to make your textbooks a lot cheaper? Sounds good, right? Let me explain what I'm getting at.

The day before classes started, I was waiting for the bus in downtown Amherst, and this guy asked me when the next bus to South Amherst was due, so I told him, and we began to strike up a conversation. He asked if I attend this University, and then told me he's been working at the Textbook Annex temporarily, providing help for the add–drop period.

My fellow South Amherst–dweller then began to ask me, very politely and casually, if I am taking any classes in chemistry, math or English, and I said, "No." Then he asked if I'd be interested in a 40 percent discount on any books bought at the Annex. Thinking he gets some kind of discount on textbooks since he's an Annex employee but at the same time in my mind questioning his motives, I said, "Sure."

Joe Sullivan

The book man then asked me if we could exchange phone numbers so we could set up the deal. We went into Collective Copies to borrow a pen, and we wrote down our first names and our phone numbers, handed the information to each other, and went back outside.

Mr. Textbook asked me when I was planning on going down to the Annex to buy my books, so I told him, and he explained that all I'd have to do is look for him on the registers and then go through his line. He would ring up the lowest–priced book, hand me my receipt, and send me on my way without having to pay for the remaining textbooks. I guess later on he expected me to work out a price on the remaining books, and I would have to pay him a cash sum, about 40 percent less than what I would have paid to the Annex. This guy also told me that he was planning on "hooking up" a girl he'd met with textbooks, and also that he had several high–priced science books and CD sets at his house and was looking for people to sell to for a reduced, cash–only cost.

The bus finally came and we continued to talk about completing this deal. He said to bring a friend if I wanted. When I got off the bus, I told him I'd be there on Friday, but the deal never happened. Even though I do feel that the prices being paid for books are ridiculous, I couldn't bring myself to outright steal from the Textbook Annex.

The moral of the whole story is simply, textbooks cost too much, the prices offered for buyback are too low, students are frustrated, and there are people out there who know this and prey on the situation. Proving these facts, this man, himself, told me that he figured he was helping students out, because they get screwed over by paying so much money just for tuition, never mind having to pay the added cost for books, and also, when it comes time for textbook buyback, the prices offered are unfair.

After my incident with this black market textbook dealer, I began to think about the whole psychological nature of what he'd contrived, and I began to wonder if there are other people on this campus making an illegal buck off of what I'd call unfair practices that frustrate students. At the very least, I'm sure this isn't the first time someone's made money illegally by ripping off the Textbook Annex.

The overall reality of the situation is that there are people dealing with problem areas on this campus in ways that most of us are not aware of, and that, in the long run, hurt all of us. In this specific situation, the Annex loses money that will have to be made up, and it's the students who will be forced to bear this burden.

Joe Sullivan is a Collegian staff member.

The real college world

Recently I had a personal catharsis, and I had the need to share. I was talking to a friend and we were comparing sleep stories like battle wounds from the war front.

"I can't believe how little sleep I got last night — 3 hours, man!"

"Three hours! That'd be like a dream. I haven't slept for like 2 weeks!"

We kept sparring like this while inside I knew I was living a lie. I had gotten a full eight hours of sleep that night, just like I get every night. The mismatched clothes and squinty eyes I wore like a merit badge were merely a facade for the truly awake, energetic person I really was.

A lot of us probably ignored our true identities and made ourselves uncomfortable in our own skin for the sake of feeling "normal."

Julie Fialkow

Something inside snapped and I decided to come clean.

"There's something I need to tell you," I said, "I sleep."

"What?"

"It's true. I sleep every night and I'm not tired at all."

I began thinking about how much of a lie I'm living. I am the anti–student and I am ready to tell all.

For two years I have been struggling to fit into this mold of what I thought a college student should be (I've seen Animal House and Revenge of the Nerds one too many times). My freshmen year I took on cigarettes and ordering calzones at two in the morning. For two months that year I had a ring in my eyebrow and started drinking a lot of coffee. In addition to that, the next year I tried to read "cool" books and listen to a lot of obscure bands that I didn't really understand or like.

Now I'm a junior and suddenly, I'm content with how ordinary and unhip I am; not in a cool apathetic way, but in a plain Jane, loser kind of way. Proudly, I revel in my blandness and refuse to hide anymore.

1. First of all, I refuse to light one more stick of incense while listening to Bob Marley. Incense makes me sneeze and I've listened to "No Woman, No Cry" so many times I am beginning to get physically ill.

2. On a Friday night I would rather watch back–to–back Sobakowa Pillow and Richard Simmons Infomercials, than drink back–to–back Bud Lights in some sweaty room with strangers.

3. I call my parents every day and not because I need money. I need to tell them about my crappy professor or a new friend. Unconditional love is rare to come by and my parents are the only ones who will put up with my whining.

4. I have never owned any drug paraphernalia and when someone asks me if I have papers, I still think they're talking about newspapers.

5. Drinking coffee makes me wanna spew; I am not going to chug countless cups down my throat anymore, complaining that I need to stay up all night. Usually when I stay up all night, I don't study but I do convulse in cold sweats from all the caffeine my body's been subjected to.

6. I'm still not sure what Ska is. I listen to Top 40 music. Sometimes I enjoy listening to the Spice Girls.

Think I'm generalizing the typical college experience? Yeah, I am, but I think all of us coming here as freshmen struggle somewhat to fit into these expectations. We feel the need to have a style and a cause, and a cool hair color or piercing to match. A lot of us probably ignored our true identities and made ourselves uncomfortable in our own skin for the sake of feeling "normal."

Sit back for a second and I bet you'll remember a moment (for me, a few of them) where you sacrificed what you really believed or wanted, in order to be deemed acceptable and interesting. For example, food: lacto, ovo, vegan, organic. Those things are all well and good if your reasons are true to the purpose. But, there is nothing more pure and lovely than an embarrassingly inhumane and greasy Big Mac. Next time you put your fork into your curry–tofu–couscous think about that.

My point is don't let anyone or anything get between you, and what in life truly brings you joy. Whether it's the occasional stonewashed rhinestoned denim jumpsuit, or listening to radio stations that only play "light classics from the '70s and '80s." You'll be the one whose laughing when the trend cycle deems all these things "nerdy chic." Join me in my crusade to embrace the mundane: to be at peace with being completely and utterly boring.

Julie Fialkow is a UMass student.

Hey, I think I love you...

If you open up your Collegian today, you might find a few Valentine's greetings to various loved ones.

Most of them are rather feeble, and if life were the Nagano Olympics, they wouldn't show up in the medal count. (Yeah I love you too, honey. And to show it, look. A Collegian!)

I guarantee, though, that 92 percent of the guys who put in Valentine's personals will get at least a semblance of "booty" in the near future. So I guess you can't blame them for trying.

Only because it might be the only time you'll see the words "Monogahela" and "I.O.U. sweater" in the same story, I've whipped up some personals for you. Don't worry, they're not real. (If they were, "lake" would probably kick my ass.)

Luke Meredith

I guarantee all of these people (fake people, really) get their Valentine wish, because of me. Yeah, it is pretty sweet. (Sweet and cute, kids. Quite a combo)

Personals you won't see

Hey, Brock — I love you 4–Eva, baby. When you gives me rides in your Firebird, the rush of the wind in my hair makes me feel like Lita Ford in that video with Ozzy.
XOXOXO, Tina

Dear Tony — Plinko, my place, 10:30. Wear that I.O.U. sweater I love so much.
Luv, Jake

Dear Bill C. — What's up. Wacky trial, huh? Call me.
Monica L.

Dear Tina — I feel sassy tonight. I'll wear the Ozzy costume, you bring the chaps and Lita's solo album.
You're so beautiful.
Smitty.

Snuggles — My love for you is like a river. Not that crappy river though, the one with the oil spills and that car they found at the bottom. A nice one, like the Danube or the Monogahela.
Love, Pumpkin

Dear Susie— I love you forever.
Love Ed

Dear Susie— Are you still hooking up with Ed? I love you. Don't lie to me.
Big sloppy kisses, Frank.

Dear Luke — "I'd live and I'd die for you, these five words I swear to you. When you breathe, I want to be the air for you, I'll be there for you".
You know it's our song, cupcake.
Hugs and Kisses, Maggie Seaver.

Cameron — You're not dead. You just can't think of anything good to do. Get out of bed — we'll spend the day together.
F. Bueller
P.S. "Save Ferris, and tell Rooney I love him."

Dear Frank — I never touched Ed. I promise. It's you I love.
XOXO, Susie

Dear Ed — I never touched Frank. I promise. It's you I love.
XOXO, Susie.

Monica — Meet me at my place. If anyone asks, it never happened, and I never told you to say it never happened. Don't wake Hillary.
Bill C.

Dear Frank and Ed — Susie's toying with both of you. Be with someone special. Be with me.
Luv, Jake

Dear Maggie — Don't write me a personal, you'll get me in trouble with "you know who".
XOXO, Luke M.
P.S. The eldest Seaver (code name Mike S.) has six chicks in his room above the garage. Is that legal?

Dear Luke M. — Nice column. You've been fired.
Love, C. Stamm

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.

Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words long, and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes.
They can be submitted by mail to Ed/Op Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst MA 01003; by e–mail to letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu; or by fax to (413) 545–1592.

The Collegian reserves the right to edit letters for length, clarity and style.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

We will be publishing a Point/Counterpoint feature on Wednesday, Feb. 18, analyzing the War on Drugs.

Is it a success or a failure? Should it be continued? What effect has it had on the use and sale of drugs, the prison population, or civil liberties?
What are the ethical issues involved in this legacy of the Reagan/Bush years?

Columns should be submitted no later than 5 p.m. on Monday, Feb. 16. They can be delivered to the Collegian offices at 113 Campus Center, UMass; faxed to 545–1592; or e–mailed to letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu.

Call Tamar Carroll or Dan Bodah at 545–1491 for more information.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Co–Editor
Tamar Carroll Editorial/Opinion Co–Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor

Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Leigh Faulkner News Editor
Lauren Kosky Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor

Joeseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
David Parmenter Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Playing the relationship game

C. TAYLOR CONNER

Warning: This article may offend those who are not prepared to readily admit the two following scenarios have happened to them. And please, be smart enough to change the genders as they apply to you.

Scenario One. You're in some class. There's a guy you sit next to every session. He's charming, sexy and funny. It also appears as though a mid-sized sport-utility vehicle ran over and repeatedly backed over his face some time ago. Yet, oddly enough, you still find yourself desiring madly to suck face with him. It's a perplexing dilemma.

Scenario Two. A friend introduces you to a woman who may have just missed the cut as a supermodel. Painfully, stupendously gorgeous is a vast understatement by leaps and bounds. Unfortunately, this magnificent creature is about as engaging as the typical Richard Dean performance. The result is a blunt affair to be remembered, but...

[illegible]

Turn to GAME page 9

A Valentine's Day feast

THE DORMROOM GOURMET

Roses are red
Violets are blue
Valentine's meal?
Leave it to Cho!

The pressure is on. Saturday is Valentine's Day. Everything has to be just right because the future of your relationship may be riding on this night. A cocky card can only get you so far and flowers are a nice touch, but we all know that food is the true path to the heart.

The menu that follows is straight from the sea of love and filled with sweet and sour tastes that romance in the '90s may already have left in your mouth. It's easy to prepare and sure to pave the way to love.

And, as I am forever compelled to repeat, whenever and wherever you're cooking, think safety (and flavor) first. Have a fire extinguisher close by and be sure to provide for proper ventilation. Rock and boil!

Asian Cucumber Salad

This is a light and refreshing appetizer that sets the stage for the bold main course to follow. This dish is best when prepared right before service so as to prevent the cucumbers from getting watery.

Ingredients:

2 ea. Cucumbers (about 1/2 lb. each) sliced very thin
1 ea. Red onion, sliced into very thin rings
1 Tbs. Red or green chiles, finely minced
1/3 cup Lime juice
2 Tbs. Sugar
2 Tbs. Thai fish sauce (nam plam) or 1 Tbs. Worcestershire sauce mixed with 1 Tbs. Water.
2 Tbs. Salad oil
1 Tbs. Fresh mint leaves, chopped fine (or 2 tsp. dried)
2 Tbs. Fresh cilantro, chopped (or 1 Tbs. dried)
Romaine lettuce as garnish

Procedure:

Turn to FEAST page 10

Happy Valentines Day

Antique valentines speak to the heart

EMILY TRASK

"These aren't the kind of valentines we give each other at my school," exclaimed Madeleine Hemfield, a fifth grader at Pelham Elementary School. Hemfield attended the opening reception of the Fletcher collection of antique valentine exhibit which took place on Friday, Feb. 6, at the Lord Jeffery Inn. Nancy Fletcher, the proprietor of this collection, encountered Hemfield while starting collecting herself three years ago, explaining that one day they might be worth something.

For most of us, the valentines in Nancy Fletcher's collection are quite different than the valentines that we send our friends and relatives, but it is interesting to see how much need to express their feelings for one another.

These antiques help reveal the manners of social interaction for each period," Fletcher explained. "And not just from one century to another. Valentines have been widely exchanged among family and friends.

Fletcher said she finds it surprising to see the different patterns of expression which have developed over the years: the artwork and the sentiment range from sweet and lacy to punk and rib cages with a sprinkling of the gross-out, a trend popular in the 1840's.

[illegible] Feb. 16, the Lord Jeffery Inn will be exhibiting selections of the antique valentine collection owned by Nancy Fletcher, president of Fletcher Associates. Fletcher Associates is a public relations firm that runs out of Eastborough.

Fletcher's collection is primarily composed of late Victorian cards, although she will not be displaying a portion of her collection which includes a wide variety of valentines.

The collection contains over 400 cards and features a 24" x 36" framed sheet music piece titled with movie buffs in 1876 passionately for the Centennial and depicting the four seasons in a panoramic 3-D effect. The shadow box is displayed among the various other valentines in the collection.

Fletcher's collection also features work by Esther Howland, the pioneer in the mail order and selling of Valentines. She was the first person to popularize sentimental valentines in this country through mail order, with neighborhood women in her parent's Worcester home in the mid 1800's.

A graduate of Mount Holyoke College in 1847, Howland used her artistic talent, head for business and enormous energy to begin what would become one of the greatest profit making ventures the Valentine industry had ever experienced. Among Miss Howland's additions to the Valentine industry was her introduction of colorful sheets of paper under the lace centers of her cards to enhance the whiteness of the greeting. She also introduced the "fill up Valentine which consisted of paper-lace molds built up in tiers by folded sheets of paper pinned to each layer. This new technique gave a pleasant, three-dimensional quality to the valentine.

Howland was one of the first business women in the U.S. and by reportedly made over $100,000 during 1850 from the sale of her valentine valentines.

The valentines in Fletcher's collection date back to 1848 with one that was sent to Elizabeth D. Rockefeller, the cousin of John D. Rockefeller. Shared every year since is commented in the collection.

Fletcher is intrigued by the valentines because they are 100 years ago to 1880 with the birth of her grandmother's cousin, Marion Winslow Emerson, who was instrumental in the forming of the Valentines Collectors of America began sending Fletcher her antique valentines a year from the late. Fletcher was 7 years old. Emerson also dedicated A Rose is Red, her 1933 book on the life of Esther Howland, to Fletcher has contributed to the [illegible] and to carry on Emerson's tradition by sending one framed valentine to her every [illegible] Cecilia McCrone, 1993 year since she was born in 1975.

Fletcher expressed her thanks to the Lord Jeffery Inn for their collaboration on the exhibit.

"I thought that [illegible] the perfect setting for this historical exhibit. The Lord Jeff is a great colonial location that should be used more than it is. I am always grateful to events and activities there with an appreciative eye. Through associations who experience of the event," Fletcher said.

Every year Fletcher sends out valentine, friends and relatives, but unlike most givers of valentines, Fletcher asks that her valentines be returned so that she may add them to her collection. Some years, Fletcher has received nothing in return.

"I like to encourage tradition," Fletcher said. "I don't want people to be intimidated by large corporations and commercial valentines, although it is sometimes up what they want to wish."

Emily Trask is a Collegian staff member.

Romancing the movies

There are some things that are just inevitable. These include, but are not limited to: Titanic (grrrr, sigh) and Titanic causing females to erupt in rage. Titanic overtaking Leonardo DiCaprio obsession, just name guaranteed. Titanic placed on lists of the most feminist movies ever made.

Girls call Titanic "an epic, heart-wrenching romance." Guys call it "that really long boat movie." But whatever your interpretation, a certain holiday that arrives this Saturday can't save you from the plethora of other movie romances lying dusty below your VCR.

After all, the movie love story has had a deep history. It's impossible to think of sweeping passion and not conjure up images of Vivian Leigh and Clark Gable in Gone with the Wind, or Humphrey Bogart and Ingrid Bergman in the ultimate romance, Casablanca. My personal old favorite is the aptly titled Love Story, Erich Segal's tale of college sweethearts. Then again, with rumors flying about how the character of Oliver was based on Segal's friends Tommy Lee Jones and Al Gore, one tends to rethink a little, not to mention cringe.

Recently, movies have stretched film conventions, dealing with supernaturalism (Ghost), fate (Sleepless in Seattle), and Brad Pitt (Legends of the Fall). There was even a romance between a prostitute and Richard Gere, but Julia Roberts made an awfully good Pretty Woman.

But It's really only fair to get both sides of the issue. You have to consider both girls and guys, those in love and those scorned, those who think Valentine's Day is a beautiful event and those who think it's like driving from UMass to the Boston suburbs via Route 9.

So no matter how you're feeling on Valentine's Day, there's a movie for everyone. The following is a list of perhaps unusual choices, but films that may just introduce or change your mood. However, if those films are too eclectic, there's always good old-fashioned romance. In that case, the most romantic film? That really long boat movie.

BRYAN MCALLISTER

• True Romance — When Christian Slater wasn't a drug addict, Brad Pitt wasn't a poster-boy and Quentin Tarantino wasn't worthless hack, they all combined their talents on this tragically entertaining film about a doomed love and the consequences it never yields to. Slater plays a comic-book-and-out music store employee with a taste for Elvis and kung-fu movies. He can't believe it when he finds out a blonde bombshell has the same loves, until he finds out she's a prostitute only hired to make him happy. Then she falls in love too. What follows is mad rush across country, as Slater and Patricia Arquette avoid both a pimp's hitmen and the FBI. A great cast — Christopher Walken, Dennis Hopper, Pitt, Val Kilmer and Michael Rappaport — helps make True Romance a kinetic, turbulent view of passion.

• Leaving Las Vegas — Yes, you're thinking of the right movie. But here's a selection for those who foolishly believe that their love life can't get any worse. Just watch Oscar winning Nicholas Cage stumble through life, and hanging on in the arms of an equally troubled Elizabeth Shue, only to lose. Leaving Las Vegas may be the most depressing of movies, but this slice of life may just make your own problems seem a little less important. Or just watch an episode of "Party of Five."

• Before Sunrise — Richard Linklater's (Dazed and Confused) recent film is like few romances you've ever seen. It's a simple creation, a movie that moves with its characters and their growing chemistry. Ethan Hawke plays a cynical, somewhat confused young American who meets a French Julie Delphy on a train through Europe, and then requests that she accompany him for a night in Vienna. Little touches make Before Sunrise a refreshing love story, such as the nervousness of the two characters to confess their interest in each other, their exploring of the big issues of life, and supporting characters like a man who's so excited about playing a cow in a play. The film doesn't manipulate and offers no easy answers, only intriguing questions.

• True Lies — For those with a sense of adventure, consider Titanic director James Cameron's take on the James Bond theme, with big Arnold playing a government super-spy who's wife thinks he's a boring, stuffy salesman. True Lies begins with the coolest tango ever filmed, and cleverly plays with sexism and the idea that women want danger and thrills. Cameron goes a little far in the film's climatic Harrier scene, but his flair for outrageous, exhilarating action contains an almost sexual energy.

• The Princess Bride — As grandfather Peter

Turn to MOVIES, page 11

Help for the lovelorn from Mars–Venus author

LORRAINE KENNEDY

For those of you who are cringing in anticipation of Valentine's Day, the holiday which celebrates romance, love and relationships, there may be some hope after all.

University of Massachusetts graduate Amy Sundari Johnson will be holding a workshop on campus next month based on teachings from Men are from Mars, Women are from Venus, a novel by John Gray, Ph.D. The book, which has spent four years on the New York Times best-seller list and has sold over 10 million copies, illustrates the basic differences between men and women.

The Mars–Venus workshop is "for anyone who has a sincere desire to have satisfying relationships with the opposite sex," Johnson said.

"It is useful in love relationships as well as business relationships. The principles are universal," Johnson said.

Topics which are covered in the workshops include the differences between men and women, how to "score points" with the opposite sex, how the past affects relationships and how to keep the passion alive.

The format of the workshop integrates lecture and discussion with group exercises, video screenings and workbooks. Classes are "couple-friendly" fun and non-confrontational.

"Among the skills participants will gain are how to receive appreciation, acceptance and trust from your partner and how to reach a deeper level of emotional concentration," Johnson said.

While the workshop is generally geared towards couples, singles may also attend. A workshop specifically for singles will be offered in Amherst in the spring.

Johnson, the Amherst-based workshop facilitator, attended a training program in the San Francisco area last fall led by the Mars–Venus author. Her interest was originally piqued after she read the book and attended a workshop. After years of struggling in relationships herself, she "wanted to spread the wealth" and teach others what she learned.

In past workshops, Johnson says she has been "inspired by the level of participation and enthusiasm [expressed by the participants]. People were really grateful."

But in reference to Valentine's Day, Johnson cautioned people not to get their hopes up.

"Some of you may find that the flowers aren't received with as much appreciation as you would like."

The next Mars–Venus workshop to be held in Amherst will be from March 28 – April 18. Cost is $69 per person or $129 for two. For additional information, contact the Amherst office of the Mars–Venus Workshops at (413)253–7492.

Lorraine Kennedy is a Collegian staff member.

Shim debuts on Blue Note; Lee Konitz is classic & cool

Starting things out, tenor saxophonist, Mark Shim, makes his major label debut with Mind Over Matter (Blue Note), released in January.

Although Shim's technical ability is clearly evident throughout the album, his slurred style of play and lack of accentuated phrasing makes the listener feel like its just one big, 10-part song. Nevertheless, the recording does have its highlights.

The fourth track, "Dumplin'," has Shim's style bordering on a change to a dirtier, angrier sound as he ascends into the higher register. It predicts what this 25-year-old newcomer's career could become. The fifth track, "The Dungeon," features a bubbling guitar effect hinting at the underwater whines of aquatic mammals, while the drumwork is also impressive.

Shim has potential, but don't buy this CD unless you need something to throw on as background music.

Bob Dorough's career began in the mid '50s and has been highlighted by his role as music director of ABC-TV's Schoolhouse Rock, but it was not until this past October that his debut jazz album, Right On My Way Home, was released.

Dorough sings in both a broadway showtune and bluesman style, bordering on corny through the telling of odd, almost vaudevillian stories. Featuring Dorough's whistling at the intro, a good hook, and a "cool-guy walking" rhythm section, "Walk On" is the best song of the album. The rest of the CD is negligible — even Dorough's version of "Moon River" sounds like something off of a kids' show.

If you're a big fan of Broadway musicals, and especially if you've enjoyed the music of Schoolhouse Rock, you may find a place in your collection for this one.

As Mose Allison's fifth studio release, Gimcracks and Gegaws (meaning showy objects and trinkets) concocts a jazz/blues hybrid that is both snappy and slick. Although Allison's singing is not the best (he sings off key on several tracks), this album has several very good songs.

"Numbers on Paper," one of the slower tracks on a very jumpy CD, is a slow and thoughtful look into searching for love through collected phone numbers. Allison's version of "St. Louis Blues" features an outstanding blues guitar solo, and the CD is concluded with a follow up to his Who- covered "Young Man (Blues)." Entitled "Old Man Blues," it is meant as an introspective, self-effacing look at Allison himself.

This recording really moves and Allison relies on tension build ups and breakdowns to get his point across. Some of the slower tracks like "Mockingbird" and "Fires of Spring" are too drawn out and become tiresome, but overall a solid effort.

Though not yet released and only available as a promo from Blue Note, true jazz fans should pray that Lee Konitz, Brad Mehldau and Charlie Haden's Alone Together comes out soon and in bulk.

Konitz's resume includes playing tenor with Miles Davis on Birth of the Cool, while Haden's most notable association has been as bass player with Ornette Coleman, and this level of experience shows.

Konitz's raspy style of up and down phrasing stirs the soul from the deepest depths, especially on the trio's rendition of Thelonius Monk's "Round Midnight" and Charlie Parker's "Koko," encoded as "Cherokee" on this CD. On all tracks, the bass and piano styles are beyond solid, they're tight.

Piano, tenor, bass. Bass, piano, tenor. Tenor, bass, piano. Any way you stack it, It's cool and classic.

Joe Sullivan is a Collegian staff member.

Dar Williams returns to her roots

COURTESY PHOTO

Local girl Dar Williams will play at the Northampton Academy of Music tomorrow night in her homecoming concert.

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

Three years and three albums after the first hit the contemporary music scene, local singer/songwriter Dar Williams will be playing to a sold-out crowd tomorrow night at the Academy of Music in Northampton. Doors open at 7:15 p.m. and the concert begins at 8 p.m.

Her last two albums The Honesty Room and Mortal City were released independently to critical acclaim and sold over 150,000 copies. Her songs, ranging from wry and satirical to provocative, have been described as a cross between Ani DiFranco and Alanis Morisette.

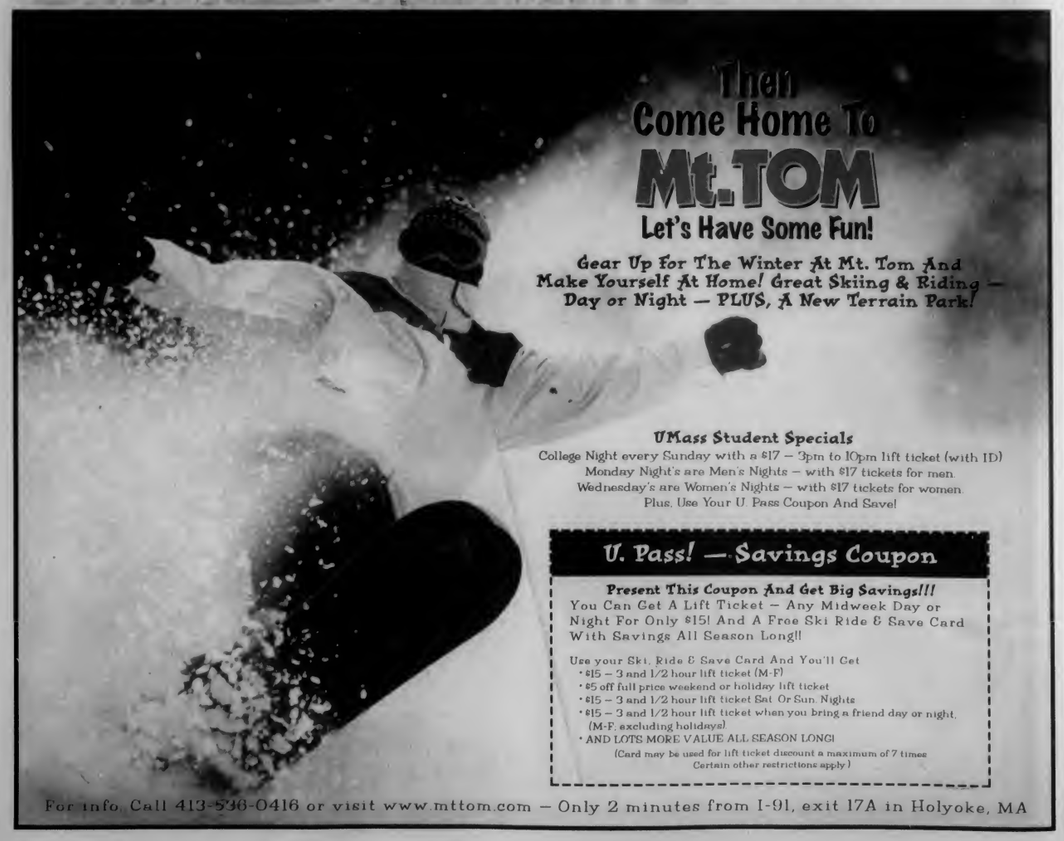
Williams actually credits her breakthrough to DiFranco for proving that commercial radio success is not the only way to make it in the music industry. She, like DiFranco has dabbled in political songwriting, but her songs tend to stray closer to suburban youth themes.

End of the Summer, Williams most recent album for New York independent label Razor & Tie, makes 11 musical cases for the currency of folk and the rediscovery of acoustic music.

Songs like "Party Generation" tells the tale of a thirtysomething slacker on his birthday night filled with irony and a classic-rock backbeat. "Are You Out There?" expresses suburban alienation and underlying hope, and the albums closer is an unexpected cover of The Kinks' "Better Things."

"I write my songs like people make junk sculptures, little piece by little piece, a bit here, a chunk there. I've spent a lot of the last three years on the road, listening to the radio, and I've heard a lot of pop and modern-rock," said Williams in a press release. "So, as I was writing the songs for this record, those were a lot of the sounds I had in my head."

Williams first emerged as a "buzz" artist in the folk-music chat rooms of the Internet. Through non-stop touring and a powerful reputation as a live performer, Williams has built an impressive following on college campuses and listening rooms across the country.



Beginning in 1997, after several shows with this summer's Lilith Fair, this is her first-ever band tour — an all-star acoustic ensemble that has hit Town Hall in New York City, Sanders Theatre in Cambridge and Park West in Chicago before stopping in the Pioneer Valley for one night only. She opened her tour last September at The Ironhorse in Northampton, performing four nights to completely sold out crowds, with a demand for more that she will be answering tomorrow night.

Sad because you don't have a Valentine?

Who cares?

Write for Arts & Living. It's much more meaningful.

Contact Seema Gangatirkar, Editor, at 545-1361

■ game

continued from page 5

mortal soul. There are, however, some things which game is definitely not limited to being:

1) Game and intellect or cleverness are not one and the same. They can be, but are not necessarily married. Witness the number of dummy-dummies who've swayed a parent away from you in your lifetime. And don't pretend it hasn't gone down at least once.

2) You don't need to have a singular game approach to be successful. It's like being a running back, see. You have to be able to power up the middle or sprint out to the sideline as you play. The ability to counter unpredictability is a requisite asset, and the inflexible shall meet adversity.

3) As mentioned before, good looks don't mean a thing if you ain't got that swing. Well, okay, that's not completely true for some idiots, but beauty is only part of the puzzle. More on that later though.

4) Game is not a reflection of what quality of person you are. It almost seems silly to say you can be an absolute snot- weasel and make hearts swoon or be a Nobel Peace Prize winner and be a dud. In a perfect world, it wouldn't be that way, but what can you do?

5) Game cannot be comprised solely of exterior factors. Some chumps can be bought, but make no mistake since bribery is discounted from game contention. Clothes, cars, rumors of large appendages — throw 'em all out the window. If you can't get by on who you are, your game is weak.

Before we delve into the more intellectually challenging aspects of game theory, we first need to establish the terminology we'll be employing for the remainder of this piece:

KO — A Tyson shot in the looks department. By conventional standards, Denzel Washington, Tom Cruise, Tyra Banks and Michelle Pfeiffer would be considered KOs.

Average — A moderately attractive individual. Can hold a good number of eyes, but will usually not cause any to pop out their sockets with lust.

Fugly — Mick Jagger without the money and swagger. Not pleasant to gaze upon unless you have a fetish for the woefully unattractive.

Money game — Aw, sooky sooky, now! Personality plus sexual charisma plus the intangibles make for an often winning case. Tough to stop or contain.

Average game — Won't bore you, but won't make you somersault with these skills. Can make due and engage in rudimentary macking activity, but has to earn keep.

Bagel game — The zero, the doughnut, the tire — the bagel. Projects about as much intensity as Al Gore, but will never get close to anything as mint as the VP's daughters.

Now that we understand these designations, let's pull back the curtain and explore how these factors dance the merry jig with each other, and how ladies and gents get jiggy as well:

KO/money game: More often than not, being this pretty makes a cat lazy and thereby lacking in pull whatsoever. But in those rare cases when these two factors fuse, prepare for world domination. Will usually shoot for like species.

KO/average game: Though not as effective as a KO/money-gamer, this individual still possesses the good stuff. Will generally aim for the highest of the high all the way down to Average/bagel game.

KO/bagel game: Matinee idol looks can only get you so far without anything remotely interesting going for you. Often described as "sweet" by partners trying to justify their terminal dullness, these snoozers get by on looks and looks alone. Wildly unpredictable, they can end up with anyone other than a Fugly/bagel game at any time, but usually drop out of thoughts of upper echelon picks quickly. What a waste.

Average/money game: Darn solid material here. You know that subtly handsome parent of a friend you always had a crush on? This is where they start. They're attractive but not really intimidating, making them the most accessible of any gamers. Will rarely accept a bagel trophy as a bon ami, and can score effortlessly at a consistently high level, impressing the hell out of their less mack-gifted friends.

Average/average game: The Everyman and Everywoman of gaming, they are the heart and soul of common game. There is nothing to write home about when they bust out their groove, but there is also nothing substantially wrong with their ability. More often than not, they end up with another average/average, but they'll surprise you occasionally with the heights and depths of their range.

Average/bagel game: Couldn't they learn a little something from the other average people? They'll stroll up to a potential game candidate — who'll probably find them fairly attractive — and blow it by having absolutely nothing of any value to say. Good luck or alcohol abuse can occasionally swing them a decent find, but they're usually destined for someone of their game capacity or lower.

Fugly/money game: This character's luck can swing both ways. No matter how cool you may be, a face like Shabba Ranks' will still scare the bejesus out of many prospects. But these mothers are for the most part the most self-assured and self-aware people on the planet since they have to put it all on the table every time they gear up for a macking endeavor. Will shoot for the whole gamut of gamers, and then suck them in with the tractor beam of confidence it takes when one's mug makes infants and adults alike weep.

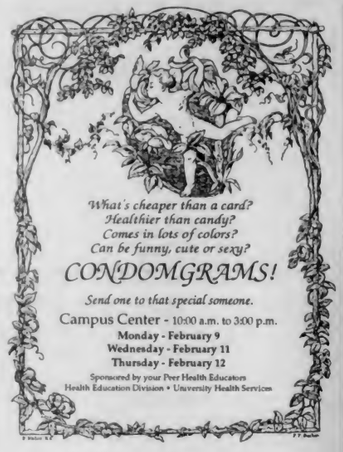
Fugly/average game: On an extraordinarily good night, these people stand a chance in hell. Booze and/or desperation work in their favor as well. Can hold a relatively engaging conversation, but have the odds stacked up against them by virtue of visage.

Fugly/bagel game: The stuff of the tequila, these poor saps get licked almost every time out. Gua-ran-teed. And even worse, they're often used as the "ugly friend" by opportunistic alleged chums trying to get a leg up. Heavy, heavy spirits required for hook-up. The cruel truth of the matter is that they are mired amongst themselves, at best a bittersweet place to be.

As you've probably figured out while reading the above analyses, there are numerous exceptions to the standard rules. If there were no different strokes for those folks, a lot of people would be left lonely on a Saturday night. Among these deviations from the norm are:

Anti-gamers. The basic principle of being an anti-gamer rests upon saying or doing the exact opposite thing a given prospect wants to hear or do. Somehow, in certain cases, this seemingly nihilistic approach draws the gamee into your web. Think it's preposterous? I'll bet you'd need all your fingers, toes and perhaps teeth to count the number of "potato" friends you have who always date the "potahto" jerks. The danger of anti-game is, of course, that people can get sick of you real quick.

The whyhows: Inevitably, there will be those KO/money gamers and Fugly/bagel gamers whose macking dividends will be flip-flopped. They may even end up with each other, like that couple you see in the movie theatre or the dorm who just don't seem to belong together. God knows why and how this bizarre phenomenon occurs — thus, they are dubbed "whyhows."



Low or high shooters: When a true playa slums by nature, he/she becomes a low shooter. Accordingly, when a knucklehead devotes all his/her time to the grossly unattainable, he/she high-shoots. Either can be morbidly depressing to watch in a bar.

Game is not to be reckoned with. Too many good boys and girls take theirs for granted, and sooner or later their gift deteriorates into the realm of Limburger and Camembert. If you have the prowess, embrace and enjoy it. If you don't, watch and learn — no position on this food chain is permanent.

And always keep in mind the immortal words of Slowhand: It's in the way that you use it! It comes and it goes! It's in the way that you use it! Don't let it go.

C. Taylor Conner is a Collegian columnist.

WRITE FOR ARTS WRITE FOR ARTS WRITE FOR ARTS WRITE

Frontier Pizza
Rt. 116, Squire Village Shops
Sunderland
665 -7066
665 -7067

FREE
One Free Topping On Any Medium Pizza
With this Coupon
Cannot Be Combined - Expires 2/28/98

$1.00 Off
Any Large Pizza
With this Coupon
Cannot Be Combined - Expires 2/28/98

Goten
Excellence in Japanese Cuisine
OF JAPAN
COOKING AT YOUR TABLE
We are open Tuesday - Sunday
Tues., Weds., Thurs., Fri., and Sat 5 till close
Sunday 2 til close
TWO DINNERS FOR $20
SHRIMP AND CHICKEN COMBINATION
TWO DINNERS FOR $20
SHRIMP AND SCALLOP COMBINATION
TWO DINNERS FOR $17
STEAK AND CHICKEN COMBINATION
All Dinners include salad, vegetable noodles, soup, rice tea & ice cream
Function Area available for your party
Please call for reservations today!
(413) 665-3628
Rt. 116 Sunderland
Entree Dinner • Full Bar • Sports Specials • Take the Sunderland Bus from campus- get dropped off at our front door

Disney's
COMING TO YOUR WORLD
Disney's COLLEGE PROGRAM
WHEN: February 19, 1998 • 7:00 pm
WHERE: Mahar Auditorium
The Walt Disney College Program is about friends, experiences and opportunities you'll discover as you live, learn and earn in our world.
STOP BY AND DISCOVER A WORLD OF OPPORTUNITIES AT DISNEY.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN Thursday, February 12, 1998 /

Say it sweetly . . .

HAPPY VALENTINE'S Day

SUGAR JONES

with a Sugar Jones, Giant Heart-Shaped Cookie.

On Valentine's Day (Saturday, February 14th), Sugar Jones is baking 50 giant heart-shaped cookies and decorating them with delicious buttercream icing. Each cookie weighs 1¼ pounds. The cookies may be picked up from Sugar Jones for $15 or delivered anywhere in Amherst for $18. We open at noon on Valentine's Day, and we close at 2 a.m. If you would like one of these Giant Heart-Shaped Cookies...

CALL NOW!!! 549-5663

THE PUB at the Hotel

Valentines Day Dinner Specials

NEW YORK SIRLOIN
Black Angus quality, broiled
13.95

PRIME RIB OF BEEF
Slowly roasted and served with au jus
14.95

PRIME RIB COMBO
Prime rib and baked stuffed shrimp
15.95

BAKED STUFFED SHRIMP
Four jumbo shrimp with a seafood stuffing
13.95

GRILLED ATLANTIC SALMON
Served with a dill and caper Beurre Blanc sauce.
12.95

BLACKENED SWORDFISH
A fresh cut of swordfish, seared and blackened with cajun spices.
12.95

FILLET MIGNON
Center of filet broiled and served with bernaise sauce
14.95

CHICKEN MARSALA
Lightly sauteed chicken breast with mushrooms, shallots and marsala wine.
9.95

PASTA CARBONARA
Linguine with diced bacon, petite peas, cracked black pepper and Parmesan cream sauce.
9.95

All dinners served with tossed salad, choice of dressing, french bread and butter, and choice of french fries, baked potato or rice pilaf.

Valentine
Great Gifts

Hats RINGS Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves Bags GLOVES
Blouses Skirts Dresses

Cards Incense Toys Earrings Bracelets Chains Candles Mugs T-Shirts India Print Bedspreads

Sweaters Chinese Shoes Cards Posters Area Rugs Dresses

Sale 20 to 50% off selected Clothing

The Mercantile Th.Fri.9PM Sun 12-5 Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St. Amherst-Carriage Shops

Valentine's Day

Collegian Classifieds...

Making Your Valentine Feel Special

Wanted- SW Surprise Willing to move to San Francisco to help your drama skills by long distance communication. Must be the most beautiful and eloquent woman I've ever known! must be the missing piece in my life

To My Honey on Valentine's Day From miles away. Thinking of you Caroline and tonight

Vanessa, You're still the best thing that had ever happened to me. Happy Valentine's Day. I Love You! Love, Jules

Mel, I never knew it was possible to love someone as much as I love you. Happy Valentine's Day! Love, Joy

To My Favorite Marlboro Man- Happy Valentine's Day. With Lots of Love, Alexis

Princess- Always Remember We have $75 and a pair of girl's underwear We're safe as lotteries! We Love Ya, Princess and Piggy

Choo Choo, I'm gonna spank your little BOOTY!!! Choo Choo Charles

To My Little Boy, You are very special to me. Think of you always. I love you with all my heart! Love Always, Your Angel

Caiz- I love you so much. I can't remember a time when you weren't as much a part of me as the air I breathe. Please Be My Valentine- Ivan

Snooky, You fill my heart with love. Not just on Valentine's Day But EVERYDAY!!! Thank You for all the little things you do that always put a big smile on my face!!! I Love You With All My Heart! Pookie

Schmidt-monster- V Day '97 all over again

Lauren, Sorry we can't have dinner this year. But you know how things go. Love, Your Tallest Roommate

Neyla, Happy 1st Valentine's Day! Looking forward to our first year together and tonight! Love, John

Strawberry Love, Happy Valentine's Day!!! You're the Best and My Strawberry Sunset. Love, Your Rosberry Love

Happy 1st V Day Julie! Love Always, Jay

Lysaatte, Feliz Dia de Enamorados Te Amo Mucho Tu Nissa, Edward

Woodrow- I never dreamed of loving someone as much as I love you! Happy Valentine's Day Babe. I love you

Felicia, I hope this year your V-Day is better than a dead duck floating in a pond At least a little bit! Happy Valentine's Day Love, Scott

Buckgarco Bonsai I am so into you I can't think of anything else Eric

Fuzzy Boos I Love You Baby Girl

Happy Valentine's Day To All The Ladies Of 3rd Floor Moore- From Your Favorite RA (Wink, Wink)

Happy Valentine's Day Beth, Lisa, Heather, Kelly, Nicole, Jessica, and Jessie- From Your Favorite Southwest RA

Happy Valentine To All Our Admin Friends We Love You Guys! Pruddy's

Happy Valentine To All Our Lady Friends You guys make us the hottest piece of them! Love, Andy, Carlos

Hey Girl, Happy Valentine Love, P

You take my breath away. Love always and forever your little blue moon!

Happy Valentine's Day To All The Purple House Divas!

David Aaron- So, What's your status? You'll always be my Mack Daddy! Happy Valentine's Day Poopy- Love, Alkaby

To My Emilia and Sky, I knew right away you were not like other girls. I love you very much Chris

Beautiful Self Prospect Babies Happy Valentine's Day You girls rock! Let's do it proper this semester! BBM

Happy Valentine's Day James! Together we turned an Aruba fairytale into an ever-lasting, indescribable love. Thank You. Love Mary

M- I just want to tell you that I'm having a lot of fun with you. Happy Valentine's Day. Luv, L

Nate Dog, Bow Bow Wow. Yippee Yo Yippee Yea!! I miss that dog in you. s-mone

Sweet Potato Pie- You remind me of my Jeep. I wanna ride you Be My Valentine Kid Cajin

My Sunshine- Happy Valentine's Day! You are the best and I hope you'll let me be your lovebug forever! I Love You!

Melissa, Happy "Just Another Day". I want to let you know how much I love you and how much I appreciate you. You complement me in every way. I am so lucky to have you as my babe eternal. Love, Erica

Erik, Happy Valentine's Day! I'll be yours forever Always and Forever Court

My Dearest Hacker, I'll love you forever- that's a promise! The date is coming faster everyday but it still seems like it is taking an eternity. I love you with all my heart Miss

Rachel, Thank you so much for being the best thing that has ever happened to me! You have given me the happiest year of my life. I hope that this Valentine's Day is special for you. When anything is wrong, all I need is your smile. Happy Valentine's Day! Love Always, Marky Mark

My Sweet Ray, I love you tons! I'll see you there. I'll be yours forever. You mean the world to me Love Always, Julie

Happy Valentine's Day Mer- "You are my everything Baby" Love, Brian

Kitbasa Boy, Valentine's Day has come and once again you have to work. Happy Valentine's Day Baby! Love, Angela P.S. I'll be waiting with the black light on!

To My Darling Lisa I love you tons Happy Valentine's Day Love, Conan

Sarge, Our love has transformed from such a special routine as the cloths and the sticks don't let it die. Love, Maker

To My Portuguese Mamacita- You complete me Love, Your Daddy

Happy Valentine's Day Stacy! You are the cool neighbor I've ever had. Please be my Valentine. I love you. Andy

J.D- Happy Valentine's Day 5 Anniversary- Smile! With Love, Your Angel

1SNP & 7ZBA Glass, Lindsey, Rachel, Mark, Jimmy, Tommy, Garv, & Teddy!!! Happy Valentine's Day To My Favorite Friends Love, Log

To NAAS and the Whole Shady Click I love u all!! Y all are my heart! God Bless everyone, but stay shady. So is the way of the B.S.P.EACE and Sicktav The Abbot

Monique, U got it. I Think You Know Who

Kelota, U'll always have a piece of my heart. That's just how it is. U'll always be in my thoughts. Peace. Love. God Bless

To Colleen, Happy Valentine's Day Sweetheart! I will love you always and forever. Love, Your Pace Scott

Roses are red, Violets are Blue, I don't know how to say it, But I love you. To all the girls I really loved, you are the best. Stay sweet and tender until the end. Love Always, ME

Kelly G- My Ferrari is all gassed up and ready to go Saturday. Niagra or BUST!

Ellen, With your sexy brown hair and brown eyes, and fast red Jetta. I don't know much about, except that I want your body. Love, Your Uptown Friend

Todd, Just wanted to remind you of how special you are to me. Thanks for everything! Happy Valentine's Day! I Love You! Lee

To The Sexiest Girls On McClellan Just wanted you to know that you R loved! And to the two CARS in my life, thanks for being there and being the best roommates. Love Always, Marianne

John, Jeremy, and Adam- Thanks for all the good times. You hold a special place in my heart. ALWAYS. I Love You, Mar

Roses are red Violets are blue Guess what sticks? I love hoo-you! Lux Xiao Qing

LAUREN- I'd walk all across Boston for you. Oh, I have. I'd walk all across New York for you. Oh, done that too. Well, then I'd walk from NY to Boston for you! Happy Valentine's Day! Hope we have more to come. -Chris Steveo- Happy Valentine's Day! From ALL Your Beautiful Babies At 647!

Jenn, You are my Valentine! I love you so much! You are my everything baby! Francella

Julie- Regardless of what the future holds for us, I feel lucky to have met someone as great as you. Love, Dave

JEN- I know we already discussed this- but I NEED TO MAKE SURE- I was wondering if you would be my Valentine? Luis

For Sale - broken heart, must sell soon

Matt, Although it's been a very strange year, I hope you know that you are one of the most important people in my life. Love, Joy

To All The Collegian Divas, I hope that each of you finds your hearts desire. Happy V Day! Chico

Mi Nene Loco, Hasky for you It started with tea Pretty flowers from Chili Now you're stuck with me Happy Valentine's Day Love, Your Dancing Ting

Awesome, Cool, Funny, Neat, Smiley, Cute, Sexy, Sweet— These words describe my dearest friends Carrie, Jen, Nick, Dave, Jeremy, and Lisa. You are all such great people to know! Happy Valentine's Day! Love, RJ

Happy Valentine To All Our Customers We Love You All! Pruddy's

Joe, You will never know how much the time we have spent together over the past week has meant to me. I look forward to seeing you more and more everyday! Happy Valentine's Day! Love, Leigh

Kon Tiki- Looking forward to Island-jumping the second half of the Carribean this summer. You bring the sun tan lotion, I'll bring the wine. Love is an adventure Your Captain

KC- Although it has been a bumpy road the last few months, hang in there! You will always be my best friend! Happy Valentine's Day! Love, BZ

Evan, So two years have gone by. Every moment feels like the first. Happy Valentine's Day. I love you, Julianne

GOLDEN BOY! STEVE-RA! SOUPRUSS! Have a Happy Valentine's Day and RessRA! I LOVE YOU! Love, Nicole

Dear Kathleen, You can sharpen my stakes anytime. Love, E. Lindros and Tigger

BWS, I'm sorry about everything. You do make me happy and you've brought so much joy into my life. I Love You, Sweetheart. Love, Sky (Your Little Girl)

To The Boys At Southpoint- We wish you all a Happy Valentine's Day! Love, Jackie & Amy Patrick, Laura Lee, Amy, Lisa, Amanda- I Love You Guys!

Guinea wishes you a Happy Valentine's Day. Chequiamos. Te Amo

To my babe-babe: Just givin' a shot out to my heart around the way. Here's to 7 months of pure love and long-awaited day to celebrate it! I love you eternally, awesomely! Love Me, Your Valentine All The Time

Jeremy, We're sorry we never traveled you as well as we should have. You really do know a lot more about the Oscars than we do. We don't know what we were thinking trying to review movies. Happy Valentines Day. LS & CTC

Jess, Even though you don't get the Collegian, you know what I'm thinking. As far as I'm concerned you have already read this ad. You have set a new standard in people that I know, one of which I never intend to break. I'll be home soon. Love, Kari

Sammy, You may be with the Knicks, but in your heart you'll always be with us. Even if you are from Jersey. P.S. Happy B-DAY, and go Rutgers Tahoe, Stump and Bill S.

Marty & Maureen, Thank You!!!! You are loved and appreciated. Happy Valentine's Day Jackie

Booty Schweag All-Stars, Good luck in the game tonight. But please, please don't let Luke shoot the ball. I'm not kidding. Love, Coach Jaffe

Adorable Bouquets
Florist

Valentines Day
Roses Roses Roses

1/2 DOZEN FROM $21.99
FULL DOZEN FROM $39.99
MYLAR BALLOONS FROM $3.99

Deliveries made Daily -Locally and world Wide 323-8291
Credit Cards Accepted

THURSDAY REQUEST NIGHT WITH DJ FOOZ

THIS FRIDAY

SOUTH BEACH CLUB NIGHT START TRAINING FOR SPRING BREAK WITH THE LATEST CLUB MUSIC FROM MIAMI CRAZY EDITS DJ'S

PRUDDY'S

COME TO PRUDDY'S IF YOU DON'T HAVE A VALENTINE AND YOU MIGHT GET LUCKY IN LOVE WITH DJ SES

COME IN AND CHECK OUR WEEKLY SPECIALS.
BEST PRICES IN TOWN AND ALWAYS PACKED WITH FRIENDS

LOVE at first sight.

John Fluevog exclusively at Zanna

ZANNA
downtown Amherst

BIOLAGE $29.95
45 oz. hydrating Shampoo
22 oz. conditioning balm treat yourself on Valentine's Day

REGENCY HAIRSTYLISTS
189 N. Pleasant St
253-9526

Hungry?

Subway of Amherst offers fresh 6" and footlong subs, delicious salads and, for smaller appetites, 4" round sandwiches.

SUBWAY®

4 Main Street, Amherst • 256-1919
Sunday - Thursday 10 am - Midnight
Friday & Saturday 10 am - 2 am

Buy Beautiful Valentine's Day Flowers on Campus !!

Visit our shop in the campus center or call for delivery near of far 549-8040

VISA MasterCard

Montgomery's Florists

Open Feb 13 &14 9am to 5pm

CBS Olympic coverage affects lineups

This past week on the tube has, naturally, been dominated by CBS' coverage of the Winter Olympics from Nagano, Japan— largely because the Olympics on television translates into a huge ratings bonanza (especially among female viewers) for the lucky network insane enough to fork over the hundreds of million of dollars for such an esteemed privilege.

Not surprisingly, the three other major networks have all been pretty much deferring to figure skating and bobsleds. A prime example of this is NBC airing the original pilot episode of television's #1 show, ER, tonight instead of a fresh episode.

After a slow start last weekend due to a couple of nasty snowstorms, the Games have hit stride the last few nights with the American contingent finally breaking into the medal tally with a couple of inspired skiing performances from Picabo Street and 22-year-old phenom Johnny Moseley. CBS, though, has blown it big–time by not capitalizing on the convenient time difference and showing more "live" events. Why make us wait over 12 hours to see Street getting her gold? I still firmly believe however, that all those "Swoosh" logos on the on–air talents' clothing is the ultimate display of the over–commercialization over the Olympics. Shame on you CBS!

The other big television story this week was NBC's announcement that ad rates for the final episode of Seinfeld will be an unprecedented $2.5 million for a 30–second spot. The series finale in May of Jerry,

Tube Notes
with
MARTY KEANE

George, Elaine and Kramer has a legitimate shot at beating out M.A.S.H.'s swan song as the highest–rated show in history, but to charge advertisers nearly double the amount for a Super Bowl ad is ridiculous. It's little wonder that NBC is having trouble finding takers at such a price.

In other Seinfeld news, it looks like Julia Louis–Dreyfus' attempts to get a spin–off for her Elaine character have been unsuccessful. Although no one wants to talk about it, several Hollywood insiders report that NBC bosses were never that crazy about giving Louis–Dreyfus her own series in the first place. When they heard her pricetag — in the neighborhood of her current $600,000 per episode Seinfeld deal — they balked. How's this for an idea: Why not just leave well enough alone and give Seinfeld a proper burial? Even though the high–brow Fraiser proved there was life after Cheers' final call, it's safe to say nothing could touch the sustained brilliance of Seinfeld's run.

In other news of note, ABC's Bad As I Wanna Be: The Dennis Rodman Story was easily the worst two hours of television this year. It wasn't enough that Dwayne Adway was cast as Rodman (he looked nothing like him) but to add even more insult to injury, the producers got Rodman to add in stupid bits of commentary just before cutting to commercials.

Marty Keane is a Collegian columnist.

Romantic music from around the world

By Christopher Burns
Associated Press

ROMANTICA
Various
Putumayo World Music

Cupid can shoot arrows with all kinds of colors. In a sort of United Colors of Saint Valentine, this album spans four continents and pulls together artists all saying "I love you" each a little differently. It's a folk and world music cocktail from Congo to Scotland, Brazil to Nigeria, Uganda to Sudan to America, and Greece to Cameroon. Just in time for Valentine's Day, it's also a message of love to the needy: proceeds go to the aid group CARE.

CUARTETO DES MINDOS
Salane

Another globe-spanning musical peregrination, this is a stylistic butterfly's repertoire between Latin America and Europe from a talented quartet. And it comes with an implicit message of tolerance: some members of the quartet are in the human rights group Musique Esperance (esperance meaning hope), founded by the quartet's Argentine pianist Miguel Angel Estrella, jailed for three years as a political prisoner. The works range from traditional Boltvian and Peruvian song to Bartok, Ravel, Bach and de Falla, with a distinctly Latin flavor.

RELATERIE
Pierre Bouffard Trio
Boucherie /Scalen

Recorded in a chateau, this collection of mostly traditional French folk music shuns the techno age and sticks with winds and strings. Patrick Bouffard's on traditional mandolin-like instrument with a crank called a vielle a roue, Cyril Roche on a diatonic accordion and Benoit Mager on a bagpipe. They get vocal help from Anne-Lise Foy and an array of artists on clarinet, guitar, bass, drums, sax, harmonica and xylophone. It's like you stepped onto a movie screen with Martin Guerre or Manon of the Spring, and you might not want to find your way out.

PUKAR (CALLING YOU)
Najima
Mondo Melodia

Her conservative Muslim immigrant parents from India weren't about to let her plunge into the decadent music world as a teen in Britain. But she managed to persuade them, and the beautiful British-born Najima went on to become an internationally acclaimed singer of traditional Indian song. With her sensuous voice, she created a fusion with a tinge of Western winds, synth and other effects. Her mesmerizing voice in a performance with Robert Plant and Jimmy Page on an "MTV Unplugged" special back in the early 1990s confirmed her place in the pop world.

GENERATION FRANCAISE 3
Various
Bureau Export de la Musique Francaise

For years, Anglophone pop music has been a powerful force in spreading English around the world. Kids have strained their ears and tongues to make sense of their favorite English lyrics. The French government picked up on that, putting together pop collections complete with a study booklet to help teachers. And with British press recently recognizing that some French pop isn't half bad, there could be something to this.

COURTESY GABRIELLA BRANDSTETTER

A romantic favorite
Ethan Hawke and Julie Delpy fall in love European style in Before Sunrise

■ feast

continued from page5

1) In a large bowl, whisk together the lime juice, sugar, fish sauce and oil until well combined (emulsified). Add the onions and chiles and place in the fridge until well chilled.

2) When ready to serve, remove from fridge, give the mixture another whisking, add the cucumbers, mint and cilantro to the bowl and mix well to combine.

3) Serve immediately on top of a bed of lettuce.

Mirin and Sake Glazed Swordfish Steak Teriyaki

This is one of the simplest and tastiest methods I have ever created for cooking swordfish. It results in a steak that is golden brown and glistening on the outside and buttery soft and juicy on the inside. Perfect every time!

Ingredients:

2 ea. Swordfish steaks, about 1" thick, each weighing approx. 1/2 lb.
2/3 cup Mirin (Japanese sweet rice wine — for cooking)
1/3 cup Sake (dry rice wine)
1/2 cup Soy sauce
2 Tbs. Lemon juice
2 Tbs. Canola or veg. Oil
2 tsp. Sesame oil
Cooking spray or butter for sauteing.
Black pepper to taste
Chili powder to taste (optional)
2 tsp. Sesame seeds, toasted
Lemon slices and cilantro sprig, for garnish

Procedure:

1) In an adequately sized bowl, mix together the mirin, sake, soy sauce, lemon juice and both oils. Add the fish making sure it's completely submerged. Cover with plastic wrap and allow to marinate in the refrigerator for 20 minutes and up to three hours.

2) Preheat a non–stick saute pan over medium heat for three or four minutes. Apply cooking spray or add butter to pan.

3) Remove fish from fridge, wipe off excess marinade (reserve for later) and add to pan. Cook steak without moving around in pan for 3-4 minutes or until golden brown. Turn up heat to med.-high (this will counteract the cooling down of the pan due to the addition of the cold fish), flip the steak over and continue cooking for 4 more minutes or until just cooked through.

4) Remove from pan and place on a serving platter. Cover with aluminum foil to keep warm.

5) Turn up heat to high and add reserved marinade. Bring up to a boil, add pepper (and chili powder) and allow it to reduce down to a syrupy glaze. Remove foil from fish and then nape (pour on top of) with sauce. Sprinkle with sesame seeds and chopped scallions and serve with lemon wedges. Serving suggestion: This meal is made complete with a bowl of white rice and some steamed spinach topped with a little sesame oil.

Chocolate Covered Strawberries

This treat is the definition of the sexy dessert. Who knew it could be so easy to make something so seemingly extravagant?

Ingredients:

8 oz. Dark, bittersweet chocolate, roughly chopped
1 doz. Large strawberries, washed, dried and well–chilled.

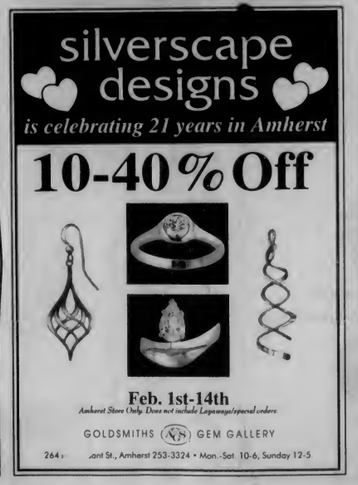
Procedure:

1) Place the chocolate in a nuke-safe bowl and microwave on full blast, stopping to stir every 30 seconds or so, until melted.

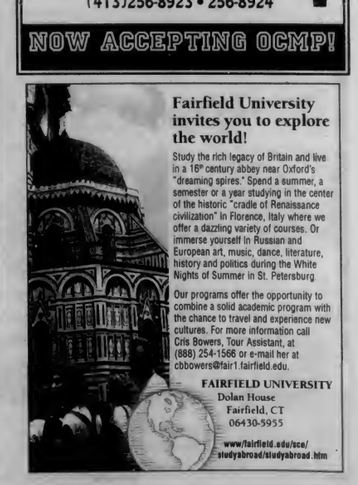
2) Holding the strawberries by the stem end, dip into the melted chocolate and then allow excess to run back off into the bowl.

3) Place dipped berries on tin foil and refrigerate until ready to serve.

Serving suggestion: Champagne (or sparkling wine) is a must with this dessert. It will also go well with all the dishes on this menu. I hope you try and enjoy them all!



Louis Davis is a Collegian columnist. You can e-mail him with any culinary questions, or with any comments about this column at LouieXO@aol.com



Networks examine coverage in aftermath of Lewinsky frenzy

By David Bauder
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Like addicts surveying wreckage after an all-night binge, many television executives are already looking back in horror at the frenzied coverage of President Clinton's alleged affair with an intern.

Sheepish self-analysis is coming even before most of the major questions about the Clinton story have even been answered. They shouldn't bother.

The way major news bursts across TV screens in cacophonous overload may have been surprising during the O.J. Simpson and Princess Diana stories, but it isn't anymore. And it shouldn't be ever again.

Seemingly every time a viewer clicked the remote in the story's initial stages, there was someone with something to say about the president and his presumed paramour, Monica Lewinsky. Three all-news cable channels, three broadcast news divisions, ever-expanding local news programs and a menu of newsmagazines made it hard to avoid.

Small wonder it leaves anchors like NBC's Tom Brokaw nostalgic for the days when he and ABC and CBS colleagues lorded over the big stories.

"I have felt for some time that the public feels that it's in a drowning pool, that this is information overload, constantly," he said. "The chain reaction goes to critical mass in about 30 seconds, and there's this huge explosion. And the fallout affects everyone."

During the past two weeks, polls showed that about two-thirds of viewers thought there was too much coverage. A backlash against this may also have contributed to Clinton's stunningpopularity ratings.

The wonderful contradiction, of course, is that many of the naysayers are glued to the tube. MSNBC's average number of daily viewers more than doubled to 165,000 households in the two weeks after the story broke, typical for the all-news channels.

Guess which set of numbers are considered more important in TV boardrooms?

"I think there's no turning back the clock on what some may have thought was a more genteel time, although I'm not sure that's really true," said Frank Sesno, CNN's Washington bureau chief. "We're just living in a world now where the information is free-flowing and sometimes free-form," he said. "You have 24-hour news."

The public is quick to blame the messengers when the news is difficult to digest, and that's certainly true of the Clinton story, CBS News President Andrew Heyward said.

"I don't think you can say that anybody was wrong to give extensive coverage to the story," he said. "What I do think you're seeing now is a lot of second-guessing, because there was a bit of a rush to judgment while there are still many, many more details that have to be learned."

Sam Donaldson may wish to take back his discussion about the imminent Gore presidency. Many reporters were also quick to feed off others' reports, leaving a blur of shadowy charges from unnamed sources about those people who may or may not have witnessed romantic liaisons.

Then there's the unfortunate story of the semen-stained dress. Widely alleged and then widely debunked, it will stand as a lesson on the dangers of rushing in dubious directions.

Pressure not to be caught short on a big story contributes to the atmosphere of excess.

When either ABC, CBS or NBC interrupts programming for a special news report, you can be fairly sure its rivals will do the same. CBS took heat for being a mere 20 minutes behind in airing one of Clinton's denials.

CBS's Dan Rather has said he didn't want to leave Cuba, where he was covering the pope's visit, to race to Washington to monitor the Clinton story. But when Brokaw and ABC's Peter Jennings left, he knew to head to the airport.

"If one had made the decision to stay .. I think he would have gotten killed in the press," Rather said on a CNN special about media coverage of the scandal. "He'd have gotten killed by his bosses internally. I just don't think it was practical to say no."

News executives can preach restraint all they want when it's quiet. It's different when news is breaking. And the factors that lead to overload in the public's mind are far beyond the ability of one person or network to control.

So get used to it. If you don't like it, find your own tuning mechanism.

"We dig for a living, and sometimes what we dig up is not very nice," Sesno said. "But that's what we do, and that's what we are supposed to do. That's what we will continue to do.

"That being said, we need to do it responsibly and not breathlessly, or we lose credibility with our viewers, readers and listeners. We also have to be mindful of the sheer volume of material and the fact that the public does not always distinguish one [news source] from the other.

"All we can do," he said, "is look at our own news organizations."

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

From the heart
An example of an antique valentine on exhibit at the Lord Jeffrey Inn in Amherst

■ movies

continued from page 5

Falk explains to a skeptical Fred Savage, the fantasy book The Princess Bride has everything — swordplay, pirates, princes and princesses, evil men with six fingers, near–deaths and castle sieges. Oh, and true love of the best kind. Cary Elwes, who's never been better since this role, plays the sarcastic, bold farm–boy turned dread pirate. The versatile Robin Wright is the angelic princess Buttercup. Part satire, part medieval adventure, part passionate romance, The Princess Bride is an all–time classic, if not for anything than for getting Andre the Giant to act.

write for arts now

Tinseltown tries to recapture glamour

By Amanda Covarrubias
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — It's an ambitious Hollywood project, with a budget sure to climb into the high millions with thousands upon thousands of potential customers. Yet the major studios want no part in it.

Presenting the makeover of Hollywood Boulevard, now in preproduction at development firms and city boardrooms across Los Angeles.

If a massive entertainment-retail complex proposed next door to the legendary Chinese Theater is greenlighted, it would set the stage for one of the grandest comebacks this town has ever seen. We're talking transformation here — the morphing of seedy Hollywood Boulevard into a fashionable shopping and eating district drawing foreign tourists and locals alike.

"It represents nothing less than a rebirth of the community," said Leron Gubler, executive director of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce. "It will be the catalyst that will push Hollywood to be what it used to be and regain its historical place in the entertainment industry."

It's no secret that the area of Los Angeles known as Hollywood — a name synonymous worldwide with the glamorous movie industry — has fallen on hard times.

A cruise down seven–mile Hollywood Boulevard is more likely to reveal hamburger joints, tacky T-shirt shops and tattoo parlors than movie stars and film premieres.

Decay began in the 1970s when the studios and their supporting trades moved to the suburbs, leaving Hollywood as just another blighted urban neighborhood. Only one major studio, Paramount Pictures, remains, down on Melrose Boulevard.

"It was a mistake not to put more resources into Hollywood," Gubler said. "It was allowed to go into a state of decline and once that happens, it's hard to stop."

Besides the rundown buildings, kitschy souvenir shops and ubiquitous panhandlers, the district has had to contend with sinking pavement caused by subway construction below the famous Walk of Fame sidewalk stars.

But such is the lure of "Hollywood" that 9 million tourists a year still flock to the boulevard, drawn by the Chinese Theater and the pink terra–cotta stars bearing the names of hundreds of entertainers.

AEROBICS
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
• Classes Daily
• Certified Instructors
• Suspended Wood Floor
• Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
498 West Street
South Amherst 256-0050

BACK TO SCHOOL SPECIAL
Pentium 166MMX Complete System Starting at $999
with 32MB Ram & 14" Color Monitor
• Custom Configured Systems
• Upgrades and Components
• Network Cards starting at $28
• $5 off any Network Card with this ad
Looking For a Computer?
Green Leaf Computers

amc
Hampshire 6 • 584 7050
Hampshire Mall
Mt. Farms 4 • 584 9153
Mt. Farms Mall
Wag The Dog (R)
Today at (5:50 @ $2.50) 8:40
Desperate Measures (R)
Today at (5:50 @ $2.50) 8:40
As Good As It Gets (PG-13)
Today at (5:30 @ $2.50) 8:20
Blues Brothers 2000 (PG-13)
Today at (5:40 @ $2.50) 8:30
Great Expectations (R)
Today at (5:30 @ $2.50) 8:30
Replacement Killers (R)
Today at (5:50 @ $2.50) 8:40
Spice World (PG)
Today at (5:50 @ $2.50) 8:40
Titanic (PG 13)
Today at (4:20 @ $2.50) 8:10
Good Will Hunting (R)
Today at (5:20 @ $2.50) 8:20
Deep Rising (R)
Today at (5:40 @ $2.50) 8:30

KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS
PRESIDENTS DAY SALE
ALL SKI & SNOWBOARD CLOTHING & ACCESSORIES 50% OFF
ALL HOCKEY EQUIPMENT & ACCESSORIES UP TO 50% OFF
LOWEST PRICES OF THE YEAR ON SKI & SNOWBOARD EQUIPMENT!
SELECTED ATHLETIC FOOTWEAR UP TO 50% OFF
ALL TEAM APPAREL T-Shirts, Jerseys, Sweats & Jackets 50% OFF
UNBEATABLE for 50 Years!
STORE LOCATIONS
Hadley, MA
Queensbury, NY
Latham, NY
Albany, NY
Watervliet, NY
Ithaca, NY
Newburgh, NY
Poughkeepsie, NY
Manchester, NH

Always in Bloom
Valentine's Day
Saturday, February 14th
Roses, Dutch & Exotic Bouquets
Specials
Available Locally only
Hugs, Kisses & Bud Huggers
Hugs: An adorable 8" white bear holding a red rose and a balloon $19.95
Kisses: A cuddly soft 12" white bear with a red rose and balloon $24.95
Bud Hugger: Bud vase with red rose and bear $15.00
253-5545 220 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-7228
WE DELIVER ANYWHERE

■ softball

continued from page 16

fill their shoes. The three graduates — Sam Cardenas, Stephanie Mareina, and Chris Martens — provided the Minutewomen with a lot of hitting power.

"We graduated three major contributors to the offensive punch of UMass softball," Sortino said. "Those three had been key contributors for four years. That lends itself to me as a question mark in terms of our ability to score runs in our offensive production."

In the outfield Sortino will replace Cardenas at third base with a freshman, Arnie Smith, who hails from Victorville, Calif. She will look to junior Octavia Brown to continue Mareina's consistency at center field. Chris Martens will return to the team this year, this time as an assistant coach.

JOSHUA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Kim Gutridge will once again patrol first base for the UMass softball team, which heads to Arizona this weekend to start a new season.

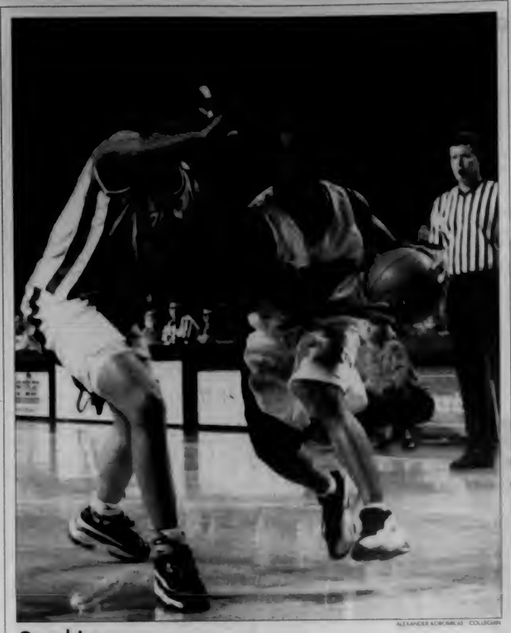
Casey Martin can ride on tour, U.S. judge says

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — A disabled golfer can ride a cart on the professional tour, a magistrate ruled yesterday in the first case invoking federal disabilities laws in a major sport.

U.S. Magistrate Thomas Coffin ruled that a golf course during a tournament is a place of pulic accommodation and is covered under the federal Americans With Disabilities Act.

He said Casey Martin's lawyers proved the 25-year-old golfer is disabled and entitled to a reasonable accommodation — which would include a cart.

Martin's lawsuit sought to force the Professional Golfer's Association Tour to accommodate his rare circulatory disorder that makes it painful and even dangerous to walk. His doctors say too much stress on his withered right leg could cause it to break, and may force amputation.



The PGA Tour contended that giving Martin a cart would not only give him an unfair advantage, but also would take away the fundamental aspect of athleticism and stamina that walking brings to top-flight tournament golf.

But Coffin, who deliberated just a couple of hours, ruled that giving Martin a cart would not significantly alter the sport. Martin's case generated a national debate over the rights of the disabled to compete in professional sports, and an outpouring of support for him. He was featured in a Nike "I Can" campaign and won the support of former presidential candidate Bob Dole.

In the PGA Tour's summation, its lawyer warned Coffin against allowing the strong public sympathy for Martin to cloud his judgment.

"I know, your honor, there is a substantial amount of public sympathy for Mr. Martin," lawyer William Maledon said. "I sympathize with Mr. Martin as well.

"That is not what this case is about," he said. "The right thing to do would be to decide this case based on the applicable law, not in accordance with public opinion."

ALEXANDER KOROMILAS / COLLEGIAN

Overdrive

The Massachusetts women's basketball team will face off against Atlantic 10 opponent Fordham tonight at 7 p.m. in the William D. Mullins Center.

Tennessee's Manning honored as best amateur athlete

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Peyton Manning, who failed to win the Heisman Trophy, can take heart. The Sullivan Award is all his.

The Tennessee quarterback yesterday became only the fourth football player in 68 years honored as the nation's top amateur athlete.

The announcement in Orlando, Fla., by the Amateur Athletic Union confirmed reports he had won.

Manning, who was driving to Knoxville for a funeral, could not be reached for comment. Archie Manning called the Sullivan Award a wonderful honor for his son.

"When you consider all the outstanding amateur athletes around the country, and it's just the fourth time there's ever been a football player to win it, that speaks for itself," Archie Manning said by phone from New Orleans.

The other football players to win the Sullivan were Florida State's Charlie Ward (1993) and Army's Arnold Tucker (1946) and Doc Blanchard (1945).

The award is based on athletic accomplishments, leadership, character and sportsmanship.

Manning returned to school last fall rather than entering the NFL draft earlier in the year.

He led Tennessee to a Southeastern Conference championship last season and a berth in the Orange Bowl against Nebraska. He also set career records for passing yardage (10,869) and touchdowns (84) at Tennessee and had the most 300-yard passing games in SEC history with 17.

Manning, who finished second to Michigan's Charles Woodson in Heisman balloting, is the first University of Tennessee athlete to win the Sullivan. He beat Tennessee basketball player Chamique Holdsclaw and former Wake Forest basketball player Tim Duncan.

Other finalists included swimmer Chad Carvin, former Florida State baseball player J.D. Drew, wrestler Les Gutches, South Carolina softball player Trinity Johnson, disability sports participant Linda Mastandrea, swimmer Jenny Thompson and gymnast Blaine Wilson.

Baseball has entire new look as spring training gets started

PHOENIX (AP) — So, where were we?

Moises Alou, Kevin Brown and Robb Nen were winning the World Series for the Florida Marlins.

The Milwaukee Brewers were playing in the American League. Pedro Martinez was in Montreal, Chuck Knoblauch in Minnesota and Kenny Lofton in Atlanta.

Davey Johnson still had a job. The Tampa Bay Devil Rays and Arizona Diamondbacks didn't have any players, not really.

Has it really been just 108 days since Edgar Renteria's two-out single in the bottom of the 11th inning ended Game 7 in Miami? Now, it's time for the sweetest sound of spring. No, not the shush of the Olympic bobsleds nor the swish of Michael Jordan's jumper.

Those magic words that baseball fans wait all winter to hear: It's time for pitchers and catchers to report to spring training. When camps start opening today — the Marlins, Cleveland and Cincinnati will be the first to get going — much of the major league landscape will have changed.

When the Marlins, who shed 12 members of their 25-man World Series roster in a salary purge, play the first exhibition game of the year Feb. 25, many of the differences will be readily apparent. There will be 30 teams this season. The expansion Diamondbacks and Devil Rays are well-stocked with familiar names, too.

Arizona signed Andy Benes and Jay Bell and traded for Matt Williams and Devon White, while Tampa Bay signed Roberto Hernandez, Wilson Alvarez and Wade Boggs and traded for Fred McGriff. Good enough to contend for a playoff spot? Maybe not, but in an era in which the Marlins zoomed from novices to No. 1 in only five years, anything is possible, especially when big bucks are involved.

"We're not going to be a typical expansion team by any stretch of the imagination," Arizona owner Jerry Colangelo said.

The Diamondbacks will head two hours south of Phoenix and train in Tucson, Ariz., and the Devil Rays will work out at St. Petersburg, Fla., just a few minutes from their home field. Several clubs will be in new places this spring. The Chicago White Sox left Sarasota, Fla., and shifted to Tucson, while the Cincinnati Reds packed up from Plant City, Fla., and moved into Sarasota.

The St. Louis Cardinals left St. Petersburg and will share a camp in Jupiter, Fla., with the Montreal Expos, who had been in West Palm Beach. The Atlanta Braves also left West Palm and will take up residence at the Disney Wide World of Sports complex in Kissimmee, Fla., near the entrance to the Magic Kingdom.

IRON HORSE

ALL AGES
ALL THE TIME

saturday, february 14, 7 & 10 pm
A Cappella Valentine:
5 O'Clock Shadow
and Drawn To Scale
plus the Amherst QQ (7 pm); the Smith Smithereens (10 pm), $10 adv

monday, february 16, 7 pm
THE BLACK REBELS
plus Children Of The Mercy Hill and a special guest - under $8 adv

tuesday, february 17, 10 pm
Geno Delafose &
French Rockin' Boogie
Zydeco dance party, $10 adv.

wednesday, february 18, 10 pm
Shift

saturday, february 21, 7 pm
WMUA Presents:
Danilo Perez
Monk-influenced Latin jazz pianist, $14.50 adv.

saturday, february 21, 10 pm
Burlap To Cashmere
Worlands groove favorites, $5 adv

sunday, february 22 10 pm
Servotron
plus Operation Re-Information
Man Or Astro-Man? and Speed

monday, february 23 7 pm
Blue Mountain

March 1 THE RODS, GRAVELPIT, AND BUTTHERS

TICKETS: For the Record at the Northampton Box Office and 586 8686.

24-HOUR CONCERT INFO
413 584 0431

daily special
(Mon - Thur)
2 for $19
sushi, seafood
and much much more

ICHIBAN 一番 authentic Japanese restaurant

Northampton, Mass
1 Roundhouse Plaza
(413) 585 -1185

• sushi bar
• tatami room
Japanese style small party room

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Daily 7 & 9:20 EXCEPT THIS FRIDAY 2:15 Reserves sat.
"Smart and Touching With a Very Warm Heart!"
ROBIN WILLIAMS MATT DAMON
GOOD WILL HUNTING
THE NEW FILM BY GUS VAN SANT
ACADEMY MUSIC Opening Friday NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

You'll Find A "Sweetheart" Of A Deal At...
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive

BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT CASE 30-12 OZ. CANS $11.49 + DEP
CORONA CASE 2-12 PK. BOTTLES $16.49 + DEP
Bass ALE 12 PK. BOTTLES $10.99 + DEP
PETE'S WICKED ALL FLAVORS 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99 + DEP
LITE, LITE ICE CASE 36-12 OZ. CANS $14.99 + DEP
ROLLING ROCK NATURAL LIGHT & ICE & ROLLING ROCK 1/2 KEGS $33.99 + DEP
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LT, BUD ICE, MICH, MICH LT, MICH AMBER BOCK, LITE, ICEHOUSE, RED DOG $39.99 + DEP

WINE OF THE MONTH
Cuvit CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, PINOT GRIGIO, CAB SAUV 750 ML $5.99
GEORGES DUBOEUF CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, CAB, SAUVIGNON 1.5 LT. $7.99
FRANZIA WHITE ZINFANDEL 5 LT. BAG IN A BOX $9.99
M & R ASTI SPUMANTE 750 ML. $7.99
MOET & CHANDON WHITE STAR 750 ML $21.99
FREIXENET CORDON NEGRO BRUT 750 ML SALE $5.99 MAIL-IN REBATE - 1.50 FINAL COST $4.49
KORBEL CHAMPAGNE EXTRA DRY, BRUT 750 ML $7.99

POPOV VODKA 1.75 L $10.99
McGREGOR'S SCOTCH 1.75 L $12.99
SEAGRAM'S GIN & LIME GIN 1.75 L $12.49
JAMESON PREMIUM IRISH WHISKEY 750 ML $14.49
Kahlúa COFFEE LIQUEUR 750 ML $12.99
AMARETTO DI SARONNO 750 ML $14.99

Discounts Available on Cases of Wine & Liquor. Ask For Details.

AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555

SALE PRICES THURS. 2/12/98 THRU WEDS. 2/18/98

Spring Break Fever
Party Hard Travel Safe
Cheap Tickets
Great Advice Nice people
Lima $603
Hong Kong $753
Tel Aviv $693
Los Angeles $355
Orlando $177
TAXES ARE ROUND TRIP, DO NOT INCLUDE $30.00. RESTRICTIONS APPLY.
Council Travel
STA Travel is an International Educational Exchanger
44 Main Street
Amherst
(413) 256-1261

■ track

continued from page 16

capable of defeating you on any given day — your junior teammate, sprinter Tom Toye.

"If I run a race and I let him get to me, I completely lose my focus," Price said.

The UMass track coaches have the luxury of witnessing this competition not only on Saturday meets, but during every practice of the week as well. This delights coach Ken O'Brien, because he knows that the best way to prepare for the fastest runners in the region is to, of course, run against one of the fastest runners in the region.

"When they're working out together they'll have someone to push them that's one of the best in the area," O'Brien said. "I don't see it as a rivalry, I see it as a benefit."

"I would rather have Tom on my team than not have him, and hold all these records and be 'The Man' and whip everybody on my team," Price said.

The two premiere sprinters train together regularly, and have gotten to know one another fairly well with the constant exposure and competition.

"We have a good relationship," Price said. "We use each other in that we know we're fortunate to have each other on the same team. We push each other."

"We get along great," Toye said. "We treat each other like training partners. When we're on the track, we're running for ourselves, but we hope the best for each other."

Driven by their side-by-side accelerated training opportunities, Price and Toye have made a tag team assault on the Massachusetts men's indoor track record book. Price recently set the school record for the 55m with a 6.43 second dash and Toye has cemented the UMass 400m mark with a 48.27 second run. On the Reggie Lewis track in Boston earlier this season, Price broke the team 200m record by five hundredths of a second. The previous owner of that record: Toye, with a time of 21.97.

The two have competed on the 4x400m relay team that claimed the Minuteman best at the Terrier Classic at Boston University two weeks ago, bettering the mark that both men helped set while running with a slightly different relay team a year ago. Price also holds the third and fourth spots on the school's all-time best 200m times.

Despite their ongoing tug-of-war with the 200m record, Toye and Price continue to encourage each other and neither reverts to jealousy or envy.

"I am a sprinter," Price said. "I can only do as well as I can do and he can only do as well as he can do."

When Saturday rolls around, the fun begins. When it's race time, the two square off to determine which one will be the fastest Massachusetts sprinter this week.

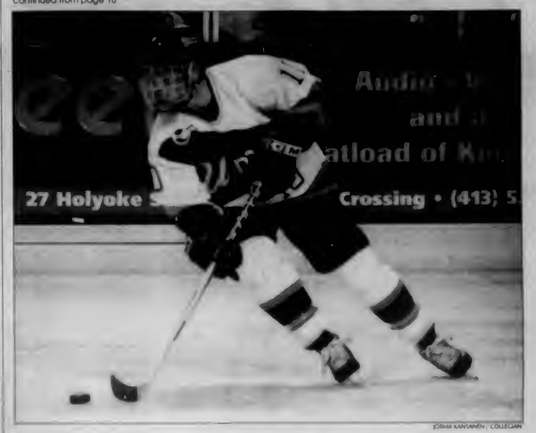
"When someone's running in the 55m or the 200m, they run their race," O'Brien said. "They don't worry about whether or not a brother or a teammate is in the lane next to them."

"It's like going to war," Toye said. "You just want to get to that line as fast as possible. You don't care who you have to run over to get there."

And so the season continues, and every weekend, the University of Massachusetts will bring to a meet the most exciting race around, Scott Price versus Tom Toye. Then they will pack up, come home and spoil their coaches for a week by engaging in the fiercest friendly competition available on a private level.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Tom Toye is in front of the pack, not only in his races, but in the UMass men's track record books as well.



SPORTS NOTICE

Attention all club, recreational and intramural athletes: The Collegian will once again run Sports Briefs, a weekly recap of UMass' non-varsity athletics. In order for the section to be successful, teams and athletes must bring information down to the Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, or fax it to 545-1592.

For more information on the section, which will begin next week, call Casey Kane at 545-0719.

■ hockey

continued from page 16

JOSHUA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Kris Wallis traveled from British Columbia to attend UMass, where he has been a solid contributor to the Minuteman squad.

things.

"Every game I feel better. It's a big step up. My hands and feet are a little bit slow after being out so long," said Turner. "Playing with [Tim] Lovell helps me out a lot because he's so quick. I'm getting close, but it will take the rest of the year for me to get it all back."

"Unfortunately, Jeff hurt his leg and missed the first half of the year, but he's really recovered well, probably well before anyone though that he would recover," Mallen said. "He's a real good two-way player and can cover both ends of the ice."

Stranger in a strange land

The first thing that comes to mind when you talk to Wallis regards his college decision. After all, why would the Aggasiz, British Columbia native want to travel 3,000 miles away from home and into another country to go to college?

"More or less, it came down to that UMass gave me the best opportunity, both for school and for hockey," said Wallis, the all-time leading scorer in the history of the Nanaimo Clippers of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League. "To tell you the truth, one of the main reasons why I came here is because of the sports management program. A lot had to do with the hockey too. This is one of the best divisions in the country."

Wallis has stepped right into the thick of things for the Minutemen. He is the leading scorer among UMass freshmen, and has centered the top line on numerous occasions this season.

"Yes and no [this is what I expected.] I put a lot of high expectations on myself to be successful and to play at the highest level that I can," Wallis said. "As far as getting points, I really don't think about that kind of stuff. It's the amount of wins that we've got at the end of year. Right now we've got a couple of wins, but we've got to pick it up in that category. When you're a winning team, good things happen to you."

Wallis netted his first collegiate goal against UMass- Lowell on Nov. 14, and has since lit the lamp against Merrimack (twice, on Jan. 16), Providence and Princeton.

"Wallis is a guy that can make a play as well as any guy on our team. He sees the ice really well and finds the open man," Mallen said.

The road ahead

For the trio and the rest of the Minutemen, the objective for the final three weeks of the regular season is simple: qualify for the Hockey East playoffs.

"We all know what's on the line. Friday and Saturday (both at Maine) are going to be big games," Gates said. "We're just looking to go in and play as hard as we can and come out with two wins."

"I think that we just have to work hard. In the sweep of Providence and Merrimack we had 20 guys who went out there and played hard and did their jobs two nights in a row," Wallis said. "Last weekend I don't know what the deal was. We had only a handful of guys who did that, and it wasn't enough. It doesn't matter if you're a senior, freshman, or whatever, you have to work hard in this league every night if you want to win."

Bringing a Hockey East title to Amherst

With such a large freshman class, the Minutemen will reap the benefits of youth, not only this year, but beyond. The fact that many of these freshmen, like Gates, Turner and Wallis, are gaining valuable experience this year means only good things for the future of the Massachusetts hockey program.

"I don't hope, I know that we're going to be a winning team in the future. I think that all of us have to take that role of doing whatever we can to help the team win. I know that if we do that as a group then we'll be competing for a championship," Turner said.

Turner's teammates echoed those thoughts.

"We want to win the Hockey East Championship. I think that we have the team and the personnel to do it," Gates said. "We have to come to the rink prepared and ready to go, but there's no question in my mind that we can do it."

"Hopefully the program will get up to an NCAA tournament bid. It's one of our goals here, and we want to win Hockey East, too. The program has taken a step in the right direction with this year's class and the class that's coming in next year," Wallis said.

And with a large freshman class, the Minutemen will reap the benefits of youth, not only this year, but beyond. The fact that many of these freshmen, like Gates, Turner and Wallis, are gaining valuable experience this year means only good things for the future of the Massachusetts hockey program.

"I don't hope, I know that we're going to be a winning team in the future. I think that all of us have to take that role of doing whatever we can to help the team win. I know that if we do that as a group then we'll be competing for a championship," Turner said.

Turner's teammates echoed those thoughts.

"We want to win the Hockey East Championship. I think that we have the team and the personnel to do it," Gates said. "We have to come to the rink prepared and ready to go, but there's no question in my mind that we can do it."

"Hopefully the program will get up to an NCAA tournament bid. It's one of our goals here, and we want to win Hockey East, too. The program has taken a step in the right direction with this year's class and the class that's coming in next year," Wallis said.

And what is Mallen's take on this bunch?

"I think that these guys can all be real good players in our league. This has been a good learning experience for them," Mallen said. "They've found out how tough it is to play college hockey and strong and fast you have to be. They have the ability to move up in the league in points, and we're counting on all three of them to be a solid part of our organization."

ONE LOVE. ONE HEART. ONE GREAT PARTY!!!
IT'S THAT TIME OF YEAR WHEN THOUSANDS OF STUDENTS COME TO JAMAICA TO FEEL ALRIGHT - FOR AN UNBELIEVABLE PRICE!!!
PACKAGE INCLUDES:
• Round-Trip Airfare
• 7 Nights Hotel Accommodations
• Round-Trip Airport & Hotel Transfers
• Free Welcome, Beach & Evening Parties
• Free Admission to Night Clubs
• Discounts on Restaurants, Water Sports & Side Excursions
• Resort Packages Available from $499
• Professional On-Site Tour Reps
• Complete Weekly Activities Program Offering Optional Sunset Cruise, Dunn's Cruise, Toga Party a Blow!
• Free Bonus Party Pack
SUN SPLASH TOURS 1 800-426-7710
STUDENT TRAVEL SERVICES 1 800-648-4849
Price is per person based on quad occupancy, NY, BWI/Wash, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus, Nashville, New Orleans, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh departures. Other cities may qualify for reduction or require surcharge. US and Jamaica departure taxes (currently $57) and $6 handling charge additional. Add $30 for 3/6, 7/8/98 bookings. Rates increase $30 mi 12/15/97. Peak-week surcharges/off-week discounts may apply. Restrictions and cancellation penalties apply. Limited availability. Subject to change without notice. Call for full details on hotel selection and availability.

Spirit Haus

YOU HAVE TO SEE IT TO BELIEVE IT!

LIQUOR SPECIALS
Jack Daniels $13.99/750 ml
Bacardi Limon $9.99/750 ml
Jagermeister $14.99/750 ml
Boones Wines 5 for $9.99

MICRO BREWS
Saranac All Flavors $4.99/6 pack + dep
Old Saddleback Stock Ale & IPA $4.99/6 pack + dep
JW Dundee Honey Brown $6.99/+dep
Mill City Old Nutcracker $8.99/12 pack bottles + dep

BEER SPECIALS
Bud Dry Case of Bottles $9.99 + dep
St Pauli Girl 12-Pack Bottles $8.99 + dep
Molson Golden 18-Pack cans $9.99 + dep
Rolling Rock 1/2 Keg $35.99 + dep

Micro Kegs In Stock
DISCOVER, VISA, MASTERCARD ACCEPTED - OPEN 9am to 11pm
RT. 9 EAST / 338 COLLEGE ST (413)253-5384 / TAKE 391 TO EXIT 19 / RT. 9 east
Full Redemption Center

NEW AEROBICS
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
• Classes Daily
• Certified Instructors
• Suspended Wood Floor
• Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst, 256-0050

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING
• 50% Student Discounts
• Right in Amherst
• Space is Limited! Call...
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
Free Info Session Wed. Feb. 25th @ 7:00 pm, Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst Common

MEET TWO TRAVELERS
WHO JUST HAD A GOOD NIGHT'S SLEEP

SHE STAYED AT A HOSTEL
and with the money she saved on her accommodation, she had breakfast at a trendy café, toured the famous sights, saw a band at a local club and still had enough change left over to make a phone call home.

HE STAYED AT A HOSTEL
and with the money he saved on his accommodation, he had breakfast at a trendy café, toured the famous sights, saw a band at a local club and still had enough change left over to make a phone call home.

With a Hostelling International membership card you get access to affordable accommodation at nearly 5,000 hostels in over 70 countries. So if you're planning a trip, get the HI card and join 4 million members worldwide who save every time they travel. For your HI card visit our website, call us at 202-783-6161 or contact your local student travel specialist.

Join on-line today: www.hiayh.org

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

AUTO FOR SALE

VW Fox 89 165000 miles Good condition New starter, tires, mufflar, brakes Oil changed every 3000 miles Great car for $1075 546-3060

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid! everyday 1-800-949-4795

COMPUTERS

CHEAP! CHEAP! Color VGA Monitor- $55 Laptop Notebook- $39 486 Computer System- $295 Call CPC (413)584-8857

Upgrades and Systems
8MB EDO Ram $17 PNP Ethernet Cards $19 Canon BJC-240 Color Printer $129, and more. MC/VISA Accepted. Free delivery. Installation Available. GreenLeaf Computers 256-6116

EMPLOYMENT

House Boys Wanted- Sigma Alpha Mu Fraternity. If interested please contact Randy or Lee at 549-8023 Must belong to Greek Area. Meal included.

COUNSELORS- TOP BOYS SPORTS CAMP IN MAINE! Exciting, fun summer! Openings in: All Land Sports, All Water Sports. PLUS: Camping/Hiking, Ropes/Climbing Wall, SCUBA, Archery, Riflery, Martial Arts RN's, Secretaries Top Salaries, Awesome Facilities, Rm/Bd/Travel CALL the (800)NUMBER NOW. (800)473-6104, or E-MAIL cobcheckie@aol.com or write Steve Robin, CAMP COB-BOSSEE, 19 Silvermine Dr., South Salem, NY 10590.

Tour Counselors/Tour Directors to lead teenagers on 3-6 week adventures in Canada and U.S.A. Must be 20 years of age or older by July 1. Enormous responsibility coupled with unique travel opportunities. Contact Westcoast Connection 800-767-0227

EMPLOYMENT

Counselors for co-ed Northeast PA, overnight Jewish camp- 3 hours from NYC- general, sports, drama, H20 & arts 1-800-973-3866

HAVE AN AMAZING SUMMER! Prestigious coed camp in Massachusetts seeks caring, motivated college students who love kids! GENERAL & SPECIALTY COUNSELORS needed. Join a dedicated, fun team. Competitive salaries. Camp Jaconic 1-800-762-2620

Undergraduate Business Consultant
Gain Accounting Experience, Leadership Skills and General Business Experience 10-15 hrs per week. Flexible schedule. Must be self motivated, able to work as part of a team. Sophomores and Junior's encouraged to apply. Pick up an application at the Center for Student Business, 408 Student Union (questions, call 545-2166 Deadline for apps. Mon. Feb 16.

Personal Care Attendant for male quad. Weekday mornings and Saturday evenings $7.85 per hour Call 548-0966

College Marketing Opportunity
Student Advantage seeks aggressive, reliable Campus Managers to develop and maintain local program for nations largest savings program. Sales experience preferred. Comp. $1,000-$2,000. Flexible hours. Fax resume, HR Dept. Student Advantage (617)266-8882 or call Anthony at (617)912-7040.

Summer Opportunities
Musikar Tours and Summer Discovery are looking for counselors for our student travel programs and/or our pre-college enrichment programs. Applicants must be 21 years old by June 15, 1998. We need mature, hardworking, energetic individuals who can dedicate 6-7 weeks this summer working with teenagers. A director will be on campus at UMASS on February 24. Please call for more information/application or to set up an interview at 888-8SUMMER

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ For Hire: Professional DJ spinning all types of music now booking for Spring Semester Check me out at Pruddy's on Thursday. Tim (DJ Fooz) 253-6589

Your classified could go here!!!

EMPLOYMENT

NATIONAL PARK EMPLOYMENT- Parks, Forests, Wildlife Preserves. Ask us how! 517-324-3109 Ext. N50012

Whitewater Raft Guides Needed in Western MA. Full or Part-time available. No experience necessary. We will train. Looking for athletic, personable people who like to work hard in the outdoors. Call Crab Apple Whitewater (413)339-0189 for more information and an application.

Full-Time Summer Position Available at Crab Apple Whitewater for a Photo Technician at our Minilab. Job entails developing film and printing pictures. No experience necessary but some past use of lab helpful! Call (413)339-0189 for info and an application.

CRUISE SHIP & LAND-TOUR JOBS Discover how to work in exotic locations, meet fun people, while earning a living in these exciting industries! For more information 517-324-3092 Ext C50012

EXCEPTIONAL SUMMER OPPORTUNITY- Camp Wayne, NE PA (Dirs/NYC)- Sports oriented. Counselor/Specialists for all Land/Water Sports including Tennis, Camping, Climbing/Ropes, Mountain Biking, Rocketry, Roller Hockey, Sailing/Waterskiing, Adv., Drama, Radio, Video. Campus Interviews Tues, March 3rd. Please call 1-888-737-9286 or 516-883-3067. Leave your name, phone number and mailing address.

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ For Hire: Professional DJ spinning all types of music now booking for Spring Semester Check me out at Pruddy's on Thursday. Tim (DJ Fooz) 253-6589

Your classified could go here!!!

ENTERTAINMENT

Gorilla-Grams
Balloons; roses; poems, etc Send the Crazy Gorilla on Valentine's Day. Sign up in the Newman Center on 2/10 and 2/12. Student Rates Available Info call (413)781-9696

FOR RENT

SUMMER RENTALS CAPE COD GROUP Summer Rentals- Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Diamond Real Estate (508)477-1900

Fridge Rentals Free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

Pick-Up Cap Black, used on Toyota 4x4 $350. River 546-6363

Corwood For Sale $125 Cord Call 549-5466

HEALTH & BEAUTY

New Metabolism Breakthrough Lose 5-100 pounds. Dr Approved! Cost $35. 800-563-0386

Acupuncture and Herbal Medicine National Board Certified Licensed 549-6542

University Bartending Course 50% Student Discount National Certification Available Spring Sessions This Semester Space Is Limited 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

LOST

Lost- Black Sweater Herter Hall on Jan 28th Please call 665-8394

INSTRUCTION

EARN $750-$1500/WEEK
Raise all the money your student group needs by sponsoring a VISA Fundraiser on your campus. No investment & very little time needed. There's no obligation, so why not call for information today. Call 1-800-323-8454 x 95

MISCELLANEOUS

FREE T-SHIRT + $1000
Credit Card fundraisers for fraternities, sororities & groups. Any campus organization can raise up to $1000 by earning a whopping $5.00/VISA application. Call 1-800-932-0528 ext 65. Qualified callers receive

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

FREE T-SHIRT.
For Sale- Didjeridu Hand made, hand painted, by student $20 with lesson. 253-7342

MUSICIANS WANTED

BARBERSHOP QUARTET FORMING
No haircutting involved, just solid ecapella singing Call Daniel 665-7981

PERSONALS

Sporty, toe-loving 2PC seeks equally fun companion for Spring Break. Please contact me at www.ebswim.com if interested.

"Say that you love me!"- Fleetwood Mac free love and valentines at www.studentadvantage.com/spd

ROOM FOR RENT

Rooms For Rent Very close to campus. Females only. $1200 semester. Call 549-7145 or (508)655-5822

SERVICES

Rental Problems Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new home or apartment? Contact The Students' Legal Services Office 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

STEREO & CD EQUIP

200 Watt 3-Way Speakers For Sale. Never used. $450 or B/O Steve 546-3042.

Car Stereo Equipment Kenwood Detach Face- 1 year old, paid $350. 1 amp 100x2, paid $150. 1 amp 100x4, paid $100. 1 pair Pioneer 6x9 speakers, 100w, paid $110. Whole system sounds great, needs nothing. Selling as package deal for $300. Call 546-3842.

TICKETS

Sarah McLachlan/Billy Joel/NCAA Men's Basketball/Eric Clapton. 2 Guys Tickets- 1-888-345-TIXX

TRAVEL

Miami only $79 O/W. Mexico/Caribbean or San Juan $200 R/T Europe $179 O/W. Other world wide destinations cheap. ONLY TERRORISTS CAN GET YOU THERE CHEAPER! Arc Tech (212)219-7000 (800)575-TECH http://www.arctech.com

EARLY BIRD SPECIAL EUROPE- SUMMER '98
Northeast Dep's- $329 R/T Caribb/Mexico- $199 R/T Florida- $79 O/W Puerto Rico- $99 O/W (800)326-2009 http://www.airhitch.org

Spring Break '98
Cancun, Mexico from $419!!! R/T airfare, 7 night hotel, transfers, plus sign up now and receive 2 free breakfasts and lunches. Don't miss out on one of the hottest spots in Mexico!!! Call Amanda today!! 800-244-4463. Visit our Website at www.collegetours.com

Alternative Spring Break
Yogafest Week, Music, Dance, Meditation, Vegetarian, Missouri Ozarks, Ride Shares, $165. FREE MEALS!!! (800) 9 5 6 2 3 8 7 http://members.aol.com/yogafest

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK!

24 HOURS OF FREE DRINKS!
CANCUN * BAHAMAS
7 nights from $429!
Includes round trip air, transfers, hotel, parties, taxes & more!
Organize a small group- Earn free trips plus commissions! Call 1-800-SPRING BREAK
Spring Break Travel
1-800-838-8203

KILLINGTON- SPRING BREAK
Want a great time for a low price? Go to Killington for Spring Break! Starting at $249, includes 5 day lift ticket, 5 nights @ Mountain Green. UMASS SKI N BOARD CLUB 545-3437

JAMAICA- SPRING BREAK IN NEGRIL Don't get ripped off! Go with who you can trust. No hidden costs, starting @ $539- 7 nights, round trip air, transfers. Collegiate Beach & Party Events. On-site staff. UMASS SKI N BOARD CLUB 545-3437

Spring Break- Cancun and Nassau from $399. Air, hotel, transfers, parties, and more! Organize a small group- Earn free trips plus commissions! Call 1-800-SPRING BREAK. 1-800-777-4642

#1 Spring Break from $119! FREE SPRING BREAK AND PARTIES- ORGANIZE A GROUP! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Barbados, Florida. Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK 98
Free food and drinks! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica and Florida from $399! Organize a small group and travel FREE! Highest commissions and lowest prices. Call Surf & Sun Tours to become a campus representative (800)574-7577

TRAVEL

Internships Available!
Collegian Business Office is Now Taking Applications. Positions Available in:
- Marketing
- Promotions
- Finance
- Business
- Advertising

Applications are available at our office in room 113 Campus Center (in the basement) or call 545-3500 if you have any questions.

Spring Break '98 Get Going!!! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas & Florida. Group Discounts & Free Drink Parties! Sell 5 & go free! Book Now!!! Visa/MC/Disc/Amex 1-800-234-7007 http://www.endlesssummertours.com

TUTORS WANTED

Tutors Needed for Econ, BioChem, CmpSci Contact The Bilingual Collegiate Program at 545-1988 or 545-1987

USED BOOKS

American Popular Music CD's $30 546-1027

Did You Check-out The Classified's Valentine's Day Special Issue ?

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be processed by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of text can be placed.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthdays or transformations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals that may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Postcards may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The per sonals section does NOT be used to sell items, rent roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad listed on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and file to error number that must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identity, errors or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

NEW Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
AUTO PARTS
CHILDCARE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
COMPUTERS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FURNITURE
GREEK ANNOUCEMENTS
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HEALTH & BEAUTY
HOUSES FOR RENT
HOUSES FOR SALE
HOUSESITTING
JEWELERY
INSTRUCTION
LOST & FOUND (5 DAYS FREE)
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MISCELLANEOUS FOR RENT
MOTORCYCLES
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
MUSIC LESSONS
MUSICIANS WANTED
PERSONALS
PETS FOR SALE
RESUMES
RIDES WANTED
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SPORTS
STEREO & CD EQUIP.
SUMMER SUBLET
TELEWORKING FOR SALE
TICKETS
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
TUTORING SERVICES
TUTOR WANTED
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED GENERAL
WORLD WIDE WEB
YARD SALES

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, FEB. 12

Auditions— Auditions for the UMass improvisational comedy troupe Mission IMPROVable will be held at 7 p.m. in Campus Center 163. No experience necessary. For more information contact Aaron at 546-5225.

Class— Weekly yoga and meditation class will be held in Butterfield Lounge at 8 p.m. A visiting yoga monk will be teaching. For more information call 253-9553.

Meeting— The UMass Queen Fan Club will meet in the Cape Cod Lounge at 4 p.m. New members are welcome. For more information, contact Sabrina at 546-4938.

Meeting— The Prevet/Animal Science Club will be holding its second in a series of meetings in Paige Lab 202 at 7 p.m. Any questions, please contact Brian at 256-6022. Refreshments will be served.

Talk— Robyn Ochs will be speaking as part of the GLBT Studies Lecture Series in Campus Center 803. The topic is to be announced. For more information contact the Stonewall Center at 545-4824.

FRIDAY, FEB. 13

Concert— The Outing Club will be presenting a free concert featuring Entrain with special guest Particle Zoo. It will take place at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium.

Service— Shabbat Service will be held at 6 p.m. at Hillel House.

NOTICES

Schedules— The Spring '98 Final Examination Schedule will be available beginning Thursday, March 12. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the Registrar's office (213 Whitmore). It will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning March 1 at http://www-ureg.admin.umass.edu

PYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Writing — Spectrum Magazine is taking submission for the next edition of the magazine. The deadline is Feb. 12. For more information, call the office at 545-2240 or come by in the Student Union, room 406E.

exercise your freedom of speech. . .

TAKE OUT A COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED.

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Ch.
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 International
15 UMass Academic TV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV-19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN SI
25 Headline News
26 UCTV
27 TBS
28 BET
29 TV Land
30 Univision
31 Comedy Central
32 Cartoon
33 Much Music

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 12, 1998

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Marathon Monks of Mount Hiei		Mystery! "Cadfael" "The Virgin in the Ice" (R)		Keeping Up		Thai Chi Hse.
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV	Olympic Winter Games						News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Olympic Winter Games						News	Nightline
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	When Cars Attack (In Stereo)		"Perfect Getaway" (1998, Drama) Antonio Sabato Jr.				News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Full House	BoyWorld	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	* "Dolly" (1987, Drama) Matthew Broderick,				News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends (R)	Seinfeld (R)	ER "Pilot" (R) (In Stereo)				News	Tonight Show
WTXX	6	Cheers	Med Abo, You	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Honey, I Shrunk the Kids		Fame L.A. (In Stereo)		News	Grace Under	Vibe
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Friends (R)	Seinfeld (R)	ER "Pilot" (R) (In Stereo)				News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Hms Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	World's Funniest! (In Stereo)		New York Undercover		News		Simpsons	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends (R)	Seinfeld (R)	ER "Pilot" (R) (In Stereo)				News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		This Old Hse.	Drs. on Call	Mystery! "Cadfael" "The Virgin in the Ice" (R)		Foto-Novelas		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	When Cars Attack (In Stereo)		"Perfect Getaway" (1998, Drama) Antonio Sabato Jr.				News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Mad Abo, You	Med Abo, You	Seinfeld	Frasier	Moesha (R)	Clueless (R)	NBA Basketball Boston Celtics at Utah Jazz. (Live)				Real TV
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Andy Griffith	Andy Griffith	Thunder		Thunder				It's "They Live" (1988, Science Fiction) Roddy Piper,
A&E	69	Northern Exposure "Homa"		Law & Order (Part 1 of 2)		Biography: Frank Costello		American Justice "Hot Pursuit"		Unexplained "CIA Psychics"		Law & Order
CNN	49	Worldview		Moneyline	Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	36	Stuck in '80s	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	* "Haunted Honeymoon" (1986, Comedy) Gene Wilder,				Stuck in '80s	Make-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	67	Wings "Eagle Over Lebanon"		Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery: Elephants		Strange-True	Movie Magic	Wings "Whispering Death" (R)		Justice Files "Out for Justice"
ESPN	43	Up Close	Sportscenter		College Basketball:	Minnesota at Iowa. (Live)			College Basketball:	Cincinnati at St. Louis. (Live)			Sportscenter
LIFE	71	Supersmarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait: Carrot		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Desperate Journey: The Allison Wilson Story," (1993) Mel Harris,				Almost Perfect	Golden Girls
MTV	70	MTV Live (In Stereo)		My So-Called Life (In Stereo)		Road Rules		Road Rules	Road Rules	NBA All-Star Bash (In Stereo)		Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	68	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Secret of Alex	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Love Lucy	M.T. Moore	Taxi	Newhart
SCIFI	73	Quantum Leap		Sequest 2032 "Resurrection"		Sightings (In Stereo)		Forever Knight (In Stereo)		Robocop: The Series		Sequest 2032 "Resurrection"
TLC	74	Renovation	Renovation	Home Again	Home Again	Medical Detect Without Warn.		Century of Flight		Extreme Machines (R)		Medical Detect Without Warn.
TNT	63	Lois & Clark-Superman		Babylon 5 "Soul Mates"		* "The Return of a Man Called Horse" (1976, Western) Richard Harris,						* "Uzumi's Raid" (1972) Burt Lancaster,
USA	65	Baywatch (In Stereo)		Highlander: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger		 "Renegades" (1989, Drama) Kiefer Sutherland				Silk Stalkings (R) (In Stereo)
HBO	53	* "Romeo & Juliet" (1996, Drama) Leonardo DiCaprio. PG-13				* "Priest" (1995, Drama) Al Pacino, Robert De Niro, Jr. (In Stereo)						Shock Video 2: Crime
MAX	55	(4:30)		 "Black Sheep" (1996) Chris Farley. PG-13		* "Splash" (1984, Comedy) Tom Hanks. (In Stereo) PG				* "The Savage" (1952) Charlton Heston.		* "The Nurse" (R)
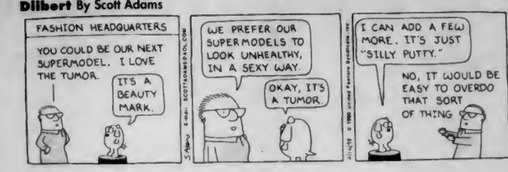
SHOW	45	(5:45) "Romeo + Juliet" (1997) Leo (Jam. PG)		Filmmaker		* "Sneakers" (1992, Adventure) Robert Redford. PG-13				+ "Lap Dancing" (1996) Lorissa McComas. "R"		Stargate SG-1

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Non Sequitur By Wiley



Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Sven By Stephen Higgins

Hey Sven, know your brain? Thought about what it might be for with those four fingers?
Sven!
Sven!
Sven!

Freshman trio making big impact on UMass key

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

What a long, strange trip it has been for R.J. Gates, Jeff Turner and Kris Wallis.

The trio, all freshman on the Massachusetts hockey team, are experiencing first–hand what college hockey is all about during a tumultuous 1997–98 season for the Minutemen.

"The one thing about them is that all three guys were well– prepared coming in. They all came out of junior hockey, and have made a good, positive impact," UMass coach Joe Mallen said. "All three guys have a real good work ethic. Like all of our freshmen, they have a lot of enthusiasm, and that's something that's really good for our program."

The similarities, however, really don't go much farther. Teammates? Yes. Quality hockey players? Yes. Learning the hockey ropes while adjusting to college life? Yes.

The road traveled for each player has been different, but someway, somehow, they have ended up together in Amherst.

Walking–on into the fire

For Gates, a stellar four–year career for the Enfield (Conn.) Junior Whalers of the Eastern Junior Hockey League, didn't raise too many eyebrows amongst college coaches. The Plainville, Conn. native received no scholarship offers and was left to wonder where his hockey future was heading.

"I was pretty surprised [about not having any scholarship offers.] Playing for the Junior Whalers for four years is pretty rare," said Gates, who was named the EIHL Defensive Player of the Year in 1996–97. "I decided to come here because they said that I was going to get an opportunity just like any scholarship athlete and because I got accepted into my major, sports management. That was a big thing too."

So after talking to Mallen and the UMass staff, Gates decided to continue his playing days in the Pioneer Valley.

"R.J.'s a recruited walk–on. We don't take too many guys in that role anymore because we try to utilize our scholarship money," Mallen said. "He's done a real nice job. Hockey East is such a tough league, and guys like Keith Tkachuk and Tony Amonte, who are playing in the Olympics now, had eight goals their freshman year, and he's up to seven now."

You wouldn't know that Gates is a walk–on, though, when you look at his stats. His seven goals is tops among UMass freshmen, and he was named Hockey East Rookie of the Week in November.

"I've been very surprised that all of this has happened. When the season started I was just looking to get into a game," said Gates. "I was kind of hoping to get into the lineup and get a few points here or there, but to get seven goals has been great."

And with those seven goals, Gates has propelled himself as to one of the top surprises not only on the UMass squad, but in Hockey East.

"R.J. is a kid who we've been watching for the past couple of years. We though that he might wind up going somewhere else, but this is the place where he really wanted to go, and we gave him an opportunity," Mallen said. "He's a good penalty killer who's not afraid to block shots and plays tough."

From hockey player to spectator... and back again

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

A walk–on player, R.J. Gates has brought a strong offensive presence to the UMass hockey team this year.

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Jeff Turner has seen limited ice time for the UMass hockey team after an injury sidelined him for the early part of the season.

Turner caught a bad break — literally — before the season even got underway when he fractured his left fibula. The result was that Turner was demoted to the role of spectator for the first 16 games of the season.

"Hockey–wise that was the hardest thing that I've ever had to go through [sitting out because of the injury.] I love to play and the team was struggling and I wanted to do whatever I could to help," Turner said. "Watching the guys out there every day playing and practicing and struggling to win games was hard, really hard."

The Saginaw, Mich. native made a surprising move by attending UMass. Still, it is a decision that he sticks by and is glad he made.

"Ever since I graduated high school I wanted to leave Michigan. That's the thing to do: to go to school in Michigan," said Turner. "If you're a hometown boy you go to the hometown school, and I just wanted to get away and experience a different place. I came to Massachusetts on a visit and I liked it a lot. The people were great and I decided to come out here."

Turner returned to the Minutmen lineup during the Air Force series, and scored his first collegiate goal against Merrimack on Jan. 17. Since then the main objective for Turner has been to get back into the swing of

Turn to HOCKEY, page 13

Softball season starts in Arizona

Danielle Henderson leads strong returning group

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

It's that time of year again. The Massachusetts women's softball team headed off to Arizona yesterday to compete in the Coca–Cola Classic in Phoenix.

This is the fourth year in a row that UMass has started off its season at the Coca–Cola Classic. It will be the first test of the season for the Minutewomen, who are beginning this season ranked No. 12 in the country by the USA Today/NFCA coaches poll. UMass earned the ranking after its spectacular campaign last season, when it advanced all the way to the Women's College World Series.

"For the team, and for all of us, that was the thrill of a lifetime," coach Elaine Sortino said. "I had been there before, but none of the players had ever been there. When you're a little kid, that's the stuff you dream of."

The Minutewomen will face a slew of tough competition in the tournament, which is hosted by Arizona State. Beginning at 1 p.m. tomorrow, they will take on Cal State Fullerton, and then at 5:30 p.m. No. 3 Washington, a WCWS semifinalist. On Saturday at 5:30 p.m. they will face the University of Las Vegas, and then at 7:30 p.m. No. 14 Long Beach State. Finally, on Sunday UMass will go against Alabama at 10 a.m., and finish with a rematch against the team that eliminated the Minutewomen from the World Series last year, No. 2 Fresno State.

"We have, this weekend in Arizona, the toughest schedule we've ever had," Sortino said. "We have six games against very, very competitive softball teams. There is no mercy, there is no break."

Sortino is returning for 19th year as head coach of the program. With her 565–267–3 career record she is the winningest coach in the history of the school, a five time Atlantic 10 coach of the year, the 16th winningest softball coach in the nation and the winningest softball coach in the Northeast.

Last year was the second time in school history that Sortino led her players to the World Series. The team also advanced in 1992, where it finished third. This time around, however, things are different. In '92 UMass lost eight of nine starters to graduation. This year they return seven of the nine.

"Those kids not only got a opportunity to go there, but they also get to come back and play again," Sortino said. "There's a legacy in that, it drives you to achieve."

UMass advanced to the WCWS by first winning the school's 10th regular season A–10 title, and 10 post–season title to go to the NCAA Play–In series. They competed against Metro–Atlantic champion Canisius, sweeping them, 1–0 and 10–0.

The Minutewomen then went on the the NCAA Regionals at Totman Field. On the last day of competition they won three straight games, one against Boston College and two over top regional seed Colorado State, to send them on their way to the World Series in Oklahoma City.

Leading the charge for the Minutewomen was pitcher Danielle Henderson, then a sophomore. Throughout the 1997 season Henderson broke several school records and passed several milestones to earn All–America honors. She was also named to the WCWS All–Tournament team, and MVP of the NCAA Regionals. She currently holds 14 school records, and is close to breaking seven more.

Despite only losing three players to graduation, Sortino will be hard pressed to Turn to SOFTBALL, page 12

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Junior pitcher Danielle Henderson will look to dominate from the mound for the third straight season as the UMass softball team starts its 1998 campaign this weekend.

Scott Price & Tom Toye face weekly war in 200m

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Scott Price has been consistently been among the best of UMass' men's sprinting corps.

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

Imagine for a moment that you are senior Massachusetts men's track star Scott Price.

It is seconds before the 200m dash and you are just concluding your warmups with a couple of light hops and easy stretches. You carefully back into the starting blocks and stare at the slightly banked curve of the track ahead and you wait patiently for the official to signal the beginning of the race.

The only thing going faster than you plan to be running is the beating of your heart in competitive anticipation. You are a seasoned veteran at collegiate sprints, and nobody from the opposing rosters has come close to your school record 200m time of 21.92 seconds.

Instead of being assured a victory, as you would be in other meets competing for a different school, you must run the race of your life to win, for in the lane next to you is the only person in the arena

Turn to TRACK, page 13

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVIII Issue 13 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Friday, February 13, 1998

Get on the train

The UMass Outing Club presents Entrain tonight at the Campus Center Auditorium. Check out our preview (see Arts & Living, page 6).

How sweet it is!

UMass women's basketball coach picked up win No. 100 last night over Fordham (see Sports, page 10).

Selectman's comments land him in hot water

SGA motion calls for Hill Boss to apologize

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

A motion soon to come before the University of Massachusetts Student Government Association (SGA) calls for Amherst Selectman Hill Boss to publicly apologize for comments made about low student voter turnout in a recent Daily Hampshire Gazette article.

The motion proposed by Senator Jodi Bailey calls for the SGA to condemn Boss and also that he make a public apology through the Gazette by March 4.

In the comments that sparked the motion, Boss suggested placing kegs at polling stations would increase student voter turnout.

"I still feel that if you set up a couple of kegs of beer next to the machines, they would have come out like flies," Boss said in the Gazette article.

Boss also said in the article he felt the University was wasting its money for spending $1,000 to have on–campus polling places.

"But if they want to throw it [$1,000] out on apathetic students, I guess that's their business," Boss said in the Gazette article.

The comments made by Boss were criticized in the SGA motion as "a malicious and unfounded assault upon not only the rights of students to vote or not to vote, but also a slanderous attack on the personal character of all UMass students," the motion said.

Upon hearing of the SGA motion, Boss said he regretted the comments but that the SGA was overreacting.

"I sincerely regret that the student senate took my flip comments concerning the lack of student voting out of context. I feel their condemnation is an overreaction, yet I regret what I said," Boss said.

Boss represents all residents of Amherst including the 150 UMass students eligible to vote in Amherst elections.

Bailey felt the comments showed Boss did not care about the interests of his entire constituency.

"I think it shows he doesn't care one way or the other about students. When you're elected into a position you're not elected to represent one particular group. You represent everyone," Bailey said.

Bailey's sentiment was that Boss should not criticize students for not voting. She also said that students have the choice to vote and should not be condemned for choosing not to.

"I think anyone, student or not, has the right to vote or not to vote. He has no right to condemn them for it," Bailey said.

Boss was also on the alcohol task force, aimed at reducing student drinking, last year. Bailey felt this fact made his comments particularly objectionable.

"I don't think he was holding up his responsibilities. He shouldn't have been on the task force if he feels this way," Bailey said.

The motion voiced a concern that these comments would further discourage students from voting.

"Comments such as these directly discourage students from wanting to participate in the town's democratic processes," the motion said.

Boss felt the opposite. He hoped his remarks would incite anger which would motivate students to vote.

"I would hope they get angry enough to participate in greater numbers. Then my unfortunate comments will result in fortunate results... I hope that this incident will lead to contingent effort of the Daily Collegian and Student Senate to greater student participation in the electoral processes of the town of Amherst," Boss said.

The motion underscored the lack of confidence students have in Boss as their representative.

"We have no confidence in him as our representative," Bailey said.

Bailey felt the motion sent a message that students are not apathetic and are displeased with what Boss said.

"Students are listening to what he has to say and we are insulted," Bailey said.

Boss said that he would make a formal comment before March 4.

JOHN BURT / COLLEGIAN

Thinking he's hot stuff

Larry Bamburg, a first year grad student with a concentration in painting, practices his welding in the Foundry. TA Greg Kline, grad student and sculpture major looks on.

WORLD

Unions threaten strikes in South Korea

SEOUL, South Korea — Thousands of riot police–patrolled Seoul streets yesterday after labor unions threatened a nationwide strike over legislation that would make layoffs easier.

Police equipped with helmets, shields and yard–long batons surrounded a Roman Catholic cathedral and a Buddhist temple in which union leaders have sought refuge during past strikes. The government outlawed the strike, scheduled to begin today, and vowed to arrest and punish its leaders.

The Korean Confederation of Trade Unions asked its 500,000 members in automaking, shipbuilding and other key industries to walk off their jobs to protest the legislation, which is a key condition of a $57 billion bailout of the South Korean economy by the International Monetary Fund.

Union leaders predicted about 100,000 workers from 67 work sites — including Hyundai and Daewoo, the country's two leading automakers — would take part in the strike, which is scheduled to continue until Sunday.

Union leaders agreed with government and management's offer last week to accept layoffs in exchange for more union freedom and financial benefits.

NATION

Women awarded settlement from UPS

DES MOINES, Iowa — A jury yesterday awarded $80.7 million to a former United Parcel Service manager who said UPS retaliated against her after she accused a driver of poking her in the breast. The Polk County jury agreed with Linda Channon, a 22 UPS employee, that the shipping company fostered a hostile work environment when it failed to listen to her complaints of harassment and punished her for them.

UPS was ordered to pay her $500,000 in compensatory damages and $80.2 million in punitive damages.

Channon, 47, said she was poked in the breast by a driver under her supervision during an argument in 1993. The driver was fired but was then rehired and began stalking her, said her attorney, Roxanne Conlin.

"The people above her refused to provide her any protection, then started being critical of her and her efforts in a way that was simply unfair," she said.

Channon said that UPS moved her from job to job, shunning and excluding her from meetings and giving her assignments that men were not given.

"I had different standards than the men had," she said. "Every day I was being screamed at, being belittled, being humiliated. Those are things that are hard emotionally when you've worked at a place a long time and been very dedicated and done a very good job."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 40	HIGH: 29	HIGH: 31
LOW: 11	LOW: 6	LOW: 13

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds.....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword.....page 9
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News.....page 2
Sports.....page 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Alumni encourage students to teach

JOHN BURT / COLLEGIAN

Jeff Cook, a UMass alumni, talks about his experience teaching with Teach For America.

By Frank Smith
Collegian Correspondent

University of Massachusetts alumni Jeff Cook and graduate student Flavia Stanley spoke to students Wednesday evening about a unique opportunity for graduating seniors — Teach for America.

Teach For America is a national corps of diverse and recent college graduates from all academic majors and cultural backgrounds.

In the program, college graduates commit two years of their lives to teaching at underprivileged schools in urban and rural areas of the United States. Teach For America reaches close to 100,000 students in 13 sites across the country.

Stanley said she first found out about Teach for America during her senior year at Barnard College in New York City. After being accepted to the program, she was quickly trained to teach French at schools in Louisiana.

In the beginning, Stanley said she was upset with the subject she was teaching. She had wanted to teach social studies, but soon found a bright side to teaching French.

According to Stanley, teaching an enrichment subject such as French —

Turn to TEACH, page 3

UM looks at year 2000 bug

University searches for solutions to fix glitch

By Jason Eiseman
Collegian Staff

You're at a party in Boston on New Year's Eve 1999. The ball drops and it's the year 2000. You call a friend in Los Angeles, where it is still 1999. The telephone bill comes, and because of a glitch in the computer software, you are billed for a call which lasted 99 years, from the year 1900 to 1999. With the dime–a–minute plan, this call will cost you $5 million.

The above example was used in a newsletter written by Michael Gorman, and issued by the Office of Information Technologies(OIT) to explain some of the possible effects of the Year 2000 Problem, or as referred to in the newsletter, the "Year 2000 Bug." There is a lot of disagreement between scientists where and how the bug will strike, but the University of Massachusetts has been trying to find solutions to the problem.

What is The Year 2000 Problem?

Chip Weems, professor of computer science, said the problem began with early computer programming in the 1960's and 1970's. Computers were not as near as fast as they are today and did not have as much memory.

To save memory space, programmers designed systems to only count the last two digits in a year.

For example, programs could read 1998 simply as '98, or 21398, for today's date. The problem occurs when the year 2000 comes along because many computer systems will read '00 as 1900, not as 2000.

According to the newsletter, many computers have a default date and some of the systems will not recognize '00 and return to the default date which was set in 1984, according to the newsletter.

But it is not only older computer software that may have this problem, systems designed in the '90s could have this problem as well.

The problem is not very hard to fix, according to scientists, the problem is where to look, and how to look.

How widespread is it?

Weems said that there are so many programs to check and so many codes to go through, it is nearly impossible to find every little glitch.

"The are programs nobody's bothered to check to see if they're going to break," Weems said.

He said programmers have been working on fixing the problems in air traffic control, train scheduling systems, military command systems and the I.R.S. to name a few institutions which must have the bug found.

Weems said that many of the older programs are written in computer languages that no one uses anymore, making it even more difficult to uncover where the bug is hidden.

"I think there are a lot of people working very hard on the critical pieces of software," Weems said.

There is a lot of debate on the range and effect of the Turn to 2000, page 2

Report claims Russia may have helped Iraq

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Apparently surprised by a report Russia may be helping Iraq develop biological weapons, Secretary of State Madeleine Albright assured Congress "we'll certainly follow this up."

Over breakfast with members of the House International Affairs Committee and then testifying, Albright gave no indication yesterday she had heard of the possible delivery of a fermentation vessel until she read about it in The Washington Post.

The newspaper said its information came from the U.N. special commission that inspected Iraqi suspect arms sites. Albright told the committee not all the data accumulated by the U.N. commission in its searches was shared with the United States.

Referring apparently to an article distributed by Russia's Interfax news agency, Albright said the Russian Foreign Ministry had denied concluding a deal with Iraq.

"Moscow's contribution to the

Turn to IRAQ, page 3

GEO negotiations a no-go

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

Two years of unsuccessful contract negotiations between the University of Massachusetts administration and the Graduate Employee Organization (GEO), came to an end last night after Chancellor David K. Scott announced an impasse.

"We have made what I believe to be extraordinarily generous proposals, the GEO leadership has refused to accept our proposals and has made unrealistic demands," Scott said during his announcement last night.

"The message they are sending about higher education and how they feel they can deal with unions on this campus is that they don't care if it is illegal," said Jon Zerolnick, co– chief negotiator for GEO.

"We were hopeful that we would make a significant movement to reach an agreement today. But they basically refused to negotiate in good faith," said Mahmood Ketabchi, president of GEO.

Associate Chancellor Susan Pearson, the administration's chief negotiator said the declaration of an

Turn to GEO, page 3

JOHN BURT / COLLEGIAN

Monkey business

UMass graduate Aaron L. Polansky and his gorilla talk with Janice Stone, a staff member for the University of Massachusetts about Gorilla–Grams.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
Feb. 9
A three vehicle accident occurred on Commonwealth Avenue. Minor damages were reported.
Feb. 11
A two-vehicle accident occurred on Commonwealth Avenue. No injuries were reported.

Animal Complaint
Feb. 9.
A sick raccoon was reported near the horse barn on Grinnell Road. The raccoon was located and dispatched on Hicks Way.
Feb. 11
A dog was chasing children at the Lincoln Apartments.

Annoying Behavior
Feb. 10
A bulletin board in Moore Residence Hall was vandalized.
Feb. 11
Fireworks were being lit in the Orchard Hill Residential Area bowl area.

B&E/Burglary
Feb. 9
A vehicle in parking lot 33 on University Drive was broken into. A car phone was reported stolen.
Feb. 10
A backpack was reported stolen from Patterson Residence hall.

Domestic Disturbance
Feb. 11
An emergency restraining order was issued by a judge for a resident in Melville Residence Hall.

Health and Safety Hazard
Feb.10
Environmental Health and Safety cleaned up liquid from a broken test tube in Leach Residence Hall.

Larceny
Feb. 9
Computer equipment was reported stolen from Morrill Science Center.
A resident from Coolidge Residence Hall reported illegal use of his credit card.
Feb. 10
A parking sticker was stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 22 on University Drive.
An individual from Kennedy Residence Hall reported his VCR stolen.
Feb. 11
A resident from Emerson Residence Hall reported his cellular phone stolen.
An individual reported sunglasses were stolen from Herter Hall. Estimated value $480.

Traffic Stop
Feb. 10
Richard P. Sprowl, 23, of 27 Hadley Road, Sunderland, was arrested on Massachusetts Avenue for failing to stop at a red light, violation of marked lanes and operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license.

Warrant Service
Feb. 9
Harry M. Harding, 20, of 5 Armandine St., Dorchester was arrested on Massachusetts Avenue on warrant.
Argad A. Crisostomo, 20 of 12 Yale Dr., Milford was arrested in Brett Residence Hall on a warrant.
Andres Ortega, 21, of 23 Washburn Ave., Fairhaven was arrested in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall on a warrant.
Feb. 10
Armando Hernandez, 47, of 82 Townhouse Apartments, Amherst was arrested in the Campus Center on a warrant.

Vandalism
Feb. 10
Homophobic graffiti was written on a door in Baker Residence Hall.

■ year 2000

continued from page 1

problem.
"Some companies are putting a significant amount of resources into it, some companies are just ignoring it," Weems said.
"The world's not going to end, nothing dire is going to happen," Weems said. "There will be confusion in unexpected little places. "I'm expecting the first few months, some glitches, confusion, inconveniences in little odds and ends, here and there."
Lori Ann Clarke, professor of computer science, said the problems may be more serious than others expect.
"I think that there will be major problems, major inconveniences," Clarke said. "A number of people have been aware of this problem for a long time," she said.
Clarke said that many people are worried about the problem, but that it is unrealistic to believe that every glitch will be found.
"It's very unlikely people will catch everything," she said. "It's been overblown, but it's a real problem, people need to deal with it."

Will this effect UMass?
Some of the computer systems at UMass have already run into problems.
Peter Rogers, Interim Director of University Information Systems, works in association with the president's office and handles administrative computer systems for the UMass system. He handles the computer systems which take care of payroll, student administrations and also maintains University networks.
He said that in 1996, when the class of 2000 arrived they had some minor problems; some dates came out as '00, and had to be changed. He said they also had to change some programs because some employees had contracts which extended beyond the year 2000, and some foreign visas for foreign students extend beyond 2000.
"We've done a pretty good job going through our systems, but you never know," Roberts said. "We do have a plan, we've been working on it for over a year."
Roberts said they have established a year 2000 committee, which is working on upgrading the software controlling the operating systems, and administration systems. He said he expects to have administration systems "Year 2000 compliant" by July 1999, which is the date the fiscal year 2000 begins.
"There's no way you can predict all the problems," Roberts said.
John Dubach, head of the department of OIT, said his department has been reviewing computer system to ensure they are year 2000 compliant.
"We are in the process of reviewing all the systems," Dubach said. "The telecommunication system is fine. Most of the systems in OIT are year 2000 compliant," he said.
Dubach said he is worried about the bug popping up in obscure places.
"The two things I worry about the most are the individual department owned PC's out there," Dubach said. He said other obscure places include elevator systems, clock systems and systems in biology laboratories.
"There's a lot of places people won't think to look," Dubach said. The Commonwealth of Massachusetts has been worried about the problem. On Tuesday, Dubach received a report, "Report on the Preparedness of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to Address the Year 2000 Computer Date Issue."
According to Dubach and the OIT newsletter, Macintosh computers do not suffer from this problem because they use computer dating in an entirely different way.
To fix it, buy a new computer. A quality computer today, faster and with more memory should be year 2000 compliant, but make sure. It is also possible to have your software upgraded and can do this by downloading programs from special sites dedicated to the year 2000 bug.

Looking for meaning in life?
Three words:
Daily Collegian

Collegian Classifieds... Perfect for last minute birthday wishes!

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS $10.

CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT & LOUNGE
BRING YOUR SWEETHEART ON VALENTINE'S DAY
LUNCH BUFFET $5.95 · DINNER BUFFET $6.95
351 Northampton Rd., Amherst · 256-8800
OPEN 7 DAYS 11:30-10PM · FRI. & SAT. TILL 11 PM · SUNDAYS 12-10 PM

silverscape designs
is celebrating 21 years in Amherst
10-40% Off
Feb. 1st-14th
Amherst Store Only. Does not include Layaways/special orders.
GOLDSMITHS GEM GALLERY
264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-3324 · Mon.-Sat. 10-6, Sunday 12-5

Why Bother?
Because it's Love...
That's why.
UStore has all the candy and gifts you need to treat your valentine right.
Don't get caught empty handed.
Trust us, it's worth the effort.
Don't forget, our Back-to-School Sale ends tomorrow, Valentine's Day!
Don't Miss:
Tons of Clothing ON SALE!
Calculators MARKED DOWN!
February Health & Beauty SPECIALS!
Ustore-
We're not like a mall.
We're Sweeter!
University Ustore
413-545-2619

UMass Campus Activities presents

Exposure Musical Revues
Friday February 13, 1998
Bluewall Cafe...8pm

■ Iraq

continued from page 1

development of Iraqi weapons of mass destruction is practically nil," the agency quoted an unidentified official as saying. "Equipment for the development of such weapons was delivered to Iraq mainly from Western Europe — the Germans, Austrians and Swiss in particular."
Defense Secretary William Cohen, who was in Moscow, told NBC: "I don't have any basis to either confirm or contradict that particular story. That's something that the United Nations will have to determine. Hopefully, the Russian authorities will be very forthcoming on this issue."
Cohen told ABC: "One of the difficulties in dealing with biological weapons and chemical weapons is some of the same equipment has what we call a dual-use capability, that what can be used to make fertilizer can also be used to make chemical weapons."
According to the Post, the fermentation vessel also could be used to make protein for animal feed.
If there was a deal to help an Iraqi germ warfare program it violated a U.N. embargo on sale of such sensitive material to Baghdad.
Albright said Russia tightened its export controls of dangerous material in January at the request of the United States.
That action followed reports Russian firms and technicians had helped Iran's ballistic weapons program.
Albright said Vice President Al Gore would discuss controls at his next scheduled meeting with Russian Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin in March.
In her congressional testimony, Albright said Iraq "would be better off without Saddam Hussein," but said the administration did not intend to use combat troops to achieve that goal.
The hearing was marked by demands from the chairman, Rep. Benjamin A. Gilman (R-N.Y.), and the panel's senior Democrat, Rep. Lee H. Hamilton (D-Ind.), for a policy that goes beyond a threat to bomb Iraqi biological and chemical weapons sites.

■ teach

continued from page 1

rather than a core curriculum subject like social studies — gives students who have never succeeded in their studies a chance to start with a clean slate.
For her first year, Stanley taught 4th through 12th grades in a rural area of Louisiana — a school where students had no textbooks to work with.
Stanley learned that America isn't actually the land where equal opportunity prevails. According to Stanley, some areas just don't have the resources for education that others do.
Stanley, who is a graduate student in anthropology, says that her work in Teach For America has influenced her to look for a career in underprivileged neighborhoods in the United States.
"Teaching made me use every part of my brain," Stanley said.
Cook found out about the program while studying for a his degree in psychology at UMass. In those years, Cook spent time tutoring students at an elementary school in Holyoke. He remembers students crying when he told them he would no longer be coming back to tutor them. The experience convinced him that he wanted to work with young people in his future career.
Going into his senior year, Cook decided that he wanted to become a teacher. However, Massachusetts requires a liberal arts degree for teacher certification. Teach For America does not require teacher certification.
Cook entered the program, and went on to teach special education to fourth and fifth graders in Bunn, N.C., a rural town 30 minutes from Raleigh. Cook wanted to work in an urban area, but found that community role models were more needed in rural areas. According to Cook, schools play a bigger role within a rural community.
The community Cook worked in helped raise money so that he could take some fifth graders on a trip to Washington, D.C.
"Teaching is exciting because you are never doing the same thing day to day," Cook said. Cook is now attending Harvard for graduate studies in education since finishing his stint with Teach For America last June.
Both Stanley and Cook said that Teach For America was a valuable and influential experience in their lives. The two formed relationships with students and community members alike, and still receive letters from former students.
Teach For America is currently looking for graduating seniors to apply to their corps. Members are paid a full time salary by the school district they work for. No previous education course work is required. Information about applying can be found at the Mather Career Center or by calling 1-800-832-1230. The deadline for applications is March 2.

JOHN BLAT · COLLEGIAN

Art critics

At the Midway Show for second year MFA candidates in the Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space, director Amanda Carmona consults with MFA students Francis Merrigan and Line Bruntse.

■ GEO

continued from page 1

impasse allows GEO workers to receive their graduate student stipend increases that amount to about 16 percent or $1,500 over a three-year period.
In a press release issued by GEO last night, members stated, "GEO moved significantly from their last position, virtually cutting their demands in half and dropping several clauses and in an effort to reach a settlement."
Concerning wage demands, GEO said they disagreed with the administration by $435 for full-time employees and they agreed fully with the administration on child care issues.
"By seeking to implement an impasse without even following the procedure laid out in the Massachusetts Labor law, which requires mediation, the administration has proven it is bargaining in bad faith," press release said.
GEO plans to file an unfair labor practice against the administration.
A press conference will be held in the Student Union today at 10 a.m. and a membership meeting will be held at 3 p.m. at the Cape Cod Lounge.

What's Left
SALE
Final Winter Markdowns
Up to 75% off
ZAVA
downtown Amherst

It's Where Cupid Shops!
Don't Drive all over Town...
Hampshire Mall has everything you need! Just ask Cupid!
Bath & Body Works · Big Kmart · Cherry & Webb · Hannoush Jewelers · JCPenney · Matthews' Hallmark · Media Play · The Pet Shed · Hampshire 6 AMC Theatres · Friendly's · Ground Round · Food Court · And Over 50 Specialty Stores!
DON'T FORGET VALENTINES DAY SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 14th
20 Years Anniversary
Hampshire Mall
Route 9 · Hadley
586-5700
Shopping Hours: Mon.-Sat 10-9 Sun 11-6

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING
• 50% Student Discounts
• Right in Amherst
• Space is Limited! Call...
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
Free Info Session Wed. Feb. 25th @ 7:00 pm, Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst Common

Internships in Business
ADVERTISING
ACCOUNTING
PROMOTIONS
FINANCE
MARKETING
The Collegian is looking for talented students to run its Business Department. Pick up an application at the Collegian in the Campus Center Basement. Applications due Friday, February 13th. Questions? Call 545-3500.

WANTED
Professionals
AM OF PC EXPERTS
• C/C++PROGRAMMERS
• PC TECHNICIANS
• NETWORK ENGINEERS
• SALES
• Serving New England Since 1979
• Three Locations: Southwick, Worcester and Milford MA
• 80+ Full Time Employees visit our website @ http://www.wca.com
Please Fax or Mail Your Resume to:
Whalley Computer Associates, Inc.
Attn: Personnel
549 College Highway
Southwick, MA 01077
Fax# 413-569-4320

SPRING BREAK NEGRIL!!!
NEGRIL $459
JAMAICA
ONE LOVE. ONE HEART. ONE GREAT PARTY!!!
IT'S THAT TIME OF YEAR WHEN THOUSANDS OF STUDENTS COME TO JAMAICA TO FEEL ALRIGHT - FOR AN UNBELIEVABLE PRICE!!!
PACKAGE INCLUDES:
• Round-Trip Airfare
• 7 Nights Hotel Accommodations
• Round-Trip Airport & Hotel Transfers
• Free Welcome, Beach & Evening Parties
• Free Admission to Night Clubs
• Discounts on Restaurants, Water Sports & Side Excursions
• Hostage Day Packages Available from $300
• Professional On-Site Tour Reps
• Complete Weekly Activities Program Offering Optional Sunset Cruise, Booze Cruise, Toga Party & More!
• Free Booze Party Pack
SUN SPLASH TOURS 1 800-426-7710
STUDENT TRAVEL SERVICES 1 800-648-4849
Price is per person based on quad occupancy. NY, BWI/Wash, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus, Nashville, New Orleans, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh departures. Other cities may qualify for reduction or require surcharge. US and Jamaica departure taxes (currently $57) and $9 handling charge additional. Add $30 for 3/5, / & 3/8 bookings. Rates increase $30 on 12/15/97. Peak-week surcharges/off-week discounts may apply. Restrictions and cancellation penalties apply. Limited availability. Subject to change without notice. Call for full details on hotel selection and availability.

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Now for the real issues

James Bachman

For the past few months, the American public has been bombarded by reports of President Clinton's alleged affairs. We have heard stories of infidelity and stin that Ted Koppel seems to think we should be interested in. Even the nation's top newsman, Comedy Central's Craig Kilborn, spends the first 15 minutes of every newscast talking about what he refers to as Tailgate '98. Well, while these "reporters" have been boring us with the sex life of a middle-aged overweight guy, there have been other notable (and in some cases disturbing) events going on around the world and at home. I think we should all take a moment to pause and catch up.

Sinking ship

First and foremost, is everyone aware that someone has cast Treat Williams to star in his own action movie? If your answer was "Who is Treat Williams?", thank God for being merciful to you. For the rest of you poor souls, I'm afraid that Treat has hit theaters across America as a monster killer aboard a waning ship. Critics across the nation have warned moviegoers to avoid all theaters showing the picture, as it may induce nausea and vomiting. I just hope this crisis is contained to video before someone gets hurt.

Minnesota tells Marlboro "secret"

The state of Minnesota has made some astounding announcements in the past few weeks. There are apparently two secrets behind Marlboro's success in the cigarette industry, according to prosecutors from the state who are suing the tobacco company. One, Marlboro's contain ammonia to lessen the harsh feeling of their smoke, and to cause better aftertaste. Two, Marlboro's are addictive.

I wish someone had made this announcement years ago. If I had known cigarettes were habit forming all this time...

Olympic women's ice hockey

No checking. No hitting. No fun.

No slams

While I'm on the subject of sports, there is the issue of the NBA taking the slam dunk competition out of the All–Star break festivities this season. Removing the most popular event of the break, and replacing it with the not so exhilarating two–ball, was clearly a mistake on the part of the league. If anything, two–ball should have been an addition to the already established contests. As is, two–ball is nothing more than a disappointing commercial for the failing WNBA. At least the women of the ABL kept things real.

Safe in the USA

That's right folks, America is once again a safe place to live. The president sent the USS Independence to the Persian Gulf this week, in an attempt to scare Iraq into succumbing to U.N. sanctions, and prevent the Arab nation from doing harm to others. The U.S. troops stationed there are now equipped with laser guided weapons, titanium–tipped cruise missiles, bunker–penetrating bombs and several divisions of Marines.

So, everyone remain calm. If you were worried that Iraq, a nation with no air force, a small army and (according to the U.N.) less than two Scud missiles left, was going to do any harm to the U.S., then you can just relax. The truth is, Iraq couldn't handle a riot, not to mention a war. Perhaps when this whole Monica Lewinsky thing passes by, the president will no longer need a diversion, stop having a tantrum about not being able to look in Saddam's private quarters (like the guy keeps mustard gas in his bathroom), and save us a lot of time and money by bringing our troops home. For now though, I think I'll just turn off the news, and see if there's a good women's hockey game on.

James Bachman is a UMass student.

Defining sexual harassment

It's hard to imagine what Kenneth Starr was thinking when he wired up a Pentagon employee to get information on her friend's sex life. Was he aware of how bad this would look? Did he realize that the revulsion Americans would feel would not be for President Clinton but for the people who are literally digging through dirty laundry to find some kind of scandal? Or was he so intent on bringing down the Commander–in–Chief that he lost all perspective?

With President Clinton's approval rating higher than ever, it is clear that Americans do not think that his alleged affair with Monica Lewinsky is relevant to his job performance. And though Americans may be gobbling up countless hours of CNN coverage on the matter, we also understand that what may have happened between the pair is no more our business than what Pamela Anderson and Tommy Lee do in their spare time. But if there is a new low in American privacy standards, Kenneth Starr is not the only one who is being blamed. Lately another villain has emerged: feminism.

FOCUS ON WOMEN

SARA ECKEL

Across the airwaves and op-ed pages of the nation, commentators have wagged their fingers at the women who have lobbied for sexual harassment laws. They are the ones, the charge goes, who have opened up this Pandora's Box, and now we are helpless to stem the tide of investigators, cameras and wire taps that will soon be heading to a bedroom near you. It can all sound very frightening, something to give even the most ardent feminist pause, until you examine what exactly sexual harassment is.

Because the legal definition of sexual harassment is not only utterly reasonable, it is also quite difficult to meet. In order to prove that an employee has been sexually harassed, you must show either that sexual favors were requested as a specific condition of employment or that certain overtures created working conditions that severely hindered an employee's ability to do her job. The latter half of that definition, called "hostile environment" harassment, is the one that has caused so much controversy, but once again it has a very exacting standard: In order to prove that the plaintiff has a legitimate grievance, you must show that the harassing behavior was severe, unwelcome and repeated.

This standard, when applied correctly, does a good job of weeding out the frivolous lawsuits from the legitimate ones. The "severe" criterion knocks out innocuous comments such a compliment of a dress or haircut. The "unwelcome" criterion eliminates consensual sex. And the "repeated" criterion ensures that someone who makes an unwanted sexual advance is given the opportunity to be warned that the other party has taken offense.

The problem is, most people are not working with the legal definition of sexual harassment; they are working with the popular understanding of it — which is pretty much that anything goes. That's why workplaces and universities frequently create overly restrictive rules regarding employee conduct. And it's why we see a number of frivolous charges — such as the woman who claimed to be sexually harassed after a co-worker recounted a racy "Seinfeld" gag to her. Of course, if the media heads who claim to be so outraged by this sexual-harassment confusion would simply explain (or learn) what sexual harassment is, we could go a long way toward solving this problem. But then they would have to stop harping on feminists and blaming them for the decline of Western civilization. And what fun is that?

Sara Eckel is a syndicated columnist. Send comments to the author in care of this newspaper or send her e-mail at saraeum@aol.com.

Surviving Valentine's Day guy style

Ken McDonald

Well, here it is, the eve of all that is holy in the land of "Hallmark." Today I was having a conversation at lunch with a couple of friends, people who are planning to celebrate "Black Saturday." It is depressing; so many people use tomorrow as a measuring stick of what types of people they are, asking themselves, "Why am I the only one of my friends who isn't out with that special someone right now? What is wrong with me, why oh..." Well maybe that is just me, but I think that there are others.

The quote

"Not to say that I couldn't get a date if I wanted to, it's just that, um, at this point in my life, I, um, feel that I don't think that could feel close to someone."

C'mon guys, how many times have you said that to a girl that you met at the bar or a frat the next morning, or even 10 minutes later. Now, when the day comes that you are supposed to be with someone, you have about as much chance of scoring as Bill Clinton at a N.O.W. meeting.

What to do, what to do...

As the champion of single guys at UMass, a title which I gave myself and am proud to admit, I offer you a survival guide to the "big day." I don't mind if you use my ideas or even call them your own, I just can't stand to see a grown man cry.

First off. You need something to keep your mind off the fact that you are a pathetic failure (in the eyes of the card-making industry, at least). If you can, fight your way through the crowds at Blockbuster trying to get to Fools Rush In, She's the One, or (gag) any other vomit inducing "masterpieces" starring cast members of Friends. Personally, I'd select a movie that gets the ol' waterworks flowing, like Platoon or Full Metal Jacket. For those of you who can't take the "blood and guts" realism of love and devotion, try Dirty Harry. "Go ahead, make my day."

I mean, that makes me misty-eyed just thinking about it (sniff, sniff, give me a sec). O.K., moving on...

Instead of drowning your sorrows in alcohol, there is an even more intoxicating event that will whisk away the haunting fact that you are as single as Hillary Clinton at the end of her husband's term in office, the Winter Olympics. What better way to distract yourself than laughing at the Japanese women's hockey team giving it their all against the likes of Canada, Sweden and Barbados (you have to have a light-hearted appreciation of a team that considers it a victory to lose by less than 10 goals).

If you want your friends to think that you are the mack...

Well, not to say that I've ever tried this, but if you want your roommate to think that you do have a girl, you could call home and say to your mom, "I love you," really loud so that he thinks that you do have a girlfriend, but she couldn't make it up this weekend. If he inquires as to why you never mentioned her before, just say that she was away and it was really expensive to call her. Next week, simply say that it didn't work out and you have moved on; your mother will understand.

Call your little sister at home and have her send you a huge card, and the whole bit, have her sign it with some cheesy pet name and spray some "Baywatch" perfume on it. Make sure to make the unveiling of your mail a public spectacle. Do not try to send yourself something, that is shameful and everyone will see through it. Again, I stress that I have never done anything resembling this.

Well, good luck to a you single guys, I'll see you at the game on Saturday. Maybe there will be someone at the game waiting for you. Probably not, so relax and enjoy the sounds of tears and machine guns later in the night.

Ken Mc Donald is a Collegian staff member.

We will be publishing a Point/Counterpoint feature on Wednesday, Feb. 18, analyzing the War on Drugs.

Is it a success or a failure? Should it be continued? What effect has it had on the use and sale of drugs, the prison population, or civil liberties? What are the ethical issues involved in this legacy of the Reagan/Bush years?

Columns should be submitted no later than 5 p.m. on Monday, Feb. 16. They can be delivered to the Collegian offices at 113 Campus Center, UMass; faxed to 545–1592; or emailed to "letters.oitvms.oit.umass.edu." Call Tamar Carroll or Dan Bodah at 545–1491 for more information.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor. Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words long, and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes.

Letters can be submitted by mail to Ed/Op Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst MA 01003; by email to letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu; or by fax to (413) 545–1592.

The Collegian reserves the right to edit letters for length, clarity and style.

Letters to the Editor

The "Christian" millennium

To the editor:

With increasing rapidity, we hear references to the coming of the "21st Century," the year 2000, and the dawning of "the new millennium."

Among the definitions of "millennium" in the Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, definition #2a. is: "a period of 1000 years." Let us not forget, however, that the year 2000 is in reference to the birth of Jesus of Nazareth, and, therefore, it is actually the beginning of the next "Christian" millennium. In fact, definition #1a in the same dictionary defines "millennium" as "the thousand years mentioned in Revelation 20 during which holiness is to prevail and Christ is to reign on earth."

For me, current references to the next millennium are examples of what I have termed "Christianism" or "Compulsory Christianity," which I define as the system of advantages bestowed to Christians; it is the institutional response to religious oppression which assumes that all people are or should be Christian, thereby excluding the needs, concerns, life experiences and cultures of non-Christians.

Therefore, I ask that we view the year 2000 A.D. as one significant benchmark, though, for many of us, it also marks a heightening of our cultural and religious invisibility.

Warren J. Blumenfeld
Northampton

Negotiations still taking place

To the editor:

It is unfortunate to see that some graduate students believe that contract negotiations are over between GEO and the administration, as was implied in you letter to the editor in the [Feb. 11] issue of the Collegian. Contract negotiations began in March of 1996 and continue to this day. The administration has systematically stalled the negotiations since the beginning, taking 19 months to deliver its first wage proposal, requesting that we enter into an unnecessary certification process, and refusing to fund a flexible child care center after they located space for it. In order to get a fair settlement GEO needs to be visible, and if that means chalking messages on every surface, and putting up posters on every telephone pole and bulletin board on this campus then that is what needs to be done. Without visible participation from the graduate student population the administration will continue to stall and every graduate employee will suffer.

Christopher De
Dept. of Physics and Astronomy

GEO still negotiating

To the editor:

In response to "Likes GEO, dislikes graffiti:"

First, I would like to comment on the statement that "contract negotiations were months ago." Graduate Employee Organization activism is still present with the goal of settling contract negotiations. Currently we are still without a contract and have been so for the past three academic semesters.

If you feel that these negotiations have taken too long, your sentiments are shared by the GEO membership. The best way to help end the negotiations is to volunteer to help your fellow employees to mobilize GEO efforts. Any help is welcomed and if you would like to lead the efforts to clean up after an action, we would welcome your efforts to lead us to end contract negotiations and activism.

If the administration has it their way, they "propose" to eliminate nearly all of the staff positions of GEO and effectively cripple the very union [which] fights for our rights. However, with help from you and your fellow employees the administration can learn that attempt to stall negotiations will not work and we can begin to settle the contract. So come on down to the GEO office and ask what you can do to help! Get involved in your union and let your voice be heard.

Elin H. Flashman
Sunderland

GEO chalking serves as reminder

To the editor:

Kathryn Hardesty's point about GEO's chalking is well taken, however, her letter implies that GEO's contract has been settled, and this is incorrect. Her letter contains this significant misunderstanding which needs to be cleared up immediately as GEO's contract has not been settled!

The chalking Ms. Hardesty refers to was done during GEO's Labor Teach–In last November. Although her letter suggested that this chalking should be cleaned off because the contract is settled, she is misinformed about the status of GEO's negotiations, which have continued without settlement for 20–plus months. The entire campus community needs to be aware the the administration has barely moved on any of their proposals, while GEO has in good faith compromised on multiple points. The GEO proposals include not only higher wages, but monies for child-care, affirmative action and better health care.

I can assure Ms. Hardesty and the campus community that when GEO's contract is settled, I will go out and clean up any chalk that remains, and will encourage other GEO members to do so. In the interim, I strongly hope that the chalk, as well as posters and other visual materials, serve to remind the entire campus community that many graduate employees are still working very hard for a better contract, and we welcome and truly appreciate all the support we can get.

Susan E. Shadwick
Graduate Student
Senate Treasurer

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangasirkar Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Co-Editor
Tamar Carroll Editorial/Opinion Co-Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor

Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Leigh Faulkner News Editor
Lauren Konky Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor

Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
David Parmenter Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Preston Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Vision 2000: A proposal for change

Laurie Faille

Six years ago, a group of women from the six New England land grant universities (University of Massachusetts, University of Maine, University of Connecticut, University of Vermont, University of Rhode Island and University of New Hampshire) got together to discuss the state of gender equity on college campuses. The women decided to put their concerns and ideas to paper on how to improve gender equity in higher education.

The resulting document, a collaborative effort written by students, faculty and staff from varying academic departments of the six universities, became "Vision 2000."

"Vision 2000" is a 12–page "vision statement" addressing nine basic issues, and proposing goals and recommendations for improving the state of higher education. It seeks a more open, inclusive mode of university teaching, especially involving women.

The document, finished a year ago, was distributed on the six New England campuses through the Status of Women Council. The document received endorsement by the presidents of each university.

However, when the authors of "Vision 2000" brought the document to UMass Faculty Senate for a possible endorsement, controversy arose. The document was postponed from endorsement, because members of the UMass faculty Senate objected to aspects of "Vision 2000," believing it was intrusive; that it limited academic freedom; and that it attempted to dictate how professors teach.

Those who objected to the document, rather than voicing their concerns at the time of the Faculty Senate meeting, went to the national press with their objections. Ever since, "Vision 2000" has been the subject of debate, analysis, misunderstanding and bad press.

Nancy Patteson, a professor in the women's studies department and a co–author of "Vision 2000," explains that the document is one of "openness and inclusiveness," seeking to "influence campus policy" but not intending to threaten individual freedom.

Patteson got involved in the writing of the document because of her experiences as a graduate student at UMass, when she suddenly became exposed to the many inequities facing her — and others — as female university students.

Patteson says she "became involved in writing this document because I realized that what I was experiencing was not unique to me, but was common to other women in academia."

Another reason Patteson got involved with the writing of "Vision 2000" was because she has three daughters whose academic futures concern her and she wanted "things to be different for them."

Patteson believes that "Vision 2000" has been misunderstood. She states that the enactment of the document's recommendations will help "open up" opportunities for women, as well as facilitate discussion about women's issues. The document is a way to "address the issues" and influence policy, but is not a mandate.

Patteson does, however, feel that there are serious problems at work in the academic structures of universities, including UMass.

"There are reasons why 83 percent of campus secretaries are women," says Patteson. "There are reasons why some departments are predominantly women."

It is time the university examines why this is, and what we can do about it.

Patteson hopes that "Vision 2000" will soon be endorsed by the Faculty Senate. She feels it "important that Vision 2000' is part of a democratic process." Once endorsed, the next step will be to tailor "Vision 2000" to the specific needs of UMass.

Laurie Faille is a UMass student.

Book relates body image history

By Laura Barcella
Collegian Staff

THE BODY PROJECT: AN INTIMATE HISTORY OF AMERICAN GIRLS
Joan Jacobs Brumberg
Random House

Joan Jacobs Brumberg's latest book, The Body Project: An Intimate History of American Girls, takes a historical perspective on the ever troubling issue of young girls' body image. She takes us back through time on a historical analysis of the changes in the American female body, allowing us glimpses into the minds of actual young women growing up, in the forms of their diaries.

What we learn in Brumberg's book is disturbing. Brumberg explains how the American girl's relationship to her body has changed over the past hundred years, and why girls' bodies have become their most significant "projects" or expressions of identity.

Brumberg notes that today, girls sexually mature earlier than ever, but society makes no attempt to support them through the turbulence of adolescence. In the Victorian era, American girls grew up beneath a "protective umbrella," which kept them sheltered through adolescence.

Back then the female body, especially a young girl's changing one, was to be hidden, rarely spoken of and preserved as a matter to be discussed only within the confines of the home. There was a large degree of control exerted by outside influences over the girl's body, mainly by the girl's family. Her body was considered a family affair, to be controlled.

However, Brumberg asserts that this "protective umbrella" was nurturing as well as sheltering, and it helped lead to more confident, healthy female bodies and minds. The umbrella nurtured young girls through numerous same sex organizations, which provided a sense of closeness and bonding with other women. Girls could share concerns and questions with these mentors, and receive positive feedback on what adolescence — and womanhood — felt like.

Brumberg believes that the early twentieth century brought on the decline of the protective umbrella, and with it came a shift in the mentalities of young girls regarding their bodies and sexuality. It was during this corset–abandoning time that women became preoccupied with "slimming" (losing weight) and exercising to control their bodies from within.

In this significant time, girls' level of self–scrutiny Increased as popular culture and commercialism began catching on to girls' rising insecurities. Commercial industries had a new group to drain dry. Of course, the more the commercial industries targeted the specific "flaws" in young women, the more money, time and effort the particularly sensitive young women began spending to avoid having such flaws. It was the start of a vicious circle, one which rages in full force today.

The most fascinating aspects of Brumberg's study are the actual diary excerpts interspersed throughout the book's commentary. The diaries demonstrate the historical changes taking place, not only within the minds and bodies of young girls, but within society.

The incredible changes in the self–perceptions of young women are evident in the following diary entries. A girl in 1892 wrote in her diary: "Resolved, not to talk about myself or my feelings. To think before speaking. To work seriously. To be self restrained In conversations and actions. Not to let me thought wander. To be dignified. Interest myself more in others."

A girl in 1982 wrote in her diary: "I will try to make myself better in any way I possibly can with the help of my budget and baby–sitting money. I will lose weight, get new lenses, already got new haircut, good makeup, new clothes and accessories."

The above entries demonstrate the contrast of growing up in an era when "good works" were valued over "good looks." In 1892, one's actions mattered more than one's appearance. That mentality could not seem more outdated today. Of course, as a society bred on self–delusion, we would like to believe we still place more value on one's interior workings than on one's physical package.

Yet we use the slogan "beauty is inside" for hair and skin care products. We think we can gain confidence and a "go get 'em!" attitude with a new shade of "daring" red lipstick. When it comes down to it, we act on the principle that beauty is worn.

Brumberg's study is an interesting and valuable one. It takes up where Reviving Ophelia left off. It also adds the missing historical evidence to support Brumberg's claim that girls today are in crisis. I recommend this book to anyone looking for a little dose of reality. A–

Author to speak at Mt. Holyoke

Award–winning author Joan Jacobs Brumberg of The Body Project: An Intimate History of American Girls, will speak on Feb. 23 at 7:30 pm at Mt. Holyoke College in Gamble Auditorium.

Sponsored by the College's Purington Fund, its Health Center, and a student group concerned with eating disorders called HOPE, the lecture is free and open to the public. Gamble Auditorium is wheelchair–accessible and located in the College's Art Museum.

For more information, call Sarah Grolnic–McClurg at (413)538–2030 or Karen Jacobus at (413)538–2466.

Culture shock in Costa Rica

Susan Nickerson

Machismo. Kind of like melancholy, these are two words I like to say, but hate the meanings of.

After coming home from learning Spanish in Costa Rica over January break, I truly know the definition of machismo. In Costa Rica, it didn't make a difference if a woman had blue hair and wore sweats. If it was female, they whistled at it. Being in another country made me want to try to extend my middle finger or hurl insults at them.

The "them" I am referring to are the guys of Costa Rica. Not the men; they stayed home and were good boys. The men weren't the ones who constantly harassed my friends and me on the street and in clubs. The guys who did the harassing were as young as 11 and as old as 80, and they tried to grab anyone in a skirt.

In one month, I had three different guys try to reach under my skirt for a feel. One guy actually pressed his penis against my arm on a crowded bus. I was lucky enough to glimpse two or three boners on my walk to school. I did nothing but walk down the street or dance with my girlfriends to provoke these actions.

It is a very different culture in Costa Rica. The country has an alarmingly high illegitimacy rate. All of my female instructors at school were unmarried with children.

Many young women there wear short skirts, skin tight blouses and layers of makeup. They seem to act as showpieces for their boyfriends; smiling, but never contributing to any conversations. At my homestay, my Costa Rican sister and mother never ate a hot meal — they were too busy serving the men of the family. The men were served first and frequently.

To be a feminist in Costa Rica normally meant sleeping alone, one of the ticas told me. Many of the Latinas I spoke with were looking for a more liberal American man. I almost laughed out loud at that one.

In Costa Rica, when a female turns 17, the pressure to marry begins. Although these women may decide to get educations, that idea is usually scoffed at by older generations of family and friends. It's a constant uphill battle with relatives who wish to conserve the traditional roles of women as caregivers and homemakers.

My experiences in Costa Rica made me realize how lucky I truly am. At 22 years of age, I am not constantly pressured to marry and have children. In the United States, most women my age are thinking about finishing educations and starting careers, not getting married.

After seeing how Costa Rican women are treated by strangers and even loved ones, I was aching for home. Although we as Americans are certainly not perfect, at least we have a wealth of opportunities open to us. Most people wish to see us succeed rather than fail, and we have more ways to receive educations than in many other countries. We are not all hidden under the heavy veil of "family values," which keeps women in the kitchen and men as the breadwinners. Female feminists in America often have male counterparts.

Though I occasionally get whistled at on the streets of America, the men here seem to have enough class to keep it in their pants until they get home. Or maybe they are just better at hiding it.

Susan Nickerson is a UMass student.

The Women's Issues Page is always looking for writers. If you've got something to say (and you should!) come down to the Collegian offices in the Campus Center basement and talk to me, Laura Barcella. You'll be oh so happy you did.

Women's shelter in need of volunteers

By Laura Barcella
Collegian Staff

Womanshelter/Companeras, a women's shelter serving the greater Holyoke and Chicopee area, is in need of volunteers for their Legal Advocates and Teen Educator Programs.

Womanshelter/Companeras is a nonprofit organization which has served area women and children since its founding in 1980.

Besides acting as a shelter for abused women and their children, Womanshelter/Companeras offers many other programs for women.

It offers support and outreach groups, childcare programs, community education and a 24–hour confidential hotline for women in need of help.

Because one out of every 10 teenagers is involved in a violent relationship, Womanshelter/Companeras's Teen Educators Program goes directly into local junior high and high school classrooms to educate teens at risk.

Teen Educators work to help teenagers learn to recognize the signs of abusive partners, as well as develop early foundations for healthy relationships.

Edith Jennings of Womanshelter/Companeras says about the Teen Educator program, "It's a vital program, a preventative program, so that young people can begin to learn to have healthy relationships."

Womanshelter/Companeras is also seeking volunteers for its Legal Advocates Program. Legal Advocates gain valuable experience assisting women in obtaining restraining orders.

Legal Advocates also gain knowledge about the workings of the court system, and meet people connected with the legal process.

Both the Teen Educator and Legal Advocate volunteer programs are open to interested college students.

For more information on becoming a volunteer at Womanshelter/Companeras, contact Edith Jennings Monday through Friday between 8 a.m.–4 p.m., at (413) 538–9717.

Training sessions begin on Feb. 19.

If you or someone you know is a victim of abuse, please call (413) 536–1628.

Readings and book signings

Co–Sponsored with the Odyssey Bookshop of South Hadley

Tuesday, March 3, 7:30 p.m.
Double Vision: A Travelogue of Recovery from Ritual Abuse with Anna Richardson

Tuesday, April 28, 7:30 p.m.
Florence Ladd, for eight years director of the Mary Ingraham Bunting Institute, now author of the acclaimed Sarah's Psalm

Now, the game is much more serious

Chrissy Brown

When I was in the fourth grade, I read a kids' magazine called T–2–U Contact. I remember an article entitled "Girls or Boys: Who's Better?" The article compared girls and boys under different criteria, such as athletic talents, academic abilities, artistic and musical skills, "coolness" and so on.

The article attempted to give scientific support for each sex's characteristics, but it shied away from reaching any substantial conclusions. The timeless war between elementary school children would continue regardless, because boys would brag that they could do this sport or subject better, and girls would boast that they could do that sport or subject better. Through this constant bickering, girls and boys would develop confidence in their genders.

Sometime during middle school, the gender war died down a bit. "Cooties" weren't an issue anymore. Girls and boys were supposed to like each other and fall in love, with fleeting week–long romances the norm.

High school showed more long–term prospects for love, as well as an awakening of sexual identity. A few years later, in college, people are still sorting out these identities, realizing how their genders and sexualities fit into the picture. Gender differences are still a hot topic because as we grow educated and live on our own, we learn important differences that eluded us at younger ages.

Before I came to college, I didn't see why feminism was such an important issue for many. I thought that men and women were treated as equals in today's world, for the most part. Compared to times when women could not own property, when women couldn't vote, when marriage vows required that women "obey" their husbands, I felt that women today shared the same footing as men.

However, as my worldview expanded through my experiences at UMass, I grew to understand the impact of many of the issues affecting women's lives, such as double standards, glass ceilings and the beauty myth. Suddenly, I began to realize the juggling that many women must do, as they are forced to choose between raising a family and maintaining a career.

These persisting obstacles facing women frustrate me, because it doesn't appear that a quick solution is in sight. Changing people's attitudes — especially in dominant society — is a slow process. In the meantime, I will reflect on the realities I have learned in the past few years, and the ideas I had been forming while growing up.

As a kid, I felt good about being a girl. I wholeheartedly joined in the childhood game in which the boys tried to outpace the girls (and vice versa). Being just a game, it was fun back then, but now, as adults, the rules have changed and the game is much more serious.

I don't feel as confident as I used to when faced with the question, "Who's better, girls or boys?" I don't believe I am a lesser person because of my gender, but I feel a subtle drag in my step when I think of the way things remain in our society.

Now I understand why modern feminism is important. I understand why universities have women's studies departments — to fill in the gaps that traditional education left empty (because general education has favored the accomplishments of men over those of women).

Changing individual attitudes may be difficult and slow, but I'm not discouraged that it's taking so long. I have rid myself of a fearful attitude towards feminism. I now feel confident being a woman because feminism has taught me to appreciate my femininity, simply because it is an integral part of my identity.

Chrissy Brown is a UMass student.

Everywoman's Center Spring 1998 Support Groups

A Goddess in My Shoes: Increasing Self–Esteem Through Honoring the Feminine. Facilitated by Deborah Wamboldt. Mondays, 7–9 p.m.

Adult Daughters of Alcoholics Group. Facilitated by Fay Champoux. Mondays, 6:30–8:30 p.m.

Coming Out Group for Lesbians and Bisexual Women. Facilitated by Betsy Ferber. Tuesdays, 7–8:30 p.m.

Latinas and Self–Esteem/Latinas Y Su Auto–Estima. Facilitated by Mari Vicente. Thursdays, 4:15–6:15 p.m.

Learning to Accept and Love Our Bodies Through Expressive Arts. Facilitated by Shira Porat. Thursdays, 4–6 p.m.

Post–Abortion Support Group. Facilitated by Peggy Warwick. Wednesdays, 5:30–7 p.m.

Rape Survivors Support Group. Facilitated by Lis Brook. Wednesdays, 7:30–9:30 p.m.

Survivors of Childhood Sexual Abuse Support Group. Facilitated by Cat Chapin. Thursdays, 7:30–9:30 p.m.

All groups are free and provide a safe and confidential space.

For Groups for Survivors of Rape or Childhood Sexual Abuse, call (413)545–0800 for a screening interview.

For all other groups, call (413)545–0883.

All groups begin mid–February and early March.

Hum's latest CD a headache inducer

By Kevin Monahan
Collegian Staff

DOWNWARD IS HEAVENWARD
Hum
RCA

All right, think back to the summer of 1995. If you were listening to any modern rock radio station back then you probably heard a song called "Stars" by a band called Hum. Although, if you do not remember it, I'm not surprised. Despite the heavy rotation "Stars" received on alternative radio back in 1995, the song was pretty forgettable. Well, Hum is back from the depths of "Whatever happened to...?" conversations with their follow up to 1995's You'd Prefer an Astronaut, the uneven Downward is Heavenward (RCA).

It is unlikely that Downward is Heavenward will achieve the sales or popularity gained by You'd Prefer an Astronaut which sold over 250,000 copies. Downward is Heavenward shows a lot of potential, but fails to follow through on any of it. After one sitting with Hum's second major label release, one cannot help but think constantly, "this song would be a lot better if..."

Hum is known for creating a Pink Floyd–esque soundscape layered with loud guitars — a psychedelic hard rock with a recurring astronomy theme and sound effects thrown in for good measure. When described as such, Hum's music sounds formulaic — which it is.

Downward is Heavenward is an exercise is conforming to the formula, with not much to set it apart from a hundred other bands. For an example of how a similar idea can work well, maybe the boys in Hum should check out Radiohead's critically acclaimed OK Computer.

Working with producer Mark Rubel, Hum creates a dull sort of cacophony that is more likely to induce headaches than anything else. The album gets off to a false start right away with "Isle of the Cheetah," one of the weakest tracks on the album. The second track — "Comin' Home" is the album's most interesting song, but even it's mediocre. The hard–edged guitars are well layered, and singer Matt Talbott's Cobain–like screaming at the song's bridge is a welcome change in pace.

Downward is Heavenward works best when Talbott and Tim Lash's guitars are at their loudest. Drummer Bryan St. Pere and bassist Jeff Dempsey create a rhythm section that feels like it's playing Chewbacca to Talbott and Lash's Han Solo. Hum plods through the rest of their album with songs that start off loud, quiet down in the middle, and crank the volume and distortion back up for the end. Songs like "Afternoon With the Axolotl" — with a lyric from which the album gets its title — and "Green to Me" help to highlight an album that is mediocre at best. Fortunately the album is at its best more than half of the time.

Although nothing on Downward Is Heavenward is as catchy as "Stars," but don't be surprised if one of the singles weasels its way onto the corporate rock/alternative radio charts. C+

Fires relives tensions

By Bryan Schwartzman
Collegian Staff

FIRES IN THE MIRROR
Bowker Auditorium
Feb. 11

For five days in the swelling August heat, New York City was paralyzed by tensions between African–Americans and Hasidic Jews. Seven years after a child was hit by a car and an Australian rabbinical student was killed, questions still linger — questions which Anna Deavere Smith's play attempts to answer.

Part of a series of productions called "On The Road: A Search for the American Character," Fires in the Mirror follows her furmula of presenting a series of monologues taken directly from excerpts of interviews she had conducted. The result leads to a powerful (at times humorous and at times sad) drama in which the words of the many people involved are used. The play presents many people's opinions, both the famous and ordinary citizens, about the same controversial event.

As with any production that becomes a success, the play leaves the hands of the playwright and takes new life in subsequent adaptations. One production of the play used five performers to portray the multitude of characters; this performance used only two actresses, one African–American and one Jewish. Director Brian Kulick and actresses Becky London and Barbara Meek pushed the limitations of two people to the limit portraying everyone from Al Sharpton to a Lubavich (the specific Hasidic community) housewife.

The set design effectively conveyed the feeling of dwelling in the midst of urban apartments, and, depending on the lighting, the photographs on the set alternated between faces and windows. Despite the many possibilities for confusion, the director employed an effective set prop to inform the audience of shifts in character. On stage was an electric billboard which listed the different monologues and alerted the audience to persona changes.

Both actresses handled the challenges — they had to learn the entire piece in 18 days. Both were adept at changes costumes, changing body movements and vocal tone, and at times portraying a completely different world view without disrupting the continuity, energy or impact of the performance. They presented the words of a character as being their specific truth, and were able to portray a completely different truth in the next scene.

The performance was significant not just because it explored a reality specific to New York, but also because it addressed controversies which are always mentioned in the relationships between blacks and Jews. The play examined the often made comparisons between the African slave trade and the Holocaust, as well as the rhetoric of activists such as Leonard Jeffries and Al Sharpton, and the age old problem as the Jews as "Chosen People" — without presenting any concrete answers.

The play expressed the pain not only of the victims' family members but of the public as a whole, who saw their neighborhood transformed into a war zone. In one scene, a Jew talks about her son who was in the Soviet Union for the summer. While Crown Heights was overrun with riot police and angry protests, the Kremlin had just been seized in a military coup. She told her son he was safer in Russia.

"Once you inhabit a point of view, it's easier to understand that point of view," London said in the question and answer period following the performance.

"I celebrate the gap between myself and the person I'm playing," Meek said.

At several points in the play, the director chose to have London playing the part of an African–American playing Meek playing the part of the Jew. This kept the audience a little off guard and made it impossible to take for granted their assigned roles.

Meek said that one of the most important aspects of theater is deciding who gets whose stories, and she believes Jews and blacks can speak for each other.

Martha's Vineyard-based Entrain to play tonight

After bursting onto the ever–expanding Martha's Vineyard music scene in the winter of 1993, Entrain have seen their profile rise from that of an acclaimed local ensemble to a nationally–known group that has jammed with President Clinton and appeared on NBC's "Today Show" as well as CNN.

In celebration of the University of Massachusetts Outing Club's 75th anniversary, this veteran quartet of talented musical performers bring their eminently danceable sounds to UMass for a free show tonight at the Campus Center Auditorium; a show that promises to be a joyous toe–tappin' romp. Their musical style — an amalgamation of R&B, soul, funk, rock and just about everything else but the kitchen sink — is best described as equal parts Dave Matthews Band and Los Lobos.

A lesson in the power of "word–of–mouth advertising," Entrain are one the most successful regional touring acts in New England these days, having regularly sold out gigs at venues such as Boston's Mana Kin Music Hall. Of course, when your band wins the award for "Best Live Show" at the Boston Music Awards and was recently a semi–finalist for America's Best Unsigned Band in Musician Magazine as these guys were, success seems more like an expectation than merely a lofty goal.

Last spring's show at the Student Union Ballroom was well attended and was chock–full of Entrain's eclectic and potent blend of dance–floor–melting rock/funk and Afro– Latin rhythms that give their upbeat tunes such a propulsive thrust. Like icing on the cake, Entrain infused their music with a hearty dose of genuine showmanship and passionate playing. Tonight should be no different.

Entrain plays at the Campus Center Auditorium at the University of Massachusetts tonight at 8 p.m. The show is free. Call 545–3131 for more information.

— Marty Keane

Attention Collegian Readers:
Remember to buy your Friday the 13th cards early...

HEY Y'ALL.....
WELCOME TO THE NORTH.....
Pick up your VERY OWN copy of..... The Daily Collegian
...we're everywhere!

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Deals "A" & "B" 2 for 1 ALL THIS FRIDAY - 2 US Resumes Sat!
"Smart and Touching With a Very Warm Heart!"
ROBIN WILLIAMS MATT DAMON
GOOD WILL HUNTING
THE NEW FILM BY GUS VAN SANT
ACADEMY MUSIC Cinemafreaz NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

daily special (Mon - Thur) 2 for $19 sushi, seafood and much much more authentic Japanese restaurant
ICHIBAN いちばん
Northampton, Mass
1 Roundhouse Plaza
(413) 585 -1185
• sushi bar
• tatami room
Japanese style small party room

Peter Pan & PVTA
Your Community Link To The Entire Northeast!
Springfield Hartford New Haven New Rochelle New York Boston Framingham Newton Philadelphia Wilmington Baltimore Washington
BOSTON NEW YORK
DAILY EXPRESS SERVICE
Peter Pan
800-343-9999
PVTA • 781-PVTA
(413-781-7882)
Amherst, Peter Pan Terminal, 79 S Pleasant St
Umass Campus Cntr, or SW Hampden Dinning Common
Northampton, Peter Pan Terminal 1 Roundhouse Pz

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

NEW AEROBICS NEW
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
• Classes Daily
• Certified Instructors
• Suspended Wood Floor
• Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathlete.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst 256-0050

amc
Hampshire 6 •584-7550
Hampshire Mall
Great Expectations (R)
Today at 5:00 7:50 10:40 • Sat-Sun 1:10 5:00 7:50 10:40 • Mon-Frl 10 (5:00) 7:50 •Tues-Thur at 1:10 (5:30) 8:30
Replacement Killers (R)
Today at (5:30) 8:20 10:50 • Sat-Sun at 1:40 (5:30) 8:20 10:50 • Mon at 1:40 (5:30) 8:20 •Tues-Thur at 1:40 (5:30) 9:40
The Borrowers (PG)
Today at (5:00) 7:10 9:20 • Sat-Sun 12:20 2:30 (5:00) 7:10 9:20 • Mon at 12:20 2:30 (5:00) 7:10 •Tues-Thur at 1:00 (5:00) 7:10
Titanic (PG-13)
Today at (4:00) 8:30 • Sat-Sun 12:10 (4:00) 8:30 • Mon at 12:10 4:00 8:10 Tues-Thur 12:30 (4:20) 8:10
Good Will Hunting (R)
Today at (4:50) 7:40 10:30 • Sat-Sun 1:00 4:50 7:40 10:30 • Mon at 1:00 4:50 7:40 Tues-Thur at 1:00 (5:20) 8:20
Wag The Dog (R)
Today at 5:00 10:40 • Sat-Sun 5:00 10:40 • Mon at 5:00 Tues-Thur 8:30
Spice World (PG)
Today at (5:10) • Sat-Sun at 1:20 (5:10) • Mon at 1:20 (5:10) • Tues-Thurs at 1:20 (5:40)
Special Engagement, no Passes or Coupons
$2.50 Flat Last Show Daily

Even At Four, You Had A Good Head For Business.

Face it, you didn't come to college to be just like everyone else, so why not ally yourself with one of America's top internships? You'll make your resume stand out after graduation, plus earn real money while still in college. Some of our students earn a five figure income. Put the Northwestern Mutual Life name to work for you, and realize that you're worth much more than you think. Maybe The Steffen Agency should hear from you. Internship openings available now.
Tune in to "Today's 99.3" for the Northwestern Mutual Life Player of the Game. Please stop by our booth at the UMASS career fair on February 18th.
KATE KANE
The Steffen Agency
413/748-6000
katekane@javanet.com
Northwestern Mutual Life
The Quiet Company®
www.NorthwesternMutual.com
For sales career opportunities 1-800-CALL-NML
©1998 The Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co., Milwaukee, WI

Have you had an advisor that you would like to nominate for.....Advisor of the Year?
Here is the opportunity you've been waiting for!!!
Submit nominations in writing by Friday, February 20, 1998 to:
Lu Butler, Chair
Outstanding Undergraduate Academic Advisor Selection Committee
Division of Continuing Education
614 Goodell Building
Questions? Please Call:
Susan Bronstein Provost's Office
545-2554

Army next for Minutemen gymnastics

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's gymnastics team received a shot in the arm last weekend when Jeff LaValle returned to action against Temple.

UMass placed second in the tri–meet behind the host Owls, but ahead of Army, the same team who the Minutemen will be competing against tomorrow.

The Minutemen gained 220.3 points, which was four behind surging Temple. However, the Minutemen cruised over Army by more than 12 points.

"We are not quite where we want to be right now, but we are getting there," UMass men's gymnastics coach Roy Johnson said.

The Minutemen are currently ranked No. 13 in the nation, which is good for ninth place among the eastern teams.

"Right now our goal is to move into the top six in the east," Johnson said. "It is a reachable goal, but we need to continue improving our scores."

Certainly the return of LaValle will aid the process. After overcoming an elbow injury, LaValle suited up for the first time and competed in four events.

LaValle had two top–three finishes, placing second on vault with a 9.5 and third on the high bar with a 9.2.

"Having Jeff back is a key for us," Johnson said. "He is ready to compete at his best, and will certainly help out on the vault and rings particularly."

Johnson has set 225 points as a goal for upcoming matches, which will help the Minutemen move up to a more acceptable ranking.

This weekend's matchup appears to be a lock for the Minutemen as they have now fended off the Army attack three times this season.

Army has posted 214 points as a high score this season, a tally UMass has fell below only once.

"We try not to overlook anybody," Johnson said. "But we feel we are better than Army right now, and that gives us a chance to concentrate on raising our scores."

While LaValle is set to go this weekend, the Minutemen may be without the services of freshman Clayton Kent. The newcomer dislocated his finger on the parallel bars, after performing exceptionally well on floor exercise at Temple.

Kent came up with a 9.65 on floor, good for second place in the competition. He will be examined and is questionable for tomorrow at best.

"Despite the injuries, the team is coming around," Johnson said. "We have made a lot of improvement, and hopefully we will continue to move in the right direction."

Men's tennis heads to UVM

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

It never seems to get any easier for the Massachusetts men's tennis team. Despite losing one of her top singles players for the season, UMass coach Judy Dixon has assembled a potent starting singles lineup.

But then trouble hit the Minutemen again. The flu struck her perseverant young squad as No. 1 singles player Todd Cheney and newly anointed No. 3 man Alex Aller both have battled with the sickness all week.

Compound that with the fact Parisa Samii has a slightly torn chest muscle, and it is surprising that Dixon does not have one massive headache.

Samii was preparing to hold down the No. 4 position. He played only as high as No. 5 in the fall and had moments where Dixon was prepared to save him for exclusive doubles play.

"All three of the injured and ill players will compete this weekend," Dixon said. "Given our situation, we cannot afford to be without any of them. Hopefully they will be able to play at high level despite their predicaments."

The Minutemen will head to Vermont this weekend for two matches in two days. They will take on the University of Vermont on Friday evening, before doing battle with the University of Hartford at the same site the following afternoon.

"These are winnable matches for us," Dixon said. "We would like to get these under our belt if possible, before the schedule gets even tougher."

Right now the team has been practicing extremely hard, as each player knows they must overcome the absence of the departed Pat Slyman at the No. 2 slot.

Beginning this weekend, Rob Manchester will assume a large bulk of the responsibility in picking up the pieces.

"There will definitely be added pressure on myself this season," Manchester said. "We need to regain our confidence and win these early matches. The competition will only get tougher as the season wears on."

Manchester will be facing tougher opponents than he is used to, as he played the fall season at the No. 5 position.

"Obviously, I will need to step up," Manchester said. "Not only will I be playing No. 2 guys, but we are playing better teams in the spring, making my individual opponents that much stronger."

UMass handled Vermont in the fall season, but the Minutemen were a different team then under a different set of circumstances.

"Vermont is always a talented team," Dixon said. "Besides that, they hate to lose to UMass twice in one season. We almost always split our home and home series, so this should be an interesting test for us."

Hartford will present some problems for UMass as well.

"We need to get healthy very quickly," Dixon said. "There are no easy opponents when the team is banged up like this. We need to rally, play our best and try to come home with a couple of victories."

hoop

continued from page 10

Mack will be given the assignment of shutting down Carr, an integral part of an Explorer offense which includes four double–digit scorers and a 21 point per game average. Sophomore Mike Babul will match up against Gizzi.

"They can really score. There is no question about that," Flint said.

The Explorers haven't had much trouble putting up numbers; their problems are at the defensive end. La Salle's opponents are averaging almost 80 points per contest and are shooting at a 49–percent clip.

This defense should be a welcome sight to UMass after facing three of the conference's toughest defenses of late in Duquesne, Xavier and Temple.

"They play a zone defense," Flint said. "And we know we've had some problems with the zone recently."

The Explorers also have the league's top rebounder in K'Zell Wesson, who averages just under 11 rebounds per game.

The game plan for UMass on Saturday will likely begin by giving big men Tyrone Weeks and Lari Ketner their share of touches down low to exploit the Minutemen's size advantage.

"If we can win these games coming up, we can put a little distance between us and the rest of the teams in the league," Flint said.

Massachusetts (18–6, 10–1) has won 12 of its last 13 games, with its only blemish coming against Temple. In that stretch, UMass has outscored their opponents by an average score of 71–59.

Mack and Ketner share the team lead in scoring at 14.1 points, followed by Charlton Clarke at 13.6 points.

Material from WHMP–FM was used in this article.

women's

continued from page 10

top three with seven, along with five assists. Coyner was a force on the defensive end, gathering seven steals. Kraft and Tudman each had six rebounds for UMass.

The Minutewomen return to action on Valentine's Day when they travel to Philadelphia for a rematch with St. Joseph's. They lost in overtime to St. Joe's on Jan. 11. The Minutewomen (14–9, 8–5) are currently on a four game win streak, and hold second place in the Atlantic–10 East.

hockey

continued from page 10

Leading the way for Maine, who has lost five of its last six contests, will be co–captains Kariya and Wansborough. Others to watch for the Black Bears (10–12–3, 7–10–2 in Hockey East) will be junior defenseman David Cullen (seven goals, 20 assists — 27 points), senior co–captain Brian White, and Michaud, who has struggled as of late, but is still one of the top goalies in Hockey East.

One of the things that the Minutemen will look to play with is intensity, a term which came up frequently in regards to the team's poor play last weekend.

"Today I though that we put our guys in intense situations and worked on being more physical. We're a pretty physical team, but we didn't play as physical as we could on Sunday," Mallen said.

On the UMass side of things, Tim Lovell remains the top gun for the Minutemen. Sophomore Jeff Blanchard and freshmen R.J. Gates and Kris Wallis will also been looked upon to add scoring punch for the Minutemen.

Senior goaltender Brian Regan has also been hot of late, and senior defensemen Tom O'Connor and Mike Giffrey will look to hold the fort down. Freshman Matt Smith is also one to watch for UMass.

Another drawback regarding the trip to Orono involves the playing situation. The extreme distance between Orono and all fellow Hockey East schools results in either a two–game home or away series with the Black Bears. Unfortunately for the Minutemen, a six–hour voyage awaits them and a weekend couplet away from the Mullins Center to go along with it.

"Maine is a tough place to play. But it's (the trip) the same for every other school," Mallen said. "I think that right now we look at ourselves as still being only three points behind Merrimack, and it's right there for the taking."

Men's track hits Boston for Valentine's Day meet

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

This Saturday, St. Valentine's Day, the Massachusetts men's indoor track team will travel to Boston to participate in the annual Valentine Invitational, where the Minutemen will try to begin their postseason in style. Their performance in this meet will set the stage for the upcoming Atlantic 10 Championships at the University of Rhode Island in Kingston.

Leading the charge for UMass will be the strong sprinting and middle distance corps, who boasts several runners holding spots on the Massachusetts all–time best lists. Senior Scott Price holds the 200–meter and the 55–meter records. Junior Tom Toye has the best 400–meter mark in school history, and junior Neil Concepcion ranks in the top five in both the 200–meter and the 400–meter. Freshman Marc Sylvander will also join the troupe in the 400–meters. The newcomer ran an amazing time of 48.78 as a senior in high school, and has contributed immediately to a school record breaking 4x400–meter relay team.

"Historically the middle distance events have been a strong area for the Minutemen track and field team and this year should be no exception," said UMass coach Ken O'Brien.

Senior Ryan Carrara has worked his way into becoming one of the best distance runners in the region and will head up that portion of the squad. After leading the team during cross country season, Carrara has taken the track for the indoor season in an unbelievable fashion. The senior has placed consistently, and broke through for a victory earlier in the season, giving the Minutemen valuable points in what was expected by some to be a weak area for UMass.

Junior Ben Baraldi, the second–best hurdler in UMass history, will power the Minutemen hurdlers.

Juniors Albie Vasquez and Andre Roach are the Minutemen jumpers to watch. Vasquez has reached greater heights in the pole vault than anyone in Minuteman history, and Roach is the returning Atlantic–10 champion in the triple jump.

With a talented role call like this one, Massachusetts looks tough to defeat this weekend at the Valentine Invitational. In one week, the team will begin the Championship tour in Rhode Island.

O'Brien

continued from page 10

totaled only four points, while committing five turnovers.

UMass converted 16 points off the turnovers, including 14 fast break points. Freshman Kathy Coyner led the team with seven steals and four assists while senior Sabriya Mitchell had seven points, five assists, a block and two steals. Tez Kraft and Alison MacFarland were the leading scorers with 19 and 13, respectively.

It would seem that UMass never had to struggle to put away Fordham. Joanie O'Brien could sit back and relax for once on the bench. But their offense was another story. The Minutewomen struggled offensively, shooting a morbid 33–percent instead of their usual 44–percent and, 22–percent from behind the three–point arc.

The Minutewomen did fulfill their goals, though, as the coach got her win, and her team went on to beat the struggling Lady Rams. This one was for redemption when they had lost 62–58 at the Rose Hill Gym on Jan. 18.

For O'Brien, it was just another win.

"These things don't mean a whole heck of a lot," O'Brien said. "One hundred and one would be a lot better, one hundred and two would be ecstatic, that's kind of how I look at things."

get the look you want for Valentine's Day
REGENCY HAIRSTYLISTS 253-9526

NEW AEROBICS NEW
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
• Classes Daily
• Certified Instructors
• Suspended Wood Floor
• Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathlete.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst 256-0050

COMPUTER ENGINEERING • COMPUTER SCIENCE • PHYSICS • CHEMICAL ENGINEERING
MATH • ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING • MECHANICAL ENGINEERING • BUSINESS ANALYSIS
TAKE TECHNOLOGY TO THE N^TH POWER.
When something is too extreme for words, it's to the Nth degree. And that's the level of technology you'll experience at Raytheon.
Raytheon has formed a new technological superpower–Raytheon Systems Company, composed of four major technological giants: Raytheon Electronic Systems, Raytheon E-Systems, Raytheon TI Systems and Hughes Aircraft. The new Raytheon Systems Company is driving technology to the limit. And we're looking for engineers who want to push the envelope. Break new ground. Make their mark.
At Raytheon, you'll take technology–and your career–to the highest possible level. You'll take it to the Nth.
We have a lot to tell you about the new Raytheon Systems Company and the exciting opportunities we have available. Plan on visiting our booth at your college career fair. If you are unable to attend the fair then check out our website at www.rayjobs.com and please send your resume to: Raytheon Staffing, P.O. Box 655 474, MS-201, Dallas, TX 75265.
E-mail: resume@rayjobs.com
U.S. citizenship required. We are an equal opportunity employer.
Raytheon
EXPECT GREAT THINGS

fun•food•spirits
THE PUB
amherst
15 EAST PLEASANT STREET

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

AUTO FOR SALE

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash

COMPUTERS

paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795

EMPLOYMENT

CHEAP! CHEAP! Color VGA Monitor- $55 Laptop Notebook- $99 486 Computer System- $295 Call CPC (413)584-9857

Summer Jobs And Internships In Hospitality Write or e-mail for free brochure NIS, 711 Signal Mt Road, Suite 155, Chattanooga, TN 37405. nis.jobs@aol.com

COMPUTER/INTERNET WHIZ needed by small direct response marketing company. Consult as projects require. (413)536-5086 1pm-6pm.

COPYRIGHT/PROOFREADER Small direct response marketing company needs creative individual with communications, English comp, advertising or related background. Consult as projects require. (413)536-5086 1pm-6pm.

House Boys Wanted- Sigma Alpha Mu Fraternity. If interested please contact Randy or Lee at 549-6023. Must belong to Greek Area. Meal included.

EMPLOYMENT

Undergraduate Business Consultant

Gain Accounting Experience, Leadership Skills, and General Business Experience. 10-15 hrs per week, flexible schedule. Must be self motivated, able to work as part of a team. Sophomores and Juniors encouraged to apply. Pick up an application at the Center for Student Business, 406 Student Union. Questions, call 545-2166. Deadline for apps- Mon, Feb 16.

Personal Care Attendant for male quad. Weekday mornings and Saturday evenings. $7.85 per hour. Call 546-0686

College Marketing Opportunity

Student Advantage seeks aggressive, reliable Campus Managers to develop and maintain local program for nations largest savings program. Sales experience preferred. Comp: $1,000-$2,000. Flexible hours. Fax resume: HR Dept. Student Advantage (617)266-8882 or call Anthony at (617)912-2040

Tired of lousy customer services on campus? Visit our office and see how the pros do it. Our award winning Classifieds staff will work with you to satisfy your Classifieds needs.

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Opportunities

Musiker Tours and Summer Discovery are looking for counselors for our student travel programs and/or our pre-college enrichment programs. Applicants must be 21 years old by June 15, 1998. We need mature, hardworking, energetic individuals who can dedicate 4-7 weeks this summer working with teenagers. A director will be on campus at UMASS on Febraury 24. Please call for more information/application or to set up an interview at 888-8SUMMER.

NATIONAL PARK EMPLOYMENT- Perks, Forests, Wildlife Preserves. Ask us how! 517-324-3109 Ext. N50012

Whitewater Raft Guides Needed in Western MA. Full or Part-time available. No experience necessary. We will train. Looking for athletic, personable people who like to work hard in the outdoors. Call Crab Apple Whitewater (413)339-0188 for more information and an application.

Full-Time Summer Position Available at Crab Apple Whitewater for a Photo Technician at our Minilab Job entails developing film and printing pictures. No experience necessary but some past use of lab helpful. Call (413)339-0188 for info and an application.

EMPLOYMENT

EXCEPTIONAL SUMMER OPPORTUNITY- Camp Wayne, NE PA (3hrs/NYC)- Sports oriented. Counselor/Specialists for all Land/Water Sports including Tennis, Camping, Climbing/Ropes, Mountain Biking, Rocketry, Roller Hockey, Sailing/Waterskiing, A&C, Drama, Radio, Video. Campus Interviews Tues, March 3rd. Please call 1-888-737-9296 or 516-883-3067. Leave your name, phone number and mailing address.

CRUISE SHIP & LAND-TOUR JOBS Discover how to work in exotic locations, meet fun people, while earning a living in these exciting industries! For more information: 517-324-3092 Ext C50012

FOR RENT

SUMMER RENTALS CAPE COD GROUP

Summer Rentals- Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Diamond Real Estate (508)477-1900

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742

FOR SALE

Pick-Up Cap Black, used on Toyota 4x4. $350 River 546-6363

Carwood For Sale $125 Cord. Call 549-5456

HEALTH & BEAUTY

New Metabolism Breakthrough Lose 5-100 pounds. Dr. Approved! Cost $35. 800-563-0386

INSTRUCTION

University Bartending Course 50% Student Discount. National Certification Available. Spring Sessions This Semester. Space Is Limited. 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

LOST

Lost- Black Sweater Herter Hall on Jan 28th. Please call 665-8394

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

For Sale- Didjaridu Hand made, hand painted, by student. $20 with lesson. 253-7342

MUSICIANS WANTED

BARBERSHOP QUARTET FORMING

No haircutting involved, just solid acapella singing. Call Daniel 665-7581

PERSONALS

"Will you love me tomorrow?"- Carole King Free love and valentines at www.studentadvantage.com /gpd

Quirky, but dependable 2PC seeks fun loving Spring Break companion. Interested? Meet me at www.ebswim.com

ROOM FOR RENT

Rooms For Rent Very close to campus. Females only. $1200 semester. Call 549-7146 or (508)655-5922

ROOMMATE WANTED

Females Only 1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. 5 min to school. $295/month. Call 549-6127

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

STEREO&CD EQUIP

200 Watt 3-Way Speakers For Sale. Never used. $450 or B/O. Steve 546-3042

Car Stereo Equipment Kenwood Detach Face- 1 year old, paid $350. 1 amp 100x2, paid $150. 1 amp 100x4, paid $100. 1 pair Pioneer 6x9 speakers, 100w, paid $110. Whole system sounds great, needs nothing. Selling as package deal for $300. Call 546-3842.

TICKETS

Sarah McLachlan/Billy Joel/NCAA Men's Basketball/Eric Clapton. 2 Guys Tickets. 1-888-345-TIXX

TRAVEL

Alternative Spring Break YogaFest Week. Music, Dance, Meditation, Vegetarian, Missouri Ozarks. Ride Shares. $165. FREE MAGAZINE 800-896-2387 http://members.aol.com/yogafest

STEREO&CD EQUIP

KILLINGTON- SPRING BREAK Want a great time for a low price? Go to Killington for Spring Break! Starting @ $249, including 5 day lift ticket, 5 nights @ Mountain Green. UMASS SKI N BOARD CLUB 545-3437

JAMAICA- SPRING BREAK IN NEGRIL Don't get ripped off! Go with who you can trust. No hidden costs, starting @ $539. 7 nights, round trip air, transfers. Collegiate Beach & Party Events. On-site staff. UMASS SKI N BOARD CLUB 545-3437

#1 Spring Break from $119! FREE SPRING BREAK AND PARTIES- ORGANIZE A GROUP! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Barbados, Florida. Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK '98

Free food and drinks! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica and Florida from $399. Organize a small group end travel FREE! Highest commissions and lowest prices. Call Surf & Sun Tours to become a campus representative (800)574-7577

Spring Break '98 Get Going!!!

Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida. Group Discounts & Free Drink Parties! Sell 5 & go free! Book Now!!! Visa/MC/Disc/Amex 1-800-234-7007 http://www.endlesssummertours.com

TUTOR WANTED

Tutors Needed for Econ, BioChem, CmpSci. Contact The Bilingual Collegiate Program at 545-1968 or 545-1987.

USED BOOKS

American Popular Music CD's $30. 546-1027

Collegian Classifieds available by phone

545-3500

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, work roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and phone number (Mass I.D. number or if on campus, placing the address in on the envelope) of the person placing the ad recorded in our files before the personal will be printed. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under this law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

NEW Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
AUTO PARTS
CHILDCARE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
COMPUTERS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FURNITURE
GREEK ANNOUCEMENTS
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HEALTH & BEAUTY
HOUSES FOR RENT
HOUSES FOR SALE
HOUSESITTING
JEWELERY
INSTRUCTION
LOST & FOUND
10 DAYS FREE-
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MISCELLANEOUS FOR RENT
MOTORCYCLES
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
MUSIC LESSONS
MUSICIANS WANTED
PERSONALS
PETS FOR SALE
REQUIRED
RIDES WANTED
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SPORTS
STEREO & CD EQUIP.
SUMMER SUBLET
TELEVISIONS FOR SALE
TICKETS
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
TUTORING SERVICES
TUTOR WANTED
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED GENERAL
WORDS, WORDS HES
YARD SALES

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, FEB. 13

Comedy— Something Every Friday will be presenting comedian Kivi Rogers in the Student Union Ballroom at 8 p.m. and will be followed by the movie The Jackal at 9:30 p.m.

Concert— The Outing Club will be presenting a free concert featuring Entrain with special guest Particle Zoo. It will take place at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium.

Music— The Graduate Lounge presents "Thank God it's Friday" with pianist and entertainer Luke Henderson, for an afternoon of classic American tunes at 3:30 p.m. in the Graduate Lounge.

Service— Shabbat Service will be held at 6 p.m. at Hillel House.

Show— "Valentine's Gayme Show Night", a spin on the "Dating Game" and "Newlywed Game" will begin at 7:30 p.m. and is sponsored by the Stonewall Center and UMass Pride Alliance. The location is to be announced, for more information, call 545-4824.

SATURDAY, FEB. 14

Comedy— MISSION: IMPROVable will be performing improvisational comedy in Campus Center 163 at 8 p.m.

Movies— Movie night at the Stonewall Center will be held at 7 p.m. Refreshments will be served.

NOTICES

Schedules— The Spring '98 Final Examination Schedule will be available beginning Thursday, March 12. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the Registrar's office (213 Whitmore). It will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning March 1 at http://www-ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Student Employment— Effective the week of Feb. 16, Student Employment Services will be changing their hours of operation. The new hours will be Monday-Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. For further information call 545-1530.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Happy Friday the 13th!
from yer (single) friends at Night Graphics

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	17	HSCN Programming
3	CBS/3 Hartford	18	TV-19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	22	NBC/22 Springfield
6	PBS/57 Springfield	23	CNN
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	24	CNN SI
8	UPN/20 Hartford	25	Headline News
9	Weather Channel	26	UCTV
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
		33	Much Music

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 13, 1998

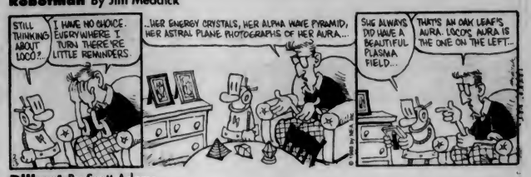
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (C)		G. Auriemma	Women's College Basketball: Miami at Connecticut. (Live)				Connecticut Journal		McLaughlin	Nova "The Brain Eaters" (R)
WFSB	3	News (C)	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV (C)	Olympic Winter Games (Live) (C)						News (C)	Late Show (C)
WBZ	4	News (C)	CBS News	Extra (C)	Ent. Tonight	Olympic Winter Games (Live) (C)						News (C)	Late Show (C)
WCVB	5	News (C)	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (C)	Sabrina-Witch	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Teen Angel (C)	20/20 (C)		News (C)	Nightline (C)
WLVI	56	Full House (C)	Boy World	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★½ "For the Boys" (1991, Comedy-Drama) Bette Midler (C)				News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (C)	Dateline (In Stereo) (C)		★★★ "Circle of Friends" (1995, Drama) Chris O'Donnell. (C)				News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20	Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Judge Judy (C)	Judge Judy 2 (C)	★★★½ "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner" (1967) Spencer Tracy.				News	Grace Under	Vibe
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy (C)	Dateline (In Stereo) (C)		★★★ "Circle of Friends" (1995, Drama) Chris O'Donnell. (C)		News		Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Home Imp.	Simpsons (C)	Seinfeld (C)	Frasier (C)	Beyond Belief: Fact or Fiction		★★★ "Circle of Friends" (1995, Drama) Chris O'Donnell. (C)		News		News (C)	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	News (C)	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (C)	Dateline (In Stereo) (C)		★★★ "Circle of Friends" (1995, Drama) Chris O'Donnell. (C)		News		News (C)	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (C)		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	State We're In	This Week	Great Performances: New Jersey Performing			Charlie Rose
WGGB	40	News (C)	ABC News	Seinfeld (C)	Frasier (C)	Sabrina-Witch	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Teen Angel (C)	20/20 (C)		News (C)	Nightline (C)
WSBK	38	Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld (C)	Frasier (C)	★★★ "The Accusers" (1988, Drama) Jodie Foster, Kelly McGillis.				News		NBA Basketball: Celtics at Clippers
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Andy Griffith	Andy Griffith	★★★ "Saturday Night Fever" (1977, Drama) John Travolta, Karen Lynn Gorney.						★★ "Staying Alive" (1983)
A&E	69	Northern Exposure (C)		Law & Order (Part 2 of 2) (C)		Biography: Lansky		American Justice "Mob Ladies"		20th Century (R)		Law & Order "House Counsel"
CNN	29	Worldview (C)		Moneyline (C)	Crossfire (C)	World Today (C)		Larry King Live (C)		World Today (C)		Sports Illus.	Moneyline (C)
COM	28	★★ "The Fever" (1994, Comedy) Hanley Jane Kosar.				★★ "Only You" (1992, Comedy) Andrew McCarthy, Kelly Preston.				★★ "Class" (1983, Drama) Rob Lowe, Jacqueline Bisset.
DISC	48	Wings (R)		Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery "Wolverine" (R)	News		World-Wond.	Lightning-Weapn of Gods		Justice Files "Ugly Secrets" (R)
ESPN	27	Up Close	Sportscenter		NASCAR's 50-Year Victory		NASCAR Winston Cup		Up Close Special		Strongest Man	Sportscenter (R)
LIFE	45	Supermarket	Diet	Intimate Portrait		Gentlemen Treer Lady		"Scattered Dreams: The Kathryn Messenger Story" (1993, Drama)				Almost Perfect	Golden Girls
MTV	53	MTV Live (In Stereo)		My So-Called Life (In Stereo)		News		Beavis-Butt.	Yo! (In Stereo)		Top Ten Videos of the Week		Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	46	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug (C)	Rugrats (C)	My Valentine	I Love Lucy (C)	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Taxi (C)	Bewitched	Dick Van Dyke	Taxi (C)
SCIFI	59	Sphere	Sightings (C)	Friday the 13th: The Series (C)		Friday the 13th: The Series (C)		Friday the 13th: The Series (C)		Friday the 13th: The Series (C)		Friday the 13th: The Series (C)
TLC	49	Renovation	Renovation	Home Again	Home Again	Real America: 48 Hours		Century of Flight		Rollercoaster (R)		Real America: 48 Hours (R)
TNT	55	Law & Clerk-Superman		Babylon 5 (In Stereo) (C)		NBA Basketball: Detroit Pistons at Miami Heat. (In Stereo Live) (C)					Inside-NBA	★★½ "Who's the Man?" (1993)
USA	52	Baywatch "Red Wind" (C)		Highlander: The Series (C)		Walker, Texas Ranger (C)		★★½ "Turner & Hooch" (1989, Comedy) Tom Hanks. (C)				★★ "Kindergarten Cop" (1990)
HBO	44	★★★ "Dial 'Drug' For Murder" (1964) Tom Everett Scott. (CC)				★★★ "Star Trek: First Contact" (1996) Patrick Stewart. PG-13 (C)						"Johnny Skidmarks" (1998) Peter Gallagher. (C)	Dennis Miller
MAX	60	(5:00) "RSVP!" (C)	★★ "All I Want for Christmas" (1991, Comedy) (C)			★★½ "Lost Highway" (1997, Drama) Bill Pullman, Patricia Arquette. (In Stereo) (C)				★★½ "Mission: Impossible" (1996) Tom Cruise
SHOW	58	(5:05) "Awakenings" (1990) (C)		Black Filmmaker Showcase		★★ "Lord of Illusions" (1995, Horror) Scott Bakula. (C)				Stargate SG-1		Outer Limits "In Another Life"	Hunger (C)

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Drabble By Kevin Fagan



Non Sequitor By Wiley

Sven By Stephen Higgins

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Vegan Cheese By Elise Checile

Absolute Zero By Brad Turner

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan 20.–Feb. 18) — You are going to want to get an early start today. Concentrate on making a little money go a long way. You don't have to go without, however.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — This is a good day for you to lay down the law with respect to individual rights within the home. You can't be too lenient and expect to get results.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Are you sure you're on solid footing at this time? You may be feeling insecure and doubtful about one major issue in your life.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You may be able to see just how far you can get on the value of one well-timed compliment today. Say the right thing and doors are opened.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — It should be easy for you today to find someone who is willing to take over for you in the event that you have to back out of current project.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — There are those who would lure you away from a path that is providing all you desire at this time. Steer clear of sheep in wolves' clothing!

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — Take time out today to do one or two special things for someone who doesn't expect it. You will find that the slightest gesture is appreciated.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You may want to rekindle a relationship with someone who was part of your life in the past, but the opportunity may not present itself just yet.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You have your mind on one thing today, and all the signs are telling you that you must focus on another. Which will it be? A decision must be made.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — Proceed cautiously today along the path you've forged for yourself recently. Dangers are few, but those you do encounter may prove formidable.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Someone may be watching over you today — which would explain why you feel as though you are, indeed, being watched. His intentions are pure.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You are going to want to gather all the information you can today before making a decision that may affect you and others for some time.

Quote of the Day

"What is love?"

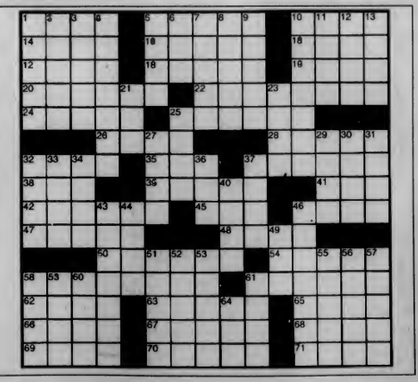
–Dee-lite

Close to Home By John McPherson

"OK. There are no monsters under your bed! There will never be monsters under your bed again, ever! Now get to sleep."

ACROSS

1 Type of call
5 Synagogue leader
10 House: Sp.
14 Sandwich cookie
15 Muslim's religion
16 Has debts
17 Head
18 Type of closet
19 Arrive
20 Harangue
22 Waxy flower
24 Fashion
25 Internal organ
29 Spring
28 Like some Valentine cards
32 Actor Griffith
35 Not care a —
37 Deep-dish item
38 Compete
39 Licorice-like flavoring
41 Santa —: desert wind
42 Dessert-cart choice
45 Seine
46 Halts
47 Violin's relative
48 Memo info.
50 Rather or Jennings
54 Manicure tools
58 Farm building
61 Hun leader
62 Lemon peel
63 Of yore
65 Cameo shape
66 Italian wine city
67 Salesperson
68 Type of tea
69 Peasant
70 Asian nation
71 Whirlpool



DOWN

1 Honks
2 Planet's path
3 Suspicious
4 Devotedly
5 Potato substitute
6 Hearth residue
7 Airship
8 Trite
9 Likeness
10 Tropical fruit
11 Truant soldier
12 18-wheeler
13 On the briny
21 Poor grade
23 Captain of the "Nautilus"
25 Rotate
27 In the distance
29 Reach across
30 Posterior
31 Affirmative votes
32 "With" in Marseilles
33 Genial
34 Farmer's place
36 — and tonic
37 Furry companions
40 Scorch
43 Magic-lamp finder
44 Charged particles
46 Ideal
49 Shipboard direction
51 —-full: packed
52 "Hi!"
53 Weirder
55 Furious
56 Large antelope
57 Brackish
58 Decorate a gift
59 French river
60 Latch —: acquire
61 "Diana" singer
64 Before, to a poet

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

M	A	C	K		L	A	P	S	E		A	J	A	X
O	P	A	L		E	R	R	O	L		F	A	T	E
F	I	R	E	E	A	T	E	R	S		I	R	O	N
U	N	R	E	A	D		I	C	E		E	D	N	A
			R	E	C	U	R		A	L	L
R	U	S	K		N	O	D		S	I	D	N	E	Y
A	S	T	I	R		M	E	S	A	S		T	H	E
N	U	R	T	U	R	E		P	O	L	L	E	N	S
I	T	A	L		I	N		T	H	E		E	R	E
S	P	I	C	E	D		A	L	L		T	I	E	S
		G	A	S		O	N	S	E	T
O	A	H	U		A	D	D		V	I	S	I	O	N
A	N	T	S		C	O	F	F	E	E	C	A	K	E
K	N	E	E		T	R	U	E	R		O	G	L	E
S	E	N	D		I	S	L	E	S		T	O	A	D

2-13-98 © 1998 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Boneless Chicken Puks
Tasty Tuna Noodle Casserole
Pizza without Fish
roses are red, violets are blue, no soup for you!

DINNER
Boneless Chicken Fajita
Saucy Spaghetti w/ Swell Sausage Sauce
Boneless Tofu Fajita
1/4 lb Burger

Worcester

LUNCH
Grilled Sandwich of Cheese
Sloppy Joe or Sloppy Vegan Joe
Spaghetti/Tomato Sauce
Grilled Whole Wheat Cheese

DINNER
Three! Chicken Fajita
Three! Cheese Macaroni
Three! Bean Casserole
Italian Tri Sausage/Grinder Roll

Hampshire

LUNCH
Collegian Cowburger
Cutlet of Chicken Sandwich
Handcut Cape Cod Sub
Grilled Cheese Collegian

DINNER
Collegian Chicken Fajita
Baked Fish with Herb Stuffing
Collegian Cupid Burger
Valentine Vegan Burger

Berkshire

LUNCH
Sandwich Grilled with Cheese
Pizza or Chef's Pizza or no Pizza at all Sloppy (guess who)
Sloppy Vegan (Joe)

DINNER
Kickin' Chicken Fajita
Daring Duchess Meat x
Try Bean Bean Bean Casserole
Italy's Own Sweet Sausage Grinder

Night Editor — Seema Gangotirkar
Photo Technician — John Burt
Copy Editor — Marty Keane
Production Supervisor — Leon Latino
Production Staff — Matt Wolcver, Teresa Rodrigues

SPORTS

Plenty in the air; Nets on a roll; Life after Jordan?

What a great time of year for sports fans.

College basketball is in full swing as teams are beginning to prepare for the madness of March.

The National Basketball Association is coming off one of the most exciting All-Star weekends in years to launch the second half, and trade rumors continue to fly through the air.

The National Hockey League is about to start competing in the first ever professional hockey competition during the Olympics.

National Football League teams are starting to re-shape their rosters for next season, and Major League pitchers and catchers are getting ready as they prepare to head to Florida and

Jason Rubin

Around the Horn

Arizona. Along with all this great stuff we still have Latrell Sprewell's reinstatement case, Anthony Mason's alleged rape of teenage girls, and of course, Casey Martin's fight to play. Meanwhile elsewhere...

• Coach John Calipari is doing a great job in New Jersey as his Nets are second in the Atlantic division with a 28-21 record. Once again he has proven that he has an outstanding eye for talent along with the ability to shape it to fit his style of play.

The Nets have a tremendous foundation for the future and should make some noise in the playoffs. Yet it seems that Coach Cal is not satisfied yet. There has been recent talk that the Nets and Raptors are considering a trade that would send disgruntled Raptor point guard Damon Stoudamire and Walt Williams to New Jersey in exchange for Sam Cassell and Kendall Gill. How does Stoudamire, Keith Van Horn, Jayson Williams, Kerry Kittles and the newly acquired Williams as your starting five sound?

• Who else can't wait for the first Olympic hockey game to be played? Having the pros playing on the larger ice surface with less rough play to interfere with the finesse of the game is a nice change of pace. If the World Championships played a few months ago is any indication of what's to come, then we are all in for a treat. Hopefully with a little luck and some solid goal-tending, Chris Chelios, Brian Leetch, Brett Hull, and the rest of the Americans can end up on top again.

• As a diehard lifelong New York Knicks fan I must admit I became a little teary-eyed as the starting lineup for the East All-Star squad was announced at the Garden this past weekend. It is such a shame that Patrick Ewing, the captain and warrior, could not be there to share in the moment. If there is any player in the NBA who deserves to step out onto his home court and be announced to the adoring cheers of his hometown fans it is Patrick. Whether you like him or not, it's clear that he is a player who comes to work day in and day out, good times and bad. Patrick has been through the peaks and valleys of all these "almost good enough" Knick teams proudly, and he deserved the opportunity to let us appreciate him for it.

• Here's a little gem from the wonderful world of NASCAR. Following the qualifying heat at the Bud Shootout this past weekend the drivers were presented with gifts of appreciation from the beer company. In one of the more perfect gestures I have ever heard of the racers were presented with three gifts: a year's supply of beer, a box of cigars and a 12-gauge shotgun.

• It's time for people to begin to come to grips with Michael Jordan retiring. Everywhere you turned during NBC's All-Star weekend coverage someone was contemplating the harsh reality. Analysts are worried that ratings, attendance, and licensing revenues will go down. This may be true. However, as Kobe Bryant so brilliantly displayed at the All-Star contest, life will go on after Michael. It's hard to worry when a league has so many capable young stars to turn to. If you looked at the All-Star rosters a majority of the players have less than five years NBA experience. Jordan did amazing things and took the league to new levels, and in time so too will these youngsters.

• On a final note I must say that it has been wonderful seeing the press that the Atlantic-10 is getting. A few of years ago if you asked people who were in the conference they might be able to name Temple. Now UMass, Temple, Xavier and George Washington have been fixtures in the Top 25. The A-10 is not yet a Big East or ACC but it is no longer a laughingstock anymore either.

Jason Rubin is a Collegian correspondent.

Joanie O'Brien nets No. 100 in UM win

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's basketball team hit the century mark for their coach last night. The Minutewomen beat Fordham University 54-47 to give head coach Joanie O'Brien her 100th career victory at UMass. She is the only coach in the history of the women's basketball program to reach that mark.

"It's great to see Joanie get 100 wins," senior forward Kara Tudman said. "She took this team when she first came here and made it what it is today. We're just really proud of her."

Massachusetts	54
Fordham	47

The win was also a bit of revenge for the Minutewomen, as they had lost to lowly Fordham (5-19, 3-11) back on Jan. 18.

"We wanted it so bad," junior forward Tez Kraft said. "These kind of games you can almost taste how bad you want it."

The Minutewomen were off on the offensive end, but their aggressive defense helped them to shut down the Rams. UMass had a field goal percentage of 33-percent, just slightly lower than Fordham's 35-percent. They forced Fordham into 24 turnovers while keeping their total to 10, and snagged 15 steals.

"I guess if you're gonna win 100, you may as well play a great defensive game, and that's what we did," O'Brien said. "I think that's something that as a coach I've taken a lot of pride in. These guys [the players] take a lot of pride in their defense, and they know that they can control any team out there."

UMass started off the first half slowly, scoring just 10 points in the first 10 minutes. Tudman hit a jumper at the 9:19 mark to send the Minutewomen on an 11-4 run that put them up 21-10 with three and a half minutes left to go in the half. Sophomore guard Alison MacFarland led the way with a perfect 6-for-6 at the free throw line, and capped things off with a three-pointer.

Kraft nailed two shots and junior center Yolanda Rayside added a lay-up to put the Minutewomen ahead 27-13 at halftime.

Fordham attempted a comeback in the second half, led by their junior forward Malyssa Thorngren, who had 18 points in the half. The Minutewomen upped their field goal percentage slightly and kept up their defense to hold off the Rams for most of the half. Fordham, however, kept pecking away and pulled to within 10 with 0:50 to go. From there all the action went to the free throw lines.

The Rams fouled the Minutewomen on every UMass possession. The Minutewomen failed to convert at the line, allowing Fordham to cut the lead to six off of a Thorngren three-pointer with five seconds left. Freshman Kathy Coyner was fouled by junior Fordham guard McCabe and hit one of two to hold onto the lead for UMass.

Kraft led UMass on the offensive end with 19 points, and chipped in six rebounds. MacFarland finished with 13, and senior guard Sabriya Mitchell rounded out the

Turn to WOMEN'S, page 7

JORMA KANSANEN/ COLLEGIAN

UMass freshman Kathy Coyner dribbles up court during last nights victory over Fordham.

One for the record books

By Kathleen Rolis
Collegian Staff

There wasn't a lack motivation tonight. Revenge on a loss to a below-par team. Keep the three in a row win streak alive. Win one for the coach.

The Massachusetts women's basketball coach Joanie O'Brien is already the winningest coach in school history. She passed Mary Ann Ozdarski's record of 92 wins on Jan. 4 at Virginia Tech. Last season she finally hurdled over the 500 mark, becoming the first coach to achieve this since Jack Leaman, during his solo 14-12 season at UMass in 1986-1987. O'Brien had taken a team which was 0-27 seven years ago and carried them to the NCAA tournament just two years ago.

O'Brien's next feat was to surpass the century mark.

She still remembers her first win, when the team rushed on the court after a 44-40 win as though it were a national championship.

"I still have the article up in my office, I keep it in a folder," O'Brien said. "I was going "Yes," I won one!"

The team reflected on their appreciation and her efforts.

"Sometimes the shots just don't fall," senior Sabriya Mitchell said. "But tonight we were going to win this game (for the coach) because we need to give back something that she's given to us. Just to see her happy once or twice out of the year is real good for us!"

Her team didn't disappoint her tonight, squeaking past Fordham (5-19, 3-11 in A-10), 54-47 at the William D. Mullins Center. Quite simply, the defense was stunning. The team compiled 15 steals, and 3 blocks, while forcing 24 turnovers. The Lady Rams guards struggled with their passing and couldn't penetrate the Minutewomen's stellar defense. Fordham's junior center, Kim Cook, the Lady Rams second leading scorer averaging 12.1 ppg.

Turn to O'BRIEN, page 7

Cagers look for No. 19; La Salle to visit Mullins

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

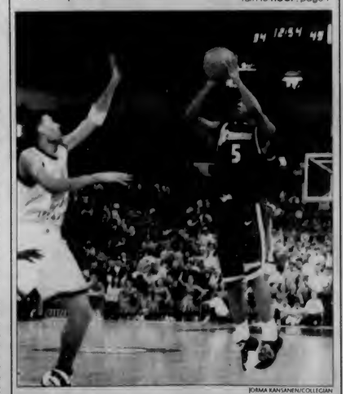
The Massachusetts basketball team is happy to be home.

After only two home games in three weeks, UMass opens a three-game home stretch tomorrow with a Valentine's Day afternoon affair against the La Salle Explorers. Game time is set for 4 p.m.

Following La Salle (7-15, 3-9 A-10) will be the much- anticipated rematch with Rhode Island on Wednesday, Feb. 18. Then UMass will welcome coach Bruiser Flint's alma mater and the reigning A-10 champions, the St. Joseph's Hawks, to Amherst on Feb. 21.

But the first thing comes first, and La Salle — despite its mediocre record — poses a threat to the Minutemen who vividly remember its last home game — a 61-47 reality- check loss to Temple on Feb. 3.

"I know we didn't play particularly well," Flint said. "But we still need the fans to come out and support us this weekend."



La Salle is currently on a five-game slide, having dropped an 82-64 decision to interstate rival Pennsylvania on Feb. 10.

But the Explorers do have the A-10's top scorer in shooting guard Donnie Carr (18.6 points per game), while small forward Mike Gizzi (15.8 ppg) is ranked tenth.

"Carr can go for 40 points on any given night, and so can Gizzi," Flint said. "We have to be on top of our game to stop them."

Massachusetts sophomore Monty

Turn to HOOP, page 7

JORMA KANSANEN/ COLLEGIAN

Monty Mack and the UMass men's basketball team will look for win No. 19 against La Salle tomorrow afternoon at 4 p.m. at the Mullins Center.

UM hockey faces Black Bears

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

The moment of truth for the Massachusetts hockey team may come this weekend when the Minutemen will travel to the frozen tundra of Orono, Maine in a weekend twin-bill against the host Black Bears.

UMass is currently three points behind Merrimack for the final Hockey East playoff spot with three weeks remaining in the season. A sweep this weekend (face off tonight and tomorrow night at 7 p.m. at Alfond Arena) over what has been a surprisingly inconsistent Maine bunch would put the Minutemen in the driver's seat.

But coming after last weekend's lackluster showing, losses to New Hampshire and UMass-Lowell, the Minutemen are going to have to pick up the pace.

"Steve Kariya and Shawn Wansborough are real good players for them, and they have a lot of other depth players that can really do the job," UMass coach Joe Mallen said. "We have to make sure that we play good defense. I think that we have to find a way to beat Alfie Michaud. He's a good goalie, as good as any goalie in our league. We've got to stick to our small-rink game and stay out of the penalty box."

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

JORMA KANSANEN/COLLEGIAN

Senior goaltender Brian Regan will lead the Minutemen against Maine this weekend.

Women's gymnastics to battle Wildcats

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

For years, it's been Massachusetts vs. New Hampshire, UNH vs. UMass, going head to head for the mythical New England women's gymnastics crown. And in those years, the two squads have had some battles of the ages. Tonight at 7 p.m. the Curry Hicks Cage will host what could be another nail-biter.

The Minutewomen, 6-0 overall and ranked 23rd in the nation, will play host to No. 22 New Hampshire in a meet that promises to go down to the final rotation.

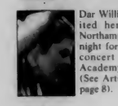
"Historically, the two squads are incredibly even and this year is no different," UMass coach David Kuzara said. "Both teams have good depth from top to bottom and both are healthy, so it should be intense."

The Minutewomen are coming off a tremendous showing against George Washington and Yale. The team set season- highs in all four events, both as a team and individually, and picked up its fifth and six wins of the season.

Junior Anita Sanyal, in her first collegiate all-around, won the event with a 39.075, placing her third all-time in UMass history. Freshman Jill Fisher made her mark on the record books, whipping up a 9.95 on the floor exercise to place her second behind only UMass alum Tammy Marshall, who notched a perfect 10 at the 1993 NCAA championships.

To put the parity into perspective, coming into tonight's meet, the two squads are separated by a mere two-tenths of a point. UNH and UMass rank third and fourth, respectively, in the northeast polls.

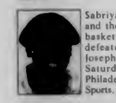
"I don't think that at any point in the meet will either team be up by more than a point," Kuzara said. "That's how evenly matched we are."



This New England battle not only settles the score on the floor, but gives bragging rights until the next clash. Both coaching staffs play down the rivalry, but the Minutewomen and the Wildcats, year after year, fight for regional recruits.

Last year, UMass went up to Durham, N.H. and came out with a victory. Tonight, having the event back in Amherst makes the rotation order more to the Minutewomen's favor in Kuzara's mind.

"We're a great floor team and I think we'd rather end on the floor, rather than the beam. Last year we had to end on the beam and we were able to come up with the win, but UNH is a great beam team, and they'll be ready for us."



The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVIII Issue 14 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Tuesday, February 17, 1998

A triumphant return home

Dar Williams re-visited her roots in Northampton Friday night for a sold-out concert at the Academy of Music (See Arts & Living, page 8).

Five in a Row!

Sabriya Mitchell and the women's basketball team defeated St. Joseph's on Saturday In Philadelphia (See Sports, page 14).

WORLD

Bank officials charged in scandal

TOKYO (AP) — Two of Japan's top commercial banks, Bank of Tokyo-Mitsubishi Ltd. and Sumitomo Bank Ltd., were implicated yesterday in a widening bribery scandal that has shamed the powerful Finance Ministry.

The scandal centers on allegations that two senior ministry bureaucrats were wined and dined by financial institutions in exchange for tipping them off about ministry inspections.

The two officials — Koichi Miyagawa, 53, and Toshimi Taniuchi, 49 — were arrested last month on suspicion of taking bribes from Sanwa Bank Ltd., Asahi Bank Ltd., Dai-Ichi Kangyo Bank Ltd. and Hokkaido Takushoku Bank.

NATION

Top 36 U.S. airports rated

ROMULUS, Mich. (AP) — Detroit Metropolitan Airport ranks last and Tampa, Fla.'s airport is best among the nation's 36 top airports, according to a passenger survey.

In four of eight categories — speed of baggage delivery, ease of reaching gates, available ground transportation and ease of following signs — Metro Airport earned the lowest scores of any airport in the survey of about 90,000 passengers.

In the remaining categories — cleanliness, quality of restaurants, attractiveness, and closeness of parking — the 68-year-old airport rated near the bottom.

The private survey by Los Angeles-based Plog Research Inc. was commissioned by the 36 big airports. Passengers were surveyed in the first six months of last year and the study was completed late last year, but airport officials refused to release the findings. It was obtained last week by The Detroit News, which published a story yesterday.

Airport and airline officials acknowledge there are problems at Detroit, but say most of them cited in the survey have been fixed. "It's not the Ritz-Carlton of airports, but we're trying to make Metro work," Northwest Airlines spokesman Jim Faulkner said. The airline has 70 percent of the airport's traffic.

The results came as no surprise to some passengers.

"It's just too far to walk between flights," said John Sebastian, a Grand Rapids businessman who regularly uses Metro Airport. "At 5 o'clock, this place is a mob scene."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 39 LOW: 29	HIGH: 38 LOW: 30	HIGH: 45 LOW: 30

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 12
Comics .....page 13
Crossword .....page 13
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 12
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 14

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Smoking in bars banned

By Samantha Poulten
Collegian Staff

Smoking in Amherst bars will soon be a thing of the past. On February 11, the Amherst Board of Health voted unanimously to pass a ban on smoking in all Amherst bars.

In 1994, the Board passed a smoking ban in all other Amherst public places. However, the amount of Environmental Tobacco Smoke (ETS) that still exists in community bars has remained a major problem. Board members feel strongly that eliminating ETS from bars protects the public health of all Amherst residents.

"There are no known safe levels of exposure to environmental tobacco smoke," the Board states in the current town smoking regulations.

"Conclusive evidence exists indicating that intentional and unintentional inhalation of tobacco smoke causes cancer, respiratory and cardiac diseases, negative birth outcomes, and allergies and irritations to the eyes, nose, and throat," the smoking regulations state.

Bar owners strongly oppose the ban on smoking saying it will hurt their business. Amherst bars such as Rafters, the Pub, and Delano's are afraid that smokers will go to bars in surrounding towns that don't have the smoking ban.

Board of Health Chairman Sam Gladstone said he agreed that bars might lose business, but said that the board would have to decide what its top priority was.

Several Amherst bars were contacted, and none had any comment on the ban.

Most Amherst students aren't worried about the effect of the ban on area bars. Most said that the ban won't keep students out of the bars.

Matt Pacheco, a University of Massachusetts sophomore, said that the ban is beneficial to some students.

"The ban is good for non-smokers because second-hand smoke won't effect them. We also won't have to wash our clothes immediately afterward," Pacheco said.

"It will make me go more to the bars," senior Elizabeth Rutherford said. "I can't stand smoke."

Rutherford said that some students may not go, but others will still go to the bars for the social aspect of drinking.

Jeff Yusah, a smoker, said that the ban might hurt bars because instead of spending an entire evening at a bar, smokers would probably travel back and forth between the bars and parties that allow smoking.

"[The ban] won't stop smokers from going to the bars, but we won't spend the whole night there anymore," Yusah said.

Northampton resident and UMass senior Derick Cheseboro-Weaver said the ban will make him go to the Amherst bars more often, instead of bars in Northampton.

The new smoking ban will go into effect on July 1. How much the ban will affect Amherst bars remains to be seen.

DANIELLE GIARDI / COLLEGIAN

Thrown

Victor Lvarenko sweeps Matt Dodge while practicing the art of American Jujitsu under the watchful eye of Sensai Rob Cohn.

Iraq sends warning to Kuwait

U.N. chief Kofi Annan still pondering a visit to troubled region

By G.G. LaBelle
Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraq warned Kuwait yesterday it will "bear the consequences" if it lets United States' forces attack from its soil. Arab envoys and allies spoke out against the threatened American assault to end a standoff over United Nations' weapons inspections — and urged Iraq to avert it by backing down.

Elsewhere, a team of U.N. cartographers worked for a second day mapping out President Saddam Hussein's palace compounds — the symbols of Iraqi sovereignty at the center of Iraq's dispute with the United Nations and Washington.

In New York, U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan said he was "getting close" to a decision to go to Baghdad himself to try to negotiate an end to the crisis.

Diplomatic sources in New York said Annan would be looking for a sign from Washington that it was ready for him to try his hand at talks.

Iraq has barred U.N. inspectors from searching the eight presidential sites for weapons of mass destruction, leading the United States to threaten military strikes. U.N. officials hope to use the maps to determine which areas of the sprawling compounds are legitimate targets for inspections.

The foreign minister of Qatar, Hamad Bin Jassim al-Thani, arrived in Baghdad to try to defuse the crisis, and a delegation of Arab lawmakers talked with the speaker of Iraq's National Assembly, Sadoun Hammadi.

The lawmakers, from Egypt and Libya, later joined in a march to a U.N. office in downtown Baghdad, shouting "We are with you, Saddam!"

Seeking to play up Arab backing in the conflict, Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz met Qatar's al-Thani upon arrival and expressed hope the Middle East would be "spared any evil."

Saddam also met with al-Thani, who delivered a message from Qatar's emir, the Iraqi News Agency said. Saddam also received a telephone call from King Hassan II of Morocco, who pledged his opposition to "aggression against Iraq," the news agency said. In Paris, French President Jacques Chirac said a peaceful solution to the standoff was near. "An acceptable solution respectful of all U.N. resolutions is possible," Chirac said. "We are close."

But there was little evidence Monday that Iraq was prepared to give way.

In an ominous warning, Iraq's Foreign Minister Mohammed Saeedal-Sahhaf urged Kuwait against allow-

Turn to KUWAIT, page 2

GEO files charges after impasse called

By Jason Eiseman
Collegian Staff

The Graduate Employee Organization (GEO) has filed an unfair labor practice charge against the University of Massachusetts administration. GEO claims the administration's declaration of impasse, which ended two years of contract negotiations, is illegal.

However, according to the administration, their actions are not violating any laws because GEO is not a certified union.

Sue Pearson, chief negotiator for the administration, said unions need to go through a process to become certified, a process that GEO has never completed.

She said GEO's charge is expected to be rejected because GEO is not covered by the laws which regulate negotiations with certified unions.

"It has always been our position that they are not covered by Massachusetts collective bargaining law," Pearson said. "GEO has continually refused to go through the process."

"We simply indicated to them that we intended to implement the final proposal," Pearson said. She said the impasse was declared so a stipend increase could be enacted to help departments recruit graduate students for next year. The proposal which will be enacted includes increases in funding to help increase the diversity of graduate students. GEO said not all graduate employees will get a raise.

Pearson said she does not expect GEO to strike, because they have signed an agreement saying they will not. But Nancy DeProsse, Vice President of the United Auto Workers (UAW), local 2322, which GEO is a member of, said the agreement is void once the administration declares

Turn to GEO, page 2

GEO sets deadline for administration

By Jason Eiseman
Collegian Staff

The Graduate Employee Organization (GEO) has given the University of Massachusetts administration until 5 p.m. Wednesday to return to the bargaining table. The deadline was part of a motion passed at an emergency meeting on Friday, held in response to the administration ending two years of contract negotiations with the declaration of an impasse.

Depending on the response of the administration, GEO has planned two different courses of action for Wednesday evening.

"If the administration refuses to come to the table, we will hold a membership meeting at the exact same time; Wednesday, February 18 at 5 p.m., and decide to take whatever action is necessary to get the administration to negotiate with us," said Jennifer Fasulo, GEO Vice President, reading from the motion. She said if the administration returns to the bargaining table, GEO will hold a candlelight vigil outside of the Whitmore Administration building.

Fasulo said over 200 members attended the meeting, the largest turnout since a graduate employee strike in 1991, which won them their first contract. She said members discussed everything from going on strike to singing lullabies outside of Chancellor

Turn to DEADLINE, page 8

NSF nominee Rita Colwell to speak

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

Rita R. Colwell, President Clinton's nominee to become the next director of the National Science Foundation (NSF) will be at the University of Massachusetts today and tomorrow to meet with faculty, students and administration.

The NSF sponsors most of the federal government's non- medical university research.

During her visit, Colwell intends to meet with various student groups including representatives from the chemistry, biochemistry, molecular biology, environmental science, veterinary and animal science departments.

She will conclude her UMass visit with a roundtable discussion. The time and place have not been announced.

"We are very fortunate to have a scientist of Rita Colwell's stature as a visitor and colleague. Her visit presents a wonderful opportunity for the University community," said Provost Cora B. Marrett.

According to Marrett, the administration is studying whether or not to implement a College of Life Sciences, so the Colwell's visit is especially timely.

Colwell, a microbiologist and marine scientist, is president of the University of Maryland Biotechnology Institute and a professor of microbiology and biotechnology.

She holds many honorary degrees and has been president of numerous organizations including the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the American Society for Microbiology and the Washington Academy of Sciences. Colwell is the author, editor/coeditor of 16 books and 500 scientific papers and produced an award-winning film, "Invisible Seas," a 28-minute film on marine biology.

She received her bachelor's and master's degrees from Purdue University and her doctorate from the University of Washington.

A reception in Colwell's honor will be held in Memorial Hall tonight from 5:30 to 7 p.m.

University to host job fairs for students

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

Over 150 firms and organizations are scheduled to participate in the annual Campus-Wide Career Fair, ALANA (Asian Latino American Native American) Career Fair and the Co-Op Fair tomorrow and Thursday. Employers will be seeking full-time workers, co-op students and interns from various majors and career interests.

The Annual Campus-Wide career fair, which takes place in the Campus Center Auditorium tomorrow from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. is expected to have an additional 30 businesses participating. Last year's fair hosted 120 employers.

Tomorrow night, the ALANA fair will also be held in the Campus Center Auditorium from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. The number of expected employers has doubled from 30 last Spring to 60 this year.

The ALANA fair is held in partnership with the Bilingual Collegiate Program, the Committee for Collegiate Education of Blacks and Minority students, Diversity In Management Education Services and the Minority Engineering Program, United Asia Learning Resource Center and the Campus Center Career Network.

On Thursday morning, students looking for summer jobs and co-ops may attend the job fair to be held from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium.

The firms and organizations represented at the three fairs range from corporate giants such as IBM to companies such as CVS and Filene's. Representatives from the Peace Corps and Armed Services will also be present at the fairs.

Tina Acker, the coordinator of the campus-wide fair credits the increase of employers at the fairs to the economy.

"The economy has turned for the better and we have seen a huge increase in the number of employers who want to attend the career fairs as well as those who want to recruit at UMass," she said.

DANIELLE GILARDI / COLLEGIAN

Still... life

Sacha Maxwell, a first year student at Mt. Holyoke, paints a black and white still life yesterday in a rather deserted classroom.

Collegian Graphics would like to remind you that the inks contained in these pages may cause cancer if smoked.

REWARD $$$

For information confirming what happened to ADAM PRENTICE on 8/27/97 during lifeless floating between diving/ after falling through the greenhouse roof, or at the scene while with police and rescue squad.

Call 508-362-4804 Barbara or Dennis
FAX 508-362-7878, e-mail barpran@capecod.net website http://www.capecod.net/~bprentic

■ GEO

continued from page 1

impasse.

If GEO were to strike, their leadership could be thrown in jail, said DeProsse. She said both the local chapter and the international organization could be subject to fines if GEO were to go on strike.

At the press conference Friday morning, David Lenson, from the executive board of the Massachusetts Society for Professors (MSP), and a comparative literature professor at UMass, said the administration has a "short memory," referring to a 1991 strike which won GEO its first contract.

"It is not in our interest to have GEO forced to go out on strike," Lenson said. "A strike by GEO would be a terrific disruption for the faculty." Lenson said he would not condone a strike and the MSP would support GEO in their attempts to negotiate a contract.

"There is not the slightest chance they will break GEO," Lenson said.

Jon Weissman, secretary of Jobs With Justice, an organization which campaigns for workers rights, wrote a letter to the Chancellor David K. Scott on behalf of Jobs With Justice and the individual members, including UAW local 2322, expressing "outrage" at the declaration of impasse.

"We abhor such behavior by an institution that belongs to the citizens of Massachusetts," Weissman wrote in his letter.

Tom Coish, President of the Service Employee International Union (SEIU), said the administration has poor bargaining practices.

"The administration, in our experience, comes to the table unprepared," Coish said. "What the hell are they thinking? I support GEO in their demands."

The University Staff Association sent representative Lisa Persons to support GEO.

"I wish to show the most support for our brothers and sisters in GEO," Persons said. "No solution can be found if people don't come to the bargaining table."

Charlotte Coates, President of the American Federation of State County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME), offered support from AFSCME.

"I ask all sisters and brothers to support GEO," Coates said. "I give them all the support that we can from AFSCME."

The press conference began with a prepared statement by Jennifer Fasulo, GEO Vice President.

"[Chancellor] David Scott is saying, in no uncertain terms, that access to higher education is a privilege not a right," Fasulo said.

DANIELLE GILARDI / COLLEGIAN

State of art

A statue on the grounds of Mount Holyoke College overlooks an amphitheater.

■ deadline

continued from page 1

David K. Scott's house.

It is illegal for public employees to go on strike. If GEO were to strike, their leadership could be thrown in jail, said Nancy DeProsse, Vice President of local 2322 of the United Auto Workers (UAW), which GEO is a member of. She said both the local chapter and the international organization could be subject to fines if GEO were to go on strike.

Some members said they would burn their paychecks because they felt they were getting sold out, according to Fasulo.

"What was most notable to me was the universal outrage at the administrations' attempt to sell-out graduate employees," Fasulo said.

GEO President Mahmood Ketabchi said he had the same impression from the meeting. "[Scott] thinks he's going to buy us out. Our members are not out there to get sold out to Chancellor Scott," he said.

The administration has begun to implement its final proposal which includes a salary increase of 16%. The administration said they needed to implement the stipend increases to help departments recruit graduate students for next year.

The meeting was followed by a weekend of picketing which will continue through Wednesday.

Saturday, GEO members picketed outside of the Mullins Center, and handed out leaflets before the UMass basketball game against LaSalle.

Chancellor Scott attended a dinner Sunday night in the Student Union Ballroom to end a weekend-long leadership conference held at UMass. About 30 GEO members marched around the room carrying signs, urging Scott to end the impasse.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, GEO members will march to Whitmore Administration Building, beginning at noon from the Student Union. Also, GEO members said they will be picketing the three main entrances to campus, the North Entrance, the entrance near the Newman Center, and the entrance at Commonwealth and Massachusetts Avenues.

■ Kuwait

continued from page 1

ing U.S. forces to use its territory to attack Iraq.

"We call on our (Arab) brothers — including the Kuwaitis — not to serve as a foothold for weapons that kill Iraqis," al-Sahhaf said in Beirut, the third stop on a tour of Arab capitals to seek support against a U.S. strike.

Al-Sahhaf said he was not threatening Kuwait, but "we hope they won't commit this deadly mistake."

"Those who open their territory for the Americans to shed the blood of the Iraqi children and women, will bear the consequences of their crime," Al-Sahhaf said.

He did not say what measures Iraq would take against Kuwait. In recent weeks, al-Sahhaf and other Iraqi leaders have said Iraq would not attack Kuwait in the event of a war.

Iraq invaded Kuwait in 1990, leading to the Persian Gulf War. While Kuwait has not said it would allow an attack to be launched from its territory, it has allowed the United States and Britain to station warplanes at its bases.

Still, Kuwait has called for a diplomatic solution, as have other Arab states that supported the U.S.-led alliance that routed Iraqi troops from Kuwait in 1991.

Procter & Gamble

As the global leader in the Consumer Product industry, P&G sells over 300 brands in over 140 countries.

Students from ALL MAJORS

We are seeking individuals for FULL-TIME positions in CUSTOMER BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT in major marketing areas throughout the United States. We will only be at UMass' Career Fair this spring. Stop by to pick up an application packet to learn more about how you can be part of our leadership team.

Career Network Career Fair
Campus Center
Wednesday 2/18/98

Visit our website at www.pg.com

CO-OP JOB FAIR

Thursday, February 19
10am-3pm

Campus Center Auditorium

Don't Let the Cold Weather Fool you!
It's time to Start Thinking about the Summer.....

Find out about positions at
- Lego Systems,
- Arnold Public Relations,
- Pratt and Whitney,
- US Fish, and Wildlife

and many, many more.....

Summer and Semester Paid positions
All Majors Welcome!!

Need to get started before or after the fair?
Attend a "Welcome to Field Experience" Workshop
Tuesdays 2:30 pm
Wednesdays 3:00 pm
Thursdays 3:00 pm
Campus Center 804

Campus Career Network

Sponsored by the Campus Center Network

MassPIRG supports pesticide disclosure

By Frank Smith
Collegian Correspondent

Every day Massachusetts state employees and public school students go to work and school in areas that are safe and healthy. Or do they?

Not according to the Massachusettes Public Interest Research Group (MassPIRG) which says state officials and public school students are not as safe as they think they are due to the pesticides that are commonly used around them. These pesticides, according to MassPIRG members, are sprayed with no warning and without people knowing how these pesticides can affect them.

In an effort to deal with this issue, MassPIRG — which has a student chapter at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst — favors the Pesticide Disclosure Act, a bill which is currently being reviewed by the Ways and Means Committee of the State Senate and is considered for funding.

MassPIRG members said people are not informed of the dangers of pesticides, and are not aware of how closely they come into contact with them.

The Pesticide Disclosure Act seeks to make conditions safer, and healthier, for the general public by accomplishing three goals.

First, it would guarantee notification within 48 hours of pesticide exposure in a public place. Second, it would set up a database with a hotline that could be called for information regarding the affects of specific chemical pesticides. And third, it would look to introduce Integrated Pest Management (IPM), which is the least toxic form of pest control, and often avoids the use of chemical pesticides altogether.

In order to get this bill passed by the Ways and Means Committee, MassPIRG member BJ Cortis, a sophomore political science major, emphasized the importance of the role that Amherst Senator Stan Rosenberg, chairman of the Ways and Means committee, plays in getting this bill passed.

"We need his [Rosenberg's] endorsement if this bill is to get any further," Cortis said.

MassPIRG has worked on promoting this bill for almost four months, and realizes many students are not aware of the bill.

They hope to build community awareness, and form a coalition that will help get the bill passed. According to Cortis, MassPIRG wants to be straight forward with people, and explain what is going on so they will continually gather support. Then Rosenberg, and the rest of the Ways and Means Committee won't be able to refuse the bill's passing, says Cortis. However, MassPIRG's opposition to the bill are large, powerful and wealthy chemical companies, including Terminix and ChemLawn, who have a great amount of influence over this state's legislature according to Cortis.

Last year, MassPIRG filed a suit against chemical companies who claimed their pesticides were safe. However, according to Cortis, claiming that any chemical pesticide is safe is against the law. This suit was brought about so that MassPIRG could bring to light that there is no morality in the chemical industry.

"We can't let this go on any longer," Cortis said. "We're the guinea pig generation you could say."

MassPIRG is holding a general interest meeting Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

DANIELLE GILARDI / COLLEGIAN

Miniature universe

The pebbles represent the sea, the rocks are mountains and the shrubs are the forest at the Japanese Tea Garden, located on the Mt. Holyoke campus.

Gathering draws attention to Iraqi plight

By Nicole Lewenson
Collegian Correspondent

Last Friday marked the anniversary of the al-Amerija civilian shelter bombing in Baghdad. In rememberance of the 400 civilians who lost their lives, and as a call for awareness of the situation at hand with Iraq, a group of University of Massachusetts students, joined by Pioneer Valley citizens, gathered outside the Student Union.

At the gathering, two UMass students read a passage written by Deborah Winger. The passage touched on the condition of Iraq since the Gulf war, "their emotions are no different then ours... Iraq is experiencing a crisis."

"I just feel sad, frustrated, and scared about the situation," said Jacqui Fowler, a senior English major.

Her sentiment is not shared by all. "I feel bad, but not bad enough," UMass student Greg Travers said.

Despite mixed emotions, other students do not feel well informed. "I don't know much about what is going on in Iraq," said Dan Thomases, a geology major.

"My friends who have been in Iraq have seen first-hand the effects of the U.S. sanctions in Iraq. They have seen people dying in hospitals because of the lack of medical supplies and or because of poisoned water supplies. We are already attacking Iraq, and as always, it is the civilians who are suffering," student Jennifer Connor said.

The small group that gathered shared ideas about cultivating the American people to act and become informed. Over 27 rallies worldwide, calling for responsible policies and no more violence, in major cities and small towns around the globe, from Sydney, Australia to Osaka, Japan.

"We have about two weeks to make a difference," said Charles W. Jenks, a Traprock Peace Center volunteer.

"I think that this situation is easily misunderstood as well as easily overlooked by the average U.S. citizen. The bombs that our government is threatening to launch will kill civilians, not Saddam Hussein," student Deborah Massachi said.

On Saturday, Feb. 28, a protest against the launching of the Aegie Destroyer O'Kane will be held in Bath, Maine.

"Aegie class destroyers were used in the Persian Gulf War and are now again on duty in the Gulf. The O'Kane is capable of carrying Tomahawk and cruise missiles," Athol citizen, Hattie Nestle said.

Hattie Nestle will be speaking tonight, at 7 p.m. in Machmer W-17, on her experiences in Iraq. She visited the al-Amerija bunker in 1995 as apart of a prayer for peace.

Campus Career Network We're here for you!

ANNUAL CAMPUS WIDE CAREER FAIR

The perfect chance to meet with representatives of employers that you are interested in and who are interested in you! Or, just come and find out what companies are suited to what you are looking for in a career!

Over 100 Companies and organizations will be there!

The Alana Job Fair is also being held on February 18th from 7pm-9pm

The Co-Op Job Fair is being held February 19th from 10am-3pm *Campus Center Auditorium

Opportunity is knocking... You better be there to open the door!

February 18th 10am-3pm • Campus Center Auditorium

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Redirecting the media

Alexis Pushkar

It was every newscaster's dream. It was a president's worst nightmare. And the American public kicked back in front of the TV with a beer and a one-inch portion of Lean Cuisine manicotti. This, after all, was news.

The journalists, both print and screen, trembled, thrilled and shuddered with ecstasy at the very sound of the words: scandal in the White House. They tensed as they tried to restrain themselves. They panted, feeling giddy. Tighter and tighter their muscles contracted. Oh, the agony! Journalists could bear it no longer, and with moans and a glorious release of tension, they flung themselves onto the story — or lack thereof — with sweet abandon.

In my mind at least, their pants are still dropped around their ankles. They had exposed themselves to the world, and I'm still reeling from the sight of their naked desire to sell a story that nobody wanted to hear. They slapped themselves on the wrist when the polls showed that a majority of Americans really didn't care, but the damage was done. They had devoted days of work, droves of reporters, and dump trucks of dollars to a story which they all freely admitted had few facts. This lack of factual information stopped no wild speculations of resignation, the downfall of the Democratic Party, or even impeachment.

A particularly egregious instance of wild speculation occurred on the pseudo-news show "Extra" when producers decided to cover Chelsea's side of the story. They apparently confused the first daughter with an Asian male because that's who they interviewed while the real First Daughter was ensconced behind the wall of Secret Service protection. Calmly, he assured the reporters that Stanford's student body would stand behind her. He knew this because he was wearing a striped shirt. The story gave no indication that he knew Chelsea or had spoken to her ever, which basically means that they could have interviewed a gecko and they would have had the same story. A story advertised as giving Chelsea's perspective was someone else's perspective on something entirely different — the behavior of every student at Stanford except Chelsea.

But this matters not at all because the story filled air time and created news. Those are the two pillars of modern American television journalism — filler and non-story. The latter, the creation of news, results from the first — the need to fill time. CNN's twenty-four hour news coverage opened up a vacuum which news executives tripped over themselves to fill with whatever people would watch.

Apparently, they will watch anything regardless of content.

Historically, in human cultures, there are two kinds of news. The first kind is the sort of stuff we expect from Peter Jennings — the important stuff, international and national in scope with emphasis on politics, economics, science or culture. The second kind of news is gossip, which is about people and sex, generally speaking. Gossipy news encompasses murders, too, and other crimes and misdemeanors, high or otherwise. It is often the kind of news that makes a good story, spilling over into pseudo-news shows like "Dateline," "20/20," and "Extra."

The Monica Lewinsky media coverage brought national news to the level of tabloid journalism. For a few weeks, reporters were all covering the same issues — and that's all they were covering. Like the tabloids, they used a glorious haze of conjecture to create the impression of wrong-doing and the impression that they knew what they were talking about. To Americans, news represents information. We watch it and read it while somebody else creates it and interprets it. Who decided that Monica Lewinsky was more important than the Pope? Not me. Not you. Somebody else.

During the weeks of the heaviest media coverage, the entire continent of Africa could have sunk beneath the sea and no one in the United States would have known. The knowledge we glean from the news, we exchange at work and school and over coffee. We are sucked in by commercials and headlines that glitter with the promise of new life-altering knowledge unless we choose to close the newspaper or turn off the TV, ruining our lives forever. We are led on by teasers — "And coming up on WBS Channel 5: What you don't know about rug lice — but should! And how to prevent structural damage to your child's sand box from termites — one family's nightmare."

If we choose to remain ignorant, we run the risk of everybody knowing but us. We don't want to open ourselves up to the type of ridicule that ensues when we are caught with our pants down and everyone sees it but us.

The media also doesn't want to be caught in a compromising position, so they try to be there and be on top of things, without any sort of reflection as to the consequences.

We have a free press in the United States guaranteed by the Constitution, but I can't help the feeling that I'm being given somebody else's idea of the news. Though they have direct constitutional protection of supposed freedom, newspapers and television are commercial and therefore are in competition with one another so that they all carry pretty much the same information. If they screw up, they all look like fools.

We don't need more aggressive news coverage so that we're making something out of nothing. We need original, enlightened, and objective news coverage. We need some network to wear the pants and tell it like it is.

Alexis Pushkar is a UMass student.

Corrupting the Games

Marty Keane

Forget, for a minute, everything you've heard about the 18th Winter Olympic Games in Nagano, Japan. The thrill of watching the world's finest athletes competing for athletic glory on sports' grandest stage — forget it. If you can picture one of those farcical Saturday Night Live parodies, you'll have a clearer picture of what these once-sacred competitions have turned into.

I'll be the first to admit that the 1994 Games in Lillehammer — with downhill skier Tommy Moe winning gold on the Games' opening night and the Tonya/Nancy saga — were nothing less than riveting. Indeed, the on and off-ice drama surrounding the women's figure skating competition drew an astounding 45 million viewers here in the U.S.; second all-time only to the final episode of "M.A.S.H."

Since then, however, something has gone horribly wrong with the Olympics. In the last two Games — the embarrassment also known as Atlanta and now Nagano — the ugly head of crass commercialism and woefully misguided television coverage have severely tarnished the luster on all those pretty medals.

At about 4-o'clock Sunday afternoon, something profound occurred to me. For a little over a week, I had been watching CBS' coverage of the Winter Olympics thinking of when (if ever) the actual athletic competition would be the featured attraction. After watching stale highlights from the two-man bobsled competition, I finally said "To hell with this" in disgust and simply changed over to CNN-SI and looked at the ticker to find out that there was a tie for the gold. I felt much better about myself.

Indeed, having to weed through all the sob-story profiles, commercials, meaningless pitter-patter between anchors and non-competition athletic moments is enough to make even the most ardent sports fan turn the channel. In my own humble opinion, I don't even think "real" sports fans care about the Olympics. The real fan watched Dale Earnhardt win the White Trash (Daytona) 500.

To me, the defining moment of the Nagano Games will always be seeing Martha Stewart wearing a kimono in one of the most unintentionally hilarious moments in recent memory. How am I supposed to take the Olympics seriously when CBS' on-air "talent" includes the above-mentioned neurotic homebody, former MTV personality Kennedy and a jovial weatherman? Obviously, this is some kind of sick joke, right? Wrong. I guess the truth really does hurt.

CBS should be ashamed of itself not just for the cheesy "Pop Up Video" inspired "Rock 'N Roll Highlites" and the insipid touchy-feely features on people we'll never hear about after the Olympics are over, but for letting America's most maligned sportswear company, Nike, splash their infamous "swoosh" logo on the outfits of the on-air "talent."

Often times, the Games are held in places half a world away that present nightmares to programmers who have to scramble to show highlights from competitions that happened in the wee hours here in the States.

Not so in Nagano where the 14-hour time difference with EST actually allows for many of the events to be shown live. However, the majority of these events shown live, thus far, have been hockey games.

This actually might be a blessing in disguise because Sean McDonough and John Davidson's insightful, humorous and unobtrusive commentary on the "Dream Tournament" has made hockey the only watchable sport in Nagano. That is, unless you consider the snowboarding halfpipe competition, dude.

I mean, c'mon, how can you take the two dum-dums whom CBS hired to give "commentary" on this pseudo-sport seriously? When American Ross Powers surprised many and got the bronze medal, one of these idiots remarked, "Dude, Ross must be so stoked right now." What the hell is that?

Unfortunately, the lexicon utilized for the entire snowboarding competition was little more than glorified stoned surfer-speak. Maybe that's why I wasn't surprised that slalom gold medalist, Canadian Ross Rebagliati, had his medal temporarily stripped from him for testing positive for marijuana use. For the rest of us, though, it made us wonder why these two snowboarding sports made it into the Olympics in the first place. I suppose the International Olympic Committee couldn't really say no after they let curling in.

I guess the only thing missing in Nagano is Yanni's heir-apparent, John Tesh.

Marty Keane is a Collegian staff member.

Remembering the draft

Chris Stamm

A long weekend, free time and a remote control are dangerous when combined.

With some extra time on my hands the past few days, I resolved to honor our nation's founding fathers by catching up on the world's current events. In the name of George and Abe, I was determined to read, watch, and listen my way back into the informed public.

Well, that's not entirely true.

Due to a winter break bill paying fiasco, the good folks at Media One pulled the plug on service to our apartment. For the past month, I've been here in the Valley deprived of two crucial life-giving necessities — ESPN and CNN. With the chance of returning to my parent's house, my main agenda was to sit on the couch, drain the fridge, and glue my eyes to the tube.

What did I find out? They still haven't proven whether or not Bill zipped or unzipped.

Some guy named "The Hermanator" nearly cleaned his clock racing down a mountain at speeds of over 80 miles per hour in Nagano.

Janet Reno really is large, and somehow seems even bigger when she's down the street in Boston.

And finally, under no circumstances should the United States engage in any sort of military altercation with Iraq. Not because you can count the number of countries that agree with an attack on Iraq on one hand. Not because of controversy regarding sanctions. Not even because if chemical weapons are being manufactured in Iraq and a coalition of armies decides to blow them up, there is no place for an undisclosed amount of lethal toxins to disappear to (Last time I checked, Amhrax doesn't just disappear when scattered around in the air).

Why not bomb our sworn enemy to the east and rid the world of the great mustachioed menace once and for all?

The fact is simple (though admittedly facetious) — twenty-somethings don't know what war is.

In other words, our generation has been lucky enough to come into the world during this transitional phase called the New World Order.

Our fathers had Vietnam. Our grandfathers had World War II and Korea. Our great-grandfathers had World War I. We twenty-somethings have... "The Cola Wars."

What if some political catastrophe occurs, the draft is reinstated and I find myself in the middle of the desert running from a noxious cloud of lethal biological pathogens? All the cans of caffeine-free diet cherry coke, all the choices of generation next, any thing that never had it or never would could help me. (That Surge stuff they've been pushing around campus though, that could burn a hole in someone).

Our generation does not know how to deal with war.

When our fathers were our age, they were protesting the fact that their friends were being slaughtered in the nation's most infamous blood bath.

During World War II, men in their early teens were flying fighter planes dropping bombs over Europe.

For our generation, war has been something we watched on television. When we were in the early years of high school, we squeezed in a little Gulf War coverage in all its nightvision-green glory between "The Simpsons" and "Growing Pains."

Even the most studious, current-event, New York Times digester of us all does not know what war is like. That is not to say that lives were not lost in the Gulf War, that veterans returned seriously ill from the poisons of chemical weapons. That is not to say that, while many may cynically disagree with the motives behind the War in the Gulf, thousands of men and women risked their lives for their country.

We have come of age in the twilight years of the Cold War, a time when the world is in transition. While the world anxiously awaits the end of a conflict which has been coming to a boil for months, we must hope our leaders make the right decision.

I'd rather battle it out on the front lines of media mayhem and marketing blitzes as opposed to a line drawn in the sand. Just because war is now fought behind computer screens doesn't make it any cleaner.

The powers that be should make a decision and stick with it.

Chris Stamm is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Protest action against Iraq now

To the Editor:

The threat of a unilateral U.S. military action against Iraq mounts daily.

It is imperative that the conflict with Iraq be settled through the numerous available diplomatic channels, whether it be the United Nations' Secretary General or top officials of Russia or other states that have offered their services.

Memories of the Gulf War cannot be forgotten when the United States, intent on getting rid of the Saddam Hussein regime, pre-empted further diplomatic moves that could have avoided that tragic war.

Despite the frightful casualties and devastation, which affected primarily the Iraqi people, Saddam remained firmly in power.

The subsequent economic blockade of Iraq has killed more than 567,000 children under the age of five, according to a United Nations' Food and Agriculture Organization study of December 1995. More than 4,500 children under the age of five are dying each month from hunger and disease, according to a United Nations' Children's Fund study of October 1996. A renewed military air attack on Iraq will produce added misery, not to Hussein, but to the poverty-stricken masses.

The U.S. administration's intention is to repeat the Gulf War scenario, but without a land invasion — which will again not get rid of the Saddam regime. His prestige will be as high as ever, as he pictures himself in a David versus Goliath role.

The stalemate on military inspections of possible chemical and biological sites will not be solved by an air strike. Military action will produce civilian casualties. Furthermore, the dangers of an Iraqi attack on Israel, despite Iraqi assurance that there will be no such attack, must not be underestimated. Such a Scud missile strike will lead to an Israeli counter-attack, possibly nuclear, which in turn could trigger a general conflagration in the Middle East.

Let us not forget that most of our allies are opposed to a military strike. Their views must be respected.

It is imperative for those in the University community who oppose a military option to convey their views to the [Clinton] Administration as quickly as possible. Time is running out to solve this issue on a diplomatic level.

Immediate and massive protests may have an effect on the Administration.

You can e-mail the White House at (president@whitehouse.gov) or send a fax (202-456-2461) to the President. Secretary of State Madeleine K. Albright can also be reached through e-mail (secretary@state.gov).

Gerard Braunthal
Professor Emeritus, Department of Political Science
gbraunth@polsci.umass.edu

Administration should continue negotiations

To the Editor:

By refusing to negotiate further with the Graduate Employee Organization, the University is clearly saying it does not respect its graduate student employees.

Almost every graduate employee makes less than $10,000 a year and we do not have dental or eye care. Some students earn wages below the state's poverty level. Chancellor David K. Scott argues that our demand for a minimum wage of $10,500 per year is unreasonable, easy to say for someone who makes more than 10 times the average graduate employee's salary.

Graduate employees have not had a raise for two years because of the University's stubborn and stingy refusal to settle. This University's administration damages not only our wallets, but our dignity. Scott's message is that we are worth very little. Apparently, he needs to be reminded how valuable graduate student employees are.

In the last year, I helped teach more than 300 students in sociology courses — grading papers, delivering lectures, leading discussions, tutoring students, and writing exams. Hundreds of other graduate students do the same, and the fact is that UMass–Amherst cannot meet the needs of its undergraduates without its graduate student employees. Further, hundreds of other graduate students assist professors in doing research and developing the knowledge that keeps the University vibrant.

What will happen to UMass if graduate employees take action and turn the campus upside down? What an insult that the University does not recognize the rights of labor at UMass. There is no doubt that the other unions on campus understand you don't care about them, either, because you've shown you don't care about the rights of the working classes by refusing to negotiate further. What would happen if all unionized employees on campus worked in solidarity to wreak havoc on campus until the administration returns to the bargaining table with GEO, and settles a fair contract?

James A.W. Shaw
Graduate Teaching Assistant shaw@soc.umass.edu

GEO out of bounds

To the Editor:

Over the past weekend the Student Government Association hosted its annual awards dinner. The dinner is a yearly event that brings together undergraduate students, staff, faculty, administrators, public higher education administrators and legislators to distinguish those that have made the undergraduate experience a priority. The highlight of the event is the presentation of the Legislator of the Year Award. This year's recipient was Senate Ways & Means Chairman Stan Rosenberg.

This year's event was a great success barring one unfortunate situation that I would like to reflect on. Shortly after our guests arrived at the Student Union Ballroom, a group from the Graduate Employee Organization (GEO) interrupted our event with a silent protest directed at one of our guests, Chancellor David K. Scott. The members of GEO disrupted our event for about 15 minutes by parading around the Ballroom with picket signs while making our guests feel quite uncomfortable. Fortunately, the members decided to spare the undergraduates any further embarrassment by leaving after their point was made.

I am aware of the struggle that the graduate students are facing in negotiating a contract with the University and I wish them success in their demands. However, the conduct of the GEO was outrageous during our event.

Unfortunately, the membership of GEO chose a desperate and selfish attempt at gaining publicity. I strongly urge GEO to consider the consequence of their actions before attempting to disrupt another undergraduate event.

Jason Vecchio
SCERA Student Coordinator

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor-in-Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Co-Editor
Tamar Carroll Editorial/Opinion Co-Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Position Vacant Multicultural Affairs Editor
Leigh Faulkner News Editor
Lauren Kosky Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor
Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
David Parmenter Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Entrain rocks UM campus

COURTESY ENTRAIN

The Martha's Vineyard–based Entrain entertained a spirited crowd Friday evening.

By Gena Mavuli
Collegian Correspondent

ENTRAIN
Campus Center Auditorium
Feb. 13

Entrain is known as the Outing Club's honorary band for good reason. On Friday, the Campus Center auditorium was rocking and dancing to the upbeat, funky tunes of Entrain. Playing to an intimate crowd of 100 concert-goers, they had people up on their feet in no time.

Entrain entertained not only with their music, but the way they played it. Creative music seems to come naturally to them. During their ever-popular song "Rise Up," lead vocalist Judd Fuller had a few minutes of fun playing his bass with a drumstick, creating a percussion-like sound that rang through the auditorium. The show was highlighted as different forms of percussion took over.

Drummer Tom Major, conga/djembe/trombonist Sam Holmsock and saxophonist/percussionist/vocalist Rob Loyot all had their moments in the spotlight as the percussion solos intoxicated the crowd.

Entrain has an ever-expanding reputation for a fun mix of styles which helped them rise to fame in a very short period of time. With a mix of funk, rock, jazz, R&B and African music the band creates a show that is anything but dull. Each song has a different beat and melody keeping the crowd alive and dancing. Upbeat songs like "Little Seeker" and "Bathtub Jesus" were mixed with calmer ballads such as "Simple Love."

The crowd, though small, was as eager and enthusiastic as if the place was packed. As soon as Entrain walked on the stage, the chairs were empty. Students were dancing and cheering with amazing enthusiasm. The more Entrain performed, the more excited the crowd became. Even those who were not acquainted with Entrain's music had a blast. Saying it was a "fun" show clearly would be an understatement.

The concert was compiled of a mix of music off their three albums titled Entrain, Can U Get It and the most recent No Matter What.

Starting out on Martha's Vineyard, Entrain has moved inland to play all over the east coast including Boston's Fleet Center and at the 1995 Earth Day celebration. Entrain's resumé includes the 1995 Boston Music Award for the Most Outstanding Live Performance in the New England Region. They were also a semi-finalist in Musician Magazine's Best Unsigned Band Competition 1996.

The concert was sponsored by the Outing Club and Alumni Association and held in honor of the Outing Club's 75th anniversary.

Gibbs to leave "Another World"

Jacob Fanning

Hi soap fans, hope everyone had a lovely weekend... romance and gifts galore. I won't bore you with the details of mine, so let's get down to business. First a bit of shocking news within the industry. "Another World" has confirmed the departure of one of the show's biggest and brightest stars, Timothy Gibbs (Gary). Apparently, the actor has left the soap for greener pastures, namely a gig with "One Life To Live" as... get ready for this, Kevin Buchanan (at least that's the rumor). Word is, Kevin Stapleton (the actor who has been playing the role for the past year or so and playing it quite nicely I might add) has been released from his contract. If the rumor is true I wish Tim the best of luck. He's going to need it playing one of daytime's most "cursed" roles. The part has been re-cast about a billion times within the past five years. I'll keep you posted.

Well, daytime certainly has its fair share of treats this week, starting with a week's worth of must-see episodes of "Guiding Light," which has been riveting these past few months. Springfield's resident vixen, the one and only Annie Lewis, may be going down in flames but she's determined to take Reva with her. It's the final showdown between these two and the fur is going to be flying fast and furious. Annie is determined to see that Reva pays for what she's done to her and we all know — what Annie wants, she gets. It all starts on Feb. 19 when Annie drugs Reva and... ah, you'll just have to see it for yourself. If you've ever been a fan of "GL," I'd strongly recommend that you watch especially in light of the fact that this is Cynthia Waltros' (Annie) last week on the show. On an end note, I'd like to wish Cynthia the best of luck with whatever she may do in the future. She's been absolutely superb in her portrayal of the over-the-top, quintessential vixen. Annie (who knew that this once mousy nurse could be such a bitch). She will be missed.

A few other noteworthy soaps this week (my poor VCR is in for quite a workout!)...

• "AW" — Look for two of Bay City's main players to die this week in a horrific car accident. Life in Bay City will never be the same.

• "Days of Our Lives" — Peter's storyline (if you want to call it that) comes to an end this week as he shows up to Jenn's funeral packing an AK-47.

• "Port Charles" — Lucy finds herself at death's door as a result of Rex's (slime) machinations. Look for an influx of "General Hospital" players to join Kevin and Scott in their quest to find the cure and to bring down Rex once and for all. This story promises to be huge.

I've decided to add a little something to the column in which I throw out some of the rumors I've been hearing on the net, etc. with regards to our favorite soaps. If I hear some tasty gossip I'll be sure to include it in here.

"You can't be serious!"

• Rumor has it "GH" may be working on a hot new love quadrangle that includes, get a load of this, Jason, Carly, Robin and... Nikolas. Yes folks, you heard it right. It all starts when Emily is forbidden to see Nik (thanks to Sarah's meddling). Emily is, of course, distressed and turns to Robin for some advice. Robin volunteers to take over Nik's speech therapy sessions for Emily and heads over to Wyndamere. The rest is history. Oh, I hope it's true. Can you imagine how hot these two could be (certainly couldn't be much worse than Sarah and Nik)? Just last week they shared a small scene together and, call me crazy, but there was definitely a little something there. I guess we'll just have to wait and see.

I thought I'd review the current state of "Sunset Beach" this week (others will follow in the coming weeks), what it has got going for it, what it doesn't and finally, what I think of it as a whole. Next week I'll be discussing the thriller that "All My Children" has become.

I have to admit, I've never really been all that interested in "SB." The characters seemed slightly bland (with the exception of a few) and the show's pace was a bit slow. In all fairness though, the show was still a bit young back then and was trying desperately to find its niche. Finally, and happily, after a year (give or take a few weeks), the show seems to have found it and is, dare I say it, thriving. Some of the actors are a little rough around the edges but that's to be expected from such a young cast of, primarily, newcomers.

The storylines, for the most part, are engaging (especially the infamous "Terror Island" saga and its aftermath — Ben is the killer!) and the soap has, not one, but two vixens in its roster. Love them or hate them, they certainly add some spice to the show. Looking for some hunks, no need to fear.

"SB" has its fair share of them as well (as generic looking as some of them may be). As my friend says, so eloquently, "Ah, those dimples of Cole's... couldn't you just get lost in them!"

The one thing that it lacks, however, is a breakout couple; one that you can really pull for. I'm sorry but Meg and Ben just don't do it for me. No, you won't find "SB" tackling any serious, real life issues but if you're looking for some guilty pleasure, give the "Beach" a try. My rating: C+.

Here's the rest of the Soap Opera Digest nominees. Sorry Caroline, "GL" wasn't nominated for much this year (which, in my opinion, is a crock of...)

Outstanding Female Newcomer:
• Sabryn Genet (Tricia, "Young & the Restless")
• Jennifer Hammon (Karen, "Port Charles")
• Florencia Lozano (Tea, "One Life To Live")
Who's going to win: Jennifer Hammon
Who deserves it: Hammon

Outstanding Male Scene Stealer:
• Ivan G'Vera (Ivan, "Days")
• John Ingle (Edward, "GH")
• Eric Morgan Stuart (Chris, "AW")
Who's going to win: John Ingle

Turn to SOAP, page 6

Dear Mom and Dad,
Don't send money.

Don't call home for cash. Call us for The Associates Visa* card. You can get:

- 3% cash back on purchases*
- Discounts on brand name merchandise
- No annual fee
- Credit line up to $2,500

To apply, call 1-888-SEND-ONE.

*See Rebate Terms and Conditions accompanying the credit card.
Associates National Bank (Delaware)

An old theme with a new twist

COURTESY SMITH COLLEGE

1969 Terminal 1990, directed by Joe Chaikin, played at Smith College over the weekend.

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Correspondent

1969 TERMINAL 1990
Mendenhall Center
Feb. 13

NORTHAMPTON — The plague of death struck at Smith College in Mendenhall this weekend. The theatrical performance of 1969 Terminal 1990, directed by Joseph Chaikin, consisted of an all-star ensemble that included three of the original Terminal cast members, as well as the renowned actor Paul Zimet, an artist in residence at Smith.

The original production of Terminal, performed as the 1970 Open Theatre Play, evolved out of a collective investigation into human mortality and the physical and mental responses to the concept of death. In response to our changing perspectives on the theme of death, the original Terminal production has changed and evolved to adapt modernly.

The performance blended music, movement, humor, lighting and words unencumbered by traditional concerns like plot and character development. With an omittance of such common theatrical devices, the audience was less able to distinguish between the real actors and the characters they were acting. The resulting effect was that of death and decadence coming to terms in the auditorium and having surrounding the spectators with thoughts, emotions, and fears associated with death.

Many people were overwhelmed by a scene in which a man screams and chants to retain the lives and identity of his culture from being destroyed by a soldier of war, a human being, whose mission is to kill against his will. The crowd could easily sympathize with both characters instead of drawing upon the typical "good/bad stereotype." As a result, the flaws of both characters' situations showed that death was indeed inevitable: to become a casualty of war or to go on living a life as a soldier without freedom of choice or independence. There is no distinction between a physical death and a mental death.

This theme is so common of classic literature such as Hamlet, that in today's modern society, we have lost the real denotation of death, and I thought this statement was very substantial in giving the performance its depth and meaning.

Various aspects of the performance that were quite impressive included the use of a backdrop that illuminated the shadows of the actors on stage, creating a two- dimensional effect, and the use of African drum music to instill the effect of a death march. It was so effective to the overall mood that one person exclaimed afterwards, "I don't think I exhaled most of the performance!"

The performance of Terminal was to an effect quite inducing and overall captivating. The actors worked well together on stage, and a touch of humor lightened the cadaverous tone of the piece. What was even more compelling was being able to admire the performers for their ability to captivate the audiences on such a serious topic like death, one that is so widely ignored in today's modern theatrical devices.

■ soap

continued from page 5

Who deserves it: Ingle

Outstanding Female Scene Stealer:
• Jennifer Bassey (Marian, "AMC")
• Tracy E. Bregman (Lauren, "Bold & the Beautiful")
• Kathleen Noone (Bette, "SB")
Who's going to win: Jennifer Bassey
Who deserves it: Bassey

Favorite New Character:
• Cassie, "GL"
• Matt, "PC"
• Mel, "OLTL"
Who's going to win: Cassie
Who deserves it: Cassie

Just a few departing Sink or Swims:

Sink:
• Sarah on "GH." Someone needs to smack this girl; any volunteers? She is like one of those people who, despite their "pure" intentions, always end up (accidentally, of course) screwing you over. Little bimbo!
• Peter's return on "Days." Need I say more.
• Victor on "Y&R." Leave Sharon alone. This guy has been badgering her all week trying to intervene in their marriage. Why don't you concentrate on your own wife?
• "Most Tragic Scene" belongs to "GH." Lizzie's attack was difficult to watch and very disturbing. I hope she doesn't lose that feisty spirit of hers.

Swim:
• Last Thursday's cliffhanger on "OLTL" with Dorian's mother ready to strike Cassie with an iron rod. The scene took my breath away and on a Thursday no less.
• Jack and Carly on "As The World Turns" for giving the phrase "Cabin Fever" an entirely new meaning.
• A special swim to one of daytime's most charming and romantic couples... Edmund and Susan on "Days." No joke my friends, these two are a hoot.
• The belly pillow slip during Caitlin's wedding to Cole on "SB." I almost burst into hysterics when Caitlin's pillow fell out of her wedding dress as she was ready to walk down the aisle. Watching Annie run around like a chicken with its head cut off (doing damage control) was rather amusing too.

Jacob Fanning is a Collegian columnist. You can e-mail any questions or comments about this column to jfanning@student.umass.edu. Soap Chat regularly appears on Mondays.

New movies mirror presidential reality

By Bryan McAllister
Collegian Staff

Last November, in the uneven and unwatched film Mad City, Dustin Hoffman and John Travolta explored the effects of media frenzies on the American public. Maybe they should have waited for February 1998. The current hype over the alleged Monica Lewinsky "sexual relationship" has shown that the media will do anything to embellish a story.

But one film that couldn't have had better timing is Hoffman's Wag the Dog, a biting satire about a presidential scandal involving an affair with a girl scout. Hoffman plays a manic Hollywood producer who helps political spin doctor Robert DeNiro create a fake war with Albania in order to take the public's minds off the scandal. Sound a little familiar? Lewinsky's age isn't far off from the girl scout's in the movie. A conflict with Iraq is threatening to take top news story billing. But even more disturbing, an early scene in the film has the president with the beret-wearing girl scout. Visions of Monica hugging Bill dance in my head.

Bill Clinton's ties to movies — and his conspiracies — don't end there, however. Scheduled to be released in March is Primary Colors, a chronicle of a "fictional" politician's rise to the White House, based on the novel by Newsweek's Joe Klein, who shaped his story around Clinton's campaign adventures. Rumors are flying around the entertainment industry that Clinton met with Primary Colors' star Travolta, asking him to portray the president in a better light. In exchange, Clinton would help Travolta with his dispute between Germany and the Church of Scientology, of which Travolta is a strong pusher. National Security Advisor Sandy Berger has publicly denied all rumors, but it's interesting to see current ads for Primary Colors showing Travolta, with his best Clinton accent, as a hero.

Apparently, Titanic's 14 Oscar nominations were only the beginning of its growing fortunes. After its ninth week of release, the film continues to be the highest grossing movie, despite the strong openings of The Wedding Singer ($18.5 million) and Sphere ($15.2 million). With a total gross of $570 million, Titanic passed Jurassic Park for third place on the list of all-time box office grossers. Next week, it could feasibly pass E.T., and then will only trail Star Wars, sitting at a re-released-enhanced $461 million. Meanwhile, Titanic director James Cameron is restructuring the contract that had him receiving virtually no profit for all of this.

Turn to MOVIES, page 7

THE ALANA JOB FAIR
A World of Opportunities is at your Doorstep...

Wednesday, February 18, 1998
7:00 - 9:00pm
Campus Center Auditorium • UMass Amherst
All students are invited !!!

AMONG THE 60+ COMPANIES ATTENDING THE FAIR ARE:
BASF Bioresearch Corporation, Bell Atlantic, IBM, Mass Mutual Insurance Company, Sheraton Boston Hotel and Towers, and Teach for America.

Any questions? For more info contact Ruth Carey at (413) 545-6252
http://www-unix.oit.umass.edu/~jbcp/alana

Internships in Business

ADVERTISING
ACCOUNTING
PROMOTIONS
FINANCE
MARKETING

The Collegian is looking for talented students to run its Business Department. Pick up an application at the Collegian in the Campus Center Basement. Applications due Friday, February 18th. Questions? Call 545-3500.

Live Music Tonight at
WALKER'S GRILL
Free Wings! @ 9:30 while they last
$1.00 Budlight Drafts
Featuring LABB 10:00 pm.
$2 Cover 21+ pos ID Required
$1.50 Gin & Tonic
$2.50 Jack & Coke
41 Boltwood Walk, Amherst 253-4040

■ movies

continued from page 6

Loss in the Oscar nomination hype was the announcement of the Razzie Awards, which honors the worst movies of the past year. Nominated for "Worst Picture" were Batman and Robin, Speed 2, Anaconda, The Postman, and Fire Down Below. Alicia Silverstone was nominated twice, for worst actress and worst supporting actress, for her roles in Batman and Robin and Excess Baggage. It's a safe bet the Razzie's won't have a problem finding films next year either, since Deep Rising, SpiceWorld, and Firestorm already more than qualify.

Please watch out for a movie coming out this March. It may look really appealing, but it's really rather sickening. U.S. Marshalls returns Tommy Lee Jones to the role of the determined government agent on the search for a new lost criminal in the sequel to 1993's hit The Fugitive. Reasons why this is a bad idea: It stars Wesley Snipes as the new fugitive, who's never made a good action movie. Worse, it re-creates the same formula used in the previous movie, right down to the climatic scene where Jones faces his adversary on the top of a big cliff or building and the guy jumps. This time there's no waterfall, but Snipes has the advantage of a convenient bungee cord. Jones' famous line, "I don't care," comes to mind.

COURTESY ZADE ROSENTHAL

George Malley (John Travolta) does his David Copperfield impression in Phenomenon.

Unlike the boat, Titanic's hype stays afloat

Adam Martignetti

And I thought the Golden Globes were bad. With Oscar nominations announced last week, the Titanic frenzy has once again swept the nation as the movie garnered a record tying 14 nominations. For anyone else like me out there, you dread the next month-plus of nothing but Titanic hype and discussion in anticipation of this year's awards.

Thanks in no small part to my friendly RA, I can also look forward to the pains of the Titanic soundtrack blaring and Celine Dion singing "My Heart Will Go On" for the next couple of months. Please, enough is enough. The ship sunk; let the movie die. Forget the heart, the hype goes on and on.

As you have probably guessed by now, I am one of the few people in America, if not the only one, who did not go crazy over the movie Titanic. It was a good movie, but it is not the best movie ever or even the best movie of the year.

I know what all you Titanic fanatics are thinking, "Who is this guy to say Titanic isn't the best movie of the year? He even said it tied the record." Then, all of you who saw the movie two and three times will probably rub the four Golden Globe awards which the movie won in my face. Let's analyze the categories of supposed excellence for the movie though before we leap to any giant conclusions.

First of all, the picture won two Golden Globes for music or music direction, which don't even count. Other than my RA, I know of no one who goes to see a movie just to listen to the music. I will come to James Cameron's award for best director later. Of course, the movie's most prestigious Golden Globe was for Best Dramatic Movie. Two simple factors can explain this: First, the Golden Globes split Drama and Comedy, a practice not followed by the Academy.

Second, the Golden Globes were held at the peak of Titanic-mania, when box office sales were skyrocketing and every showing sold out. By the March 23rd date of the Oscars, Titanic should be out of most theaters (hopefully) and at least some of the excitement will have died down.

Now let's address Titanic's, only once precedented, 14 Oscar nominations. I am pretty sure that not even the Academy knows every category for which the movie was nominated, so I intend to focus on one major category. The glaring vacancy for Titanic lies in the screenplay category. The fact that the movie was not nominated for any type of screenplay, adapted or otherwise, provides at least some support for the notion that the movie was built on media hype and special effects.

The emotional love story that the public found so appealing apparently didn't touch the voters enough to even gain the consideration for a nomination. If this wasn't the reason for the film's success then what was? Only, the image of a fantastically imaginative replica of the ship sinking comes to mind.

In searching for a way to characterize Titanic, I could only think of its modern contemporary as a box office monster, Jurassic Park. So, I asked myself what is the difference between Jurassic Park and Titanic? Suddenly, it came to me about five feet and 10 inches. Think about it. Jurassic Park was a movie about large dinosaurs that became recklessly out of control and eventually started killing humans. Titanic is a movie about a large ship, with a reckless captain, that goes out of control and killed many people. Jurassic Park's special effects showed Steven Spielberg's brilliance by using large mechanical replicas and drew hordes of young adolescents back to the theater to see it again and again. James Cameron used actual footage of the real Titanic and a comparable full-scale replica of the ship to awe audiences and critics alike. Unlike Jurassic Park however, that was not the reason so many people kept coming back to see Titanic. Take the large dinosaurs and make them one large ship and the movies aren't all that different except for one fact.

It's hard to believe, but the relatively unknown James Cameron one-upped the famous Steven Spielberg by getting Leonardo DiCaprio to star in his film. Almost single- handedly, the over-exposed 5'10" actor drew hordes of young teenage females to see the movie two and three times. The aforementioned love story between DiCaprio and Best Actress nominee Kate Winslet was perceived as the movie's driving force, yet it failed to receive a screenplay nomination. I find that extremely ironic.

Imagine if Spielberg had casted DiCaprio in Jurassic Park. How much money would the movie have made then? Poor Leonardo hanging out of the mouth of a T-rex, now that's something I would pay to see.

Oh, and by the way this year's best movie by far, and my favorite, was Matt Damon and Ben Affleck's Good Will Hunting, which was nominated for Best Picture and Best Screenplay.

The movie follows the life of a brilliant, yet troubled, Irish boy in Boston as he struggles to find happiness and more importantly peace in his life. Matt Damon plays his part masterfully. As a janitor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT), Damon quietly roams the hallways solving the most difficult mathematical problems. Unfortunately, the boy can not solve his own problems in life.

Too brilliant for his own good, Damon always finds potential fault in anything or anyone; therefore, he never attaches himself to anything other than books. Afraid to leave the familiar surroundings of Boston and his friends, he breaks the heart of a Harvard student, played by Oscar- nominated actress, Minnie Driver.

Trying to understand the troubled boy, Driver excels in the role of

Turn to OSCAR, page 8

Local talent shows promise, lacks mix

Adam Dlugacz

Hopefully you've all recovered from your Valentine's weekend. Since I couldn't have one, the only thing I have to recover from is too much Game Day, so excuse me if I sound bitter.

Starting off, we've got Dini 12 with his 12th Pound Knock Out. Dini's a local boy, so there's a good chance that you might know who he is; I didn't, but I'm ignorant to the ways of Massachusetts (probably why I have trouble calling part of Amherst "uptown" when it's separated from "downtown" by a traffic light). Listening to this tape is like being a Knicks fan: the skills are there, the talent's there, the heart is there, and then they go and do something stupid like letting Chris Childs shoot a three pointer with four seconds left on the clock. Dini has the skills necessary, but then he does something wacked like throwing on two tracks by Timbaland and Magoo and another two tracks by the kon. This is worse then the smell of Olde-E aftershave. The best tracks on this album have already been played. Bottom line — this kid has the skills, he just needs better taste in records.

Three Minute Blunts is not the name of the new Cypress Hill album and it's not what Allen Iverson rolls when he's not on court, rather it's a compilation of the sounds of Detroit's instrumental hip-hop. Fine, I picked this up for the title and I have to be honest; this is more like dirt weed then the medicinal herbals that keep you incapacitated. This album features Terrence Parker, AW, Kanabis the Edit Assassin, Madd Phlavor, Papa Willie, DJ Slym Fas and some others; don't worry, I have no idea who these guys are either. The compilation is mostly made up of sparse beats with a lot of jazz, a bit of funk and some other vegetables simmering in the mix. The best thing about Three Minute Blunts is the graf picture on the back, not a ringing endorsement. This album rates you about four punches on your Antonio's card.

Now for a real treat — Nate Presents... New York Reality Check 101 Mixed by DJ Premier. This album is hotter then your mama's biscuits or Paul Bell on Game Day '98. Haze, a hall-of-fame graffiti artist, selects his top underground hip- hop artists and then gets the best producer in the biz — Premier — to put it all together. In a world full of Versace- wearing-pimps trying to be hip hop artists, this particular offering stands out like Mike Tyson in wrestling tights.

I-Live sets off this disc with "Braggin Writes," and yeah he's earned them. Laster drops "Off Balance" and will have you crashing into walls because Ed O.G. makes a guest appearance on it. Also included is Company Flow; these guys are on everyone's mixed tape, so I think it's about time you checked them out. Their contribution to this album is "8 Steps To Perfection." Other highlights include Natural Elements, Shades of Brooklyn, I. the Head Toucha and the Brainsick Mob. If you want to take a break from MTV- formatted hip-hop and see what's really going on, (note: I'm not talking about the hoopla they spin at Pruddy's and The Pub) check this album out.

There's no Big Willie story of this week because I didn't have anyone to trip up in front of, and USA lost to Canada in hockey so I was too busy sulking.

Quote of the week: "I'll cut your a-hole in half and leave you with a semi-colon." Mos-Def from the Soundbooming album.

Adam Dlugacz is a Collegian columnist

Collegian Arts- We write this stuff so you don't have to!

COURTESY PARAMOUNT PICTURES

Caledon Hockley (Billy Zane) presents his fiancé Rose (Kate Winslet) with the "Heart of the Ocean" diamond.

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM BOSTON

One Way	Roundtrip
LONDON
$145	$264
PARIS
$219	$403
MADRID
$228	$419
ROME
$259	$477

Scheduled flights.
Fares to worldwide destinations
Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply
Customs-Immigration taxes apply
Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave. NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420
800-272-9676
in NYC

STUDY EUROPE

SYRACUSE ABROAD IN STRASBOURG
EUROPEAN STUDIES CERTIFICATE
COUNCIL OF EUROPE INTERNSHIPS
GENEROUS GRANTS & SCHOLARSHIPS
STUDY IN ENGLISH, FRENCH OR GERMAN
SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY
119 Euclid Avenue
Syracuse, NY 13244-4170
1-800-235-3472
suabroad@syr.edu
http://sumweb.syr.edu/dipa

BOSTON
NEW YORK
DAILY EXPRESS SERVICE
Peter Pan
800-343-9999
PVTA • 781-PVTA
(413-781-7882)
Amherst, Peter Pan Terminal, 79 S Pleasant St
Umass Campus Cntr. or SW Hampden Dinning Common
Northampton, Peter Pan Terminal 1 Roundhouse Pz

FORGET THE REST & PARTY WITH THE BEST!
COLLEGE TOURS
SPRING BREAK '98
in CANCUN
INCLUDES
7 Breakfasts/7 Lunches
7 NIGHT HOTEL R/T TRANSFERS
from $419
For information on a FREE Trip or Reservations call Amanda at 800-244-4463
or visit our website at www.collegetours.com!

Baruch Summer
TWO SESSIONS June 8-July 16 / July 20-August 25
Convenient Manhattan Location
Join us, day or evening, for a wide array of affordable undergraduate and graduate courses in business, liberal arts and sciences, and public affairs

212-802-2056
E-mail SUMMER@baruch.cuny.edu
Fax 212-802-2190 to request a Summer Session Bulletin
See our Web site at www.baruch.cuny.edu
Tuition for Visiting Students:
Undergraduate: NYS residents $160/credit; non-residents $325/credit
Graduate: NYS residents $185/credit; non-residents $320/credit
Baruch College/The City University of New York
17 Lexington Avenue (at 23rd St.), New York, NY 10010

Dar Williams makes triumphant trip home to Northampton

BRIAN ROSBOROUGH / COLLEGIAN

Local folk hero Dar Williams flails away at her guitar during Friday's performance at Northampton's Academy of Music.

DAR WILLIAMS / TODD THIBAUD
Academy of Music
Feb. 13

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

NORTHAMPTON — Touring in support of her new album End of the Summer, Dar Williams returned home to Northampton last Friday night for a sold-out Valentine's Day-eve concert.

Continuing her first-ever band tour, Williams presented her audience with a colorful patchwork of songs from all three of her albums.

Flowers littered the stage as Williams launched into two songs from Summer to an enthusiastic crowd, playing guitar between a cellist and a lead guitarist, with percussion bringing up the rear. Her first selection, "What Do You Hear In These Sounds," is an upbeat pop song endorsing psychotherapy that "You don't need to be in therapy to enjoy," according to Williams.

"Road Buddy," Williams told the audience, was about "Sewing your wild oats or discovering that you don't have any." She has honed herself into a professional, graceful performer who seemed genuinely appreciative when a fan threw a stuffed animal with a note attached on stage. "I'll read the note later," she said, smiling.

The theme of the concert, according to Williams, was "celebrating free standing, good things" in an effort to avoid a Valentine's Day theme — an idea which brought cheers from the audience.

Most of her selections were the quirky, outgoing songs Williams is known for, including "The Christians and the Pagans" and "The Babysitters Here." But she succeeds at more traditional, romantic ballads as well: "If I Wrote You" and "February" revolve around defining the lines between love and friendship.

Williams defined her fan base four years ago by touring with Joan Baez and playing coffee shops, clubs and concert halls. Her albums have sold over 200,000 copies and she has established herself as one of the most unique and accessible singer/songwriters of her generation. She was part of last year's Lilith Fair and has been invited back this year.

"Some of the best relationships I've had were with the radio," Williams said, crediting late night college radio stations as inspiration before singing "Are You Out There?" with the lyric "You always play the madman poets…Vinyl vision grungy bands…You never know who is still awake… You never know who understands."

Williams appeased the audience with two encores and the right arrangement of her band made all of her songs truly charismatic and spirited.

Opening for Williams was Todd Thibaud, a singer/songwriter who fit the mold of a run-of-the-mill, everyday folk singer.

■ oscar

continued from page 7

Damon's love interest as her Oscar nod shows. Despite the efforts of his girlfriend and an MIT professor to get Damon to realize his potential, the boy flounders in a sea of his own fear.

Finally, Damon meets Robin Williams, a therapist who comes from a similar South Boston background. Together the boy and Williams, who captured an Oscar nomination as well, explore their pasts and learn to appreciate the small things in life.

As time passes, the two become extremely good friends who can relate both intellectually and spiritually. Williams helps Damon to mature and in return the boy helps Williams move on with his previously troubled life. In the end, Damon gathers the courage to leave his friends and a potential big money job in order to chase the one thing he lacks, love in the form of his forlorn girlfriend.

The screenplay for this movie was great, as demonstrated by the movie's Golden Globe victory in this category: it's also the favorite for the Oscar win. The acting was brilliant all around. I mean Best Actor, Matt Damon, Best Supporting Actress, Minnie Driver, and Best Supporting Actor, Robin Williams. It's extremely rare for any movie to capture all these acting nominations not to mention a best screenplay and a best picture nod.

A lot of people say that they can't really explain the movie and that's why they didn't like it. I think this is one of its biggest assets. The relationships among all the characters are so complex and so powerful. The movie grabs you from the beginning and takes you through a truly emotional journey of rejection, love, failure, success and ultimately happiness. Best of all, no sinking ship, no Leonardo DiCaprio and no Celine Dion.

Adam Martignetti is a UMass student.

Thank you for reading the Massachusetts Daily Collegian. We appreciate you!

Even At Four, You Had A Good Head For Business.

Face it, you didn't come to college to be just like everyone else, so why not ally yourself with one of America's top internships? You'll make your resume stand out after graduation, plus earn real money while still in college. Some of our students earn a five figure income. Put the Northwestern Mutual Life name to work for you, and realize that you're worth much more than you think. Maybe The Steffen Agency should hear from you. Internship openings available now.

Tune in to "Today's 99.3" for the Northwestern Mutual Life Player of the Game. Please stop by our booth at the UMASS career fair on February 18th.

KATE KANE
The Steffen Agency
413/748-6000
katekane@javanet.com

Northwestern Mutual Life®
The Quiet Company®
www.NorthwesternMutual.com
For sales career opportunities 1-800-CALL-NML

Be a Resident Assistant

Applications for Fall 1998 Resident Assistant Positions Now Being Accepted

Applicants Must Attend an Information Session to Receive an Application:

February 12	7:00pm	Gorman 2nd Floor Lounge
February 17	7:00pm	Field Classroom
February 19	12:30pm	Campus Center Rm. 904
	7:00pm	Kennedy 19th Floor Lounge
February 23	5:00pm	Moorwall Centre Lounge
	7:00pm	Cashin Main Lounge
February 25	12:30pm	Campus Center Rm. 168C
	7:00pm	Cance Main Lounge
February 26	5:00pm	New Africa House Library
March 2	5:00pm	Campus Center Rm. 174
	7:00pm	Hillel House Main Lounge
March 3	7:00pm	Patterson Main Lounge
March 5	7:00pm	Knowlton Main Lounge

Help Wanted: Builders of Strong Communities

For more information, call the Center for Diversity and Development at 545-0172.

wherever you are, there's EMC.

www.emc.com

- Hardware Engineering
- Software Engineering
- Information Systems
- Internet Technology
- Manufacturing/ Operations
- Marketing
- Customer Services
- Finance
- Sales
- Human Resources
- Business Development

EMC Corporation is the company that banking, financial, and industry leaders worldwide rely on for the tools to access and safeguard critical business information in applications such as online reservation systems, transaction processing, customer billing, and more. EMC's intelligent disk arrays, software products, and services enable our customers to connect, protect and manage their data throughout the global enterprise – flexibly, transparently, across every major computing platform. In other words, we've taken information storage out of the box and made it a strategic I.T. pillar of success.

A global enterprise in our own right, EMC is part of the S&P 500 Index with more than 6000 employees in more than 80 offices across the US and abroad. Our consistent dynamic growth creates ongoing opportunities to "break out of the box" with us.

To explore a future with EMC, please stop by your Career Center or send/fax your resume to: Human Resources, University Recruitment, Job Code PM1-UMA2/17, EMC Corporation, 5 Technology Dr., Milford, MA 01757-3681; Fax: (508) 435-8884. Or you may email your resume to: university_emc@iaus.emc.com Attach and save your resume as an ASCII text file using up to 8 characters of your last/first name+.TXT (i.e. SMITHJOE.TXT). If you are using Word for Windows 6.0, save the document as MS-DOS Text with line breaks. EMC is an equal opportunity employer that values the strength diversity brings to our workplace.

INFORMATION SESSION: March 2
On-Campus Interviews: March 3

EMC²
The Enterprise Storage Company

Whether you used an ATM this morning... made an airline reservation at lunchtime... or shopped the Web last night... chances are, EMC was there.

SATISFACTION
[A comparative study]

As one of the world's largest producers of semiconductor fabrication equipment, we know what satisfaction is. At Varian, we're able to provide the most technologically advanced semiconductor equipment to almost every major chip manufacturer in the world. Europe, Korea, Taiwan and Japan. Our people ... We offer opportunity, training, ... Stop By and See Us:
Wednesday, February 18th
Thursday, February 19th
Campus Center Auditorium

For more information, please stop by the University Career Center.

If unable to attend our information ... please call or send resume ... Varian, Inc., Human Resources, 3050 Bowers Avenue, P.O. Box 58059, Santa Clara, CA 95052-8059. Phone: (408) 986-2828. Fax: (408) 727-5135. E-mail: hrdept@varian.com varian

www.varian.com

Vols beat Vandy 91–60; maintain undefeated streak

By Teresa M. Walker
Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Tennessee never has an easy time with Vanderbilt in Memorial Gym. Until yesterday afternoon.

The top-ranked Lady Vols survived a slow start and then routed No. 14 Vanderbilt 91-60 as Chamique Holdsclaw scored 28 points and Tamika Catchings had 26.

It was Tennessee's biggest victory to date in a place where the Lady Vols needed overtime to beat their instate rival last season. The margin of victory even caught Summitt off guard.

"I have great respect for them," Tennessee coach Pat Summitt said. "What happened today probably surprised me a little bit when I looked at the scoreboard there at the end."

Tennessee (29-0, 13-0 Southeastern Conference) extended its lead in the series to 28-4 and their overall winning streak to 34 games with help from the "Meeks" — Holdsclaw, Catchings and Semeka Randall.

They scored all 32 of Tennessee's first-half points and wound up with 73 of the total.

"One of the strengths of this team is that there's no jealousy," Summitt said. "Everyone handles their role, but they also know who puts up the numbers on offense."

The Lady Vols, playing their fifth game in 10 days, looked tired early. Not even the orange support of half the 14,848 — Vanderbilt's third-largest crowd in history — seemed to help. Tennessee hit only two of its first nine shots and trailed 16-7 while Vanderbilt (18-6, 8-5) put together a 12-0 spurt.

When the Lady Vols turned up the defensive pressure, the Commodores had trouble reaching the 3-point line, let alone getting near the basket.

Vandy turned the ball over seven times and missed seven shots as the "Meeks" scored the next 17 points. The Lady Vols took the lead for good at 18-16 on Catchings' basket with 8:35 left. Randall capped the run with two free throws for a 24-16 lead, and Tennessee was up 32-25 at halftime.

Randall finished with 19 points for Tennessee.

Vanderbilt cut the lead under 10 points only once in the second half when Lisa Ostrom's turnaround jumper pulled Vandy within 34-25 in the opening minutes.

The Lady Vols, who hit 62 percent (22-of-35) from the floor in the second half on mostly short jumpers and layups, kept adding to the lead and eventually matched their average margin of victory on two Kristen Clement free throws at the end.

Vandy coach Jim Foster, who has never beaten Tennessee in his home gym, said he thought his team played well defensively considering only three Lady Vols had scored at halftime.

But 16 of the Commodores' 24 turnovers came in the first half, and freshman Ashley Smith wound up with 10 overall.

"I think to beat that team you have to play almost perfect," Foster said. "Our team has got to get better. I'm not sure they can."

Na'Sheema Hillmon led the Commodores with 12 points before fouling out, and Jennifer Holmes added 11 off the bench.

Sprewell awaits arbitrator's decision

By Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Latrell Sprewell's arbitration hearing concluded yesterday with 7 1/2 hours of closing arguments, most of which focused on the player's grievance against the NBA for suspending him for one year.

Arbitrator John Feerick can issue his decision at any time within the next 30 days. Sprewell is hoping to be readmitted to the NBA immediately.

"On behalf on the players association and our 400 players, I think everyone is pleased that the hearing is behind us and that Latrell has finally had an opportunity to a fair hearing before a neutral arbitrator," union director Billy Hunter said. "We look forward to receiving a decision and to Latrell resuming his career as soon as possible."

Union attorney Jeffrey Kessler spent almost three hours making his closing argument at the Manhattan law firm of Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom.

Attorney Frank Rothman, representing the NBA, took about two hours to state his case. Attorney Robert Shiebleihut of the Golden State Warriors finished in about 20 minutes.

The union and the league then gave rebuttal arguments for about 45 minutes apiece before the hearing adjourned.

Sprewell was in attendance, as he has been for all nine days of the hearing, and more than a dozen attorneys were there.

"We remain hopeful," said his agent, Arn Tellem.

Feerick has given no indication of how long he will take to issue a ruling. Before the hearing began, he turned down a motion for an expedited decision.

A total of 21 witnesses testified over four days in Portland, Ore., during the final week of January and four more days in New York during the first week of February.

The transcript from the hearing runs almost 3,000 pages. Given the time Feerick will need to review the it, no decision is expected for at least a few days.

Sprewell has already missed 35 games, making his suspension the longest in NBA history.

He has filed two grievances, one against the Warriors for terminating the remaining three years of his four-year, $32 million contract, the other against the league for imposing a one-year suspension after Sprewell attacked coach P.J. Carlesimo at practice Dec. 1.

According to a person familiar with Sprewell's argument, his attorneys made a case that he was the first player to be penalized by both the league and the team for a serious transgression. His side also argued that the collective bargaining agreement clearly states that a penalty in a case like this may by issued by either a team or the league, but not both.

Sprewell's side also argued that the one-year suspension was too harsh compared with previous penalties issued by the league. They also brought up cases of player-coach clashes in other sports in which penalties were issued by either the team or the league, but not both.

The NBA argued that the penalty was not excessive, given the nature of the attack. The league's security department interviewed 23 witnesses in two days and determined that Sprewell got into a fight with Carlesimo at practice and choked the coach, then returned some 20 minutes later and punched him.

The union disputed whether a punch landed in the second confrontation.

The Warriors argued that they had the right to terminate Sprewell's contract under Section 16 of the uniform player contract, which says players must "conform to standards of good citizenship and good moral character" and prohibits "engaging in acts of moral turpitude."

Batter up!

LAUREN ROSEN / COLLEGIAN

The No. 12 Massachusetts women's softball team finished 1–3 this weekend at the Coca-Cola Classic in Phoenix, Arizona despite the cancellation of games. Unexpected rainfall tampered with the fields and forced them to be postponed.

Rodman a no–show as team wonders why

By Rick Gano
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Dennis Rodman was a no-show for a second straight practice yesterday, the third time in less than a month the renegade rebounder has missed a workout with the Chicago Bulls.

The Indiscretions have led to a spot on the bench for the start of Sunday's game and a fine.

"We're not going to wrestle and tussle with this because it's not something major. It's not anything that's causing us to lose," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said yesterday at the team's suburban Deerfield practice complex.

"It's not something that is going to cause disruption. What we want is a team that goes into the playoffs in full health, and we can still accomplish that."

Jackson said Rodman was healthy, but the coach wouldn't reveal his latest excuse for missing practice.

When Rodman didn't show yesterday, the Bulls called and found him at home. Rodman's reasoning for being AWOL was not sufficient and he will be fined an undisclosed amount, Jackson said.

The coach said he had not decided whether Rodman would play tonight against the Indiana Pacers, a showdown for the best record in the East.

"That depends on how Dennis responds," Jackson said.

Rodman, recently sporting a leopard-spot hairdo to go with his various body piercings and tattoos, missed a Sunday morning shootaround and then didn't start as the Bulls beat the Detroit Pistons 99-90 later that afternoon.

Rodman told Jackson he lost the keys to his pickup truck and didn't have a way to get to Sunday's practice.

Jackson sent Rodman home before a game in New Jersey on Jan. 23 when the six-time rebounding champion missed the morning shootaround after being out late the night before.

Jackson said he didn't know if Rodman's absence yesterday was related to Sunday's incident. Rodman played just 21 minutes against the Pistons, going scoreless with eight rebounds.

He had been averaging 15.2 rebounds a game in 35 minutes. "I always say if you're not going to play, no sense me coming to the game," Rodman said as left the United Center on Sunday. Rodman has been mostly on his best behavior this season with an incentive-laden contract heavy on number of games played. Last season he was suspended 14 games, 11 for kicking a courtside cameraman.

Jackson said Rodman's latest trouble would not disrupt the Bulls, who have had a turmoil-filled season that may be their last together.

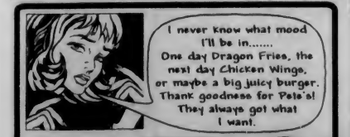
Farlier, Scottie Pippen said he wanted to be traded and would never play for the Bulls again. He's since softened his stance, but last week said he didn't expect to be back in Chicago.

There has also been a clamor over whether Jackson and Michael Jordan will be back next season.

During Rodman's more than two years with the Bulls, Jackson has often treated him like a wayward son.

"I'm disappointed in Dennis, but I'm not angry," Jackson said yesterday. "Dennis, from the standpoint of where he's come from and how far he's gone in his life, has had a lot of pressures. "Sometimes he responds extremely well, sometimes he doesn't. Maybe this weekend some of the things he couldn't respond to he needs help through," Jackson said without elaboration.

Collegian Sports
We cover the latest sports news for you!



CAREER Jam

CareerJam '98 Boston
A Career Forum Specifically Designed to Facilitate Come network with participating employers Your Job Search!

Participation in CareerJam '98-Boston is free for all candidates (juniors and seniors only, please)! To register as a "Walk-In" candidate, please bring a copy of your resume to the Registration Table at the event. Please call us at (617) 577-7790 for details!

Cambridge Center Marriott 2 Cambridge Center Kendall Square (Red Line T) Friday, February 20th 10:00 to 4:00

Visit our website www.careerjam.com for more details!

FAMOUS FOR 2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
NOW SERVING WINGS
ROUTE 9 HADLEY, MA
585-0241
http://www.javanet/~mrburger/
PETE'S

For Fast Easy Delivery Call 256-4110

La Cucina di PINOCCHIO of Amherst 30 Boltwood

#1 Delivery in Town

COLLEGE BASKETBALL SPECIALS!!!

Back by popular demand: Specials running Monday thru Thursday!

1 Large Cheese Pizza $6.95
PLUS 10 Free Buffalo Wings
Please Add $1.50 for Toppings and $3.00 for Double Toppings

Any Two Calzones
$7.00+TAX

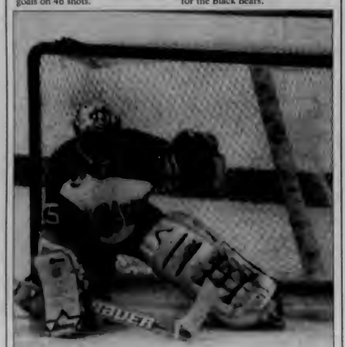
Delivery Only. Not Valid in Restaraunt

Must Mention Ad When Ordering Offer Expires 5/31/98

■ hockey

continued from page 14

home-and-home series.



The Minutemen will travel to Durham, N.H. and the Whittemore Center this Friday night, and the Wildcats will make the trip to the Mullins Center for a game this Sunday afternoon at 2 p.m.

In Saturday night's loss, UMass was not able to get on the board until they were down by an 8–0 score. Freshman Jeff Turner's second goal of the season at the 16:15 mark of the second period ended Maine's run of 13 unanswered goals going through Friday night's game.

The tandem of goaltenders Markus Helanen and Brian Regan combined to let in 12 Black Bear goals on 46 shots.

Senior Dan Juden scored his fourth goal of the season at the 15:37 mark of the third period on a power play for the only other Minutemen goal of the night. The Black Bears received their goal scoring from all around the lineup, with Cory Larose and David Cullen tallying two goals a piece.

UMass senior Mike Gaffney tied the game up at 1–1 at the 7:44 mark of the second period on Friday night, but Adam Tate's first goal of the season, just 22 seconds later, ended up being the eventual gamewinner for Maine. Regan made 38 saves for the Minutemen, while Alfie Michaud made 28 stops for the Black Bears.

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Brian Regan makes a nice save as the Massachusetts men's hockey team played a Hockey East double header at Maine this weekend.

■ gym

continued from page 14

and performed well on vault. UNH, on the other hand, came out sluggish and UMass took advantage.

UMass swept the top three places on the bars, including junior Jennifer Pokrana's 9.900. Freshmen Jobi Goldberg and Mary Moore placed second and third, respectively.

Halfway through the meet, the tables turned on the Minutewomen. UNH stormed back with solid floor performance and an outstanding beam rotation to put the Minutewomen under the gun.

As the temperature was down, so was the maroon and white. Kuzara couldn't, which as his squad fell four timer on the beam. They needed to count three falls which cut the lead to just over a point going into the fourth rotation.

"We were supposed to go to beam and take the meet away because really, if we hit beam, It's over. You hit beam and you get big scores and we didn't do that," added the coach. "We let UNH crawl back Into it. They had a tremendous beam rotation."

UNC atop AP; UM moves up; GW, URI fall

By Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

North Carolina, Duke, Arizona and Kansas held the top four spots in the Associated Press college basketball poll yesterday, continuing to separate themselves as the possible No. 1 seeds for the NCAA tournament. The Tar Heels (26-1) were again the runaway No. 1 choice with 68 first-place votes and 1,748 points, 108 more than Duke (23-2). Arizona (22-3) had the other two No. 1 votes and 1,605 points, while Kansas (27-5) had 1,587 points.

This was the seventh poll this season, including the preseason rankings, where those four teams held the top four spots in some order.

Purdue (22-4), which beat Indiana and Illinois last week, moved up three spots to fifth and had 1,379 points.

Utah, Connecticut and Kentucky — all of whom lost one game last week — each dropped one spot to sixth, seventh and eighth, while Princeton moved up one place to ninth.

Stanford, which rebounded from losing three of four games with road wins over UCLA and Southern California last week, moved up four places to round out the Top Ten, the biggest jump of the week in the rankings.

New Mexico again led the Second Ten and was followed by UCLA, South Carolina, Michigan State, Mississippi, Arkansas, Cincinnati, Massachusetts, Texas Christian and West Virginia.

The last five were Syracuse, Michigan, Illinois, George Washington and Maryland.

Illinois (18-8), the only newcomer to the rankings, entered following the loss to Purdue that snapped a seven-game winning streak. The Illini were ranked for seven weeks last season, including the last five in a row, reaching as high as No. 15. Illinois is the sixth Big Ten team to be ranked this season, a total second only to the Atlantic Coast Conference's seven. The ACC teams were North Carolina, Duke, Maryland, Florida State, Clemson, Wake Forest and Georgia Tech. The Big Ten teams were Purdue, Indiana, Michigan, Michigan State, Illinois and Iowa. Three leagues — the Southeastern Conference, the Atlantic 10 and the Western Athletic Conference — have each had five teams ranked. Rhode Island (18-6) fell out of the rankings from No. 25 following a split of last week's games, a win over George Washington and a loss to Temple. The Rams had been ranked for six straight weeks, fell out for one week, then re-entered last week. The biggest drop of the week was George Washington's fall from 17th to No. 24 following losses to Rhode Island and Dayton. The Colonials (20-5) had won 15 of 16 before last week's losses. Arkansas (20-5), which dropped four spots from a season-high No. 12, also lost twice last week, dropping road games to Georgia and Tennessee.

Cubs announcer Caray collapses

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — A sudden change in heart rhythm was blamed for the collapse of Chicago Cubs announcer Harry Caray. Caray was stricken during a Valentine's Day dinner with his wife.

The 78-year-old announcer remained in critical but stable condition yesterday at Eisenhower Medical Center. His condition has remained unchanged since he was admitted on Saturday night after falling at the local Basin Street West nightclub.

Nursing supervisor Jane Taylor confirmed Caray's condition but declined further comment.

Family spokesman Bill Wills said "a sudden change in heart rhythm which seriously affected his circulation" caused the Hall of Fame broadcaster to collapse.

"His heart output is normal now," Wills was quoted as saying in yesterday's The Desert Sun of Palm Springs.

Doctors were unsure what caused the problem. Caray had a stroke in 1987 but doctors have ruled out another stroke, Wills said. "No one has even suggested that," he said.

Wills did not immediately return a phone call from The Associated Press yesterday.

Caray's son-in-law, Coley Newell, said over the weekend that Caray was unconscious but was breathing on his own.

Mrs. Caray told Chicago radio station WGN on Sunday that her husband fell when he leaned on a table that gave way.

Well-wishers included Cubs officials, fellow broadcasters and Chicago Bulls star Michael Jordan, who wished Caray a speedy recovery.

"I love to hear his voice on the radio and the TV as well. Hopefully he can recover well," Jordan said after the Chicago Bulls defeated the Detroit Pistons 99-90 Sunday.

Basin Street West general manager Peter Martin said Sunday that two of his employees, bartender Chris Bonl and waiter Bobby Wherle, performed cardiopulmonary resuscitation on Caray before paramedics arrived.

"Both have been trained in CPR and did a fabulous job," Marin said. "The paramedics were incredible and efficient in taking care of the unfortunate situation and they were wonderful in assisting Mrs. Caray, calming her, keeping her informed on what they were doing."

Caray, a broadcaster for 53 years, has also worked for the St. Louis Cardinals, Oakland Athletics and Chicago White Sox.

Caray cut back his broadcasting duties last year. His first scheduled Cube telecast on WGN this season is an exhibition game March 8 against the Oakland Athletics.

I'm one with the beam.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Betsy Colucci, who ranks fifth all-time on the balance beam for UMass lead the Minutewomen this weekend at New Hampshire.

Collegian Sports rocks your world!

COMPUTER ENGINEERING • COMPUTER SCIENCE • PHYSICS • CHEMICAL ENGINEERING
MATH • ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING • MECHANICAL ENGINEERING • BUSINESS ANALYSIS

TAKE TECHNOLOGY TO THE NTH POWER.

When something is too extreme for words, it's to the Nth degree. And that's the level of technology you'll experience at Raytheon.

Raytheon has formed a new technological superpower–Raytheon Systems Company, composed of four major technological giants: Raytheon Electronic Systems, Raytheon E-Systems, Raytheon TI Systems and Hughes Aircroft. The new Raytheon Systems Company is driving technology to the limit. And we're looking for engineers who want to push the envelope. Break new ground. Make their mark.

At Raytheon, you'll take technology–and your career–to the highest possible level. You'll take it to the Nth.

We have a lot to tell you about the new Raytheon Systems Company and the exciting opportunities we have available. Plan on visiting our booth at your college career fair. If you are unable to attend the fair then check out our website at www.rayjobs.com and please send your resume to: Raytheon Staffing, P.O. Box 655 474, MS-201, Dallas, TX 75265.

Internet: www.rayjobs.com • E-mail: resumes@rayjobs.com
U.S. citizenship may be required. We are an equal opportunity employer.

Raytheon
EXPECT GREAT THINGS

HEE-HAW! We sure do have fun down here in the Campus Center basement!!! -Graphics folks

Great Service! Great Products!
Nutrition Express
"For Your Fastest Gains"
Supplements, Personal Training, Nutrition Programs

Designer Whey Protein	$26
Creatine 400g	$29
Met Rx 20 ct.	$38
Diet Fuel	$21
Androstenedionel

Fat Burners, Food Bars, & More
Ask for Garrett
253-1850

Spring Break Fever
Party Hard Travel Safe
Cheap Tickets
Great Advice Nice people
Lima $603
Hong Kong $753
Tel Aviv $693
Los Angeles $355
Orlando $177
FARES ARE ROUND TRIP, DO NOT INCLUDE TAXES. RESTRICTIONS APPLY.
Council Travel
CIEE: Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main Street
Amherst
(413) 256-1261

■ hoops

continued from page 14

leadership.

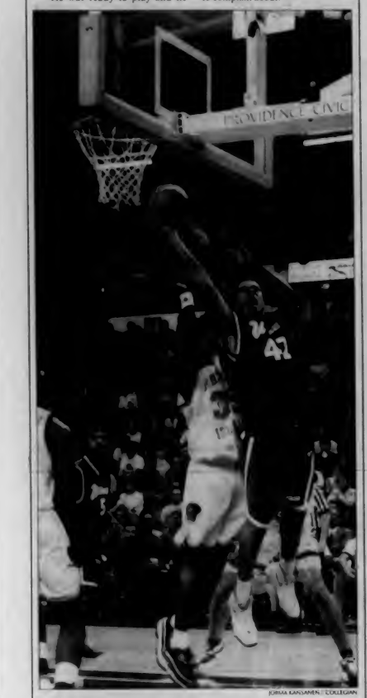
Tyrone Weeks is the lone senior on this year's roster and has played sparingly the past few weeks because of inconsistent play and foul trouble. During this stretch, UMass won two incredibly difficult conference games — road wins at Rhode Island and Xavier.

The group that has stepped up for UMass consists of mostly first and second-year players who although they make some mistakes, play hard and improve with every game.

Take sophomore Chris Kirkland, for example. The Pittsburgh native was near the bottom of the depth charts last season, but worked hard in the off season, and is clearly UMass' most Improved player.

Saturday, Kirkland — whose scrappy style of play resembles that of former UMass bookend Dana Dingle — recorded his first career double-double with a career-high 13 points and 10 rebounds in 27 minutes.

"He was ready to play and he was active," Flint said. "He dove for balls and scrapped for rebounds. He did everything."



He even stopped La Salle center K'Zell Wesson.

Disappointed with the containment of Wesson, who scored 21 points while grabbing 16 rebounds, Flint assigned Kirkland to him and was pleased with the results.

"Chris did a good job putting his body on him," Flint said. "That was the biggest difference, him guarding him."

Sophomores Mike Babul and Monty Mack have been two additional ingredients to the UMass success story. Babul recorded 10 points and six boards against La Salle, and Mack scored 15 points with four boards and four assists.

And though they are exciting to watch, the reality is that this team is still rebuilding and along the way there will be blown leads, close games and tough losses. And as long as they continue to improve, there shouldn't be much to complain about.

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Lari Ketner swoops in for the layup to lead the Massachusetts men's basketball team over LaSalle on Saturday.

Fla. Marlins lose stars, hopes for '98

MELBOURNE, Fla. (AP) – What's left of the Florida Marlins reported to spring training yesterday, and it wasn't a pretty sight.

"You can't insult people's Intelligence and say we have a chance to be as good as we were last year," manager Jim Leyland said. "We're not as good as we were last year. Everybody, including my mother, knows that."

Gone were Kevin Brown, Al Leiter, Tony Saunders, Robb Nen and Dennis Cook, three-fifths of the starting rotation and the top two relievers in the bullpen. Missing was Alex Fernander, probably out for the season following shoulder surgery.

It will be a pared-down Marlins team that goes to the White House on Wednesday to be honored at a reception.

"I don't know who's going; I'm just glad I'm going," catcher Charles Johnson said after the first workout at Melbourne, Fla. "It's going to be a thrill."

Leiter sounded a little angry as he reported to the New York Mets' training camp in Port St. Lucie, Fla.

"Any time you win, you would like to think you could come back and defend the crown," he said. "It was a great nucleus, a great team. I signed a three-year contract there to stay and play for the Marlins. When the exodus started I realized maybe It's not the best thing to stick around since they were trying to get rid of everybody."

In Fort Myers, Fla., Pedro Martinez also had to deal with change. After going 17-8 with a league-best 1.90 ERA and 305 strikeouts, Martinez was traded from Montreal to the Boston Red Sox, who signed him to a record $75 million, six-year contract. "I only know one way to pitch," he said, "and until somebody teaches me something different, I'm going to have to do it the way I know. I have the same killer attitude and it's going to be the same one you're going to see even if I'm playing for free. That's the way I grew up in the Dominican."

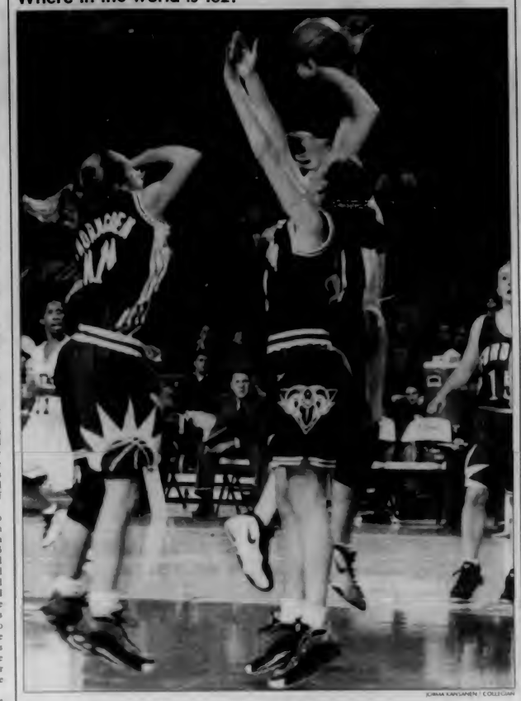
Mike Piazza, angry the Los Angeles Dodgers didn't give him a multi-year contract extension, said in Vero Beach, Fla. he won't negotiate until after filing for free agency this fall.

"Obviously, I'm a little disappointed," Piazza, thought to be seeking $100 million or more, said. "But I've dealt with it. I'm fine as far as my state of mind. I'm ready to play this year. That's it."

New York Yankees center fielder Bernie Williams also has vowed to file for free agency after the season. He is asking for a raise from $5.3 million to $9 million, which would be a record for a one-year contract The Yankees are offering $7.5 million, and agent Scott Boras has said Williams Isn't interested In negotiating a settlement before Wednesday's arbitration hearing in Phoenix. "Bernie doesn't want to cause a distraction anymore than we want to have one, but we know it's going to be one for a time," Yankees manager Joe Torre said in Tampa, Fla. "Anytime you don't talk, it's not a good sign."

Because of yet another day of rain, Toronto worked out indoors at Dunedin, Fla.

"I'm ready to go," said Roger Clemens, who won his fourth American League Cy Young Award last season. "I'm excited about being down here, but sad about leaving home. It's getting tougher and tougher each year. My family has to sacrifice a lot, to allow me to chase my dream, and that's what we're doing again. It's good coming in here and seeing the smiles on the players faces again."



In Winter Haven, Fla., Cleveland decided it wanted some competition at second base, so the Indians agreed to a $400,000, one-year contract with Shawon Dunston, who'll try to beat out Carlos Garcia.

"It gives you another all-star caliber player," manager Mike Hargrove said. "I've found that shortstops are usually some of the best athletes on your team and are very adaptable. Nothing is guaranteed here. This is going to be an honest competition. We're still going to see what Dunston can do."

In Phoenix, third baseman Hiromi Matsunaga, a star in Japan for 17 years, arrived in camp trying to win a job with the Oakland Athletics.

Matsunaga, 37, is a .293 career hitter. He paid his own way to try out for the A's.

Where in the world is Tez?

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Tez Kraft attempts a shot as her opponents can't bare to watch.

amc
Hampshire 8 • 584-7550
Hampshire Mall
Great Expectations (R)
Today at 1:10 (5:30 @ $2.50) 8:30
Replacement Killers (R)
Today at 1:40 (5:50 @ $2.50) 8:40
Spice World (PG)
Today at 1:20 (5:40 @ $2.50)
Titanic (PG-13)
Today at 12:30 (4:20 @ $2.50) 8:10
Good Will Hunting (R)
Today at 1:00 (5:20 @ $2.50) 8:20
The Borrowers (PG)
Today at 1:30 (5:00 @ $2.30) 7:10
Wag The Dog (R)
Today at 8:30
Mt. Farms 4 • 584-9153
Mt. Farms Mall
The Wedding Singer (PG-13)
Today at 1:30 (5:50 @ $2.50) 8:20
Sphere (PG-13)
Today at 2:00 (5:30 @ $2.50) 8:40
As Good As It Gets (PG-13)
Today at 1:40 (5:30 @ $2.50) 8:20
Blues Brothers 2000 (PG-13)
Today at 1:50 (5:40 @ $2.50) 8:30

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING
• 50% Student Discounts
• Right in Amherst
• Space is Limited! Call...
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
Free Info Session Wed. Feb. 25th @ 7:00 pm, Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst Common

98% OF GUYS WHO USE CHEWING TOBACCO SAY THEIR MALE FRIENDS DON T MIND AT ALL

CDC

Tobacco Free Hampshire County Coalition

CDC

For more information call the GazetteLine at 584-3200 ext.1311

Think working for a retail company is limited to the view from behind the cash register? Think again. At TJ Maxx/Marshalls, we're talking corporate careers — full of ever-changing and challenging responsibilities. You see, we're shattering the myth of what working for a retail company is all about. We know you want to step into an industry leader, make multi-million dollar decisions, and impact a company's profitability right from the start. In our Corporate Executive Training Program, you will.

Our Corporate Executive Training Program is a well-defined corporate career path that will prepare you to become a Buyer or Merchandise Planning Manager. You see, when it comes to corporate careers, we believe we have what you're looking for.

We'll be conducting on-campus interviews
Thursday, February 19th
For more information visit your Career Services Office.

If unable to attend, candidates should forward their resumes to College Recruiter, TJ Maxx/Marshalls, Dept. CR 98, 770 Cochituate Road, Framingham, MA 01701. FAX: (508) 390-2650 E-mail: tcparre@tjx.net (please do not send attachments). Visit our website: www.TJX.stage.utopia.com

TJ Maxx TJX THE TJX COMPANIES, INC. Marshalls

© The TJX Companies Inc. 1998
We are an equal opportunity employer committed to workforce diversity

Disney's COMING TO YOUR WORLD
Disney's COLLEGE PROGRAM
WHEN: February 19, 1998 • 7:00 pm
WHERE: Mahar Auditorium
The Walt Disney College Program is about friends, experiences and opportunities you'll discover as you live, learn and earn in our world.
STOP BY AND DISCOVER A WORLD OF OPPORTUNITIES AT DISNEY.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

AUTO FOR SALE

'85 Subaru 2dr hatchback, standard, 127k miles, new tires. $800. 549-3824

Chevy Cavalier 1994 auto, air, power locks and windows. $4500 (413)586-2184

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday 1-800-649-4795

COMPUTERS

In Good Condition, Good For Writing Papers- 386 Cobra Mouse $300 286 Pwm. Navit Mouse $180 or B/O Call Dan 253-5878

Upgrades and Systems
8MB EDO Ram $17 PNP Ethernet Cards $10, Canon BJC-250 Color Printers $129, and more. MC/VISA Accepted. Free delivery. Installation Available. Greenleaf Computers 298-0110.

New P166MMX from $895. Laptops $1299. Peripherals. ZipVision $82-$198 V-MC/AME!

CHEAP! CHEAP! Color VGA Monitor- $50. Laptop Notebook- $99. 486 Computer System- $295. Call CPC (413)584-8857.

EMPLOYMENT

CAMP WAYNE FOR GIRLS- Northeast Pennsylvania 6/20-8/18/98 Have the most memorable summer of your life! Directors for Drama Camping-Nature, Cheerleading, Golf, Counselors for Tennis, Gymnastics, Swim, Sail, Fine Arts, Video, Photography, Guitar, Waterskiing, Dance, Piano, Team Sports, Low Ropes, Karate, Head Chef and Assistant. Other positions available. On Campus Interviews March 3rd. Call 1-800-279-3019 for more information.

COUNSELORS, TOP BOYS SPORTS CAMP IN MAINE! Exciting, fun summer! Instruct: coach, or assist! Openings in: All Land Sports, All Water Sports, PLUS: Canoeing/Kayaking, Ropes/Climbing Wall, SCUBA, Archery, Rifflery, Martial Arts, RN's, Secretaries, Top Salaries, Awesome Facilities. Rm/Bd/Laun. Travel. CALL (800)NUMBER NOW! (800)443-8184 or E-MAIL sobhasbat@aol.com or write Steve Rubin CAMP COBOSSEE. 10 Silvermine Dr., South Salem, NY 10590

EMPLOYMENT

Associates
BLUE JEAN JOB
Travel-California

75 degrees & no snow

- No Experience?
- No Degree?
- No Problem?

"Save the Planet" 18 & up - START NOW!

call 9am-8pm.
1-800-505-8185

WANTED
Responsible students to market/manage Citibank promotions on campus. Make your own hours. No travel. Earn $400+/wk. Call 800-932-0528 ext 117

Arby's - Hampshire Mall
Part-Time Help Wanted. Must have flexible schedule and some restaurant or customer service experience. Apply in person.

Summer Opportunities
Munitor Tours and Summer Discovery are looking for counselors for our student travel programs and/or our pre-college enrichment programs. Applicants must be 21 years old by June 15, 1998. We need mature, hardworking, energetic individuals who can dedicate 4-7 weeks this summer working with teenagers. A director will be on campus at UMASS on February 24. Please call for more information/application or to set up an interview at 888-SUMMER1.

NATIONAL PARK EMPLOYMENT
Parks, Forests, Wildlife Preserves. Ask us how! 517-324-3108 Ext N60012

Whitewater Raft Guides Needed in Western MA. Full or Part-time available. No experience necessary. We will train. Looking for athletic, personable people who like to work hard in the outdoors. Call Crab Apple Whitewater (413)339-0188 for more information and an application.

EMPLOYMENT

Internships Available
Collegian BusinessOffice is Now Taking Applications Positions Available in:

- •Marketing
- •Promotions
- •Finance
- •Business
- •Advertising

Applications are available at our office in room 113 Campus Center (in the basement) or call 545-3500 if you have any questions.

COPYRIGHT/PROOFREADER Small direct response marketing company needs creative individual with communications, English comp, advertising or related background. Consult as projects require (413)536-5086 1pm-8pm

Hours Boys Wanted Sigma Alpha Mu Fraternity. If interested please contact Randy or Lee at 549-6023. Must belong to Greek Area. Meal included

EMPLOYMENT

Drivers Needed
Short morning hours.
$10/hr
Call the collegian
@ 545-3500 or stop by our office @
113 Campus Center
(in the basement)
Ask for Mark or Ryan.

Full-Time Summer Position Available at Crab Apple Whitewater for a Photo Technician at our Montvale Job entails developing film and printing pictures. No experience necessary but some past use of lab helpful. Call (413)339-0188 for info and an application

EXCEPTIONAL SUMMER OPPORTUNITY- Camp Wayne NE PA (Drs/NYC). Sports oriented. Counselor/Specialists for all Land/Water Sports including Tennis, Camping, Climbing/Ropes, Mountain Biking, Rocketry, Roller Hockey, Sailing/Waterskiing, A&C, Drama, Radio, Video. Campus Interviews Tues. March 3rd. Please call 1-888-737-9296 or 516-883-3087. Leave your name, phone number and mailing address.

FOR RENT

SUMMER RENTALS
CAPE COD GROUP Summer Rentals- Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Diamond Real Estate (508)477-1900

FOR SALE

Pick-Up Cap Black, used on Toyota 4x4 $250. Rivet 549-6363

Carwood For Sale $125 Cord. Call 549-5450

GREEK ANNOUNCEMENTS

TO THE DELTA ZETA Spring '98 New Member Class: Dana, Beth, Lori, Melissa, Randi, Morgan, Dawn, Ali, Jen, Felice, Lisa, Danielle & Kristy. Welcome to DZ. We are so excited for all of you. Get psyched for an amazing semester! The best is yet to come! Good Luck. Love in DZ, The Sisters Attention All Freshmen, Sophomore, and Junior Women- Come to Open Rush at Sigma Kappa (behind Hillel) on Wednesday February 18 from 7-9pm and Thursday, February 19 from 6-8pm. Call Michelle at 549-5898 for more information.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

New Metabolism Breakthrough Lose 5-100 pounds. Dr. Approved! Cost $35. 800-563-0386

INSTRUCTION

University Bartending Course 50% Student Discount. Natick/all Certification Available. Spring Sessions This Semester. Space is Limited. 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

LOST

Lost- Black Sweater Herter Hall on Jan 20th. Please call 665-8394.

MISCELLANEOUS

FREE T-SHIRT + $1000
Credit Card fundraisers for fraternities, sororities & groups. Any campus organization can raise up to $1000 by earning a whopping $5.00/VISA application. Call 1-800-932-0528 ext 65. Qualified callers receive FREE T-Shirt!

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

For Sale- Didjeridu Hand made, hand painted, by student. $30 with lesson. 253-7342

MUSICIANS WANTED

BARBERSHOP QUARTET FORMING
No haircutting involved, just solid acapella singing. Call Daniel 665-7587

PERSONALS

Spring Break or Bust! Need ride and sun. I-95 or 2-95, whichever fits. Pick me up at www.ebswim.com

RESUMES

Kick Butt Resume
Same Day Service
Includes Printouts
549-7568 Ryan

ROOM FOR RENT

Rooms For Rent Very close to campus. Females only. $1200 semester. Call 545-7146 or (508)655-5822

ROOMATE WANTED

Females Only 1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. 5 min to school. $795/month. Call 549-8127

ROOM WANTED

Home Wanted On Bus Route
Non-smoking couple seeks apt, studio, or house-share. Month to month rent preferred. Call or leave message for Bernie and Sharyn @ 568-4314

SERVICES

Bestial Problems Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center 545-1995

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

STEREO & CD EQUIPMENT

Car Stereo Equipment
Kenwood Detach Face- 1 year old, paid $350. 1 amp 100x2, paid $150. 1 amp 100x4, paid $100. 1 pair Pioneer 6x9 speakers, 100w, paid $110. Whole system sounds great, needs nothing. Selling as package deal for $300. Call 549-3842

TO SUBLET

Sublatter Needed in Sunderland. Available immediately. Bus route. Call 549-3181

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK!
CANCUN * BAHAMAS
24 HOURS OF FREE DRINKS!
7 nights from $429!!
CLASS Travel
Space is limited! Call now!
1-800-838-5411

EARLY BIRD SPECIAL
EUROPE- SUMMER 98
Northeast Dep's- $329 R/T
Caribb/Mexico- $198 R/T
Florida- $79 O/W
Puerto Rico- $98 O/W
Call 800-326-2009
http://www.airtech.org

Spring Break- Cancun and Nassau from $369! Air, hotel transfers, parties, and more! Organize a small group. Earn free trips plus commissions! Call 1-800-SpringBreak 1-800-777-4642

Alternative Spring Break Yogafest Week. Music. Dance. Meditation. Vegetarian. Amateur Classes. Kids Stories. $165. FREE MAGAZINE. 800-898-2347 http://members.aol.com/yogafest

KILLINGTON- SPRING BREAK Want a great time for a low price? Go to Killington for Spring Break! Starting @ $249, including 5 day lift ticket. 5 nights @ Mountain Green. UMASS SKI 'N BOARD CLUB 545-3437

JAMAICA- SPRING BREAK IN NEGRIL Don't get ripped off! Go with who you can trust. No hidden costs, starting @ $538. 7 nights, round trip air, transfers, Colleges Beach & Party Events. On site staff. UMASS SKI 'N BOARD CLUB 545-3437

#1 Spring Break from $459! FREE SPRING BREAK AND PARTIES. ORGANIZE A GROUP. Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Barbados, Florida. Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK '98
Free food and drinks! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica and Florida from $399. Organize a small group and travel FREE! Highest commissions and lowest prices. Call Sun & Sun Tours to become a campus representative (800)574-7577

Spring Break '98 Get Going!!!
Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas & Florida. Group Discounts & Free Drink Parties! Sell 5 & go free! Book Now!!! Visa/MC/Disc/Amex 1-800-234-7007 http://www.endlesssummertours.com

TUTOR WANTED

Tutors Needed for Econ, BioChem, Cmpsci. Contact The Bilingual Collegiate Program at 545-1988 or 545-1997

USED BOOKS

Americon Popular Music CD's $30 546-1027

Collegian Classifieds
...just a phone call away.
545-3500

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be processed by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthdays or congratulations personals in which the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. This deems dorm numbers unacceptable as well.
5. Personals containing or being about nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and their former number. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

NEW Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
AUTO PARTS
CHILDCARE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
COMPUTERS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FURNITURE
GREEK ANNOUNCEMENTS
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HEALTH & BEAUTY
HOUSES FOR RENT
HOUSES FOR SALE
HOUSESITTING
JEWELRY
INSTRUCTION
LOST & FOUND
(3 DAYS FREE)
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MISCELLANEOUS FOR SALE
MOTORCYCLES
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
MUSIC LESSONS
MUSICIANS WANTED
PERSONALS
PETS FOR SALE
RESUMES
ROOMATE WANTED
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SPORTS
STEREO & CD EQUIP
SUMMER SUBLET
TELEVISIONS FOR SALE
TICKETS
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
TUTORING SERVICES
TUTOR WANTED
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED GENERAL
WORLD WIDE WEB
YARD SALES

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, FEB. 17

Social— The Pride Alliance will be holding an info-social in Campus Center 917 at 7 p.m. For more information, call 545-0154, email lbgu@stuaf.umass.edu or stop by the office at 413B Student Union.

Meeting— The Ballroom Dancing Club will meet from 5:30-7 p.m. in Totman 101. Swing and Foxtrot will be taught. No experience necessary. For more information, call Jessica at 546-6129 or Shannon at 546-2253.

Meeting— Hillel's Jewish Student Organization will be meeting at 5:30 p.m. at Hillel House.

Talk— A Coffee Talk with Shulchan Ivrit will take place from 7-8 p.m. in the Newman Center Cafeteria (Java Hut). Recent events in Israel will be discussed.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 18

Awareness Day— The Graduate Student Organization is sponsoring a "Don't Forget the Kids! — A Family and Child Care Awareness Day" from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Student Union Colonial Lounge. For more information, call GEO at 545-5317.

Dancing— Israeli dancing will be taught at 8:30 p.m. in Grayson Residence Hall in the Orchard Hill living area. No experience necessary. Sponsored by Hillel.

Fundraising— The University Resource Network will be holding a fundraising workshop from 12-1:30 p.m. in Campus Center 905-909.

Job Fair— The ALANA Job Fair will take place from 7-9 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. For more information, contact Ruth Carey at 545-6252.

Meeting— Women's Ultimate Frisbee will be meeting at 6 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge. All levels of experience are welcome.

THURSDAY, FEB. 19

Meeting— The Ballroom Dancing Club will meet from 5:30-7 p.m. in Totman 101. The Waltz and Cha Cha will be taught. No experience necessary. For more information, call Jessica at 546-6129 or Shannon at 546-2253.

Meeting. The Disney College Program will have an information session at 7 p.m. In Mahar Auditorium. For info. call Tara at 256-1354.

NOTICES

Billing— At the end of the business day on Friday, Feb. 20, the Bursar's Office will be closing out its student billing process. OIT will be required to collect the $20 OIT computing account fee for the spring semester.

Schedules— The Spring '98 Final Examination Schedule will be available beginning Thursday, March 12. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls and will be available to off-campus students in the Registrar's office (213 Whitmore). It will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning March 1 at http://www-ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Student Employment— Effective the week of February 16, Student Employment Services will be changing their hours of operation. The new hours will be Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. For further information call 545- 1530.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

You will find that reading The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is more fun than spending the weekend with Batman.

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	17	HSCN Programming
3	CBS/3 Hartford	18	TV-19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	22	NBC/22 Springfield
6	PBS/57 Springfield	23	CNN
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	24	CNN SI
8	UPN/20 Hartford	25	Headline News
9	Weather Channel	26	UCTV
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
		33	Much Music

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 17, 1998

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova (In Stereo)		American Experience "The Kennedys" (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 2)			Jackie Chiasson-Intimate
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Rent TV	Olympic Winter Games					News		Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Olympic Winter Games					News		Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Home Imp.	Soul Man	Home Imp.	Grace Under	NYPD Blue "Weaver of Hats"	News		Nightline
WLVI	56	Full House	BoyWorld	Fresh Prince	Buffy the Vampire Slayer	Roswell		Dawson's Creek "Blown Away"		News	Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Mad Abo. You	Newsradio	Frasier (R)	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WTXX	6	Cheers	Mad Abo. You	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Moesha (R)	Clueless (R)	Alt.games (In Stereo)		News	Grace Under	Vibe
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Mad Abo. You	Newsradio	Frasier (R)	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	Scariest Police Chases 4		Moment of Impact! (In Stereo)			News	Simpsons	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Mad Abo. You	Newsradio	Frasier (R)	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Secrets of the Psychics"		American Experience "The Kennedys" (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 2)			Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Home Imp.	Soul Man	Home Imp.	Grace Under	NYPD Blue "Weaver of Hats"	News		Nightline
WSBK	38	Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	Moesha (R)	Clueless (R)	Alt.games (In Stereo)		News	NBA Basketball: Celtics at Kings
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Andy Griffith	Andy Griffith	"Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles" (1990) Judith Hoag					"Sidekicks" (1992, Drama) Chuck Norris, Jonathan Brandis
A&E	69	Northern Exposure		Law & Order		Biography: Lyndon B. Johnson		"Inspector Morse: The Death of the Self" (1992) John Thaw			Law & Order "Blood Is Thicker"
CNN	29	Worldview		Moneyline	Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	28	Premium	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	1 Night Stand	Comedy Half	Bill Maher-Funny		Viva Variety	Make-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	67	Wings "Strange Bones" (R)		Gimme Shelter (R)		Wild Discovery	Weekly Buzz	New Detectives: Case Studies		Mega Machines "Supertrains"		Justice Files (R)
ESPN	31	Up Close	Sportscenter		College Basketball: Michigan at Michigan State. (Live)			College Basketball: Tennessee at Mississippi State. (Live)					Sportscenter
LIFE	62	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait "Janet Leigh"		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Shattered Trust: The Shari Kasey Story" (1993) Melissa Gilbert.			Almost Perfect	Gentleman
MTV	70	MTV Live (In Stereo)		My So-Called Life (In Stereo)		Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	68	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	And Now This	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Love Lucy	M.T. Moore	Yesi	Newhart
SCIFI	66	Quantum Leap		Sequest 2032 "Good Soldiers"		Sightings (R)	Sphere	Forever Knight "Trophy Girl"		Taken "Zero Tolerance" (R)		Sequest 2032 "Good Soldiers"
TLC	26	Renovation	Renovation	Home Again	Home Again	Trauma II – Life in the ER (R)		Earthquake! (R)		Landslides (R)		Trauma II – Life in the ER (R)
TNT	60	Lois & Clark-Superman		Babylon 5 (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball: Detroit Pistons at San Antonio Spurs. (In Stereo Live)					Inside-NBA
USA	59	Baywatch "Homecoming"		Highlander: The Series		Westminster Kennel Club Dog Show "Closing Night" (In Stereo Live)						Silk Stalkings (R) (In Stereo)
HBO	49	"Pretty in Pink" (1986, Drama) Molly Ringwald. PG-13				"Tooth Fairy" (1995, Comedy) Matthew Perry. PG-13		"Eraser" (1996, Adventure) Arnold Schwarzenegger. R
MAX	43	(4:30)	"Second Sight" (1989) John Larroquette. PG			"The Arrival" (1996, Suspense) Demi Moore. (In Stereo) R		"The Beneficiary" (1997) Ron Silver. NR				Intimate Sess.
SHOW	46	"Ruby Jean and Joe" (1996, Drama) Tom Selleck. PG-13				"Dead Presidents" (1995, Drama) Larenz Tate. R					"Kounterfeit" (1997, Drama) Bruce Payne. R	Red Shoe

Bruno By C. Baldwin

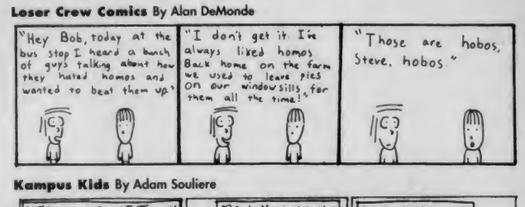
Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Fox Trot By Bill Amend

Non Sequitur By Wiley

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Robotman By Jim Meddick



Dilbert By Scott Adams

Sven By Stephen Higgins

Loser Crew Comics By Alan DeMonde

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan 20-Feb. 18) — You must not abandon your post today! Take care of duties as they fall to you, and be sure to account for all expenditures, large and small.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — You may be jumping to conclusions, but your options should be clear to you. You may want to discuss issues as they arise with others.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — You must think about the more practical matters today. Tend to things one at a time. Focus on what brings you a sign of things to come.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Rash judgments today can only lead to actions you will regret. Be patient and willing to listen to what others have to tell you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Take a reasonable approach and even the unreasonable are more likely to side with you, provided your argument can be supported.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — You are going to have to approach someone with a deal today, even though you're not necessarily in the mood to be cooperative. Give it a try.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — You may have difficulty today deciding which road to take. There is no need to make such a weighty decision just yet; take time to weigh pros and cons.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — You can count on an unexpected ally to come through for you today. Surprise! This new friend has been on your side at every turn.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — You can stand on your own two feet today and assert your individuality without being aggressive or demanding. A quiet statement is indeed best.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — You will be surprised to learn that what you have in mind is not altogether an original idea. Someone else has been on the same track.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — You may be struck with a plan today that can solve many of your problems, provided you put it into motion in an expeditious fashion.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — There is more to the world around you than sights and sounds, but today you would be wise to look and listen with a bit more diligence.

Quote of the Day

"Are you going to uncuff me or do I have to use my tongue?"

–Ester (A guest on X-Files)

Close to Home By John McPherson

At the Hair Center for Men research laboratory.

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Sorry, no menu available today

Collegian Comics Are Funny!

Congratulations to Thang Vo, Collegian Photo/graphics guru, for taking first overall yesterday in the Men's Snowboarding Giant Slalom at the Mountain Dew Vertical Challenge, Bromley Mt., NH.

Other Collegian staff members competing:

Dave Volden- Silver, Men's Skiing Giant Slalom

Rob Snow- Silver, Men's Snowboarding Giant Slalom

Night Editor	Erin Murphy
Photo Technician	Danielle Gilardi
Copy Editor	Marty Keane
Production Supervisor	Rob Snow
Production Staff	Mike Krozy, Thang Vo

ACROSS
1 Philadelphia player
6 Foxy
9 Library sign
14 Crouch
15 Singer Rawls
16 Very very
17 Party centerpiece
19 Upright
20 Gab
21 Snoozes
22 Rubberneck
23 Movie
24 Flower garland
25 Hen's call
27 Fluffier
31 Stack
32 "Jane —"
34 Wheat or rye
36 Choir voice
37 Extinguish
39 Skye or Wight
40 Fence steps
42 Show affection
43 Origin
44 Had a bite
46 Ship bottoms
48 Lubricate
49 Feels ill
50 Intended
53 — mater
54 "Is that a yes — no?"
57 Souvenir
58 Move to the side
60 Clock feature
61 Roadside lodging
62 Happening
63 Untidy
64 Categorize
65 "Divine Comedy" author

DOWN
1 Catch sight of
2 Greenish-blue
3 Greasy residue
4 Varnish ingredient
5 Type of cuisine
6 Slant
7 Moos
8 Actor Brynner
9 Cring
10 Arm bone
11 Roman road
12 Sea eagle
13 Tiny amount
18 Made a deposit
22 Baste
23 Domed roof
24 Loamy soil
25 Ancient Brits
26 Classical language
27 Soothsayer for 25-Down
28 Showy flowers
29 Artist's stand
30 Annoys
31 Possesses
33 Rube
35 Composer Rorem
38 Northern native
41 Thr.ttl
45 Frontiersman Carson
47 Walking on air
49 "— Came Jones"
50 Plow puller
51 Historic periods
52 Freshens
53 Skin problem
54 Baker's appliance
55 Lease
56 Comic Johnson
57 Machine part
58 Small swallow
59 Roe

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

A	B	B	A		M	O	S	S	Y		T	A	P	S
R	E	A	R		I	D	A	H	O		E	P	E	E
G	R	A	N	U	L	A	T	E	D		M	E	R	E
O	G	L	E	S			K	E	E	P	S	U	P
		S	A	G		B	E	L	L	E
R	A	M	S		O	E	I	L		A	S	I	D	E
I	N	A		G	R	A	B		T	I	T	L	E	D
A	N	O	T	H	E	R		R	I	N	S	I	N	G
T	U	R	E	E	N		D	O	S	E		A	S	A
A	L	L	I	E		B	A	C	H		O	R	D	E
R			A	S	S	A	Y		T	A	R
P	R	E	C	E	P	T			S	P	R	A	T
L	E	V	I		A	T	M	O	S	P	H	E	R	E
A	B	E	T		S	L	O	T	H		A	N	T	E
N	A	R	Y		M	E	A	T	Y		N	E	S	S

2-17 VIEW © Tribune Media Services, Inc. All Rights Reserved. 2-17 UFS © Universal Press Syndicate

SPORTS weekend

Tuesday, February 17, 1998 — The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

No. 18 Massachusetts squeaks by LaSalle, 81–71

Chris Kirkland scores 13 points; UMass holds two–game A–10 lead

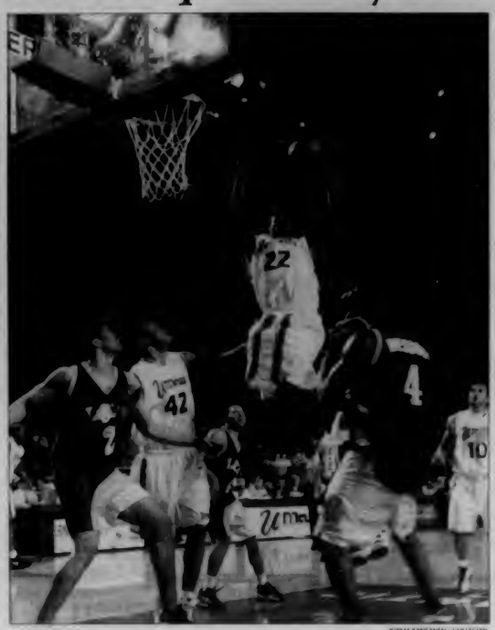
By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

It may not have been the textbook performance you look for this late in the season, but the Massachusetts men's basketball team (19–6, 11–1 Atlantic–10) continued its march to their sixth regular season Atlantic–10 title in the '90s by beating LaSalle 81–71 Saturday at the Mullins Center. UMass — who moved up to No. 18 in the latest AP poll — survived a scrappy performance by the Explorers (7–16, 3–10 A–10) and pushed their lead over Rhode Island and Temple in the A–10 East to two games with only four left to play. UMass entertains Rhode Island (18–6, 9–3) tomorrow night at the Mullins Center at 7:30 pm.

Massachusetts	81
LaSalle	71

Though Massachusetts didn't destroy LaSalle as expected, the win — their 13th in the last 14 games — did highlight how much they've improved since November. Two of the problems that plagued them early in the season — production from the small forwards and ability to hit free throws down the stretch — turned into keys to victory.

Sophomore forward Chris Kirkland, who didn't even see action in the season opener at Fresno State, scored 13 points, grabbed 10 rebounds and had three steals against the Explorers. With Mike Babul chipping in 10 points and six rebounds, the Minutemen kept upset–minded LaSalle at bay with two players they haven't really looked upon for offensive production, and now appear to be eight players deep heading into the A–10 tournament and the NCAA's.



Charlton Clarke led UMass with 22 points, including a perfect 8–for–8 from the foul line. Lari Ketner scored 15 points and nine rebounds, and sophomore Monty Mack added 15 points.

LaSalle had the Massachusetts lead down to 65–60 with 3:36 left in the second half, on a pair of Mike Gizzi free throws. Clarke and Ketner converted baskets to push the lead to 69–60, but LaSalle guard Shawn Smith hit a three to bring the margin back down to six. Babul then threw an errant pass, giving the Explorers a chance to cut the lead to three, but LaSalle couldn't convert on consecutive possessions. The Explorers were forced to foul UMass to try to climb back in it, but Massachusetts was 8–for–8 from the line in the final 1:27 of the game.

